Last season the Sho'men were defeated at home in the first round of the NCAA playoffs by a surprisingly tough squad from Roanoke College. Regardless of an early exit from the playoffs coach Corcoran points out that last year's squad was an "outstanding group", "We ended up 12-5 playing tight games with Hobart (Division Ill NCAA Champions), and Johns Hopkins University (Division | powerhouse).

With the graduation of 11 players, this year looks like it will be a rebuild ing season. Anchoring this year's squad will be Senior Mike Greig, teaming up with a trio of talented Juniors Tim Hormes, Matt Kelly and Kevin Colbeck.

Helping with the coaching again this season will be former W.C. standouts John Nostrant, Larry Boehm and newcomer Mike McGuane who graduated last season and was a second team All-American. In the Spring Clint Evans, who was a member of the 1976 squad which defeated Johns Hopkins will return to help intruction in the area of goal keeping.

Practice for Fall ball will start Wednesday, September 7 in preperation for the Fall game schedule which features a Tournament at home on Sunday, October 9 involving Navy, Duke

Men's & Women's Crew Started in 1967, the Crew pro gram has steadily grown and has well over 400 members in it's alumni ranks.

This Fall the men's program will headed by Don Chatellier in his seventh year with the program. Teaming up with former varsity coxswain Tina Smith in her third year, the two look to develop last seasons influx of novice talent

Heading the women's program will be 1973 W.C. graduate John Wagner and under him leading the women's novice program will be Mickey Dulin who is a 1974 graduate of W.C The Crew program took delivery of a new "Four-man" shell this summer lifting the equipment total to 7 "Eightman" shells, and three "four-man" shells. In addition to the shells, the boathouse has an "eight-station" rowing tank to aid those new in the sport. In addition three new "ergometers" have been ordered which are primarily used for off season training.

Three regattas called "Head races", ranging in length from 2.5-3.5 miles are tentatively planned for the Fall season with the intent of developing the ability of novices as well as conditionong the returning oarsmen for the upcoming Spring season.

Organizational meeting held for those interested in learning more about crew will be held for the women on Tuesday September 6th, at 7pm in the skin diving and innertube water Cain Gymnasium

For the men, Thursday Sep. tember 8th, 8pm. All those intersted are urged to attend.

Terry Corcoran enters his sevenifi season at Washington College. Recreational Sports Progra

If the above programs leave doubtful as to whether you will h time enough in your schedule to per pate, the College has passed a plan a Recreational Sports Program people like you in mind

The program is the result survey completed by Washington lege students last Winter. The su was administered with the inter determining which sports students interested in participating but are offered by the college.

The "Rec Sports" program

organized by Denis Berry with the cial interest of students in mind. program is a series of non-credit courses offered with the intent to mote "activity skills". Education key point in the program, prov instructruction to those who have background in activities such as sa or skin diving. There will be a range of activities involved inch facilities on and off campus

Among the many activites of will be canoeing and sailing a Truslow Boathouse, along with form tennis, volleyball, softball tennis tournaments, co-ed flag for

Welcome Parents, Faculty, Administration & Students

Fine Cocktails and Light Fare

Sat 10 - Amateur Night 11 Wed 14 - Blake Thompson - piano & guitar Sat 17 - Sue Matthews - jazz

proper ID required

(301) 778-6779

Raybans

OUTDOORSMAN

available

Forneys Jewelers

778-1966

337 1/2 HIGH STREET

Soccer: recruits bolster squad; usher in new era

Washington College may be freshman every game. pon us as this year's Soccer amenjoys the fruits of a strong eruiting effort.

quad, coach Tom Bowman ears". The team has had a DiGiovanni, Jonathan Seal, fantastic recruiting year and Andy Prevost, Benjamin Ward A new era of Soccer here will probably start five to eight and Glenn Overend. The new

The team, has landed some recruits that will have many opponents running Although only ten players scared. Heading the list is re returning from last year's Englishman Mike Bishop, a junior college All-American last ays this will be "The best year. He will be joined by other Gilbride, Kenny Hutchins, and tWashington College in "Blue-chippers" such as Robert names do not stop there, for other players have walked on and are making a name for themselves.

Among the walk-ons who are making their presence known are Kevin Kelly, Jason Tim Alvinson and Peter Hagen upon by Coach Bowman to who will all be vying for playing provide leadership for the new

Aside from the abundance of new talent, there remains a strong nucleus from last years start of a new era for W.C. squad made up of Alan Lerch, Soccer. With a new crop of Peter Van Buren, John Tho- young talent being led by the mas, John Bodnar, Steve Leary, Steve Attias and Harry Kilroy. These returnees will be looked vance into the future.

players both on and off the

This year looks to be the remnants of last years squad, "Sho'men" Soccer is set to ad-

Volleyball: optimism fuels dreams for strong season

out program in the water um has been hard at work

th a 14-23 season last Fall. squad holds higher expecons for this year's campaign. On August 29th the team mbled for the first time this son under ther supervision head coach Penny Fall and treturning players eagerly eted the four freshman playte each day

ne and has also been using said Fall

by Jennifer Rowe
Although school has just Center to augment a new work the facilities at the Casey Swim

Talented newcomers eparing for the upcoming Claudia Baldwin, Justin De is the renovation in the base-Santis, Theresa Sganga and Second in the Chesapeake Lauri McClellan will team up a men's Athletic Conference strong team nucleus made up of senior Dawn Dams, and juniors Valerie Williams, Debbie Cohen, Anne Urban and Sharon

Coach Fall is very pleased with what she has seen so far. With the intensity displayed assistant Fred Connely. on the court she is optimistic about the upcoming season. "Although we are not a particuand practices have been larly tall squad, we have lots of nyng on for two-three hours talent. I feel that this will allow us to overcome the taller teams, Coach Fall employed a especially if we achieve our goal gram aimed at stressing the of team harmony by existing as chological aspects of the a team on and off of the court"

Athlete of the week

Athletic director Geoff Miller starting his second year here at Washington College recieves honors as the "Athlete of the Week" for his efforts over the summer

One sign of Miller's efforts ment of the Cain Athletic Center. Many of the walls that were once standing, dividing the men's facilities from the women's facilities are now gone in an effort to integrate the two programs into one department. He increased the space in which A student tries out new equipment the women have to work with, in the weight room, another of here at Washington College.

John Ferber to benefit both men year ago.

this creates equal access formen sults of Miller's efforts is that and women to the facilities the gymnasium floor has been creating a truly co-ed program reconditioned and that the athletic fields are in condition Aside from increasing the as a result of the fence and women's facilities, Miller has irrigation systems that he has hired a new trainer, named created since he began here one

The "Sho'men Club" is an organization developed by Miller offering all college pro grams both new and old, equal access to alumni support and funding. The programs that this move has most affected are the young programs that have not yet generated numerous

Dennis Berry, a close colleague of Miller, with whom he worked to develop the "Rec Sports" program, terms him a "facilities creator...his efforts have united all sports in movproviding them with an addi- Geoff Miller's areas of contribution. ing the same direction towards tional two locker rooms. All of Other more noticible re- progress", says Berry. He has managed a great deal of change by addressing the same prob lems in a new and effective

> For his efforts Geoff Miller recieves this week's honor as "Athlete of the Week".

# Bramble's

Welcomes Back Student and Faculty

Best of luck in the upcoming year!

Please stop by our clothing store. We have traditional clothing for Men and Women.

335 High Street . Downtown Chestertown . 778-6090

The best in liberal arts entertainment:

by Michele M. Volansky While Washington College changes in appearance in order

lege community. along with the scheduled events the campus. without questioning their own ing campus life is a part.

The Coffee-House is theoretically, the center for social ber debuts "The Incorrigibles", prepares to undergo drastic agers hope to see it filled for the events they have scheduled. to become better, so does the Every Saturday, they will be anxiously await their debut to Throughout the fall, the SGA success of the ping-pong; social and academic entertain- showing VCR movies and ask the entire college community. will sponsor activities and nament last year, the Ca ment prepare a course of change students to bring with them and improvements for the col- their favourites

The "season" for the stu-One of the most vital dent center begins with the improvements on the social always-exciting "Dating Game" scene involves the role of the involving the new students on individual student and the September 3rd. While it does Student Center/Coffee-House. sound corny, it is, year after Students who, in the past, went year, a great way to be a part of

An all-campus meeting entertainment tastes and will be held in the student cenwishes are now strongly encour- ter on the eighth of September aged to talk to Coffee-House to discuss the social conditions staff about their ideas which on campus. This meeting will could be cultivated into campus be followed by a concert sponentertainment. Students are sored by the SGA with the Tom likewise asked to be more open Larsen Blues Band, a popular about their preferences in how group who have had tremento make the campus experience dous success at the Coffeemore pleasurable. One of the House in previous years. The best ways to be a part of Wash- ZTA sorority then traditionally ington College is to be a part of sponsors the first dance/party the arts and entertainment on Friday, September ninth. planning, of which taking the They usually have a DJ and time to fill out surveys regard- this year looks to be as enjoyable as other years.

The sixteenth of Septem-

life on campus. While this is a band comprised of Washing-previously played at Literary September, which is the begin- advertised. House and Greek functions and ning of WC's "Greek Weekend".

Also scheduled is the SGA events in the student center not always the case, the man-ton College students. They have event for the seventeenth of of which will be posted Finally, as a result of Tawes Theatre is the home for numerous art exhibits and dramatic performances at WC.

WE CAN HELP YOU DO YOUR BANKING ANYTIME YOU WANT

Two convenient Full-Service Chestertown Locations

- 211 High Street 778-2400

- Washington Avenue, near Kent Plaza Shopping Center

778-6110

AND NOW INTRODUCING BANKING TWENTY-FOUR TM -BANKING CONVENIENCE AROUND THE CLOCK. AROUND THE BLOCK

Until now, you've probably done your banking when you had to, instead of when you wanted to. That's why you'll really appreciate ournew Banking Twenty-Four ATM just off Route 213 North, at our Washington Avenue Office. It's the fastest, easiest, most convenient way to do your most important banking transactions, twenty-four hours a day, 365 days a year. And since Chestertown Bank is a member of the MOST R network, you'll be able to withdraw cash and check your balance at nearly 3,000 MOST locations.

*Bring this ad and your college your ID with you when you open a new checking account between now and September 30, 1988 and we'll give you an introductory supply of 50 checks - free.

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1214

Rt. 213 & 291

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANNON ST.

CHESTERTOWN, MD. 2162

SUNGLITZ

Students!! Keep your summer Highlights this fall with this needs method of lightening ! Students only $25 with Sharl or Janie

SUNBED SPECIALS

2 months unlimited visits:$75 10 Visits: $40

The Beauty Lounge

Midtown Mall

Chestertown

778-2635

Making the most of Washington College

nent, (signup on the twelth September) which runs the enth to the twenty-second. dabackgammon tournament be held the following week. etwenty-third to the twentytivites outside the coffeeuse include the first official Sigma (Sigs-East Hall) rty of the year on the tenth of tember and a crab feast on twenty-third. The Kappa ha (KA's-Middle Hall) oroffers their annual Beach th on the sixteenth of Sep- of them mber. While this does coin-C-House, students are eneraged to give support to both. These social activities.

ecially the Greeks, are only partial listing of the many reek and non-Greek enterments on campus. The cial life can only continue with oth student support.

The College offers,in adon to party-type entertainnt, films, concerts, plays, ures and exhibits, all made sible through endowments alty/student requests, and ort from the community.

The WC film series, also a t of the curriculum, is a kly showing of current and films shown Friday, Sun-

Norman James Theatre of William Smith Hall for just one dollar for students. The first film, Moonstruck, (with Cher and Nicolas Cage) runs the weekend of the fifth, followed by The Last Emperor on the Other on-campus social ninth. Other films range from Robocop (November eighteenth) to Twist and Shout (October seventh) to Le Grand Chemin. (October fourteenth) There are not many places where one can go to see quality films for such a low price and, fortunately for us, Washington College is one

> Besides movies, the Conseeing. The first, on September twenty-fourth, is the Concert Artists of Baltimore, directed by Edward Polochick. This concert offers, as Marshall Williams (Director of Special Events) states, "an introduction to music." Handel, Men delssohn and Strauss play roles in the music round, as do Berlin, Rodgers and Monaco. The Concert Artists of Baltimore bring a variety of musical eras and genres to Tawes Theatre and create and "introductory course" in music to a variety of students with a variety of in-

Upcoming Concert Series'

day and Monday nights in the Quartet on October seventeenth and Opera Highlights with Boris Goldovsky on Novembeer fourth. Like the film series, these concerts bring to WC quality entertainment not often found on a college campus. One of the most appealing aspects of the Concert Series is, however, that it is free to students. Also for the musically, or not-so-musically inclined is the traditional "Bach's Lunch", an outdoor recital at lunchtime given by the music department on the terrace of the Miller part of the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series, which has brought such literary luminaries as Toni Morrison to campus. Other tentative speakers in the Sophie Kerr series include Mary Lee Settle, Margot Norris and Marita Golden. These will all be announced as the semester Also included in literary entertainment is the O'Neill Literary House Monday Tea and Talk Series, in which professors discuss topics not usu-

the Norman James Theatre as Theatre, directed by David Cohen. This unique group puts on student-written plays acted by students. These three forms of entertainment will all be advertised throughout the fall. The world of art entertainment is represented by the opening of the exhibit "Watercolors of Alfred Jacob Miller" in the gallery of the Gibson Fine Arts Building. A reception will be held from five to seven p.m. on the twenty-first of September to celebrate the exhibit, which continues through the

Finally, the William James Forum, another lecture series, recently announced a talk to be given by Dr. Marlene Walters, a leading authority on suicide prevention. There has yet to be an announcement on the specific topic of the lecture, scheduled for the twenty-ninth of September at seven-thirty.

There are, as indicated, many worth while events, both social and academic, all being held on the campus of Wash ington College. One of the leading reasons for attending a liberal arts college is reflected in the variety of entertainment number of student-directed and scheduled for the fall semester. The rest is left to the student to explore. A piece of advice that Washington College Writer's possibilities of entertainment.

ewith "The Incorrigibles" in cert Series is always worth Like the film series, these concerts bring to WC quality entertainment not often found on a college campus. One of the most appealing aspects of the Concert Series is, however, that it is free to students.

Library on the twenty-eighth of ally discovered in the classroom.

The fall line-up of campus entertainment also includes a lecture and reading with poet and Visting Assistant Professor of English Calvin Forbes on include the Baltimore String the thirteenth of September in

The Washington College Department of Drama puts on a department-produced performances each semester as well. Combining the two areas is the can be given is to explore all the Pens, Pencils, Paper, Folders, Binders, Organizers, Calendars...

WE'VE GOT ALL YOUR STATIONARY NEEDS

Sutton's Towne Stationary

202Maple Avenue

778-0880

Why Shop anywhere else?

Department Store

Hours: Mon-Sat 10-9 Sun 12-5 778-6011

GEORGY GIRL

BODY FITNESS CENTER

TANNING

TONING

Two horizontal tanning beds

SPECIAL FOR STUDENTS $5.00 for a 30 minute session

778-4144

RUTH SUTTON - PROP.

819 HIGH STREET

CHESTERTOWN, MD

Office Machines, Furniture, Complete line of Typing Paper, Ribbons...

ENTERTAINMENT

Beyond the campus: from arts to bars

by Michele M. Volansky Chestertown's small size and location would normally lead one to look elsewhere for off-campus entertainment. However, as the college grows, the greater the need is for students to find more ways to entertain themelves. This, then is the role of the Chestertown community To go beyond the Washington College film series to a more current list of movies, one would wind up on High Street be announced later in the fall. at Chestertown's only movie theatre. The theatre, which is fers classes in yoga, exercise, reminiscent of an old-time dance and karate for students campus movie house, has a balcony and a large stage-type screen, shows beyond WC's programs. The only one viewing per night. This adds to the unique feeling of the past which makes Chestertown so different from other college communities. Currently showing is the popular Who Framed Roger Rabbit?, a film high on WC curriculum. the lists of lovers of light entertainment. The coming attrac-Eastwood's Dirty Harry in The Dead Pool to A.C.T. or Actor's Community the town in which we live. Theatre. Having just completed Cuckoo's Nest in Washington College's Norman James Theatre, the group looks to their Thanksgiving weekend production of Charlie and the Choca-late Factory. An added plus local farmers and music. which goes beyond simply viewing the performance is director Leslie Raimond's offer to WC students to take part in the production. Ms. Raimond states King, Pizza Hut and Procolino's that singers, dancers and actors are all required for this Between these two extremes is popular children's production. A.C.T. is, in addition to performance theatre, a showcase for local artists and photographers, and several exhibits will

The Act I Studio also ofand adults who choose to go phone number at the studio is 778-1100. This studio is an ideal place for students to step out of the classroom and receive quality instruction in areas such as karate, which is not part of the

Candlelight Walking tour of of a fireplace for cold fall nights tion is featured as Clint Historic Homes (of which the and is ideal just to relax. President's home, Hynson-Ringgold House is a part) on Wednesday nights also offers The Act II Ice Cream September 17. The guided tour Parlour on Cross Street is home is a beautiful way to get to know

In conjunction with the their run of One Flew Over the tour is the "Art in the Park" exhibit held in High Street Park. This arts and crafts festival is held in the afternoon of the walking tour and also in-

If the WCDS begins to drag a starving student down, off-campus Chestertown offers food from Roy Rogers, Burger to the ritzy Imperial Hotel. Buzz's, a family restaurant, Rolph's Wharf and The Old Wharf, both specializing in seafood, and the Ironstone Cafe, a small cafe with unique specialities. All are priced so that the average college student may take in a meal away from the

In terms of social entertainment to those of legal age, the local bars are all an experience any Washington College student should have.

Monday nights are reserved for Rolph's Wharf (the same as the Restaurant), where drafts are twenty-five cents. Chestertown also offers a Rolph's has the added feature

> Newt's Hillside Tavern on twenty-five cent drafts, but in a very different atmosphere from Rolph's. Newt's is a "local bar" where pool is the featured form of entertainment. Such is the case with the Village Tavern (known as "The Vern") on Thursday nights. Drafts here are thirty-five cents and all weekly entertainment. Steve best to get there early Newt's bar offers quarter drafts on Wednesday nights.

imports are one dollar. Like Taylor, a local musician Newt's, pool is the game to play New Potato Caboose have and both offer a definite taste of local color

Pub offers not only a bar, but crowded very quickly, so been featured at the Pub has Tom Larsen. On l Finally, the Newtowne nights, the Pub tends to

MOM'S COOKIE JAR

The Washington College Dining Services would like to take this opportunity to extend a warm welcome to all returning students, incoming freshmen and transfers

The W.C.D.S. staff wish you all the best of luck in the upcoming academic year. If we can be of service to you, please don't hesitate to stop in and talk with one of the Supervisors on duty

Next Wednesday, the W.C.D.S. will feature at the dinner meal the WELCOME BACK DINNER'. The menu will feature Roast Prime Rib and Fresh Vegetable and Scallop Stir Fry. Please remember to bring your ID card to meals or you won't get in.

If you are interested in employment, we have jobs available in the dishroom on the serving line and in catering. See a Supervisor for more

This ad will be a weekly occurrence. So until next week......MOM

Welcome

Washington College Students Open Daily till 6:00 PM OPEN SATURDAYS

8:30 AM - 12 PM

SECOND NATIONAL

Federal Savings Bank 5.5% Passbook Savings

Next to campus across from Cullen Dorm

(301) 778-1013

Savings insured to $100,000 by FSLIC. Over $775,000.00 in assets

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 12

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, September 16, 1988

Artists seek more working space

by Susan Di Leo

new Art House are underway, many art students and faculty working space in the McAlpin Art House. The Art Department and Administration have yet to work out an agreeable plan for additional working

Director of Planning and Special Projects Clint Baer said hebelieves that during this time of construction, compromise is lege effectively.

In all, he says, "about four students have been inconvenspace, "which is not to say that it's minor, but it is to say that a reasonable alternative should be found.

Baer said that he was sure that an agreement had been reached between Chairwoman of the Art Department Sue Tessem, Dean Baer, and the Registrar

However, Tessem denied that a viable alternative to the problem had been reached.

Originally, the Art Department wanted to rent another trailer in addition to the one they're already using now; the Administration has not approved the idea.

Clint Baer says the issue is "less finding a trailer than it is finding alternative space, equals the cost of maintaining a building for one year

A trailer costs $200 per month in rent, Tessem said, but the Administration thinks that $2400 is too great an expenditure for an academic class.

conceded that Although the plans for the "you can only find a solution if you think there's a problem, and that the Administration are concerned by the lack of doesn't see that a problem ex-

> Dean Baer, who learned of the difficulties with working space when a student alerted her last week, has offered the art department alternative space on campus to conduct classes. She is still waiting to hear from Tessem.

"We certainly do have the key needed to run the Col- enough space," Baer said, "it's just a matter of utilizing the space on campus.

However, Tessem mainienced" by a need for working tains that transporting the equipment needed to relocate art classes is too cumbersome to be effective. Another trailer would allow the department to keep its equipment in one place.

as opposed to keeping supplies in different areas on campus. "We're not asking for a piece of equipment, just space to do what we do," said Tessem

As far as the additional trailer is concerned, she said, "I know that that's a closed issue. We won't be getting any more

The department's makeshift solution is to enclose the front porch of the McAlpin Art House with plastic and plywood in order to store shop equipment there

This alternative will free adding that renting a trailer the space in the small gray house behind the Art House to be used as a senior art studio.

"The mistake they made was not bulldozing further up the hill," said Tessem.

Sophomore Becca

Hutchinson says that the stu

INSIDE:

World News.....page 4 Mudslinging Candidate...p 4 Beat stress.....page 8 Drugs and athletes....page 11 Dead fantasy.....page 15 Tracey Chapman.....page 16

McAlpin Art House stands behind the future sight of the Academic Resource Center, already under construction. Art students and instructors alike say they need additional working space until the new art house is built

dents in her beginning drawing courses seem to have enough working space since the classes

"When you get to upperlevel courses, you start running into problems because there isn't enough space to spread out," she said

Hutchinson looks forward working in the new Art House. "I think it'd be great to have a new Art House with space and skylights; it makes you feel uninhibited and free.

Senior art major Chas Foster's new studio is the rented trailer. The trailer replaced his previous studio, a shed which was torn down over the sum-

Foster says the trailer has less space than the shed, and, because it is rented, "I can't put anything on the walls," a plight he finds frustrating.

The trailer has "no ventilation" and the only sink is the size of a bathroom sink. Still, he admitted, "an other trailer would be a great

Both Foster and Hutchinson complained about the intermittent power at the Art House, which causes lights to dim and the pottery wheel to slow down

Foster says he understands that compromise is necessary while the new Art House is under construction "The point," Foster said, "is that there are students paying the same tuition as everyone else and have nowhere

Funds needed for new art house

by Susan Di Leo se, which will be located in the old boiler plant on campus, have run Washington College over budget by $400,000. A fundraising committee has been appointed in an effort to raise the money by February of next

According to Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene Hessey, the architect was asked to review the plans for the Art House, making changes to decrease the construction costs

The architect developed several alternative plans, one

The plans for the new Art tion of the mechanical room from the exterior of the building to the interior, a move which would save approximately $60,000

> Because of the work space which would be taken away by an interior mechanical room, this plan has generated a chilly reception from the Art Department and students alike.

However, Hessey stresses that the College is not planning to opt for any of the new plans. "At the moment, most of them we're not anxious to imple-ment." He added that the

continued on page 7

A variation in convocation

by Susan Di Leo This year at Fall Convocation, President Cater will recognize various student organizations formally, including the Dean's List students, student government leaders, The Elm staff, fraternities, sororities, and athletes.

This variation in the ceremony officially launching the academic year is intended to boost student attendance at Fall Convocation, an event which has suffered from lack of interest in the past.

"Quite honestly, haven't done a good job of getting a good student turnout at convocation," said Sherry Magill, Vice President and Deputy to the President.

Josiah Bunting III will address the audience at fall convocation. He is the Headmaster of The Lawrenceville School in Lawrenceville, NJ, as well as a trustee of Washington

"I think his remarks will be interesting to students. He has a passion for young people and what they need to know," said Magill.

Bunting will receive an continued on page 7

EDITORIAL

Piece of Peace

tries are reaching peaceful relations. After eight years of fighting, Iran and Iraq have called it quits under a truce sponsored by the United Nations. The Soviet troops are abandoning Kabul, and Afghanistan is left to the Mujahedeen rebels. Vietnam has begun the removal of its troops from Cambodia; South Africa, Angola and Cuba agreed to a cease fire. The thirteen year fight in the Western Sahara between Morocco and the Polisario From Guerrillas has ended in a U.N. peace plan. Five Central American countries signed a regional peace accord, and there is still a shaky truce between Nicaragua's Sandinista government and the Contras. It seems as if the United Nation's fairy godmother has done some global traveling, waving her magic peace dust over nations we thought would fight forever. And while they last, politicians are eager to attribute credit in ways to benefit themselves.

According to George Bush, the peace is a result of President Reagan's defense buildup and support for anticommunist troops. "It happened when we acted on the ancient knowledge that strength and clarity lead to peace he declared at the Republican national convention. Bush looks to bolster his campaign with the apparent end of the conflicts in these countries. The more modest Governor Michael Dukakis, after taking time to review the records, believes this influx of peace is caused by developments within the warring countries and changes in Soviet pol-Bush exaggerates the importance of the United States in the realization of these truces. Patriotism and nationalism are powerful feelings, often causes of conflicts themselves, but they cannot bring about such a flood of peace.

There must be a point of exhaustion where morale is lost, and all purpose in fighting is lost. When millions of citizens have been killed or maimed, and the financial burden has stunted the growth of their countries' economies it is time to call it quits.

Most of these wars share the hand of the Soviet Union, and as Mikhail Gorbachev strains to reach a more stable international setting with his perestroika, the Soviets are scaling back on aid to revolutionary regimes. Perhaps Mr. Gorbachev suggests that he believes it is more important to attain a better relationship with the United States than to seek advantage in Third World conflicts.

Maybe Mr. Bush feels justified in attributing the peaceful future of these countries to Reagan and ultimately himself. But there is more to look for in this "watershed" (Bush's word) of peace. The Soviet Union has played her part in ending these conflicts, indicating a wish for a better relationship with th US. And maybe the Superpowers will follow the example of these countries and let go of the Cold War.

Washington College Elm Jenniter M. Harrison

Editor-in-chief ... News Edit.....

| Features Editor        | Carter Boatne           |
|------------------------|-------------------------|
| Sports Editor          |                         |
| Astronal Entertainment | Editor Michele Volansky |
|                        | David Johnson           |
| Photography Editor     |                         |
|                        | Managers                |
| Managing Editor        | Bill Beekmar            |
|                        |                         |
|                        |                         |
| Circulation Manager    | Jim Sobeza              |

The Washington College Elm is the official student newsp

The Washington College Ein is the official student newspaper of Washington College. It is published every Friday during the newspaper of Washington College. It is published every Friday during the newspaper of Washington College. It is published every Friday during the newspaper of Washington College. The College Washington College, Chapter of Washington College,

MARY JANE WAS STUDYING IT SOUNDED LIKE A SHE SAW IT DYING CAT ... COMING UP THE INTO THE WEE HOURS OF WOW! THAT LIKE A SOUNDED LIKE A THE MORN, SHE HAD HER WORK CUT OUT FOR HER QUEEN 105 ANN/F SHE WALKED DOWN THE HALL, SEEKING THE SOURCE OF STAIRS SOUND. SUDDENLY. SHE HEARD A BIZARRE. SOUND .. T. KARR

S.G.A. Newsletter

The SGA will hold its first Senate meeting of the year on Monday September 19th. The meeting will be held in the Coffee House. All newly elected Senators are required to attend. The swearing in of Senators will take place. All students of the College are invited to attend this meeting (as well as any other one in the future)

The SGA Executive Board for the coming year is as follows: Perry Finney President

Rob Albers-Vice-

Tom Jackson

Treasurer Brooks Durkee Secretary Tiffany Quell/Bo Rortles

President.

Social Chairpeople Arian Ravanbakhsh-Parlimentarian

Faculty Advisor to Council

the SGA (the SCC) is still ac- by 4:00 PM, on Monday, the cepting applicants for all posi- 19th. tions. Interested people should apply for a position by filling out a questionaire and signing up for an interview. Both of these things can be dealt with in the Student Affairs Office.

Information on the SCC can be found on pages 26-36 of the Student Handbook.

The SGA is sponsering the reggae band Determination this weekend. The band will perform behind Tawes theater from 6:30 tol:00 on Saturday the 17th. Admission is $4, $3 if you purchase your ticket before 7:30. Non-alcoholic beverages will be provided.

The SGA would like to remind all those who have declared majors to vote in this year's Student Academic Board (SAB) elections. Ballots are to

The Judicial Branch of beturned into Central Services

If you have a band on campus and you are interested in playing a gig on campus somewhere, sometime, contact the SGA. As part of a social program the SGA wishes to put on social events in concert with these campus bands

Student organizations interested in obtaining funds from the SGA senate for the upcoming semester should see the SGA Treasurer, Tom Jackson. He will be available for questioning at the Senate meeting on Monday, the 19th. Look for notices on this issue to be posted on campus at later

The SGA, on behalf of the entire Student Community wishes to pass along its deepest sympathies to the family of Jonathan Clark Waidner.

Reminder:

The first S.G.A. Senate meeting will be held at 7:00 PM on Monday September 17. The meeting is open to all Washington College Students, however only elected representatives may vote.

INTERESTED IN BEING RECOGNIZED FOR YOUR ARTWORK? Stop starving, and draw for The Elm. Contact Jennifer Harrison, ext 321 or through student mail.

Room Size Refrigerator Excellent Condition (used 10 months) $60 June Cooke 928-3290

Washington College: a "great little school." For the past three years ter, among other services, in an school pictured in the catalogue. billity that this year's incoming going through a period of expansion and renovation that is currently at its peak. We have seen Minta Martin and Reid Hall become comfortable and attractive residence halls. Also the addition of the much-needed Decker Science Center will provide better facilities for science majors, thus allowing improved preparation for medical school, graduate school, or work in the science fields.

The upcoming Resource Center will also provide a larger and more efficient area for the mail room and computer cen-

Washington College has been effort to accommodate the growing number of students

> Certainly all of this activ ity causes some problems. We have seen ourselves ankle-deep in mud, unable to find a parking space, trying to come up with new ways to reach the cafeteria in one piece, or even unable to leave the college grounds because another road has been closed. I can clearly remember Registration Day, especially the bewildered looks of parents and students after taking one look at the campus, which looked more like a battleground than the quaint little

Senior

It's part of a revolution, MAN!

Furthermore, the growing number of students attending the college created the need for the Cardinal Dorms, which do not blend aesthetically with the rest of the buildings. However. they are functional, and for the time being they fulfill their

Needless to say all of us have experienced one inconvenience or another. Perhaps one of the greater disadvantages of the whole situation is the possi-

Of course, they had yet to face and future students will expethe chaos in the Reid parking rience a degree of dissatisfac state of the campus.

Sandy Perez

As members of the college community, we need to keep in mind the long-term goal, which is the improvement of the college as a whole, not only physically but also academically. True, some of us will not see the master plan to completion before we graduate, and

However, Washington College has certainly improved in the tion because of the physical three years that I have been a student here, and the college's overall goals seem aimed at the students' well-being.

> Observing the changes and growth that the campus is now undergoing is certainly exciting and, in my opinion, will lead to a deeper appreciation of Washington College as a "great little school."

Sandy Perez is a senior majoring in psychology. She is an the present inconveniences may R.A. in Reid Hall,

ISSUE:

What do you think about the construction at Washington College?

RAQULON MCINTYRE Bishop, California Junior

"The construction on campus is an inconvenience, but it will lead to better surroundings. If there is no change there sno growth-no growth means stagnation, and stagnation leads to DEATH. Give me thange forever!

Campus Voices

Washington, D.C. Seoul, Korea Freshman Come to think of it, the "The construction on camsights of construction provide pus is only inconvenient when excitement; something to check it rains and the grounds beup on the growth and progress. come muddy.

JENNIFER LAIT Washington, D.C. Freshman/Transfer "I don't consider the construction to be an inconvenience-I look forward to the bother me at all except some times in the morning it is a completion of the work and little loud, and wakes me up." enjoying the new facilities as an upper-classman."

BLAIR DONOVAN Boston, MA Sophomore/Transfer The construction does not

by Maggie Carr

The cost of construction: loss of undisturbed air as well as earth

of us take them for grantedhyselfincluded. We walk right by the trees and over the grass, all the while assuming they will continue to be there

Okay, finally the moral ntangled in all these pious latitudes: you never realize hat you have until it's gone.

Now, it's not that I can't ttept progress. Townhouses ing up in suburban areas ike the feet of so many com-

Grass and Trees. Most their daily trek to the Metro cent to the George Washington One can no longer recline in had the chance to refine such station. I've tried to come to an statue and even the architecagreement with myself, that I won't get too hung up about all

Alison Auber

thing, however, that really burns me un

I came to Washington College in part because it is a beautiful place. There are trees and fields. A giant Elm comture fits into its surroundings. Recently, the Master - Plan has changed much of that.

A road winds its way through the middle of the field equiptment. in front of Cullen. There is an the alteration. There is one increasingly large hole dominating the area next to Hodson Hall. Needless to say, none of this inspires anyone with the wealth and richness of natural

I also mourn the loss of Juliers, clad in tennis shoes, on mands a place of honor adja undisturbed air as well as earth. could not stop it, we may have class and listen to the professor radical aesthetic changes. while a cool breeze wafts through the room. We must toward a better standard of either squirm in a stifling classroom or strain to hear over a myriad of earthmoving

Maybe it was strategic on the part of the administration to wait until the summer before really starting construction. Perhaps if it had begun earlier, we may have been able to put a stop to it. Or, if we

Progress is necessary living, but the Powers That Be should be aware of who exactly is doing the living and what the effects will be

This campus belongs to the students as much as to the administration and we should have a say in what our tuition money goes toward changing or maintaining.

Alison Auber is a junior English major and is the review editor for The Collegian.

PERSPECTIVE

In the World...

THE UNITED STATES

NASA hopes to resume shuttle of a 5 man crew aboard the space shuttle Discovery. This shuttle flight will be the first since the Challenger disaster in early 1986. The Drug Enforcement Administration's Chief Law Judge, Enforcement Francis Young, ruled Marijuana safe nough to be used as prescribed treatnent for cancer patients. This decision would move Marijuana off the USA's nost restrictive drug list; however, the decision could still be appealed despite the fact that the ruling comes after two years of hearings on a petition first submitted in 1972

The State Department recently tated that improved relations with Libya are not possible because of Moammar Khadhafi's continued financial packing of international terrorism. The Reagan Administration stands behind their charge that Iraq has used poison gas against Kurdish soldiers even though Saadun Hammadi, Minister of State Foreign Affairs for Iraq "categorically denies that such weapons have been used." The Senate approved a bill that would ban American backed commodity credits in Iraq.

conferred with Democratic congressional leaders to discuss defense policy in an effort to better his image on national security and foreign policy is-

Vice President Bush faced criticism over his appointment of a GOP official, who reportedly compiled figures in 1971 on the number of Jews among top aides in a Labor Department

Senator Dan Quayle recently re sponded to a report on his law school admission with the following statement: "I got into law school fair and square. Nothing improper was done and no rules were broken. The newspaper article in estion makes that point clear in the body of the story.'

Lloyd Bentsen carried the Demo cratic National Campaign into the Midwest this week with a strong attack on what he called "the mistakes, mismanagement, and indifference of the Reagan-Bush Administration" on agricul-

Both campaigns were in Baltimore, mong other cities, this week and received many hostile receptions. Gov. Dukakis was greeted constantly by antiabortion pickets and Vice President Bush was heckled by Union workers tion issue will be kept alive this election year as the House of Represenatives voted to maintain the law barring the use of Federal funds for almost all abortions. The action set up a possible stalemate with the Senate which recently approved a moderation in such restric tions. Finally, there will be two televised presidential debates as well as one vice presidential debate this fall.

Financial news: As of Monday September 12: Dow jones was up 5.69, treasury index was up 5.51, com modities were off 0.96(futures) and 0.33(spot) and the dollar was up .

USSR Two Soviet cosmonaunts were locked in orbit 200 miles above the earth after rockets to propel the craft through the atmosphere failed. They finally landed September 7 and Tass, the Soviet News Agency, stated "Both cosmonaunts feel fine."

BANGKOK

An Air Vietnam passenger plane was struck by lightining as it approached the runway of an airport In Thailand during a monsoon downpour on a flight from Hanoi. 75 people were killed.

COMAPALA

Last week 5 local government officials were killed when their jeep was ambushed by Contras a mile outside Comapala, inside Chontales, a cental province. More than 20,000 Nicaraguans are believed to have died in the six year Campaign notes: Gov. Dukakis suffering from a wage freeze. The aborcivil strife. Violations of the cease-fire agreement signed on March 23 continue on both sides

BURMA

Burma's Parliament approved multiparty elections for this year. The elections will occur in about three months and will be the first multiparty elections since 1960

POLAND

Opposition activists in Poland united behind Solidarity founder Lech Walesa as he convened a meeting with about 60 advisors to forge a strategy for talks with Warsaw officials. He is expected to meet with a government aide this week to arrange a date for the talks which are expected to include a call for legalization of the union BANGLADESH

Flood waters began to recede in Bangladesh and the Dhaka government said it had received $ 236 million in aid to help 30 million people left homeless. Tainted water threatens the lives of more than 200,000 people.

MEXICO

Mexico's Congress certified Carles Salinas as winner of July's disputed presidential election. The lawmakers voted 263-85 removing the final procedural hurdle faced by Salinas who will take office December 1 Jaqueline Collins compiled this information using The Wall Street Journal USA Today and The New York Times Last week's In The World article was written by Laura Hopper.

Mudslinging that sticks

by Jeff Vail

It was perhaps inevitable in such an election year as we are witness ing that the presidential race would sink to such appalling levels of namecalling and hypocrisy. After all, the message of each candidate derives more of its effectiveness not from the positive qualities of the man who delivers it, but from the negative qualities of his opponent. Both Dukakis and Bush are essentially saying, "Vote for me, because the other guy would be worse for the country than I would."

Dukakis has avoided this type of overtly negative campaigning for the most part in recent weeks, much to his political detriment. While he has tried for the sake of clean politics, to stress his own good qualities instead of the very persuasive thesis that Bush is a bumbling cretin, Bush has stuck to his thesis that Dukakis is "the most liberal candidate of any major party to ever run for president". Bush has been mudslinging, Dukakis hasn't. Translation Bush has erased Dukakis' lead in the

he has resisted the advice of his cam paign staff, who have been telling him to match Bush blow for blow, no matter how far below the belt. The Governor seems to have forgotten the simple lesson that if one throws enough mud at you, some of it will stick.

The Republicans have been throwing it like there's no tomorrow, and when asked about the negativity of their attacks, the stock answer has been,

"Well, what about the Democratic Convention, where speaker after speaker made fun of George Bush? They started all this mudslinging, so it's not our fault." This is preposterous. One who claims that the rhetoric out of Atlanta was as harsh as the rhetoric out of New Orleans might as well also claim that Desiderata was as harsh as A Clockwork off fishing somewhere at the time, I watched the Democratic convention. To

(Dukakis) has tried, for the sake of clean politics, to stress his own good qualities instead of the very persuasive thesis that Bush is a bumbling cretin, Bush has stuck to his thesis that Dukakis is "the most liberal candidate of any major party to Dukakis' mistake has been that ever run for president".'

> be sure, there was much valid criticism of Bush's actions and lack thereof during his eight-year paid vacation during Reagan's tenure, but I can think of only three speakers-Ann Richards, Teddy Kennedy, and Jim Hightower-whose comments could begin to be regarded as

On the other hand, I also saw the Republican convention. Stout-heartedly resisting the recurrent temptation to fire a nearby pool cue through the TV screen, I watched Dukakis called a "diminutive clerk" by Alexander Haig, a "card-carrying" member of the A.C.L.U (as in Joe McCarthy's "card-carrying member of the Communist party"...get it?) by Marion "Pat" Robertson, and a supporter of witchcraft and bestiality

Bush called the Democratic ticket Unlike Bush, who says he was one of "three blind mice", a pathetic attempt at insinuating that Jesse Jackson, who was for all intents and purposes thrown out on the street by the Dukakis people, is actually going to have some eerie, unexplained power over a Dukakis administration.

have been subjected to interminable gentility to the wind.

crap about Dukakis vetoing an unconstitutional Pledge of Allegiance bill because he's some sort of closet flagburner, outrageous claims by arches servative Sen. Steven Simms that h had "heard somewhere" that Kith Dukakis had once burned a flag for real and Lyndon Larouche-generated and Bush-supported rumors that Dukakis might have once seen a psychiatristor something. These baseless allegations are not fair

Such tactics have already pre ordained that Dukakis must respondi kind or lose. It is a depressing choice but luckily Dukakis has recently seem to come to understand that when yo get in a fight with somebody who play Since then, the American voters dirty, sometimes you have to throw

The Elm Editorial Board is proud to present an addition to the newspaper. The Perspective section will include a summary of national and world news and political commentaries. Monte F. Bourjailly, a senior political science major, Arian Ravabaksh, also a senior political science major and sophomore Jeff Vail will write columns weekly about their views on worldo national affairs. Anyone who is interested in contributing to Perspective care contact Jennifer Harrison at extension 321 or in Reid Apartment

Employment Opportunities

The Kent County Library needs interviewers for a survey of library use, to work limited hours during October & November A training session will be held on Sept. 27 at 4 p.m. Salary: $5.00 per hr.

To apply call Mrs. Ann Briggs at 778-3636 BEFORE Sept. 27.

Respecting the democratic tradition

by Arian D. Ravanbakhsh Every four years, the rican public gets the chance deride its future by electing a esident. This year, Vice-esident George Bush and assachusetts Governor Miael Dukakis are trying to oture the White House and and the country for the next

Both campaigns have aldy put on large and glitzy wentions to capture the agination of the voters. fortunately, these convenanshave not succeeded in that al. A vast majority of Amerins simply believe that the indidates are boring and tends to fall apart, with the government becoming elitist. On the other hand, countries with high voter turnouts tend to become more responsible to the people. With a responsible government in power, one need not worry about misguided and ultimately disasterous policy decisions, in both the national and international spheres. In other words, the fiasco that was Iran-Contra probably would not have occurred if the people in the White House were concerned with what the American public thought

However, not voting is a stake. One of the fundamenal principles of democracy is involvement of the people. This level of involvement is most Frontly measured through the

This year, the electionherefore, are not going to vote day choice can be seen as a mandate on the Reagan years in office. If you believe that President Reagan did a good job and you would like to see the conservative trend continue, than you would vote for George Bush. The people who ter turnout. In countries believe that Reagan has shoved where there is consistently low the country fifty years back. each becoming more fiery as we ton harbor. Vice-President voter turnouts, democracy ward will obviously vote for approach Election Day. The Bush spoke of cleaning the Michael Dukakis. But the key point is that these people have voted and allowed their opinions to be heard. These are the people who have the most respect for their country democratic tradition candidates are trying to excite environment to a crowd of natuthe people who are apathetic ralists. Clearly these examples about the election. Right now, they are muddling through a wide range of issues to find the one that excites the masses. At a General Dynamics plant,

'With a responsible government in power, one need not worry about misguided and ultimately disasterous policy decisions, in both the national and international spheres."

Earlier, I pointed out Governor Dukakis rode around that despite the glitzy conven- in a tank and placed a big tions in Atlanta and New Or- emphasis on conventional leans, the majority of people weapons to become a big part of believe that Bush and Dukakis our defensive scheme. This is are both dull. While it may be true that I would not invite either of these gentlemen to depend on producing more exactly what you tell a crowd of factory workers whose jobs appear on Star Search, they are tanks. While overlooking Bos-

show that both candidates are trying to escape the molds that have been cast for them by the press and their parties. Each believe that by breaking this mold, they will excite people to Voting allows you the chance to participate in the political process. If you vote for the candidate that you agree with on most of the issues, then you have exercised the right that is the keystone to a democracy. In the final analysis, it may not really be that important which of the two candidates you vote for, as long as you vote. And if you do not vote, you have lost the right to criticize either President Bush or President Dukakis as they attempt their hand at governing.

Apathy: Public Enemy Number One

in has at least two purposes: inform and to persuade. The lumnist writes about an ise, usually current, that moves m or her to stop, think and continuing importance, stuintapathy. Student apathy is haracterized by the "who cares" ttitude and it seems to affect st students. College life ates a paper barrier that ves an illusion of protection at is ripped apart all too eas-

by Monte F. Bourjailly, IV ily. Students study and party without regard to the world around them. If newspapers are read, they are read for the sports page or the comics. The news is watched, again for sports and for weather to see if a sweater is needed or if boots This column is on a topic and a raincoat will be part of the next day's dress or if camoflage foul weather gear is required for some goose and duck hunting. National and world news information are obtained from Peter Jennings' two minute updates in between prime time programs or from These are today's people and

ing update. Most students do not subscribe to The Washington Post or The New York Times Mutual News and All Things Considered are unknown to the majority of the student body This is a sad statement about a privileged segment of our society who are tomorrow's leaders. how many of my campus colleagues can identify who Lloyd Bentson is or tell where he comes from? How many students know what the INF in the INF Treaty stands for?

Democracy gives us the freedom to practice apathy. The maintenance of Democracy demands that we fight against apathy.

Bob Rivers' thirty second morn-today's issues. My column will be a slant. It cannot be denied. try to cover these people and The primary purpose of this issues with as much factual in- column, however, will be to formation as possible. But, as point out important issues and with every column, there will to stimulate intelligent discussion and dehate

> We, as students and responsible members of society, must be active and informed We must join together to fight apathy. Democracy gives us the freedom to practice apathy. The maintenance of Democracy demands that we fight against apathy. Join me in a positive effort to fight apathy.

Don't forget VOTE or your dorm

senator

today

All letters to the Editor may be submitted via campus mail, or left in the back lounge of the Literary House until the Elm Office is completed

778-6940 High Street, Chestertown

Chestertown's Bicycle Shop

Open 9-5p.m. weekdays Closed Sundays

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

Special for Students

FREE Gift with any Hair Service (limit one per student)

25% Discount for all Washington College Students (thru the month of September) 778,0808

Activities of the award winning graduates of 1988

by Adrienne DeAngelo "Enjoy it while you can."

It was only a few short months ago that one hundred and sixty-three Washington College students were conferred their degrees. And while many or us worked diligently for two or three short months this summer, last year's graduates were busy trying to decide their careers. Many of them made some Assistant Registrar. She is unexpected choices

Frank Sutten, winner of in the Registrar's Office. the Sociology Department Award, graduated Magna Cum Laude this spring. Sutten, a non-traditional student, received a preacher's license this summer and plans to attend a Washington as a senior and atseminary in Lancaster, Pennsylvania for the next three Memorial Prize in History recipient, Charles Lockhart, is in the process of applying to law school, after quitting his job at a car dealership earlier this summer. Among the universities that Lockhart is considering are Temple, Villanova, and

After spending her summer working here in the Miller Library, Jan Hartley is cur rently attending the University of Michigan. An English major and winner of the Alpha Chi Omega Music Award, she plans to pursue a Masters Degree in Library Science Johnson. She was offered a sec-President's office last spring opportunity. Although she is uncertain as to her plans for the upcoming year, she hopes she had any words of wisdom depending on certain circumabout the college, she said, stances and age

Judy Berry is a non-traditional student who enjoyed the students here so much that she is planning to stay and be as active in campus life as she can. After working in the President's Office for a few years, she found herself part of the College's national search for position of excited about her new position

This fall she will be enrolled in the Masters program in Psychology here at Washing-

Berry transferred to tended the College for four years as a part-time student. Be cause of her unusual circum This Arthur A. Knapp stances, she found that her classes were more valuable because she waited so long to finish her education. As a student, she didn't have much of an opportunity to see other students outside of the classroom situation and was limited to paper work and faculty members. But she wants to make up for that. "The students are great. They have a lot of ideas.

As Chapter Advisor for the AOPi's and other campus involvement, Berry and her husband are trying to create some additional creative outlets for the students Joan McWilliams won the Also working at the col- William Gover Duvall 30 Prize lege this summer was Anne for excellence in the department of mathematics, and seems to retarial position in the beputting her degree to its best use. This summer, and conand thought it would be a good tinuing through the year, she will be working full time for the Easton Pension consulting Firm. McWilliams plans to to work as an administrative become a Pension Actuary, who clerk for the New York State is the person who calculates Government. When asked if what one's pension will pay,

Remember all S.A.B. ballots are due Student Affairs by 4:00 PM Monday

To achieve this position, Camden County.

When she has met all the McWilliams will need addi tional study and testing and certification by the American Society of Pension Actuary This can be accomplished within her job in the counseling firm. About the College, she said that she " ... enjoyed it, learned a lot, and [would] recommend it to anybody. - Sue Odenath, winner of the Doris T. Bell '50 Award, is going to be taking a few courses at Camden County College this fall. Odenath commented that she learned to appreciate the smallness and unity of Washington when she enrolled at required courses, she will be admitted by Jefferson University, where she plans to go into Occupational Therapy. In the meantime, Odenath will be working with handicapped people in the Sprout Program. She is helping them interact with others, how to enjoy themselves, and be independent.

backpacking through Europe with a friend, Audra Philippon is working in Washington, D.C. as an Editorial Assistant for The Washingtonian. She is not sure where her career will take her, as long

Sheila Herman, a graduating Magna Cum Lau will be teaching at Kent Com High School until the end

After "goofing off" for the first couple months, Tere Hatcherson is now working the Devereux Foundation, he ing retarded adolescen Hatcherson thinks that inte ing at the Benedictene Sch while at the College helpeds her involved with the Found tion, and also choose her futu occupation in Recreation Counseling

Campus hotline in the works

By Tony Caligiuri student concerns over the apparent suicidal death of recent transfer student Johnathon Waidner last week, plans to establish a crisis prevention telephone hotline have once again been moved out of the planning stages in hopes of seeing its establishment before the end of fall semester.

Senior Chris Shanno, who first brought the idea to the attention of the administration three years ago, hopes to see the hotline in operation by November of this year.

The idea for a hotline

which has been under discus- intervention and crisis refe In response to increased sion for several years, received ral." increased attention three years ago when Shanno first proposed the idea to the SGA after transfering to Washington College Advisors, or professional on from Leigh University. While at Leigh, Shanno had the oppurtunity to be involved with a hotline much like the one he now proposes to establish. Both Shanno and Dean

Edward Maxcy of Student Affairs stressed that the hotline would not be a councseling service, but it would simply work to refer students to proper counseling or guidance services, which Shanno termed "Crisis

Callers would be urgel contact their Resident Ass tants, Peer Advisors, Family seling, depending on the a ture of the problem. Studen volunteers would be require to go through a training one set up by a professional ou seling staff, according to Man According to Shanne, tails such as the location of hotline, the process of train the volenteers, and the hours operation are still up in their Students who work on theh continued on page

Show 'N Tell HAIR DESIGN

located 1/2 mile north of Kennedyville (red brick house on right hand side)

SEPTEMBER SPECIAL 778-5200

College students receive: $10 off ANY perm $5 off shampoo, cut & style (show proper student ID)

We have the largest hair care & skin care inventory in the entire area. We carry Sebastian, Matrix, Kenra, Esthederm, LaMaur Peter Hantz, La Coupe, and many more, all of whom advertise in your major beauty magazines.

For your convience, we are open :

WED & THUR 8am--8pm FRIDAY 7am--6pm

Fall Convocation

honorary Doctor of Letters at the convocation.

President Cater's associamnsortium of small liberal arts highest cumulative average colleges." Magill is the Execu-Bunting and Cater are members of the Governing Council.

Bunting, a Rhodes scholar, is the author of Lionheads, a novel about the Vietnam War

Magill described him as very bright, gifted, young, intelligent; a good writer. I think Lionheads captures the pain of [the] experience [of the Vietnam War] for Americans."

Garry Clarke, Chairman of the Music Department, will give his remarks following Bunting's address. Clarke won the Lindback Award for teaching in 1974.

In addition, Dean Elizabeth Baer will present awards so by lack of funds. to students of academic excellence

The Fox Freshman Scholarship Medal is given to the student with the highest average in his or her freshman year.

The member of the sophomore class with the highest cumulative average will receive

The Visitors and Gover nors Medal is presented to the junior with the highest cumu lative average, while the Visition with Bunting began six tors and Governors Scholarship years ago with the inception of Awards are won by the upris the Wye Faculty Seminar-"a ing junior and senior with the

The Loving Cup will be tive Director of the seminar; conferred upon the sorority and fraternity with the highest average for the year

Fall Convocation will be held at the Gibson Fine Arts Center on September 22. The ceremony will convene at 7:30pm

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception will be held in the lobby of Gibson Fine Arts Center, where the art of Alfred Jacob Miller is currently on exhibit

New Art House continued from page 1

mechanical room will be moved only if the College is forced to do

Currently, the Board of Visitors and Governors is organizing a campaign committee headed by Alonzo Decker to raise the additional $400,000 needed to complete the Art House in order to avoid alternative solutions

Pictured above is Josiah Bunting III, the speaker at this year's fall convocation. Bunting is the author of Lionheads, a novel about Vietnam. President Cater will recognize student leaders at this year's ceremony, a variation on previous years to finish this job," said David Help hotline Wheelan, Vice President for Development and College Re-

The committee is seeking leadership gifts in excess of $100,000. Wheelan anticipates having the money raised before George Washington's birthday next February Hessey is optimistic that the fundraiser will be a success. "With vigorous effort we "We're aggressively trying support the project.

continued from page 6 line would be obligated to maintain anonymity, according to

"It would be very hard for a student to get in touch with someone [during a crisis] at the importance of these serv Washington College," said Shanno. "RA's can't be there all the time. Dean Maxcy pointed out the "Psychiatric Emergency can identify people who will Response Team", or "PERT", in operation, which can be reached have called out at all."

service which is now available in addition to Washington College's staff of professional councilers accessible through the Washington College Health Services Office. Maxcy stressed ices in the event of a personal crisis as well as getting in touch with peer advisors, RA's, and faculty advisors. Said Maxey, "It's better to call out and not really need the help than not to 24 hours by dialing 911, as one

You dial. We deliver.

Dial 281 for pizza. The delivery's on us.

The Coffee House now offers pizza, delivered free. All you do is call 281. This year we're welcoming students back with an irresistable deal. Just bring this ad with you when you come to the coffee house, buy a pizza, and get the second for half the price.

Beat stress before it beats you: Watch for the early warning signs

by Anne Lindenbaum . Being a student away from home, however, is harder work. Adjusting to a totally new environment while juggling schoolwork and a social life can make the first year of college one filled with anxietics. Unfortunately, this fact is something many new students do not anticipate. In some cases, students are not even aware that they are suffering from stress until they have gone beyond their personal limits. Dr. Ronnie Michaelson-Fisher a counselor at the College, says that the biggest source of stress comes from the fact that students are not aware of the stress associated with the transition from high school to college.

"We tend to minimize the stressful nature of the transition to the freshman year. People say things like, This will be the best year of your life, and I remember making all new friends and it was wonderful," says Michaelson-Fisher, "They forget about all the pain, the scary feelings, and the difficult parts. So people come here and feel stress and are afraid something is terribly wrong because their input has been 'Everything should be wonderful,' and it's not."

One of the most important things to remember is that it is normal to feel stress during a time of transition and adjust-"It's typical, and it's expected that this be a stressful time," emphasizes Michaelson-Fisher. Things that a person takes for granted at home can become major obstacles during the first year away at school.

A person's daily routine, for example, can seem turned unside down in an unfamiliar setting, and deciding mealtimes and bedtimes can suddenly made a friend or two, but basiwith stress with fewer resources available than they've had before," says Michaelson-Fisher.

become a challenge. Establish- to, and that some things must cause he has too many things Michaelson-Fisher. "It's no Being a student is hard ing a whole new support net- be relinquished in order to on his mind. This form of stress work can also be a source of achieve a healthy balance be- exhibits itself through a lack of "People might have tween the academic and the concentration, or as Michael-riend or two, but basi-social. "It's easy to figure our son-Fisher puts it, "An inabilcally students are forced to deal what you want to do," she states, ity to filter things out and fo-"It's hard to figure out what to cus." give up."

There are many physical Strangely enough, while symptoms that are stress-re-mal and there's nothing tem bly wrong [with feeling this way)," she states. "The stadents' guiding principle should be the need to take special care of themselves. They never plan to take care of themselves or to call home. . . they're afraid they will be seen as not independen enough," she continues. "But they need to fall back on those resources.

There are many people on campus who are able to help as well. Most immediately available are the Resident Assistant and the Peer Advisors. Dear Maureen K. McIntyre and Dear Edward Maxcy of the Studen Affairs office are also available If prioritizing seems to be you main conflict, the Study Skills seminars run by teacher Christine Pabon may be the option you choose.

It is not possible to say that the amount of stress on feels may decrease within a specific time frame: that time individual to each person. But if you start to feel that you are stuck, that things are not in proving, this is a signal thi you must start attending yourself, and most important find help. Dr. Bonnie Micha son-Fisher, Dr. Bruce Hutchi son and Dr Walter Roemers available at the school through out the week. To make a appointment, simply call 119 2800 and ask for extension 2 The counselors have relocate with the Health Service, to the Maybe you have recog-

main lounge in Queen Annel dormitory. "It's a myth that fresh man transition is easy," 55 wonderful time, but it's also

DEBESS...ALSO KNOWN AS THE FRESH-STRANGE ROOMATES BUT PERHAPS THE MAN BLUES MOST STRESSFUL AS AN UPPERCLASS ASPECT OF LIFE MAN, I FULLY UN-AT W.C. IS THE DERSTAND THE NEW ABSENCE OF THE GOLDEN ARCHES. OF YOU MAY BE THOSE TWIN ICONS FEELING. (I WAS A FRESHMAN SOCIAL LIMITED VENUES ANOTHER 100 BiL GAME OF TIDDLY WINKS! 77 { WHAT

"People who have been to prep school have had more experience with this. Here. there's no attention paid to the difficulty of having to solve problems wth no one to turn to. You don't have the resources you're accustomed to like a best friend, a boyfriend, and parents," she says. Students who are not able to prioritize their activities may be presented with problems as well. People who take on too many extracurricular activities while still trying to handle four classes may find they have spread themselves too thin. The key here, says Michaelson-Fisher, is to realize you can't do itall, even though you may want of not being able to study be- and almost universal," says new students may be feeling overwhelmed, they may not realize that they are indeed suffering from stress. A change in sleeping patterns, which does not always mean insomnia, is one indicator of stress. "Frequently people say they don't have trouble falling asleep, but if you ask them what time they get up, they say they got up at four AM and couldn't fall back asleep," says Michaelson-Fisher. The infamous "Freshman 15 lbs" is also not always a compliment to the school chef. A change in appetite is an indication of stress, and is frequently a sign of depression. A student may complain

lated. Aside from the typically recognized stomach problems and tension headaches, students may find themselves more prone to illness because all their defenses are down. A symptom one may find surprising is that often students hurt themselves physically. "Students may find themselves bumping into doors and tables, simply because they're not in tune," says Michaelson-Fisher.

nized one or more of these stress-related symptoms in yourself; if so, you have just taken the first step towards dealing with and overcoming stress. "Stress is predictable Michaelson-Fisher. rough time

THE INCORRIGIBLES Jeff Todd Ken Todd FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1988 9:30 p.m. $2.00 COFFEE HOUSE THE BEACH CAN WAIT. WE CAN'T.

Room decors reflect personality, home

by Jodi Peebles

"No, I'm not so sure I like given that poster of the Jackson Five on the wall there. And do you have to put all forty-seven of your teddy bears in the middle of the floor? Yes, I know we share the T.V., but I did bring it and I was just wondering if we have to watch Hollywood Squares every night at 7:30?"

These are just a few of the conflicts some roommates have in deciding how to share the 9x12 walk-in closet they call home. In the completion of decorating his room, each person contributes something uniquely his own to give his room (or at least his side of it) its own personal statement.

Some people hang posters to cover the cold white walls, and add dark colors to make their rooms cozy and more comfortable for an atmosphere tract you," he that may remind them of their says. One can living rooms at home.

For instance, Laurie Paulsen and Flicker Reese. Freshmen living in Minta Martin, hung tapestries for scholar. Instead privacy and placed a huge oriental rug on the floor.

"This is like my room at way, he has a home, so to me it's comfortable green peace sign and I like it," says Paulsen as she stands in front of a tremendous American flag she hung.

"We wanted to cover as says. "And my pictures of my friends and family were important to bring, they remind me of home," adds Reese as she points to the various picture frames be functional, where the most home" and bringing refrigera-

Freshman Joe Hamilton. who lives in Caroline, placed forts of "back home his dresser in his closet for the sake of space. He says, "My room is very simple, but I prefer it couches and lazy-boy chairs who like this and my roommate doesn't seem to mind."

Instead of hanging posters Middle Hall says as he places that can sometimes clutter a his feet on the coffee table, "My room Hamilton chose to hang original paint ings that didn't take up too much space on the walls or his mind.

"I tend to think that posters take your mind off of what you should be doing, and dis see from his bookshelf that he means busi nessandisatrue of a horseshoe above his door that is a symbol of well wishing to whomever

enters his room he knows that it is there for them; a unique and thoughtful

Most students here at Washington College think of Many rooms are set up to their rooms as "home away from maximum use out of the space hot pots, and even popcorn poppers seem to secure all of the bare necessities and com-

> Furniture also helps to create a cozy atmosphere, with needs anything else? Mike Turner, a sophmore living in make their room more uniform, while others have as many different colors as possible to make their room more interesting. To brighten-up the place, some people have strung Christmas tree lights in each corner of the room: anything but boring. The biggest problem between roommates is the fact that one person usually tends

Caroline House, remembers her freshman year, "You could always tell which side of the room was mine. I would have clothes piled to the ceiling, papers flung around the room and pens and all kinds of junk

roommate only yelled at me once when something of mine was caught on her side of the floor I suppose sometimes, especially in a case like this, an invisible dividing line might work." Wade goes on further to say, "Now that I have a single, things are much better!"

Some of the students with tenure are lucky enough to get their own rooms. This is when privacy prevails and just visiting is better than living there

"Everyone should have a single," states Wade with a smile. "It's nice knowing that it is my very own room." Even though it is small, Wade makes the most of her room by using bookshelves and milk-crates to stack things and help keep her organized. She brought posters from home and picked out curtains in a color and style she liked to give the room her own personal touch

"I bought a carpet too, it's a must to have one on these cold floors," she says, "I know my room looks messy sometimes but it's lived in and comfortable and it's mine.

All in all there are many sights and originalities in each dorm on campus. Each room has its own special personality. whether it is cozy and inviting, dark and mysterious, or bright and cheerful with pastel colors.

Every room is special be-Melanie Wade, a Senior in cause it is composed of different characteristics of the people that live in them. They are designed with imagination and care, and are as uniquely dif ferent as each room can be, and just as unique as the person that calls it home.

A FLOOR PLAN -- THE NEW AGE STUDENT COOL TAPESTRY LOTS OF COOL " FROMTHE POSTERS DOOR PLASTERED STERE 0 4 OFT-TRITE VIDEO ILLEGAL STACKS OF COURSE UNDER-CLOSET FULL OF MOULDERING CLOTHES T. KARR graphic by Toold Kar to be neater than the other much wall as possible, " she Even though others hardly ever roommate and I tried to make notice the sign, says Hamilton, one part of our room into a living space with two sofas and a chair, and used the other half for our desks and bunkbeds, to give us more space. The living space is just a place for us to hang out."

Some roommates decide to

Looking for your name in print?

Work for The Collegian The monthly magazineof TheWashingtonCollegeElm

features fiction reviews poetry

> contact Andrea Kehoe Reid 100B, extension 321

18th Century Lives Again in Candlelight Tour

by Anne Lindenbaum

Two hundred years ago, Chestertown was one of the busiest ports on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. During this time, many beautiful houses and other buildings were built along the edge of the Chester River. Today they remain as stately symbols of that prosperous time On Saturday, September 17. the Historical Society of Kent County will lead you back to that time by means of the nineteenth annual Candlelight Walking Tour

Melissa Clarke, Curator of the Historical Society, explains that the tour is called the "Candlelight" tour because the rooms in all the houses are lit with candles. In addition, the tour is a self-guided one, not only allowing the viewer to move along at his own pace, but to historically significant struc- place tures he wishes to see.

from that period to see," says period houses in Chestertown. Clarke.

Eleven

The Frisby House is one of the oldest houses in Chester town and is celebrated for its wide chimneys, window arches, and a brick belt course between the first and second floors. The Wickes House was built around 1767 and is a two and a half story Georgian house con-

restored as a bed and breakfast

The Buch-Bacchus Store is resembles many of the colonial table feature of containing an from 6p.m. to 10p.m. Tickets shops in Williamsburg, Vir- older, colonial kitchen.

The Emmanuel Church was century houses, the Smythbuilt as a parish of the Church Crane House sports the Queen of England, but separated from Anne Revival-style, with inlaid included on the tour, is a Victoa restored colonial shop and rian townhouse with the no

Of the four turn-of-the

The Rhodes House, the century that had been taken singlenineteenth century house from a local house which was later gutted by fire The houses will be open are fifteen dollars per person, and will be available the day of the tour at two ticket booths located next to the Emmanuel Church, and on Queen and High Streets next to the library. After 8p.m. on Saturday tickets will be half price. Tickets will be available the preceding week at the Rhodes Gallery on High

All the proceeds will go to the Historical Society, which they will use for the upkeep and preservation of the Geddes-Piper House featured on the

"We are deeply indebted to the people who open their homes to us," says Clarke. All that the homeowners ask in return is that no pictures be taken, and that ladies wear low heeled shoes, as pointy heels can damage the soft pine floors.

Refreshments will be served throughout the evening at the Geddes-Piper House at 101 Church Alley. Rain or shine, the Candlelight Walking Tour will be waiting with

'Tomorrow evening's Candlelight Walking Tour will lead you back to a time when Chestertown was one of the busiest ports on the Eastern Shore."

pick any or all of the sixteen taining fifteen original fire-

Widehall, built in 1769, is "For anyone interested in also a fine example of Georgian eighteenth century architec- architecture, while 117 High ture, there are lots of houses Street is one of the rare Federal

Other eighteenth century buildings built buildings include the White during the eighteenth century Swan Tavern, a colonial tavern featured

that when the vestry recommended that the new nation

For those not especially interested in eighteenth century architecture, there will also be one nineteenth century and four turn-of-the-century houses parquet floors The Rodgers House was adopt the name "Protestant built by a local lawyer and Episcopal Church." built by a local lawyer and engineer and is furnished with English antiques and paintings. The Maxwell House boasts a panoramic view of the Chester River, and 108 Water Street, built in 1924, contains woodwork from the eighteenth open arms to welcome you

WE CAN HELP YOU DO YOUR BANKING ANYTIME YOU WANT

Two convenient Full-Service Chestertown Locations - 211 High Street 778-2400 - Washington Avenue, near Kent Plaza Shopping Center 778-6110

AND NOW INTRODUCING BANKING TWENTY-FOUR TM -BANKING CONVENIENCE AROUND THE CLOCK, AROUND THE BLOCK

Until now, you've probably done your banking when you had to, instead of when you wanted to. That's why you'll really appreciate ournew Banking Twenty-Four ATM just off Route 213 North, at our Washington Avenue Office. It's the fastest, easiest, most convenient way to do your most important banking transactions, twenty-four hours a day, 365 days a year. And since Chestertown Bank is a member of the MOST R network, you'll be able to withdraw cash and check your balance at nearly 3,000 MOST locations.

*Bring this ad and your college your ID with you when you open a new checking account between now and September 30, 1988 and we'll give you an introductory supply of 50 checks - free.

Austin Carpet

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

SPORTS

Sailors making waves on the Chester River

by Carter Boatner

group of Sho'men sailors have managed to make waves racing against top regional and national the nation. The seminar was

Last weekend for instance the Washington College Fresh- nique as well as providing racgatta. This was a two day event ing the sport in the region. hosted by the Navy sailing team which is the top ranked team in attended by 19 schools, and was aimed at teaching sailing techman Sailing team traveled to ing experience for young par-

With the W.C. sailors fin- weekend for the sailors. ishing eleventh, team captain

the freshman class" Freshman sailors Colleen Moran, Alison Wallop, Ben Noble and Mike Mansfield participated in the Midshipman's seminar which consisted of Week" talks on topics such as rules and regulations, boat rigging (for the laser 420) and water racing techniques. The talks

For the morning races over the collegiate triangular course, the sailors had to make due with hardly any wind and calm

In the afternoon races however conditions improved with wind speed rising to eleven

Annapolis to take part in the ticipants in the sport. Navy knots Inthefinal race of the day sible for steering the craft. Com-Although the Washington United States Naval Academy's hosts events of this nature of the laser made up of Colleen menting on the future of the College Sailing team does not Freshman Seminar and Re- ten with the intent of promot. Moran and Alison Wallop came team Moran said, 'I think we in third, topping off a successful can get going as a team...and start competing (against other Moran has been sailing area schools)" John Macielag came away from since she wasten years old and is This Fall the sailing team the event with high hopes for an old hand at the sport. She plans on racing with team the future. "I'm very optimistic was the skipper of the Moran- status against other schools at about the amount of talent in Wallop laser and was respon- Annapolis on a regular basis.

Athlete of the week

Junior transfer Mike Bishop of the Washington College cer team recieves honors this week as "Athlete of the

Coach Tom Bowman has been pleased with the transfer saying that Bishop has played effectively at Midfield in each of the first two games this season. Bishop was the sole scorer in the Sho'men's losing effort last Wednesday at obviously paid off for the four sailors as competition

Bishop is no newcomer to the game. Having grown up began at 9 am the following in Liverpool, England, "the soccer capitol of the world", the 25 year old sophmore says he's been playing soccer "since I've been walking". He first arrived in the U.S. in 1985 "just for a few months, then I came back for what I thought would be a few more months, then I decided to attend school here" He attended Harford Community College (HCC) in

Bel Air, Maryland for one year playing soccer for the school. It was at HCC that he recieved honors as Junior College All-American before deciding to transfer to Washington College

Leniancy in the NFL drug policy

by Brett Lankford

There never fails to be a controversy during the National Football League season. Last year the players' strike occurred, resulting in the temporary presence of "scab football." This year, however, the crisis facing Commissioner Petel Rozelle and the League office could tarnish the image of foot ball for years to come. Drugs have become the major problem of the NFL.

After last season, the League office made the deci sion to crack down on a possible drug problem. Both Major League Baseball and the NBA had met with great success in limiting drug use over the past five years. With this in mind, the NFL stepped up the random testing for drug use. This has resulted in the discovery o widespread abuse and the sus pension of a number of players Some well-known players have joined the ranks of the suspended. Dexter Manley, Lawrence Taylor and Charles White are the most notable names of the group. Dexter Manley's abuse was made publicbefore the beginning of training camp, while Taylor and White were suspended at the start of the season realize the potentially devas-

they are making a point of trying fallen to substance abuse for to combat the problem. Still, it the second time. These players seems that they are not ready to end the problem at all costs. Basically, the suspensions handed down to these players have been much too lenient.

were given a suspension of only thirty days apiece.

The suspensions were also inconsistent in another matter The suspensions started imme Part of the problem seems diately after they were handed at all. Many of the players joked about missing training camp, not showing concern about the actual reason for the suspension.

There are a couple of different ways to make these suspensions more effective damage to the team. The time of suspension should also increase each time the player tests positive for drugs. Lawrence Taylor and Charles White have had problems with drugs on two occasions, but they were suspended the same amount of time as first-time offenders. The second suspension should be for eight weeks, and the third suspension should be for an entire year. This is still lenient compared to the NBA, which throws a player out of the league after the third violation. As the severity of the penalty increases, the players will make more of an effort to avoid drugs.

Unfortunately, it is often forgotten that these football players are also people. Fans are frequently worried about the effect the loss of the player will have on the team. The player's physical and emo tional well-being is at stake, and that is far more important than any game. It is crucial for the player to fully recover from his problem. This will not only increase the player's ability on the field, but it will also help him after his playing days are over.

the length of these suspensions. Last year, Stanley Wilson of the Cincinnati Bengals was kicked out for a year as a result It is good to see the NFL of his second lapse into drugs. This year, both Lawrence Tayto be the lack of consistency in down, whether in the preseason or the regular season, Dexter Manley was one of the players who was forced to sit out training camp. Despite the fact that this limited the work of the players, the suspensions tating effects of drug use, and lor and Charles White have were not taken very seriously pay and without doing much

First of all, the suspensions should be in effect only during the regular season. As it stands today, the system almost rewards players for drug abuse prior to training camp. They can be suspended without much of a loss in

Field hockey battles Haverford in double OT

The Field Hockey team dominated in play during a double overtime quest but that wasn't enough to capture the game in a match against Haverford. So far this year the team has had four scrimmages.

On September 3 hockey traveled to Lebanon Valley for a tournament involving WC, Johns Hopkins, and York. Playing three games the girls came home with a 2-1 record defeating York and Hopkins. The Salisbury scrimmage was afight but Coach Guinan looked at it as a learning experience and develop

The Sho'men's first game was at Haverford which ended in an intense overtime defeat. Washington lost the game 2-1 in a fight displaying determination. One of the highlights of the game was freshman Karen Reck rippling the net with a goal for her first time in collegiate play Haverford dominated in the first half but after a halftime talk and position changes things began to click. WC took hold of the domination play for the rest of the game but couldn't capture another goal for the win.

Unlike WC, Haverford capitalized on their scoring winning shot into the corner of the net. Disappointment was not an issue in Guinan's opinion when talking about the game. She believed that the girls played hard, especially in the second half, and demonthat gave them time to train strated the drive that it takes to win

> Do not count these girls out yet, for the remainder of the schedule promises to be exciting with a skillful group of vet erans. Beth Matthews- MAC All Star and 1987 leading scorer, Linda Anders - last years most improved player, and Carole Reece - WCFHA Select ers to look for this upcoming season. Their experience as well as the new recruits in the freshman class will make for very interesting competition.

Anew addition to the team will be assistant coach, Beth Armstrong. Coach Armstrong was a member of the USA team in hockey from 1977-1979 and comes to WC with a strong background in coaching hockey and lacrosse.

Just remember that last year Washington College hockey was ranked 11th in the NCAA Division Three Region and had a major upset over nationally ranked Catholic University; the first time a women's team from WC has ever defeated a nationally ranked team from any sport.

This year promises to be a successful one with the backbone of experience supporting the newcomers.

One for the record books

by Gregory Oliver

Six times in the past two years he had stepped onto the court with Ivan Lendl and six times he had come off the loser. But on Sunday night, Sweden's Mats Wilander defeated his rival to become the first Swede to win the prestigious U.S. Open Mens' Singles Title and to replace Lendl as the number-one player in the world.

However, the victory was anything but easy. In a re-match of last year's championship game, which Lendl won in four sets, Wilander out-gunned Lendl in five sets, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 5-7.6-4. The duel lasted 4 hours and 55 minutes to go into the record books as the longest U.S Open match in history.

Wilander who had not won a major tennis tournament since defeating Lendl in the '85 French Open. This year he won the Australian Open, the French Open, and the U.S Open to be only one tournament away from a Grand Slam title. Wilander lost in straight sets to Miloslav Mecir in a quarterfinal match at Wimbleton earlier this year to prevent him from matching 19 year-old Steffi Graf's feat of winning all four major tournaments in the same year.

Some may argue that it was Lendl's 83 unforced errors and below 50% first-serve rate that made the difference in the match, but Wilander felt it was his agressiveness and the memory of last years defeat which enabled him to pull out the

Ivan Lendl says he may be down, but he's not out, "I'm going to think about what he acomplished this year, then go out and get ready for Australia It was a banner year for next year and hope I can do what he did."

> Don't forget -- the Summer Olympics in Seoul begin this weekend.

Soccer meets mixed success in openers

by Don Steele

Last Saturday afternoon two freshman came through with clutch goals to give the Washington College Sho'men soccer team a 2-1 victory over Catholic University

First Andy Prevost knocked in volley on a corner kick with four minutes left in the game to tie the score. This kick sent the game into overtime. In overtime Benji Ward placed a shot just beyond the goal keepers reach to lock up the win in the first game of the season.

The game was a scrappy affair that included one Catho lic player being sent off and the Sho'men recieving five yellow cards. Peter Van Buren and Alan Lerch both shone defensively. Offensively there was a strong team performance with several players turning outstanding performances

The home opener against Millersville ended in a sour note as the opponents handed the Sho'men a frustrating 3-1 defeat.

In Wednesdays home opener against Millersville three three fast break goals by proved to be too much for the Sho'men as they were handed their first defeat of the season. The three Millersville goals were answered by only one goal scored by Mike Bishop. Bishop knocked the ball in with 15 minutes left in the game, salvaging some respect for his team. Bishop managed to knock the ball in the net past Millersville defenders who were mesmerized by Ken Hutchins' flip throw in.

Debby Cohn #18, jumps to return a volley in her teams victory last Tuesday evening over visiting Washington Bible. Washington College won the game 15-2, 10-15, 15-2 15-3. Coach Penny Fall notes that Washington Bible does not represent the most form idable opponent that her squad will compete against this season, yet is quick to point out that the stronger competition will come soon enough and that there is a great deal of hard work still to do before the team is ready for the tougher opponents In October the team will host the W.C. invitational on the 7th and 8th. Aside from the home tournament, the girls will be on the road for the entire month of October

Sports calendar 9/22 field hockey vs. W. Maryland

|      | volleyball                           | vs. Marymount  | (A) 6pm                          |
|------|--------------------------------------|--|----------------------------------|
| 9/17 | volleyballsoccerfield hockey | vs. Dickinsonvs. Muhlenburgvs. Mary Washington | (H) 1pm(H) 1:30pm(A) 1pm |
| 9/20 | field hockeyvolleyball           | vs. Gallaudetvs. Delaware Tech                     | (H) 4:30pm(H) 7pm            |
| 9/21 | soccer                               | vs. St. Mary's   | (H) 3:30pm                       |

Sports trivia

What two N.F.L. teams in their first regular season game in their debut season returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown?

The correct answer to this question will win you a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House If you think you know the answer, fill out on a piece of paper, 1. your name, 2. your dorm and room number or if you live off campus, phone number, and 3. your answer. Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope and wait until next week's ELM to find out the winner and the correct answer. The deadline for the Trivia questions are on Wednesday at 12pm.

*In the event that more than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing among the correct answers to determine the winner. Please, only one entry per person.

Iliotibial Syndrome, simple case of overuse

Many Athletes develop drome is specifically located This is a condition that develops in the knees, and causes pain on the lateral side of the iar? Read on

First a little anatomy. The can feel the band on the outside strong, and contributes a great stered, and in rare cases surgideal to the stability of the knee.

Dr. Jock

Snapping iliotibial syn- carried out to relieve the sympdrome occurs when the band toms. rubs against the lateral condyle and pain. Then, every time the leg swings through into extenbackpack will increase the pressure on the outside of the knee because of the extra weight, and the symptoms will most likely snapping iliotibial syndrome. over the lateral condoyle, the outside bony prominence of the knee. As the knee is flexed and extended the crepitus is felt, knee. Does this sound famil- the bubbly or crackling sensation, at the point of tenderness.

If iliotibial syndrome deiliotibial band runs from the velops there are several options crest of the ilium (the bony ridge for recovery. The first and most of your pelvis) down the lateral efective measure is to apply ice side of the leg, and attaches to to reduce the swelling, and cut the upper part of the tibia. You back on the activity that is causing the discomfort in the of your leg near the knee if you first place. Also what may help extend your knee while sitting. would be an anti-inflamatory drug such as aspirin, or a more effective prescription drug from a doctor. A local injection of The iliotibial band is very hydrocortisone may be admini-

cal release of the band could be

Iliotibial syndrome is an of the knee as the knee is flexed overuse problem, and can be and extended. If this is done avoided with some easy measrepetitively this friction will ures. If the problem develops, produce inflamation, swelling don't run or exercise everyday. Conditioning of the knee must be gradual and prevention of sion, there will be discomfort. iliotibial syndrome involves Descending hills with a heavy restoring the flexibility to the structures on the lateral side of your hip and leg. The band itself has limited elasticity so the stretching ability is also which runs from the crest of the ilium to the beginning of the stretched to become more flexible. You can stretch this muscle by crossing the involved leg

The tensor fascia muscle, doing this it is important to hold onto a desk or some other solid object for support while band at the top of the femur, leaning to the involved side as does have the ability of being far as you can. Keep both legs straight. As you thrust to the side, you should feel a stretch of the tissues around the hip on behind the other leg. While the lateral side. Stretch until those tissues feel looser.

Snapping iliotibial syndrome is a simple overuse problem. By taking care of your body, and not ignoring "those little aches and pains" you can take part in a longer and more prosperous exercise

The lacrose team began preperation for what hopes to be continued success in post season

Get A's and B's for your parents, and a CD for yourself.

Try a Macintosh today-you may win a Sony Discman.

Now that a new school year is under way, we have an idea that'll make both you and your parents feel a bit more confident come finals time:

Get a Macintosh® computer to help with your homework.

Then you'll never have to spend another all-nighter retyping a paper just to purge a few typos and dangling modifiers. You'll be able to crank out assignments that look as though you bribed a friend in art school. And with an amazing new program called HyperCard*-which just happens to come packaged with every Macintosh - you can easily store, organize, and crossreference research notes to your heart's content

And if that isn't enough reason to look at a Macintosh today, here's

Right now, you have three chances to win one of Sony's Discman™ CD players—including the exciting Sony Pocket Discman, which also plays the new 3-inch CDs. And even if you miss out on the CD player, you may still win one of 15 Apple T-shirts. No strings attached-just fill out a registration form at the location listed below.

So come in and get your hands on a Macintosh.

If not for yourself, do it for your folks.

The power to be your best."

Enter: September 12th-September 30th

WC BOOKSTORE

Campus calendar: this week at WC

by Michele M. Volansky The entertainment picture at Washington College is quite full for the week of the 23rd. Keep tions for this week include: in mind that W.C. is a liberal arts college and all events are worth attending

W.C. Film Series Week end of the 16th. I've Heard the

Upcoming Greek func-The annual KA Beach

Bash will be held on Friday the 16th in Middle Hall. The yearly event features a basement full of sand and a bikini-contest.

the usual tricks in The Dead Pool, a movie to escape from the dull life of studying.

Amnesty International: Human Rights Now! Tour '88 comes to JFK Stadium in Philadelphia on the ninteenth of September. Featured acts thing for him. This song is followed by "If Not Now", a moving song which urges people to grab themoment when they can and when it passes by them, or they may never get the chance again. Chapman's voice in this song is softer than the others, yet her point still comes across loud and clear.

Chapman Drives "Fast Car"

continued from page 16

The final song is called "For You" and is another that approaches the average love song in a different way. The narrator struggles and is "At a loss that it is not long enough for words to express my feelings". Nevertheless, despite the almost break in her voice, song showcases Chapman's voice and her musical talent. More important is the fact that this song represents her gift in inter pretaion of the words

Tracy Chapman's album Tracy Chapman is one that proves herself to be a major force in the music world. The one problem that any listener may have with the album is

A Deadheads Tale:

"One of the greatest stories ever told"

continued from page 15

dim and the Dead walk off the catches their eye. The festive stage, the crowd realy goes wild, ties outside the arena continue cheering and clapping for an until the early hours of the After a few minutes, their efforts are rewarded as heads begin to look for a place The music begins and the crowd city. savors the last moments of the show. If they are lucky, they might hear two songs in the morning until finally, the Deadthe band returns to the stage. to sleep or move on to the next

The experience of a Grate ful Dead concert is difficult to encore, but usually it is only describe to the average person

one. The houselights come on With such a wide variety of and slowly the smiling Deadactivities taking place in and heads leave the area. out of the arena, there is sure to be something new and unique As the crowds re-enter the bazaar, they are once again

The average concert is slight in comparison to the events and surrounded by the swirl of acthe mystique which surrounds which never really the Dead. To get a good picture stopped when the concert beof it, one must go to an actual show and experience it. It's thing to eat or drink or that worth the trip

The Lylia Hynson Pavillion has been the site for a variety social functions at WC.

Mermaids Singing Labeled "a film so fresh, so funny, so charming, it amazes the heart" by Judith Christ, this film is a step atre on Saturday the 17th, the away from the routine comedy S.G.A. brings the sounds of film and one that the average reggae to Chestertown from sixstudent would greatly enjoy.

offers a "meet the writers of WC" for all new interested literary types. Offered at the picnic is the sign-up for and first Greek Weekend Writer's Union meeting. Finally, the traditional poets versus prose volleyball game will take place along with the much-advertised "whoopla"

Coffeehouse: the 16th debuts The Incorrigibles, the band made up of next week's issue, offers only W.C. students. The Incor- sampling of different musical rigibles introduces to the C-House a new type of party band that is sure to please everyone Monday the 19th begins the W.C. open chess tournament with the championship held on should be helpful the twenty-second at nine-Following the chess estertown tournament is the backgammon contest, beginning on the the historic homes of Chester-

Art Exhibit: The Alfred Jacob Miller Watercolor Art Exhibit opens on the twentyfirst in the lobby of the Gibson Fine Arts Center with a reception from five until eight. The exhibit will run until October ninth from Wednesdays to

S.G.A. Reggae Band

Held behind Tawes thethirty p.m. until everyone gets Writer's Union Picnic tired. The band , Determina-Tentatively set for noon on tion has performed in past years Sunday the 18th, the picnic at the annual Luau as a steeldrum band and have recently begun to play reggae. This event

> One major upcoming event (on the twenty-fourth) to look forward to and not miss is is working in conjunction with the Concert Series with the Concert Artists of Baltimore. This event, to be highlighted in

For those interested in off campus entertainment: the following pieces of information

Walking Tour of Ch This candlelight vigil of town begins at six o'clock on Saturday the seventeenth and costs fifteen dollars per person. Included in this tour is a glimpse of President Cater's home on Water Street. More informa tion may be obtained at 778 include Peter Gabriel, Sting, Tracy Chapman, and the rumoured final performance of the E-Street Band with Bruce Springsteen. Other local acts will also be on the bill for the event. Tickets for the sold-out show were thirty dollars and scalper prices are sure to be higher for those without tickgan. People stop and buy some-

Movie Downtown Clint

Welcome Parents, Faculty, Administration & Students

Fine Cocktails and Light Fare

Sat 10 - Amateur Night 11 Wed 14 - Blake Thompson - piano & guitar Sat 17 - Sue Matthews - jazz

337 1/2 HIGH STREET

proper ID required

(301) 778-6779

A long, strange trip: one view of the Dead

by John White

In their twenty years as a hand, the Grateful Dead have made their name not through album sales or airtime, but through constant touring of the country. Their albums, how ever, are always a steady seller in the record stores. And, although the albums are very good, it is in concert that the Dood are at their hest Recordings of these frequent concerts is permitted, a fact which distinguishes them from other bands and the band even goes so far as to allow a special taper's section to be set up behind the soundboard so that the maximum quality of sound may be achieved for the Deadheads. Once these tapes are completed, they are exchanged, traded, sold over and over again for the enjoyment of a large number of Deadheads and for those who prefer the recordings over studio albums.

The Dead have survived as a touring band mainly due to their dedicated fans. Many Deadheads follow the band from city to city, all over the country during a tour. Having over twohundred and fifty songs to choose from, each show then becomes a unique event in it-

old songs can also be played. Some people who follow the Dead have been travelling since the late sixties, so the audience is always made up of die-hard

Other Deadheads do not always go on the full tour, but attempt to see as many shows as possible. When the band plays in this area, many travel up and down the East Coast to catch the show. One may wonder why anyone would want to see the same band so many times. The answer is up to each individual Deadhead. Some say that it is the music, others believe it is the crowd itself. However, there is something about being at a show that overwhelms the viewer, otherwise this vast following the Dead have would never have lasted so many years Before the show, the parking lot is a whirl of activity. People in brightly coloured clothing roam around in an area that has been transformed from an ordinary, cement parking lot into a gypsy bazaar. In this fairground, Deadheads sell everything from tie-dyes to stirfry on a Coleman stove in order to keep themselves on the road A walk around the bazaar could self and a variety of versions of reveal a stand offering all-wool blankets and ponchos next to a ments are heard as the danccoloured clothes next to a stand begins. fixing a bite to eat for twentythousand people. This is only a portion of the things one is likely to find in one trip around the parking lot. People roam through the crowd sellingstickers, bracelets and a variety of other small objects. Others search for tickets to the show that evening. These activities continue through the day as people wander, talk and take in the atmosphere. Old friends often meet or reunite and new friends are always made. The entire lot is a celebration of the fact that the Dead the excitement of the crowd grows. Those who have tickets prepare for the show, those who do not increase their efforts to find a ticket. The doors of the arena open and the people stream in. Once inside, the people continue to mill about, smiles are exchanged and the

The Grateful Dead have had a massive cult following that is still going strong in 1988.

As show time draws near, stand selling complex multi- ing, an intregal part of the show, As the lights dim, the crowd's excitement reaches its peak and the members of the band file onto the stage in the midst of the anticipation. The crowd explodes when the realization hits them that the concert is beginning. The first notes of the song weave through the air, and the crowd goes wild as they recognise the song and begin to dance to the music Some quickly scribble down the name of the song for their recording of the concert. The first song ends, but instead of coming to a complete stop, the music continues to swirl around, gradually sounding less and less like the original song. The music coalesces into another song and the crowd loves it. Another Dead show is under

In the second set, the band really jams. The crowd is psyched up from the first set and as the music begins again, they cheer with even more vigor. During an instrumental, the lights turn and shine on the dancing fans. As the lights slowly return to the band, an effect which draws the audience closer to the band, the crowd cheers and dances even After five or six sones, the drum solo begins. The Dead's two drummers craft complex rhythmns on a wide variety of percussion instruments. Later, the other members of the begin toplay again and the band rolls into "Space" If there was any sound in actual space, it would sound like this jam. Using effects on their instruments, they play a series of notes that seem to be disjointed, yet at the same time connected. This magic can only be achieved by the Grateful Dead. "Drums" and "Space' are the only two songs the Dead plays consistantly at every concert and the crowds love it every time.

After "Space", the band continues with several more songs. The crowd continues dancing, cheering and singing along as they had throughout the show. As the stagelights continued on page 14

More Self Help Files

Chapman's debut album launches career

by Don Steele

Wembly Stadium, a star was born. During the Nelson Mandella Birthday Concert, Tracy Chapman sang a tear-jerking ersion of her song "Fast Car With this, she burst from relafame. She has since been on the the upper levels of the charts.

feeling and depth that have netted Chapman comparisons with such singers as Joni Mitchell, Joan Armatrading and Suzanne Vega. Her music is leave tonight or live and die about the side of life that few this way songs today are written about.

The albums opens with a song Chapman wrote as a senjor in high school, Talking Bout Revolutions". The song is about how, eventually, social equalthe elite classes should heware of the lower classes because the "Poor people gonna rise up." Chapman grew up without money and in the kind of world she sings about, and this song in paticular is written for her

"Fast Car" follows as the On June 13th in London's second song and the first single released. It has received, by far, the most airplay of all the songs on the album. It is a ballad of a couple who are living in poverty, narrated by the woman. She desires to get out tive obscurity to worldwide of her situation, while the man refuses to work to try and get cover of Rolling Stone and her out. She feels that if she could self-titled album is ranked in only escape, she could be someone and do something with her Her folk-rock shows a life. The man however, is stuck driving his fast car and drinking late with his friends. In the end, the woman tells him that "You gotta make a decision/You exploitation of others.

The next song is one about Titled "Across the Line", it deals with one person's racist battle and explains that where these battles are fought is also where the dreams of ity will be a reality. It adds that Americans are lost. One interesting fact about this song is that there is no plea for peace stated, but the lyrics and music reflect on the absurdity of the conflicts which occur and truly demonstrates the power and range of Chapman's voice. In this song she sings about the troubles of life. This song is followed by the last one on the side, "Baby Can I Hold You", a song which, on the surface, appears to be a beautiful love song. It is, however, not as much a song of love, but of one that is lost.

The next song, "Behind the Wall", is performed acapella continued on page 14

The second side begins with the rhythmic "Mountains O'Things". The song talks about how the narrator wants "mountains o'things" but is unable to get the opportunity. She finds that opportunity only through

"Mountains O'Things" is followed by a song called "She's Got Her Ticket". It is about a girl who attempts to leave, yet people want her to stay where she is. . The next song is titled "Why?" It is a song that asks those questions that we all ask and seem obvious, but the answers are not there and no one is prepared todo so

The next song, "For My Lover", is about unrestrained love and the fact that her love is her life, and she would do any-

Tracy Chapman's debut album contains the single "Fast Car"

MOM'S COOKIE JAR

It is documented that if a person exercises the heart at 120-1130 beats per minute for half-an-hour, three days a week, hat person would undergo what is known as a training effect.

That person, all else being constant, would lose weight, have lower blood pressure, be less tired during the day, tend to stop smoking if a smoker, have lower cholestoral levels in the plood, be less prone to heart attacks and strokes, and have a stronger sense of well being.

People who exercise regularly tend to live longer and ead more fulfilling lives. SO EXERCISE - PRUDENTLY!!!

There are still some positions available on the serving ine and in the dishroom. A weekend numbers person is also needed. Anyone interested in working for the W.C.D.S. contact Mrs Crew

For those students enrolled in our linen package service don't forget, you can pick-up your clean linens on Thursdays during the dinner meal

There are several students who have paid for service and as vet have not availed themselves of the service that's been paid or. If you have any questions regarding this service, contact Mrs. Crew

I trust all of you who attended last Wednesday's dinner, had a good time? Congratulations to the winners of the cooler and he sail boat, drawn at that dinner. The prizes were donated by the Coca Cola Company

"Breakfast To Go" seems to be quite a success. For those of you who haven't heard about it, the Dining Services is serving uice, coffee, hot tea, and the pastry of the day, from the front line area, from 9:30 A.M. to 10:00 A.M.

Next Wednesday' dinner will feature an Oriental Night. The menu will feature: Pepper Steak, Pork Eggrolls, and Almond Chow Mein. There will be fortune cookies, too

Well, I guess that's it until next week

"A FILM SO FRESH, SO FUNNY, SO CHARMING IT AMAZES THE HEART."

- Judith Crist, WWOR-TV

'MERMAIDS' recalls the breakthrough work of Woody Allen. An original, seriously funny first feature

TWO THUMBS

- Roger Ebert, SISKEL & EBERT & THE MOVIES

"FUNNY AND IRRESISTIBLE!

Sheila McCarthy has traces of Charlie Chaplin and Woody Allen." - Stewart Klein, WNYW-TV

"UPROARIOUS! ...delightful."

-Jami Bernard, N.Y. POST

I'VE HEARD THE MERMAIDS · SINGING ·

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 3

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, September 23, 1988

College handles PCB problem

On June 6, 1988 the Envi- strict new EPA laws ronmental Protection Agency biphenyl (PCB) inspection at Washington College. The Colthe environment, but for administrative infractions.

The test included identifieation of six transformers on campus that contain PCB's and, in the case of most transformers twenty-five years and older, cer there is varying PCB leakage.

In a letter sent to President Cater, "Laboratory results of samples taken at your facility indicate high concentrations of PCB. These high concentrations [inside the transformer] lar. are of primary concern and require immediate action..."

Officials at the College and at the EPA are certain that it poses no threat to students or staff

Tim Kirk, Assistant Director of Computing and Ian Gillellan, Operations Manager, frequent the boiler rooms containing these transformers in order to do phone and computer line work. They insist if there was a danger, they wouldn't go

Clint Baer, Director of Planning, said that if he, Gene Hessey, Vice-President of Finance, or even President Cater thought that it presented a hazard, "they [the transformers] would be out of here right now, whatever the cost involved in replacing them."

Baeraddedthatunderthe Master Plan, these transform ir the PCB's removed by October of 1990 in compliance with

PCB is a fire retarding adconducted a polychlorinated ditive used in the cooling oil of older transformers. According to Barry Chambers of the EPA, lege was not cited for polluting there are two main dangers involved with the leakage of fluids containing PCB

First, ingesting PCB directly or by eating food contaminated with PCB can cause liver problems as well as can-

Second, if there was a serious fire in which the transformer exploded or ruptured, PCB at high temperature becomes a lethal dioxin that endangers fire fighters in particu-

"PCB is very hard and very expensive to get rid of", said Chambers, "it's even been found in Antarctica. Once it gets in the food chain, it really travels

"The only totally safe method of disposal is to incinerate it at 3000 degrees," Cham-

When asked about the potential of environmental contamination resulting from PCB's being washed down a drain as result of frequent basement flooding, Chambers responded that it would not be of sufficient quantity to do extensive damage, but also admitted that a test to that effect had not been done

Clint Baer has stated that the college is looking into proper disposal of the PCB transform-

The EPA cited the College ers are scheduled to be replaced for administrative infractions. continued on page 5

A transformer outside of William Smith Hall. Transformers change the flow of electrical current AC to DC, or vice versa. Oil is contained within the transformer; PCB is an additive of the oil. The College plans to remove all of the transformers on campus by 1990

Administration initiates newly revised pay scale

by Tracey Connell An administrative executive council has put a new pay scale into effect for student workers. The scale applies to all departments and involves yearly pay increases which are not based on merit or evalu-

According to Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, the new regulations are intended to 'address certain problems recognized in the departmental hiring structure."

Formerly, each department established its own pay scale negotiations through "their own assessment of the job and its demands," according to Hessey.

He says this process created problems in that some jobs paid higher wages than others. and therefore were more desirable. Consequently, departments with lower wages had trouble filling positions.

Hessey hopes that the new regulations will create an equal balance of student help.

He says that it should also prove to be more organized than the previous pay scale system; rather than individuals making decisions separately, one standard will apply to every department.

scale resolves the problem of under the new pay scale bethe same time, some students have expressed concern that the new pay scale will affect their wages negatively.

One student, who declined to be identified, said that prior to attending the College this year, he had worked various departmental jobs here over the past four years

During that time, he gar-

Hessey says the new pay which are now being revoked understaffed departments. At cause he is a new student. This year, he will work for minimum

> "Since I'd never worked as a student [at the College], they said they'd start me at the bottom of the ladder," he said.

In response, Hessey said, "I can't say anything without looking at that student's employee history ... I will say that the [appropriate] departments continued on page 5

WC alum talks about the film industry

by Rob Thompson

The image of a starving talented artist is familiar to everyone, but few people realize that the gap between opportunity and success plagues movie executives as well, and that film makers are working as hard to find new artists as the artists are trying to find them. One of Twentieth Century Fox's three executive vice presidents and 1967 W.C. graduate, Dean Ferris, delivered this message in an informal discussion with students at the Alumni House last week.

A key negotiator in the recent writers' strike, Ferris cited several reasons for the high price commanded by successful actors and writers. Foremost among them was the cost of making a movie.

"The average cost of making a feature film now, not including the advertising or distribution costs, is close to twenty million dollars a picture," he explained, "...in the box office, probably thirty percent of all the pictures made and released reached that kind of plateau. continued on page 5

INSIDE:

| Apathy in the SGA     | page 3 |
|-----------------------|--------|
| Debates on the Debate | page 4 |
| Alfred Jacob Miller   | page 6 |
| Athlete of the Week   |        |
| Literary House Rooms  |        |

EDITORIAL

Democracy's Decline

Each year it seems students become less interested in participating in the Student Government. A couple of years ago, Senate elections included something called competition (an almost unknown entity in this year's "election"). Candidates actually made posters, advertised their qualifications and gave the students an opportunity to choose their representatives.

Last year interest declined, fewer students ran for the Senate positions. Students who held seats in the Senate often did not show up for the meetings. Meetings even had to be cancelled because a quorum, or a majority of members, did not show up at the meeting.

In the Senate "election" for this year, there was one dorm race where only 14 of 32 students bothered to vote. Three dorms do not have enough representatives

Lack of interest in the S.G.A. is a crime. The Student Government Constitution states that students realize "the importance of our active participation in promoting student welfare." The Constitution is modeled on the United States Constitution. And just as the U.S. Government needs public participation, so does the S.G.A.. If no one bothered to hold up his end in this country's government, the democracy would fold; if students do not participate in the S.G.A., then it will lose its power.

The S.G.A. has been one of the important liasions between the students and the faculty and administrators. It is impossible for the College to receive student opinion when students do not speak up. One way to get opinions and ideas to the College is by participating in the S.G.A. Members of the Senate and the Student Academic Board are placed on committees that serve the school. Without student representation on committees like the Student Affairs Committee, and the Student Facilities Committee, our opinion is not reaching the proper ears. Washington College is one of the few college's that not only allow students to participate in faculty committees, but require it. These committees are ones important to the College like the Academic Council, Long Range Planning. The College is anxious to give students the chance to participate in decisions that will affect their educations.

Maybe students don't want to be a part of the organization so often incorrectly referred to as a "glorified dance committee". Unfortunately without student participation, the fate of the S.G.A. may be exactly that. Without students being represented, the College is not able to hear the voices of the students it is here to serve.

Washington College Elm

| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrison |  |  |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|--|--|
| News Editor                   | Susan Di Leo         |  |  |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum      |  |  |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatner       |  |  |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansky  |  |  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson        |  |  |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Karr            |  |  |
| Managers                      |                      |  |  |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekman         |  |  |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-Williams  |  |  |
| Circulation Manager           | I C-b-sale           |  |  |

The Washington College Em is the official student newspo-per of Washington College. It is published every Prisidy during the new properties of the properties of the college of the college of the Editorin-chief with the assistance of The Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opinion of the staff. Signed columns, commentaries, letters, editorials. and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the Editorial Board.

All letters to the editor are read with interest, but due to spa limitation, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as some must be shortened. Inose that are printed are putsuants as received, without editing for spelling punctuation as the received without editing for spelling punctuation as would be violated by disclosure of his her name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and satff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letter to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked box at the editorial office, or mailed c/o The Elm, Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21620. Letters be-come the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Wednesday to be considered for publication in that week's business and editorial office is located in th basement of Reid Hall, next to the Reid Hall lounge. Business hours are 7:00 to 9:00 PM on Tuesdays and 7:00 to 11:00 PM Wednesdays. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in (301) 778-2800, extension 321.

HE RICE OF NCONVENIENCE. BY A MASS OF FELLOW
ONE BRIGHT MORNING MAY ONE BND OF W. C. TO JUST SOUTH
JANE, BEING THE ACTIVE DEMO SENTREVILLE. CRATIC SOUL THAT SHE WAS, MADE HER WAY TO THE CAFE-TERIA, EXCITED BY THE POSSI BILITIES OF STUDENT GOVERNMENT ...

Jazz Band to Perform

SHE COULD TELL

To the Editor: A jazz concert on Satur day October 8th-followed by a Magic Show on Sunday October 9th, will liven things at the Theater in Church Hill

Dick Durham's popular jazz combo will be featured, beginning at 8 p.m. This Chestertown based ensemble includes vocalist Sue Matthews, and instrumentalists John Stark and Byron McWilliams. Durham who has toured the country on the college coffee house circuit is a pianist who has made a record and an-reer began with an appearance at a Count Basie/Flip Wilson concert. Tickets at $6, and $3 for students will be available at the box office, October 8th.

A large crowd of children and their parents is expected for The One-Step Magic Company. This popular show has drawn rave reviews all over the city of Baltimore where it has appeared over 200 times, and has received a Baltimore's Best This is the first in a series of 5 children's performances

peared on television. His ca- being presented at Queen Anne's County's only theater through the winter season Flyers announcing the show have gone out through the schools, and in the mails Funded in part by the Chester town Bank, and the Queen Anne's County Arts Council tickets are available in all branch offices as well as Rhode Store, Church Hill and the Corsica Bookstores in Chester town and Centreville. Single ticket $3.50 series $15 Call 758-0235 for further information.

S.G.A. Newsletter

senate meeting on Monday. As you may have noticed there was only one race this year. Wicomico being the only dorm in which there were more people running than positions on the Senate. The Wicomico election was held through the mail, and the winner was Jennifer Pfeifer. The Senate meeting was moved from the Coffee House to

of the Faculty Dinner, so if you budget at $14,000. were unable to find the meeting I apologize. We began by swearing in the new Senators then proceeded to the reports from the officers. The only report was from the treasurer, who told us about the reggae band that performed last weekend. We spent $2,200 on the party, made $1,300 at the door, and

The SGA held its first the Sophie Kerr room because lost $857 leaving our present

After the reports moved on to New Busines because there was no Old Busi ness. The Senate approved salary for the SCC Chairmano $600. That position had been an unpaid one until this yest The Senate also elected to it crease the size of the SCC jur. from 10 members to 20 men bers and to select the jury f each case by raffle. We als decided to form an ad hoc conmittee to review constitution and make recon mendations for improvement

Finally, let me list th results of the SAB elections the were held last week. Politics Science-Monte Bourjailly, Psy chology-Jesse Winston, Biolog Dawn Dams, English-Alison Auber, International Studie Chip Schaller, Business-Cha Physics-Apr Bentley, Baugher, Economics-Luth Short, History-Cathy Jewe Art-Chas Foster, Chemistry-J Pok, Music-Michael Se American Studies-Elizabe Rexon, and Philosophy was tie so we'll have to get back!

you on that. Robbie Albers

Alumni House offers beer mugs and T.V.

The Alumni Association has devised a unique, challenging opportunity for Freshmen: write a "Letter to Myself and send it to the Alumni Office, to be remailed to you after you graduate in 1992. The Accordation has commissioned special coffee/beer mugs to trade for these letters

In the "Letter to My self" you should address, in as much or as little detail as you choose, "who I am now, who I will be in 1992, something someone I will remember about Washington College and something I will not remember when the Alumni Office mails this letter back to me in 1992". Seal your name on it and bring it to dinner tonight or to the Alumni Office

The Alumni Office is located on the corner of Campus and Washington Avenues. The downstairs lounge is open to students every night but Wednesday, Videos from local stores can be reserved through the Alumni Office, extension 462, and shown on any night but Monday, Football Night

The resident student in ·Alumni House is Matt Zuech. The Directors of the Alumni Office are Pat Trams and Mackey Streit. Everyone who respects the rules of couryour letter in an envelope with tesy and sobriety is welcome.

Apathy blinds students from what could be the WC campus. It is a problem which afflicts every aspect of every society to some extent or another. Disinterest is a problem in the operating procedure for any normal institution. While the problem can be alleviated, it cannot be solved.

So the question is not how do we rid ourselves of the problem, it is how do we deal with the problem so in order to minimize adverse effects of it. To do this we must isolate the causes of apathy, in particular apathy

The organization on campus that is responsible for combatting student apathy on campus (if this is in fact their duty) is the SGA. So immediately the question is raised. Has the SGA done enough to promote and spark student inter-

To begin with, the probest on the campus? If there is that people do not know what students choose to exclude thing that can stop it is some lem of apathy is not unique to an apathy problem on campus, and the SGA is the group which is supposed to adress this problem, then there can be no doubt that the SGA has been less than sucessful in its fulfillment of

> This problem is compounded by the fact that ours is not a world of perfect information. Too often students do not know about an event that they might be interested in. As a result of this information gap, both parties suffer. The students miss out and the sponsoring groups end up with what amounts to wasted time. This is not always the fault of the student. Sometimes blame can be attributed to sponsoring groups and the affiliated mother organizations.

could be. They are often comfortable with the status quo and they are not interested in going through the hassle (however minimal it may be) of doing what it takes to change things The root of the problem is if students don't know better, they will not try and make it better.

In addition, people tend not to care for what appears trivial and insignificant. And let's face it. WC student goverment is not exactly big time politics. To many what goes on in the SGA is simply not worth wasting time on. As long as people perceive the stakes to be low they will not be willing to spend what they believe are excessive amounts of time on it. People tend to prioritize.

A majority of SGA work is A large part of the prob- time consuming and inconvi-

themselves from the process. At College, and this is true even in the real world, time is at a premium. And one does only what one has time for. Quite often people just simply do not when the students were afraid have the time to engage in one more activity.

Perry Finney

Apathy is a contagious phenomena. It is easy to not give a damn in a room (or school) full of people who do not give a damn. More than that, it is difficult to motivate people when you are a minority. So there is an attitude fostered which operates on the assumption "if you can't beat 'em join 'em". This makes apathy a snowballing problem which grows larger and larger as time passes. When it grows to overlem, especially here at WC, is enent. For this reason many whelming proportions the only S.G.A.

sort of crisis which directly threatens the status quo of the majority. In my three plus years at WC I have only seen this happen only once. That was the campus would "go dry" The problem is a seri ous one. Despite the apathetic person's claims to the contrary, the effects of non-participation are enormous. No type of group or organization is immune to the effects. All of them will lose efficiency, lose creditability and viability because of the problem. Ultimately they break down and cease to exist. At this point nobody benefits and everybody loses.

Perry Finney is a senior economics an philosophy ma jor, and is the President of the

ISSUE:

What do you think is the cause of student's apparent lack of interest in S.G.A. participation?

George Phillips Sophomore Virginia Beach, VA "Not enough people know what's going on in the SGA, especially if they live off of campus, as I do.'

Andrew Carringon Sophomore Philadelphia, PA "Because there isn't a lot of support of the SGA on the whole, the people who do get involved carry a lot of responsibility. A lot of people don't need that

Russel Gardner Sophomore Bartonsville, VA "It's just too much extra work-one more thing that you'd have to do."

Elizabeth Rollins Junior Alexandria, VA "Not enough people know what is going on in the SGA. They need to advertise more '

Derick Serra Senior

"It's probably due to the fact that the SGA seems to make a lot of promises that aren't kept. This creates a lack of faith in the system as a whole

by Laura McGuire

S.G.A. placed low on student's priority list

For the past three years role in the S.G.A. To these the student body's interest in the Student Government Association has slowly but steadily declined here at Washington College. It's true-just ask any senior. The diminishing interest has led to negative sentiments towards the S.G.A. But why would students ignore one of the few organizations which gives them a voice on campusone of which every student is, in fact, a member?

Campus Voices

One reason is that many students underestimate their importance to the S.G.A. A vast majority do not consider themselves part of the student government process

In addition, they think that their opinion will not be beard. Also contributing to the disinterest is a large contingency of students who simply Association is a group of popular upperclassmen that only sponsors bands and parties. Furthermore, because students perceive the S.G.A. as Don Diefendorf people the Student Government

serving a purely social function in student life, many people place the student government low on their priority list. It probably ranks somewhere below sports and other extracurricular activities-after all, students have better things to do than organize parties.

Finally, the S.G.A. has been plagued with apathy simply because some people take a negative attitude towards the organization no matter what it does. Before they even hear what the S.G.A is sponsoring, Never even think about their they will reject it. Of course served based on the perform- master plan or the alcohol polance of the organization, how- icy. ever the majority of it is not. for their benefit

While the students are responsible for some of the weaknesses found in student government, the blame is not entirely theirs. The S.G.A. could be criticized for remaining in the background, rather than being a dominating entity on the campus. The officers need to emphasize that it is more than just a social organization Certainly it could do more to represent the student body in every aspect, not just that of social life. For example, surveys could be given to the student body asking for students opinions on controversial issues

some of this criticism is de- such as the proposed campus

The students running the What all of the students need to S.G.A. should also make the realize is that the S.G.A. exists student body more informed as to the organization's actions. This might enable students to identify more easily with the group. In previous years the Student Government Associa tion was a powerful force on campus. During my freshman year the S.G.A. challenged the college alcohol policy and won, thus creating a change in the policy. This change could not have been possible without support from the students.

Students should realize that they are an integral part of the Student Government Association, and without their input the S.G.A. cannot function properly. When the S.G.A. has the support of the students, however, it becomes a powerful organization which can insure the representation of all students in campus affairs. With regard to the college's actions if can also keep some power where it belongs-with the students.

Don Diefendorf is a senior psychology major and a member of gathering a great amount of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity

Watch the Presidential Debate on the big screen in Hynson Lounge. Sunday 9/25 at 7:30 PM.

A discussion panel will follow Sponsored by the W.C. Lecture Committee.

The Debate: Before or after Olympic Hardball?

Anyone who has ever complained that they don't know where the two presidential candidates stand on the issues would do well to watch the debate this weekend, which will be held Sunday night in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Tucked in somewhere between Olympic handball and exhibition sumo wrestling will be one of only two opportunities the 1988 campaign has given us to see the candidates confront each other in an exchange unpolluted by scenic backdrops and publicity stunts. Doubtlessly the debaters will still recite scripted lines and deliver laboratorytested one-liners (Ronald Reagan's chief contribution to the furtherance of serious political discourse), and pirouette away from complicated issues with the use of generalizations and rhetoric. But if you are as sick to death of 10-second sound bites, photo ops and the extinction of press conferences as I am, you will be watching with rapt attention on Sunday, when Dukakis and Bush will have to give real answers to tough ques-

One of the universal and obnoxious talents of all politicians is their ability to evade a question. Both candi dates will try it during the evening perhaps many times. Upon being confronted with a question they can't answer, they will attempt to link it to a that they have been put in this position.

they do have a rehearsed answer for. One must not be distracted by such tactics, and one must recognize any jokes or one-liners for what they are: products of speechwriters, designed to obscure an issue and paper over the holes in candidate's position

These days, when candidates are exhaustively prepared by high-paid teams of professionals who can foresee and compensate for any problem, it is hard to imagine how a candidate could possibly be dumb enough to make a serious gaffe or factual error. However, it has happened before, with disastrous consequences. In 1976, Gerald Ford was debating with Jimmy Carter when Ford made the flabbergasting assertion that there was no Soviet influence in eastern Europe. That single mistake meant Carter's victory in the debate and helped him attain victory in the

Other debates have been won or lost because of less important factors, such as the fact that Nixon sweated too much and looked nervous in the 1960 debate with the cool and charismatic John Kennedy

It is my expectation that this debate will be make-or-break for Dukakis, while Bush can ride out a poor performance. It is the Dukakis campaign's fault nuestion which was not asked, but that They satidly by while the Bush people he always did quite well. I sincerely meticulously and systematically lowered expectations for Bush to nearsubterranean levels, and raised expec tations for Dukakis by constantly playing up how good a debater he is supposed to be. Now, if Bush merely holds his own the press will probably call that a victory, since everyone expects him to be so bad that he'll fall off the stage or something. Dukakis, meanwhile, must score a knockout victory to win I expect Bush to come on strong and come out swinging. He is not a bad debator, and all the press people who have been believing the Bush campaign's statements that he is must forget the Republican primary debates, in which hope that Dukakis' advisors realize the game Bush is playing, and are prepared to meet an aggressive debator. This debate has become absolutely crucial for Dukakis; he must do well in order to reinvigorate his stalled campaign.

One final plea: Listen to the facts and listen to the diversionary nonsense, know the difference, and then discard the nonsense. If one candidate is talking sense, and the other candidate is telegenic, please ignore the latter and go with the candidate who is right. And whatever you do, make up your own mind about who won; don't let media analysts and T.V. pundits make it up for you

Scoring the Debate

by Arian D. Rayanbaksh

If you take a close look at the Presidential race, you will come to the conclusion that despite all of the rhetoric and mud-slinging by both sides, this election is really too close to call. Many people see the tightness of the race as a result of the uninspiring personalities of the candidates. If one candidate looked much more exciting and charismatic than the other, it would be clear that he would have a large lead over a dull counterpart. People, in their efforts to simplify the election, center their attention on the basic issues of appearance, speaking ability, and how the candidate parts his hair. In an attempt to educate the public as to the significant issues involved in choosing the next President, Bush and Dukakis have agreed to debate the issues this Sunday night in Winston-Salem.

In the interest of public service. here are three things that you should look for when you watch on Sunday night. These tips will help the unde cided voter select which candidate to support. Hopefully, this debate will provide a spark of enthusiasm for the public to take into the election

First and the most important thing to remember, is that you should not judge by appearances alone. Each of the candidates is going to have their own make-up crew present to fuss over every inch of his appearance. And besides, what do appearances have to do with the issues? In 1960, the year that Michael Dukakis loves to bring up, RIchard Nixon and John Kennedy quared off in what many believe are the best debates of the modern era Right after the debate, people who saw the debate on television were asked who they believed had "won". An overwhelm ing majority said that Kennedy had routed his older opponent. However, an equal number of people who listened to the debate on radio felt that Nixon had routed the younger Kennedy by an equally large margin. As always, the true result was in the middle. Clearly, appearances can be deceiving.

Secondly, select two or three is sues that you feel are the most important questions that the country is facing. This can be the economy, the military, foreign relations, experience of the candidates, education policy, or even the environment As the debate is aired note how the candidates stand on the issues that you selected. Simply put, the one that appears to match the mo with your own philosophy would be the one that should earn your support. Even if you have made up your mind before you watch, this will provide the justifi cation for supporting your man over the other guy Lastly, for the math-oriented eople, my rules for scoring the debate. If George Bush makes a serious blun der, and is then able to laugh about it, give him a point. If Mike Dukakis does the same thing, also give him a point Not taking oneself too seriously is a good trait. If either candidate looks as though he is reading a prepared text, deduct five points. After eight years of Reagan duly reading his lines, the last thing we need is another actor.

If George Bush brings up the Pledge of Allegiance, deduct ten points from his score and refer him to the Supreme Court Decision in West Virginia Board of Education vs. Barnette. If Mike Dukakis brings up the past also deduct ten points; he is running on a platform aimed at the future and George Bush, not running against Ronald Reagan. At the end, tally up your score and declare a winner

It is unlikely that this debate will clearly boost one candidate at the expense of an other. Nor is it likely that the debate will cast either George Bush or Mike Dukakis as the exciting and visionary leader that we need. In the end, watch the debate (keeping in mind the three tips above) and make your decision. It's worth your

In the World

The remnents of Hurricane Gilbert re expected to bring much needed relief to the drought-ridden Mid-West Police in Los Angelos arrested over 870 people in an effort to curb gang

As the candidates prepare to deate on Sunday, Governor Michael Dukakis condemned the coup in Haiti and declared that the United States must not recognize the regime of General Prosper Avril because of the regimes ties to drug-trafficing Vice president Bush attacked Mr Dukakis and accused him of being anti-

The military, under General Sen Maung, seized power Sunday, ousting the government of civialian president Maung Maung had been Burma's first civilian leader since 1962 Sen Maung has placed a 8 P.M. to A.M. curfew on the capitol city of Ran goon, after fighting broke out between civilians, including students, and the armed forces. The military has dissolved all local, state, and national government bodies, and Sen Maung has given striking workers until September 26th to return to work. The country has been plagued by strikes and protests since July.

General Prosper Avril, former military adviser to Jean-Claude Duval ier, seized power Sunday. He replaced General Henri Namphy. Namphy fled to the Dominican Repulic Sunday morning following fighting in Haiti Saturday. Namphy had been in power since June 19th, when he siezed power with the help of General Avril. Avril has named Jean-Claude Paule, one of the most feared men in the Haitian Army as his military advisor

Haiti

Nicaragua

Nicaraguan representatives met with Contra leaders in neutral Guate mala. Although still deeply divided about ways to end the civil war, this is the first step towards reopening full scale talks between the Contras and the Sandinistas. Talks died between the two sides in June

Poland

In response to a vote of no confidence, the Government of Polish Prime Minister Zbignew Messner resigned This is the first time in Polish history that a communist backed government has stepped down. Wladyslaw Baka, is expected to become the new Prime Minister Laura Hoppes arber Shop . 505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md

Special for Students

FREE Gift with any Hair Service (limit one per stud

ount for all Washington College Students (thru the month of September) 778-0898

RUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:38-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD 778-1214

Rt. 213 & 291

Vice President of 20th Century Fox talks about film industry

continued from page I

He paints an even darker financial picture for TV, "The network television business is absolutely insane. Nobody in their right mind would be in it." As an example, he referred to L.A. Law, a "very successful series." It may bring ratings success, but Fox has "a twentytwo episode committment (to NBC) and we are losing $400,000 an episode," said

With all the losses, however, there must be some gains, and if the company hopes to stay in the black, those gains must be large. The feature film "Big" for example will gross 100 million domestically, "at least 50 to 100 million dollars foreign, probably 25 million more with video discs and cassettes, and three to five million dollars in television . . all from an investment of 20 million dollare

Television does not present immediate returns. makers of a TV series hope to keep it in production until there are enough re-runs to sell to independent stations. Syndi-

Pay scale

continued from page 1 will have to make a judgement of where to...place that student on the pay scale."

Hessey says that the Administration is open to comments and criticism and susceptible to change. "We are going to monitor the policy and see what effect it does have.

Campus notes

Join Phi Sigma Tau

Membership in Washington College's philosophy honor society is now available to qualified students. To join the Maryland Delta chapter of Phi Sigma Tau, students must have completed three full semesters of study at any accredited college or university Successful applicants are in the upper third of their class and have a minimum average of 3.33 (at least two A's and one B) in at least three courses in philosophy or reli-

Application forms are available from Dr. David Newell, chapter advisor and philosophy department chair, in Smith 12. The cost to join is $12.00

Dukakis/ Rush dehate

See the Presidential Candidates' Debate on the big screen with a panel discussion to follow. It begins at 7:30pm on Sunday, September 25 in Hynson Lounge. It is spon-Sored by the Washington College Lecture Committee cation to "anything other than can do anything it wants with movie theaters. They had to writer or actor. Ferris said that ABC, NBC, or CBS" makes that script money for the company. To the struggling actor or writer, Ferris says, these large figures amount to one problem: chance. The movie makers spend a lot of money on a gamble, and part of that gamble is the artists they hire.

When asked why writers receive relatively little credit from the industry, Ferris replied that "not a lot of writers are all that good," and "every studio around is dying for new talent

The majority of writers are unemployed, and of the Writer's Guild "fifteen percent are employed and the other eighty five are out of work." The movie writer is paid for the script and the movie company

continued from page 1

Under the new rules published in the July 1985 Federal Register, the College was responsible for strict monitoring and marking of their six PCB

transformers located in Caroline/Queen Anne, Kent, Hodson, Cain Gymnasium, Miller

Library and Gibson Fine Arts passed that would require the College to remove the PCB's by established by the EPA in 1979.

the College was only obligated to inform the EPA and the local fire marshall of the presence of lege had not complied to the law in '79, '85 or '87, Clint Baer, who has been working at the College for three years, stated that "we simply didn't know

College is in total compliance with EPA regulations by put-

Currently, Washington

Under less restrictive laws

When asked why the col-

October of 1990.

these transformers

about the laws.

As late as 1987 a law was Often, the writer will bring forth a good idea and develop a poorly written script from it. If he does not succeed the first time, a writer rarely gets a second chance with his idea Ferris said that "chances are nine times out of ten that it is still going to be garbage." Instead, they hand the idea to a more reliable, higherpriced writer with a better chance of returning with a quality script. The unreliability of new writers in a field where the big company is already taking extraordinary risks leads to an increased demand for the talented established artist Prior to 1954, large movie companies owned their own doors leading to the six PCB transformers as well as keeping log books in those basements to monitor potential leakage They are now awaiting a decision and further instructions from the EPA on proper clean-up procedures

According to Chambers the inspection was conducted as a random process in which the EPA inspects institutions. mainly hospitals and schools, suspected of having PCB transformers

Clint Baer added that "this is a problem all buildings of that age face. It's not unique to W.C.

Barry Chambers confirms that many colleges, including law recently U.M.B.C., have run into problems complying with EPA rules and everyone is trying to get it solved. "The fines can be big" says Chambers. "anywhere from ten to one hundred thousand dollars.

In some cases, other forms of payment are proposed, such as community education of ting up warning signs on all environmental issues. In one

keep these theatres in operation with their own movies

The constant operation of a theater created pressure for a steady supply of movies from the production company. These films were produced on a lower budget and in larger numbers than they are today. More artists had chances to have their work appear on the screen in the form of "B" movies - a significant testing ground for new

The government then decided that this production to box office ownership violated the anti-trust laws, and the company theatres were closed. The low budget films disappeared, and with them, the avenues to success for many young artists

There is hope for the young eye.

Twentieth Century Fox is in the black after spending years in debt. Now the company's goal is to produce a larger number of films again. New talent is in demand.

"One of the things we're starting to do," said Ferris,"is go to schools like Washington College and other schools and start trying to find a way to develop pipelines into the system 3

"With the Writer's Guild, we negotiated to start hiring trainees . . . to hire people from creative writing areas and English departments and let them work with the professionals." He spoke of the same system for directors, but actors still have to "catch somebody's

College is dealing with PCB problem recent case, the superindendent

of a school stood before an assembly of colleagues and gave a half-hour long lecture on the "wrongs" of not reporting PCB transformers beginning with the line: "Forgive me for I have sinned. U.M.B.C., however, was fined an estimated fifty thousand dollars to date

All six of the PCB transformers on campus leak small amounts of PCB fluid, but the one in the basement of Caroline/Queen Anne was where the EPA was most concerned. A spill must contain ten pounds or more of PCB contaminated material to be reported under

The leakage in Caroline/ Queen Anne was under a pound. However, a floor sample in the basement revealed some concentration of PCB. Barry Chambers explains that since PCB is an additive to the oil, it's recorded in parts per million (ppm). Less than 50 ppm in the original spill does not have to be reported.

50-500 ppm is considered PCB contaminated and over 500 ppm is considered to be PCB. The Center for Disease Control considers it to be dangerous if ingested at over 100 ppm.

At this time, the specific ppm count in the basement of Queen Anne/Caroline is not available to the public. "That information is confidential." said Clint Baer, "until the EPA makes it's decision."

Lee Blackburn of the EPA Public Relations office confirms that until the Case officer Lisa Nichols makes a report, all information about levels of PCB is confidential

This report can take up to 180 days from the time of inspection and is due to be out in December. Baer also added the ppm count may be released by the college before then

The Elm is using the Freedom of Information Act in order to obtain a copy of the inspection report but the the actual PCB levels will remain confidential

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists' Materials

> ROBOX 402 TII High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5292

JOB OPPORTUNITIES

The Kent County Library needs interviewer for a survey of library use, to work limited hours during Oct.& Nov. A traing session will be held on Sept. 27 at 4p.m.

> Salary: $5,00 per hr. To Apply Call: Mrs. Briggs at 778-3636 BEFORE Sept. 27.

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620 301-778-3181

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

Watercolors of Alfred Jacob Miller portray life on the western frontier

by Michele Balze

This year Washington College is kicking off its season of cultural events with an event that has been a full year in the

The College will be show-Jacob Miller, a nineteenth centhe American West are recieving new and well deserved acclaim. As the first American artist to capture the sights of the Western Frontier, Miller painted rare and candid that is gone forever.

of 34 of the 200 Miller watercolor sketches owned by the more City. Showing the scope works as records of Western life, the Miller exhibit consists mostly of watercolor sketches Oregon Trail in 1837. Created expressly for

William T. Walters, these duplicates of the original watercolors he produced on his of the prairies. are ink drawings of Baltimore and Literary scenes and a single oil portrait Alfred J. Miller was a native of Baltimore but traving the watercolors of Alfred eled in Europe painting and sketching studies of the mastury artist, whose sketches of ters such as Rembrant and Titian, After returning to Baltimore in 1834, Miller produced Baltimore and literary scenes which show Miller's sense of humor and talent at caricature.

It was on a subsequent glimpses of a raw way of life visitto New Orleans that Miller met his chief patron, British The exhibit is comprised Army Captain William Drummond Stewart. Stewart, a frequent traveler, invited Miller Walters Art Gallery in Balti- to go to the Rocky Mountains with him, commissioning the interest of frontier life: the skins of Miller's talent while still artist to sketch events and stressing the importance of his scenery during the trip. On their return, Miller reworked the sketches into oil paintings for Stewart's family castles in of scenes and people that Miller Scotland. Ultimately, Miller observed on his trek along the used his initial sketches to the French Trapper" displays execute the watercolors in the Walters collection

The romantic watercolors "sketches" are more finished depicting the expedition cap-

Western travels. Also included Scene: Mirage", Miller displays ness is what is ultimately iman acute sense of atmosphere in his rendering of the hazy sky which blurs details. Through careful composition Miller gives the viewer a sense of scale. A vast expanse of sky and the seeming infinity of the flat western plains dwarfs the expedition and makes its members seem lost and vulnerable There is a profound sense of mystery in the faint mirage that confronts the travelers.

In all his paintings, Miller ing meticulous. The brushstrokes have an effortless, liquid sketch-like feel. Through this detail, Miller supplies the viewer with the texture and worn by the Indians, the beads and furs worn by the trappers, the dry expanse of prairie.

the show reflects Miller's ability with portraiture. "Antoine similar fluid brushstrokes to those in the watercolors. A warm glow adds dimension to the fleshtones. As in the water-

portant "Pierre" a watercolor portrait of a French Canadian Trapper shows the dress of a fur trapper with his buckskin shirt, hat decorated with turkey feathers and a fox tail brush. Miller was able to capture the spirit of the Indians in portraits

The portrait, "Shem-a-co- The Watercolors of Alfred Crow Chief" shows the Jacob Miller: The Western Chief's dignity through pose and Frontier of the 1830's is spontechnique. Appearing wise and renders detail without appear- strong, the Chief is shown in strong 3/4 profile with the straight backed, cross-armed must for viewers with many interests. The activities shown in paintings such as "Bull Boating" and "The Medicine Circle" are with details of the lives and public in Washington College's The single oil painting in activities of trappers, settlers and Indians

Miller's paintings can be seen as both works of art and through Sundays. historical documents. They are a record of a time and a way of life that changed so rapidly it viewing the exhibition by callwas gone before it could be ing Marshall Williams at 778-

In "Prairie fine but not invasive. The like- of the exclusiveness of these images is Miller's "Laramie's Fort". The sketch is one of only two views-both by Miller-of the fort as it originally stood. Miller was the only artist to record the original Fort before it was de stroved and rebuilt in 1840. Not only art lovers but those with an interest in history, anthropology, and adventure will enjoy this exhibit.

> sored by the Washington College Arts Exhibit Committee with assistance from the Town of Chestertown and a grant from the Kent County Arts Council Visiting this exhibit is a Inc. The exhibit also recieved support from Governor William Donald Schaeffer The Watercolors of Alfred

Jacob Miller will be open to the Gibson Fine Arts Center, from September 21 to October 9 from 1-3 pm and 5-8 pm Wednesdays

Groups are encouraged to make special arrangements for

ture the unique characteristics colors, the detail is accurate and captured on film. One example 2800, ext. 402. Get A's and B's for and a CD f

Try a Macintosh today-you

Now that a new school year is under assignments that look as though way, we have an idea that'll make both you and your parents feel a bit more confident come finals time:

Get a Macintosh® computer to help with your homework.

Then you'll never have to spend another all-nighter retyping a paper just to purge a few typos and dangling modifiers. You'll be able to crank out bribed a friend in art school. And an amazing new program called HyperCard*—which just happens to come packaged with every Macintosh—you can easily store, organize, and cross-reference res notes to your heart's content.

And if that isn't enough reason

Enter: Se

Gordon Trust gives exposure to young artists

Where do gifted musicians enteenth go after they have completed school, but have not yet opportunity to perform.

arts, personally gave young and gifted emerging artists the Symphony Orchestra. chance to display their wares. stein, Assistant Director of the come to the attention of the in musical competitions.

supports new artists, it also provides support for different cultions in Maryland. For the third phasizes Bernstein year in a row, the Peggy and pate in the Washington College campus timore begin the Concert Series Saturday, September Todor Pelev. twenty-fourth, and the Baltimore String Quartet will con-

Although conductor of the Concert Artists Ed Polochick launched their own professional has established himself as one careers? Through the Peggy of the finest young American and Yale Gordon Trust, these conductors, the ensemble itself musicians are able to gain was only recently formed. higher visibility as well as the Similarly, the Baltimore String Quartet was newly formed in Yale Gordon, a lover of the 1987, and is comprised of members of the Baltimore

Before the concert begins, The Trust, established in 1981, Polochick will try to establish a has carried on this tradition in rapport with the audience by the spirit it was founded with. speaking briefly about the According to Lorraine Bern- music. This is another mission of the Trust, says Bernstein: to Trust, the finest young talent make music both entertaining and enlightening, and to show Trust through their triumphs that classical music and popular music can be equally beau-While the Gordon Trust tiful when performed by talented and gifted musicians.

"It's thrilling to us to see tural and educational institu- students at the concerts," em-

In the past, the Gordon Yale Gordon Trust will partici- Trust has brought to the college performers such as David Concert Series by bringing two Buechner, the highest ranking highly acclaimed ensembles to American in the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, the The Concert Artists of Bal- Bowdin Trio, the Peabody Ragtime Ensemble, and violinist

Garry Clarke, Chairman of the Concert Series, and Mary the Trust," says Clarke, "And culturally and financially. It's adds Clarke.

Concert Series work in conjunc- ity and promise." tion with Bernstein to bring

Ellen Trusheim, Director of the they are musicians of high abilalso a chance for students to "The Concert Series paying a lot of money."

these ensembles to campus. couldn't usually afford these en-"These performers would not sembles," says Clarke. This is factor in improving the cultural have been here if it were not for a chance to improve the Series life at Washington College,"

The Baltimore String Quartet will be the second concert sponsored by the Peggy and Yale Gordon Trust hear the performers without "The Trust has been a big your parents, yourself. win a Sony Discman.

look at a Macintosh today, here's ight now, you have three chances one of Sony's Discman™ CD ers—including the exciting Sony bit Discman, which also plays the 3 inch CDs. And even if you miss on the CD player, you may still win of 15 Apple T-shirts. No strings med-just fill out a registration form at the location listed below

So come in and get your hands on a Macintosh.

If not for yourself, do it for your folks.

The power to be your best."

er 12th-September 30th BOOKSTORE

Soccer win brings record to 2-2

by Greg Oliver

Under an overcast sky, the men's soccer team defeated the Seahawks of St. Mary's on Wednesday by a score of 2-1. The Sho'men, coming off a tough 3-0 loss to a talented Muhlenberg team on Saturday, needed the win to raise their record to

The first half of play was what might be termed a defensive battle. Neither team could find the needed openings, although Washington controlled the ball the majority of the time The Sho'men came close with 18:04 left to play in the first half when a shot was deflected off the St. Mary's goalie and freshman goalie Benji Ward kicked the rebound just wide of the post.

Then with 12:40 to go in to make the score 2-0. the first half, St, Mary's looked as though they might get on the break, but freshman goalkeeper Peter Hagen made a diving save to end the threat. Good defense and freshman defenseman Scott Overend.

In the opening minutes of the second half, both teams exchanged possessions and the ball travelled from one end of the field to the other

With 26:26 left to play in the game sophomore forward Mike Bishop took a hard shot on goal, but the St. Mary's keeper made an excellent save to keep the score tied at zero Then, ten minutes later, Bishop slid a soft shot past the defense and into the goal to give the Sho'men a 1-0 lead. Assisting Bishop on the play was freshman forward Rob DiGiovanni Minutes later, with 13:26 left in the contest, Bishop returned the favor, assisting DiGiovanni

St. Mary's Mark Zettle board with a wide-open fast turned around and netted a quick goal with 13:25 left in regulation to put the Seahawks back in the game with a score of in the opening half was played 2-1, but the Sho'men defense, by senior defender Alan Learch aided by senior John Bodnar, man Pete Hagen.

Mike Bishop (#13) and Rob Giovanni (#8) each had one goal apiece in the win over St. Mary's Colege played out the half and ensured "Steve had been shot at the win Coach Tom Bowman was happy about the win, but disappointed at the level of play, "We didn't do anything too well."

Bowman said that he had changed the offensive set following Saturday's loss, to four forwards, four midfielders, and two defensemen. He also pulled senior goalie Steve Leary and replaced him with the fresh-pretty hard lately, so I decided to see what the other guy (Hagen) could do" said Bow man. Hagen gave up one goal but made seven saves, including several diving, mid-air grabs to keep the Seahawks from rallying back to which may have sent the game into overtime.

The next home game is on Tuesday, September 27 against Salisbury State University. With a young and talented team, the Sho'men have a good chance topull out more wins such as they did against St. mary's this year.

Athlete of the Week

For her three-goal effort in the women's field hockey team's 10-0 victory over Gallaudet College Julie Schram recieves honors as "Athlete of the Week"

The 17 year old freshman out of Calvert High School in Prince Frederick, Maryland has developed rapidly which delights coach Diane Guinan "What stands out about her (Schram) is not that she is the top player, but that she takes advantage of her position", said Guinan. Her coach goes on to say that what attributes to her level of performance is that "She has been working very hard...she's come a long way very fast"

In High School Schram twice won All-County honors. and was team captain.

The best of the best: award winners in the majors sparkling statistics turned in hit for power, stolen bases, and respective teams. Still, Hersh-

by Brett Lankford The baseball season is slowly winding down, and the playoffs are right around the corner. This has been a very strange year, but it has offered a number of special memories forthetruebaseballfan. Sofar, award winners this season produced the pitiful start of the Baltimore Orioles, a palimony suit against Wade Boggs (who managed to hit .350), and Jose Canseco's chase to become a 40HR-40SB club member. The biggest surprise of the year has to be the firing of Billy Martin as manager of the New York Yankees. Still, there have been some this season. Many players are up for post-season honors, but only the best can be named as American League: Jose Canseco, Oakland Atheletics This is probably the easiest selection of all. Kirby Puckett and Mike Greenwell were the only other players to come to mind. Canseco has done it all for the A's, who have dethroned the Twins as champs of the AL West. He has hit for average the boxscore.

MVP, Cy Young, Rookie of the Year and Manager of the Year Here are my picks for the 1988

Fin Fur Feather Inn 424 Bayside Ave Rock Hall, Md.

Specializing in Fresh Seafood!

639-7454

Friday and Saturday Nights LIVE PIANO BY Mickey Dulin

award

Gibson, Los Angeles Dodgers. Gibson will probably lose this award to Darryl Strawberry of the Mets, but Gibson has done more for his team. Kirk gave the Dodgers a much-needed shot in the arm, and he has been the inspirational leader of has hit for average and power, along with the theft of 30 bases. Still, he has helped the club in

CY YOUNG

AL: Frank Viola, Minnehas been music to the ears of best change-up in the majors, Mark Gubicza and Bruce Hurst made the All-Star team also get votes

NL: Orel Hershiser, Los Angeles Dodgers. This is the YEAR hardest selection of all. It is nailed numerous runners with iser edges out the other two by his amazing throwing arm. He a small margin. He is the leader should be a shoo-in for this of a relatively young pitching staff that has helped the Dodg-National League: Kirk ers to first place in the NL West.

ROOKIE OF THE YEAR

AL: Walt Weiss, Oakland Atheletics. Weiss may not have the great statistics of the rookies in the National League, but he has added stability to the Oakland infield. He has done a the revitalized Dodgers. He brilliant job fielding his shortstop position, and has thrown in an occasional clutch hit with the bat. Weiss beats out Melido a way that will not be shown in Perez of the Chicago White Sox, the only other legitimate contender for the award. NL: Chris Sabo, Cincinnati Reds. Both Sabo and Mark sota Twins. Viola's pitching Grace of the Cubs arrived on the scene this year and stepped the Twins. He has held to- into the lineup immediately. gether a staff riddled with inju- Still, Sabo leads the league in ries a lack of consistency. He doubles and has hordes of stomesmerizes batters with the len bases. He has also done an adequate job of fielding his and has kept the ball in the position, and put a new excitepark despite playing in the ment in the Cincinnati team. Homerdome. Dennis Eckersley, Sabo is also the only rookie who

MANAGER OF THE

AL: Joe Morgan, Boston almost a dead heat between Red Sox. This pick is also rather Hershiser, Danny Jackson of obvious. The Red Sox were the Reds and David Cone of the floundering around .500 until Mets. Allofthese pitchers have Morgan replaced John Medone a wonderful job for their Namara. They now hold the the managing of Morgan is a major reason. He inserted Jody Reed in the lineup in place of Spike Owen, and Reed is now hovering around the .300 mark. Most of all, Morgan demands and receives the respect that is important to keep a team together. NL: Jim Leyland, Pittsburgh Pirates. The Pirates were picked by most sportswriters to finish in the bottom half of the NL East. Instead, Leyland has taken a team comprised of young players with lots of raw talent and led them to second place in the East. With players like Bonilla, Bonds, Van Slyke and LaValliere, Leyland and the Pirates have many promising years to come. Jack McKeon has done a miraculous job in San Diego, but managers in sixth place rarely receive this

These players and managers have been instrumental in the success of their respective teams. Baseball needs its superstars and heroes to maintain the charisma of the game. It appears that these young players are more than capable to step right in the place of the Schmidt's, Rice's and Murphy as the idols f the future.

Brett lankford is a 50 phmore, planning to major in English.

Field hockey hopes to continue progress

by Carter Boatner Guinan described as a "balanced attack", the Washington College women's field hockey team blanked visiting Gallaudet College 10-0 extending their winning streak to two games, bringing the team's record to 2-2. What pleased Guinan about her team's performance and freshman Julie Schram is that all but one player in the leading all scorers with two and In what Coach Diane first two lines of attack man- three goals respectively aged to score

Page 9

The Washington attack dominated the game with Beth Mathews and Carol Reece combining to set up shots for their team's effort which placed a recorded 65 shots on the goal Five players each had one assist with junior Carole Reece

The field hockey team has definitely turned things around since their two season openers in which they were defeated both times. Their first victory came on the road last Saturday afternoon against Mary Wash ington College as both teams were held scoreless until Beth Mathews managed the single score in the second half, lifting her team to a 1-0 victory in her team's first win of the season In light of the tough schedule in which the team faces with

This year's Olympics have

by Don Steele

been panned out to be the biggest sporting event in years

There are a record number of countries participating and it is the first time since 1976 that the U.S. and U.S.S.R. have met with full teams, So fax, though, these Olympics have been filled with controversy and strange incidents boxer Anthony Hembrick. He showed up fifteen minutes late for his fight and was then disqualified. Reports circulating say that there was no room for him on the bus from the athletes village to the boxing site and that his coaches told him

the wrong time for the fight. No matter what the reason it is

One has to feel for U.S.

seven opponents in the Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC), Guinan is pleased with the progress that her team has shown in the past several weeks. "I think that they are definitely coming along, but we are still not where we want to be or can be", she says. What adds to the difficulty of the schedule beside playing seven MAC teams which are always considered to be tough opponents, is that there are only six players returning and the players must become familiar with skills necessary to win games. Guinan explains that the team is "still working on the intricacies of the game, [but] we also have to learn to play with their teammates". She goes on to admit that on any team "it takes time for the players to know each other"

Guinan summed up the season this far saying, "I'm pleased with the fact that we are making progress. If we can continue our progress, other teams will have a tough time one another and develop the beating us".

Sports trivia

The answer to last week's question

Both the Pittsburgh Steelers and the New Orleans Saints in their debut season opener returned the opening kickoff for a touchdown

This week's question

Who is the National Leaguer who holds the all-time American League record for career home runs (333) by a third base man

The correct answer to this question will win you a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. If you think you know the answer, fill out on a piece of paper, 1. your name, 2. your dorm and nom number or if you live off campus, phone number, and 3. your

Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope (behind the bar) and wait until next week's ELM to find out the winner and the correct answer.

The deadline for the Trivia questions are on Wednesday at 12 pm

*In the event that more than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing among the correct answers to determine the winner. Please, only one entry per person Sports calendar

F & M

vs. W & L, Mary Wash.

King of Prusia, Head of the Schuvlkill

vs. Widener/Bryn Mawr

vs. Gettysburg/Wilson

vs. Salisbury St. (H) 3:30pm

vs. Wesley

vs. Albright

tough for Hembrick, the Army paratrooper who was a favorite

In recreational sports this weekend, the Theta Softball Tournament will be played on

In women's football, the AOπ's will face the Zeta's on Sunday in front of Bunting.

Rec sports

Saturday & Sunday

Sunday October 2 wil feature the Single Elimination Tennis Tournament. For signup info contact Dennis Berry at the Casey Swim Center

The Dance Film Series opens Wednesday the 28th with the movie "Top Hat", featuring Fred Astaire & Ginger Rogers field backey

field hockey

socces

volleyball

9/27

9/29 volleyball

cross country

Room Size Refrigerator Excellent Condition (used 10 months) $60 June Cooke 928-3290

Austin Carpet

(A) 1:30pm

(A) 11am

(A) 4pm

(A) 6pm

(A) 6:30pm

(H) 1pm

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

You dial.

Seoul '88

for a medal has trained as hard any pain killers, not even aspias anyone and for his chance for rin, because it is against the a medal to be taken away is a IOC rules.

ingly Louganis came back one- of all places half hour later (before his next dive) to qualify for the finals, in team avenged last year's loss to which he went on to win the Brazil and now stands undespringboard competition and go teated down in history as the only diver to repeat as three-meter Olym- about to hit full swing. Within 1976 Summer Games, 16 year individual events. old Louganis won a silver in the 10-meter platform event shortly after having wisdom teeth removed. He was unable to take

In other Olympic news:

There is little dispute to Seventeen year old Janet Evans that 28 year old diver Greg managed a convincing Olympic Louganishas provided the most victory, her first ever, in the courageous performance in the women's 400-meter IM. On a games so far, possibly in the more sour note however there entire history of the games. On is Matt Biondi. Biondi's chances one of his dives he hit his head for six gold medals have been on the springboard while per- shattered. He has placed secforming a reverse two-and-one ond and third in his first two half somersaults in the pike races so far. The most painful position which carries a high no doubt was losing the men's degree of difficulty of 3.0. He 100-meter butterfly in the last cut his head and the cut re- 10 meters to a relatively unquired four stitches but amaz- known swimmer from Surinam

The men's baskethall

Now the Olympics are pic gold medalist. Louganis is the next week the medal rounds no stranger to pain however as in many of the team sports start some may recall that in the as well as the finals in other

Two horizontal tanning beds

SPECIAL FOR STUDENTS $5.00 for a 30 minute session

778-4144

RUTH SUTTON - PROP.

819 HIGH STREET

CHESTERTOWN, MD

Concert Artists appeal to all in Series intro

The Washington College Concert Series launches its thirty-seventh season this Saturday, September twentyfourth, with the arrival of The Concert Artists of Baltimore. Consisting of sixty instrumentalists and vocalists, the ensemble will perform a versatile program of selections from "all eras and genres of music."

Mr. Garry Clarke, professor of music at Washington College, feels that the performance of The Concert Artists of Baltimore is an excellent way to open the Concert Series not Music in Baltimore. only because there is an abundance of performers to fill the stage of Tawes Theatre, but that the opportunity ti experience the talents of both a chorus and an orchestra at the time is so great. According to Professor Clarke, the performance promises to be a "concert that will appeal to all different kinds of musical tastes.

In an attempt to please such a wide audience as the Washington College community, Edward Polochick, the group's director and founder, ranging from classical music to polkas, from jazzy Broadway showtunes such as "My Funny Valentine" to a surprise grand

The versatility and energy that radiates from Polochick's work has won him America's finest young conductors. Aside from his direction of The Concert Artists of Baltimore, he also serves as the director of the Baltimore Symphony Chorus and is an active member of the conducting staff at the Peabody Conservatory of tunity again.

love of the fine art of music is evident in his direction of the ensemble. This love is sure to be even more clearly conveyed to the audience through the informal commentary that he will provide throughout the performance. This added attraction, combined with the broad variety of the program, will allow for a performance that is, according to Special Events Coordinator Marshall Williams, "pretty accessible even if people don't know a great deal about by Angela Henneman have put together a program music." Williams encourages students, faculty and staff to attend this first of five perform ances in the Concert Series for the simple reason that, amidst such a wide selection of music, and the mixture of both vocalists and instrumentalists, accredited recognition as one of people may find an interest in some aspect of music they never knew they had. He further promotes attendance at the concert to the students by explaining that "It's all here, available and free. [After college] students may never get this oppor-

> The arrival of The Con-Polochick's knowledge and cert Artists of Baltimore is only the beginning of what promises to an interesting and entertaining, if not learning, Concert Series for the 1988-89 season. According to Professor Clarke, Washington College is fortunate to host such high quality performers. Many of the ensembles brought to Washington, including The Concert Artists of Baltimore, have been supported through the Yale Gordon Trust. This Trust was established to provide support for Baltimore-based cultural of its patrons, Washington Gibson Fine Arts Centre and educational institutions College will welcome in its such as the Peabody Conserva- thirty-seventh season of song, tory and the Baltimore Sym- symphony and sound on Saturphony Orchestra.

Edward Polochick, as director of the Concert Artists of Baltimore is one of the most dynamic conductors in America today.

With the support of this day, September twenty-fourth at 8:00 P.M.. The event will be trust and the continued loyalty held in Tawes Theatre of the

Mason's talk continues Sophie Kerr Lecture Series

by Michele M. Volansky

The Sophie Kerr Series having just presented a reading by poet and Visiting Associate Professor of English Calvin Forbes, will once again present a leading member of the liter ary community. On Wednesday, September the twentyeighth at four p.m., playwright Timothy Mason will give a talk on the theatre. Following the reading, members of the drama department and directed by Timothy Maloney, will give a reading of several scenes from his play Only You .

Mason, whose bio includes a National Society of the Arts and Letters Award, a Playwrights Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts, a Hollywood Drama-Logue Critics Award and the Twin Cities Drama Critics Circle Award, is currently a member playwright of the Circle Repertory Company in New York City, where Only You was first performed in 1987. The play, as described by Professor Bennett Lamond, deals with the contemporary issues in society, but more important explains with care how we live our own lives. Underlying the comedy and wit is a serious glimpse of not only our lives, but the lives we touch and become a part of. The New Yorker's Edith Oliver calls it "Timothy Mason's entertaining little con edy", a fact that sounds any-

"there is pleasure in it" and that Mason "has a keen ear for the rather special chatter of his characters, a light touch, and a voice all his own-no small gifts." These elements all add up to a play which is vaguely reminiscent of Lanford Wilson's 5th of July. The resemblence continues with this as Wilson is, like thing but complimentary. Mason, a playwright in resi-However, she does state that dence at Circle Rep. The comparison's Mason's works merit also include those of Beckett, Joyce and O'Neill. However, his style and attraction are only his.

One of the major influences in his writing include his involvement in the Minneapolis Children's Theatre Company, where he stage-adapted sixteen pieces of children's literature. From the children he gained a child-like innocence so prominent in his works and from the adult world he acquired the meanings behind the lessons pf childhood. There is a clarity and imagination in his current plays that is obviously the result of writing for chil-

Wedenesday's talk, on the workings of the theatre, will be followed by the three scenes. The goal is, as Professor Lamond states, "to make it close to a cold reading as possible" because in the first reading the funniest results are produced. The reading we in the Coffee-House.

comes up consistantly in asso ciation with Timothy Mason Mason was with St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minnesota when the two met in 1971 as part of the Manchester College, Oxford exchange program, a term which still continues at Washington College. His visit to Washington College, then, is representative of the friendships that are formed in a studyabroad program such as the Manchester year and the ties in the academic and literary com-

Professor Lamond's name

The reading will be held

SUNGLITZ

Students!! Keep your summer Highlights this fall with this new method of lightening! nts only $25 with Shari or Janie

> SUNBED SPECIALS 2 months unlimited visits:$75

Midtown Mall

Chestertown

Lit House fellows begin creative semester

by Kate Absher

Four unadorned rooms with white-washed walls and shabby furniture represent precious prizes for the creative writers at Washington College. They are havens of literary solitude or, as stated by Gina Braden, one of the newly-appointed inhabitants, "a wonderful escape where you have a distinct place for your written Andrea Kehoe, the existentialist. work because [in this room] you tend to purge everything else and work on your project."

Located on the third floor of the O'Neill Literary House, McGuiness doesn't have a spethese writing studios are inhabited by authors, playwrights, and literary critics who submitted an application that outlined the project that they wished to work on while they occupied the room. Their ap plication for residency, which lasts the fall semester, was then reviewed by a committee which consisted of Kathy Wagner, Professor Calvin Forbes, Dr. Nancy Tatum, Dean Maxcy, and Professor David Cohen The recepients of those rooms were then chosen: Andrea Kehoe, Mike McGuiness, Gina Braden, and Anne Linden-

In Andrea Kehoe's attic apartment, she plans to write and rewrite a series of short stories that are unrelated in theme. "They will probably be very existential because that is my basic mood," she explained. Andrea is double-majoring in English and philosophy, so her stories have "philosophical undertones." She hopes the room will be a place "free of distractions." "I won't be able to walk in there and procrastinate by doing my laundry, " laughs Andrea

Literary House have a great Unlike Andrea, Mike cifically outlined project. "My goals for this semester are to continue what I started in the summer, primarily in literary criticism. My project is less of a creative writing project than it is for the study of literature. However, he hopes to produce some imaginative writing from the use of room as well. Mike applied for the room because he wanted "an important place to retreat...intensively." addition to the advantage of phere and people of the O'Neill impact on his work Gina Braden feels this way as well. She likes being surrounded by people that are in-privacy, he thinks the atmos-

terested in the same literary pursuits as she. Her project is centered upon a full portfolio in two parts. The first part consists of a series of poems, "possibly related to a common theme, but that's not decided yet." The second part is a fulllength dramatic work which will be the basis of Gina's work this semester. "Right now I envision this piece as a very modern piece examining our type of society today. morals, prejudices, values interspersed by scenes of ritual-istic Greek theatre." She anticipates having it produced

Gina Braden, dramatist

Anne Lindenbaum, novelhere at the school and "publishing [her play] would be nice"

The fourth occupant of a room is Anne Lindenbaum, who is writing a novella. "It's about a girl from the suburbs who moved to the country one summer. It deals with the changing of environments-seeing women in the Safeway wearing riding boots contrasted with women in the suburbs wearing tennis skirts." Her project is still in the rudimentary stages, so she would like to "just get it down on paper.

Hopefully, Anne and the continued on page 12

On the preventable tragedy

by Michele M. Volansky

Newsweek magazine calls er a "champion of suicide prevention among the young", Dr. David Newell says of her. "She is an excellent speaker and a very nice person" and to teenagers in Wilmington, Delaware, she is a salvation. The "she" referred to here is Dr. Marlene Walters, the leading authority on suicide prevention in Delaware and the first speaker in this year's William James Forum. Scheduled for the twentyninth of September at seventhirty in Hynson Lounge, the talk is titled "Teen Suicide: A Preventable Tragedy"

Walters is pastor of Wilmington's Mount Lebanon United Methodist Church and teaches medical ethics at St.

however, extends beyond the realm of the state of Delaware. as the July fourth issue of Newsweek features a piece on her extensive work in suicide She is known throughout Delaware as the expert to contact in times of crisis and when information is sought. Her work with teens at her suicide prevention centre in Mt. Lebanon has led to the establishment of a centre and support group for the parents quick to point out that the talk of high-risk teenagers.

Her talk on the twentyninth at Washington College will include strategies to take in order to prevent suicide, ethical questions on suicide, early warning signs and steps to take when these signs are

Her prominence, recognized. She will explain in some detail the view teens take of suicide and her answer to those views, in addition to her "prevention by virtue of indication that life has something significant to offer. Her work and its applications to students and teenagers alike is also a focal point of the talk and the lecture points to being one of great importance to college students in particular.

The College, however, is was scheduled in late July and is in no way a response to the suicide death of student Jonathon Waidner. Dr. Walters' talk, however, may serve as a forum for students who are confused about the issue of taking one's life

Campus calendar: what to hope and plan for

September 23

The Sigs of East Hall are playing host for their annual crab feast on the twenty-third outside of their building. This tournament. Sign-upsare being year they've invited everyone to the seven dollar per person event. The cost covers beer and "all the crabs you can eat or put down your pants." The event is to be followed by a party complete with a band and looks to please any crab fan

Weekend of the 23rd

The members of the Theta Chi fraternity in Dorchester are holding their softball tournament this weekend, an event that turns a simple afternoon of softball into a all-day party. For more information, contact one of the brothers

The film series contines this weekend with the film Wall Street, starring both Martin and Charlie Sheen and Mike Douglas. The movie paints a grim picture of the all-or nothing world of Wall Street.

September 23

The entertainment in the C-House for the upcoming week includes the backgammon held on the twenty-third, with actual competition beginning on the twenty-sixth.

September 24

The Concert Series opens with the Concert Artists of Baltimore at eight P.M. in the Gibson Fine Arts Center. Director and founder Edward Polochick, who performed at the Peabody Conservatory of Music, guides the Artists through a wide variety of musical styles in an event all should attend.

September 24

The Lambdas are hosting another party in Cecil house on Saturday night and the party looks to be a wonderful way to relax after attending the Concert Series. Expect a large amount of beer to be spilled, but also a lot of fun for all who

September 26

The Monday "Teas and Talks" series begins on the twenty-sixth of September with Mary Clark, current Literary House Fellow in Editing. Ms. Clark will be reading from her poetry at 4:30, with tea being served at 4:00.

September 26

The O'Neill Literary House will be the site of the the Writer's Theatre, a group whose main function is to aid in the writing process. Writers with finished scripts or poems or even writers with good ideas are invited to attend the meeting on Tuesday at five o'clock to discuss projects for the upcoming semester. David Cohen, director, states that funds are allotted for two performances this fall, so be sure to bring your

first, organizational meeting of September 28

The Music Department will fill the air with the sounds of music at their annual Bach's Lunch, on the terrace of the Miller Library at 12:30 P.M. on this Wednesday event. Bring your lunch outside and enjoy the performance while taking in the great outdoors. The event is always one that provides a delightful interlude between classes and offers peaceful, relaxing atmosphere.

work or start writing. Literary tradition continues

continued from page 11

other Literary House writers will be able to do just that with the help of their private rooms used exclusively to scribble away in. The rooms offers not only the place to sit alone to write,but also a place where one can just sit and think while looking out over the campus. Jeff Vail, one of last year's "room winners" adamently stated that the room in such a place as the the large white house.

short time because of the room."

The time period is one facet to the rooms that has both library; there is a difference. positive and negative aspects. Because the length of stay in the rooms is only one semester, one is forced to seriously concentrate on the work at hand. Lindenbaum Anne he "got a whole lot done in a real O'Neill Literary House when she pronounced that the room was not a "study carrel in the Only time will tell how worthwhile the time spent alone in the solitude of the third floor of the Literary House, as Washington College, each year, produces some of its finest young summed up the importance of writers from within the walls of

Mom's Cookie Jar

It is documented that if a person exercises the heart at 120-1130 beats per minute for half-an-hour, three days a week, that person would undergo what is known as a training effect

That person, all else being constant, would lose weight, have lower blood pressure, be less tired during the day, tend to stop smoking if a smoker, have lower cholestoral levels in the blood, be less prone to heart attacks and strokes and have a stronger sense of well being

People who exercise regularly tend to live longer and lead more fulfilling lives. SO EXER-CISE - PRUDENTLY!!!

There are still some positions available on the serving line and in the dishroom. A weekend numbers person is also needed. Anyone interested in working for the W.C.D.S. contact Mrs. Crew

For those students enrolled in our linen pack age service, don't forget, you can pick-up your clean linens on Thursdays during the dinner meal There are several students who have paid for service and as yet have not availed themselves of the service that's been paid for. If you have any questions regarding this service, contact Mrs Crew

"Breakfast To Go" seems to be quite a success. For those of you who haven't heard about it, the Dining Services is serving juice, coffee, hot tea, and the pastry of the day, from the front line area, from 9:30 A.M. to 10:00 A.M.

Well, I quess that's it until next week......MOM

September 26, 1988 From Oliver Stone (Platoon, Salvador) comes Wall Street, a suave melodrama about greed and corruption in New York. Wall Street plays like a mythic battle between good— York. Mic Steer Josy's like a mythic battle between good-caff for (Marth Shenn), a working class union man with high moral values—and bad—Cordon Gekko (Mike Douglas), a corporal reader who bought his way into high society. Caught between them is Blud Fox (Charles Sheen), a college Ad bonging banke into gir not lever York Stock Exchange. Ultimately him is a powerful and classifica-ing film about an impriguing also-mortified precliption of the as deadly and adolocity as a spollbedding portract of the power. All Michael Sheet and the properties of the second of the property of the Michael Sheet and the property and the property of the second of the property of the property of the second of the property of the property of the second of the property of the porter calls Wall Street 'a spellibir frantic, high-stakes Wall Street world."

SENSATIONALLY ENTERTAINING THE MOST ENJOYABLE MOVIE OF THE YEAR!

Every dream has a price

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 4

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, September 30, 1988

WC plans for bridge

by Susan Di Leo Washington College has received approval from the state of Maryland to build a bridge over the railroad tracks by Kibler Field.

According to Clint Baer, the Director of Planning and Special Projects, "the Athletic Department articulated a need to cross the railroad tracks" to reach the athletic fields on the other side of the tracks.

The bridge will be "primarily a pedestrian walkway which should allow light vehicles-such as maintenance vehicles-to cross.

Baer says the new bridge will "make the area more acces-

Art Kudner, a Kent County resident who was Chairman of Buildings and Grounds until a year ago, obtained from the State of Maryland Department of Transportation sections of a bridge in Stillpond which was recently replaced

Having been granted the necessary clearance and permits from the State Department, Kudner is donating half of the bridge to the College.

The College has already begun clearing trees and brush in the area where the bridge will be located, and, according to Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene Hessey, planning will begin "in a matter of days.

He says a contractor has been hired to install the bridge. "We're really delighted to bave this bridge," said Hessey adding that it will be of "great value to the College and the

Both Baer and Hessey expect the bridge's completion his fall, weather permitting.

The College has begun to clear away trees and brush by Kibler Field in order to prepare the area for a bridge which is to be built over the railroad tracks. The bridge is designed to provide better access for students who cross the tracks to reach the athletic fields. Its completion is expected this fall,

Jessies fund non-traditional educations

As of April 1, 1988 a new specialized scholarship has been made available to women and minority students over the age of 25. The Non-Traditional Degree Program for Women and Ethnic Minorities is funded through the Jessie Ball Du Pont. Religious, Charitable and Educational Fund, which granted the college approximately $330,000 to be allocated as 30 scholarships (a maximum of 10 per academic year) covering 50%-100% of the student's tui

"Jessies" as they are nicknamed, face unique obstacles on the road to higher learning "Many of these adults have regular jobs, are married or divorced, and have children to support in addition to their

Mary Ellen Larrimore, Director, Office of Continuing Edu-

"Their difficulties are very different from those of a regular college student. Suppose one of their children gets sick, and they must stay home to care for them, or what if their car breaks down, and they can't make the commute to school?"

10 recipients were chosen this year from a pool of 31 applications, proving, according to President Douglass Cater, that a real need

the administration is "meeting

ess, all applications were initially evaluated by a review committee consisting of Vice President Sherry Magill, Vice President for Admissions Kevin Coveney, Registrar David Butters, Dean Sansing, Mary Ellen Larrimore, and Director of Financial Aid Bonnie Vansant.

Their findings were tempered by recommendations from the Financial Aid Office, and the 10 applications they felt were most deserving, along with 4 alternates, were given to

President Cater and Dean Baer continued on page 2

Scholarships awarded

by Rose Jarboe In an effort to provide scholarships to students amidst federal government cutbacks Washington College seeks sources to provide endowments. Such was the case when Washington College ap proached the Baltimore based Middendorf Foundation and presented the idea of awarding two seniors with superior academic achievements and outstanding records of leadership one year merit scholarships.

The Middendorf Foundation agreed, yielding a sum of $12,000.00 for two students each year

The first recipients of the merit scholarships are Andrea

Kehoe of Westminster, Mary land and Rachel Smith of Geneva, New York Andrea Kehoe, pursuing double major in English and Philosophy, is involved in numerous activities. In previous years, Kehoe has served as a peer advisor, a member of the SAB, and the editor of The Elm editor of the Collegian, as well as the President of the Philosophy Honor Society, a member of the Writers Union and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa. Kehoe has also worked in public relations for Washington College

continued on page 10 Committee

Department Chairpersons announced

by Tracey Connell The Advisory Committee on Appointments and Tenure has approved the appointments in the academic departments, the standing committees, and faculty appointments for the

The Advisory Committee itself consists of President Cater (Chair), Provost and Dean Elizabeth Baer, and Professors Clarke, Taylor, Creegan, and All appointments must be reviewed annually. Each year, arrangements are made to accomodate professors on leave, visiting profesors, and new faculty. Therefore, the departments constantly undergo

Assistant Dean Lucille Sansing remarked, "I think it reflects the vigor of the College in the sense that...there is always a new outlook, something that might not have been here before."

Visiting professors and new faculty bring with them their own special interests and areas of study, says Sansing, The practice allows the College to offer its students classes "they weren't able to take with other faculty members.....it presents students with unique op-

The faculty chair appointments for the academic year are as follows: W. Robert Fallow, Chair, History Department; Daniel L Premo, Chair, International Studies; James Sieman, Acting Chair, Depart ment of Psychology.

New faculty appointments to the committees are: W Robert Fallow, Joint Committee on Computing; Jeff Chaffin, Athletics Committee: Calvir Forbes, Board of Publications: Penny Fall and George Shiv-Presently, Kehoe is the ers, Campus Judiciary; Terrance Scout, Faculty Finance Committee: Andre Yon, Honorary Degrees; Susan Tessem, Lecture Series; Karen Zak Library; Daniel Premo, Long Range and Strategic Planning: Thomas Pabon and Colin Dickson Writing Program

INSIDE: In the World.....page 6

Sophie Kerr.....page 9

Olympic overview.....page 11

The fifth obligation.....page 15

Album review.....page 16

EDITORIAL

The right not to bear arms

Maryland voters have an additional decision to make when they go to the polls in November. The controversial gun control bill has gone to referendum. And voters can expect the National Rifle Association to continue its barrage of advertisements intended to convince them that the law is bad.

According to public opinion polls, the majority of Americans favor more stringent gun control laws. If Marylanders vote for this law, there is a distinct possibility that other states will follow suit, or that it will set a precedent that Congress cannot ignore.

The law is designed to ban Saturday Night Specials, the cheap, unreliable, easily concealed weapons that are favored by criminals. Used in three out of ten crimes in Maryland, these guns killed approximately 1,295 people in Maryland between 1980 and 1986.

If the law passes, a nine member board headed by the State Police superintendent will draw up a list of handguns that may be legally made and sold. The board will include a member of the NRA, a gun manufacturer and three public members. The lists will be made public, and decisions can be challenged in the court.

The law does not affect any guns made before Janu ary 1, 1985. Law abiding citizens with legitimate guns have nothing to fear, the ban was created to cut down on crime

Although the guns are not necessarily the weapons of choice for most criminals, they are cheap and easily obtainable. Of course those people who really want to buy a weapon may look to more powerful ones, but at least they are blocked at one angle. If the guns aren't being manufactured, then they can't be sold. Certainly handguns aren't the only contributor to crime, but mixing their ready availability with other societal problems leads to major problems.

People who want the guns kept in circulation surround themselves with the myth of self-protection. But these weapons are unlikely to do any protecting - they wind up being misused. One child under fourteen dies of a handgun shot daily in America. In addition, 200,000 handguns are taken in burglaries every year - only ten percent are ever retrieved. Saturday Night Specials are poorly made and frequently malfunction; they simply aren't well made weapons.

continued below

Washington College Elm

| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrison  |  |  |  |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------|--|--|--|
| News Editor                   | Susan Di Leo          |  |  |  |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum       |  |  |  |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatner        |  |  |  |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | . Michele M. Volansky |  |  |  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson         |  |  |  |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Karr             |  |  |  |
| Managers                      |                       |  |  |  |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekman          |  |  |  |
| Advertising Manager           | . Erin Hodge-Williams |  |  |  |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobczak         |  |  |  |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cvnthia Goss          |  |  |  |
| Office ManagersJulie Gr       | eene and Cathy Lease  |  |  |  |

The Washington College Elm is the official student newspa per of Washington College. It is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks.

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor-in-chief with the assistance of The Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the the assistance of The Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opinion of the staff. Signed columns, commentate, letters, editorials, opinion of the staff of the columns of the c received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Let-ters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy ters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privacy would be violated by disclosure of his ber name. Students should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letter to 600 words or less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked box at the editorial office, or mailed c/o The Elm, Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21820. Letters be-come the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Wednesday to be considered for publication in that week's

e Elm's business and editorial office is located in the the Lim's Dusiness and colorinal onice is jocated in the basement of Reid Hall, next to the Reid Hall lounge. Business bours are 7.90 to 9:00 PM on Tuesdays and 7:00 to 11:00 PM Wednesdays. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in (301) 778-2800, extension 321.

MARY JAME, MARY JANE, YOU SHOULD KNOW BY NOW THAT THE FOOD IN THIS PIKE

COULD KILL A COW. IT WOULD BE NICE TO EXPECT A LITTLE FRESH MEAT AND NOT SOMETHING COVERE WITH GRAVY OR GREASE.

THE SALAD IS FINE IF YOU LIKE WILTED LEAF

EDIBLE THAN THAT GREY-GREEN REEF.)

RUT TODAY FOR LIVER + ONIONS (AT LEAST IT'S MORE THE THING I FEAR MOST, EVEN MORE THAN THE RUNS.

ewsletter

At the last Interfraternal Council (IFC) meeting, John Bodnar, President of the Phi Sigs, suggested that the Greeks initiate a weekly column in The Elm to inform the campus as a whole - Greeks and non-Greeks, as well as faculty and staff, of the activities in which we are involved. The IFC, whose job it is to promote inter-fraternal relations, is worried, along with the rest of the Greek community, that too often individual Greek organizations, and the Greek community as a whole, are unfairly stereotyped due to a lack of information The purpose of this weekly column is to end any negative connotations due to this lack of understanding, and to act as a sort of newsletter. Students can now be aware of the real meaning and involvement behind these organizations and then be able to form an edu-

Saturday, September 17, was the nineteenth annual Candlelight Walking Tour of Chestertown, sponsored by the Historical Society of Kent County. All proceeds went to the Historical Society to help preserve the condition of the beautiful eighteenth century houses featured on the tour. When the Society asked for volunteers from the community to act as tour guides between the hours of 6 PM and 10 PM on Saturday evening, they received enthusiastic replies from members of Alpha Chi Omega, Zeta Tau Alpha, Alpha Omicron Pi, and Phi Sigma.

cated opinion

Though Formal Rush for the Greeks at Washington College is not until the Spring Semester, the Fall Semester is also a very busy time. One of the activities in the planning stage is REC sports. The first of the Intermural Flag Football games was held on Sunday, September 25, on the Bunting lawn, where the AOπs and the ZTAs battled it out. A good time was reportedly had by all, and the AOns emerged victorious, under the coaching of Chip Bailey, 35-14.

Also in progress are plans for a committee to help prevent drunk driving. The Alpha Chi's are in search of volunteers, both Greek and non-Greeks to act as drivers hetween the hours of 11:30 P.M. and 1:00 A.M.on Wednesday and Thursday nights of each week. The committee will be assigned to sub committees and placed on a schedule so that not everyone will necessarily have to work both nights every week. As a driver you will be asked to answer calls from students who have had to much to drink and then pick them up from Newt's and the Tavern. If you are interested please contact Debby Cohn on second floor Minta Each of the Greek organizations on campus were present at Fall Convocation anxiously awaiting the announcement of the winners of the Loving Cups. These two awards are extended to the sorority and fraternity with the highest combined G.P.A. for the past school year. Kappa Alpha Order along with the ZTAs were this year's winners of the Loving Cups. Congratulations to both organizations!

The biggest event for Panhel, the governing council for the sororities, is Greek Weekend which will begin on Thursday, September 29, with Greek Bowling. The following night will be a Pre-Greek Games Party sponsored by the brothers of Phi Sigma. The Greek Games themselves will take place on Saturday, October 1 at 12:30 on the lawn in front of Bunting Hall. Panhel is working in conjunction with Dennis

Last week The Elm reorted incorrectly that Timothy Mason's visit was sponsored by the Sophie Kerr Committee; it was sponsored by the Lecture Series. We regret any con-that may have been caused by to look trime.

Berry and the Recreation Sports program. They will be involved in setting up and officiating the day's events. President of Panhel, Denise Smith says "We are looking forward to a good turnout from each Greek organization on campus." Also, to follow the games there will be a Greek Bash sponsored by the IFC from 7:00 to 1:00 P.M. The party will feature live entertainment behind Tawes Theater. We hope to see everyone there to enjoy the festivities.

continued from page 1

for final perusal. Recipients may take up to classes per academic year, placing them in part-time student status. Criteria for application includes demonstrated need. letters of recommendation; previous transcripts, and a "written statement of pur-

Since W C serves over 50 non-traditional students, this new program is aimed at meet ing the more specialized needs of its adult population.

"This represents one of the most promising projects we have been able to launch in the past year," declared President Cater, "and I am keenly en thused that the college is reach ing out to those who, for one reason or another, missed their college education." continued from above

Certainly it is something to think about when govern ment makes a law that appears to interfere with citizens' rights but this law does not take away the right to bear arms. When 8 particular weapon plays a part in thirty percent of Maryland crimes, and proves itself to be dangerous both to the owner and to anyone he bears against, then it is time to recon sider its legality. In a state that has the death penalty, strin gent sentences for repeat of fenders, and 13,000 people it prisons built for 9,000, it is time to look for other methods to hal

Students should be allowed to feed themselves

never, up to this point, been thy as the first answer. particularly interested in writing anything for the Elm. However, I have finally run into an "issue" that caught my attention. Frankly, I'm pissed off. I had a simple question. "Why am I paying $1100.00 and change per semester to eat at the dining hall?" The simple answer I received was "because that is Washington College Dining Service policy." I have yet another simple question.
"Why is the school forcing students to stay on board, especially those who are seniors housed in beautiful new condos with fully equipped kitchens?"

This is my fourth year as a answer for that one yet but I'm would they? Well, if this is the a 14 meal plan was available to student atthis school and I have sure it will be just as notewor-

My purpose is not to criticize the school food. That is another issue in itself. It is institutional food and we can't expect miracles. My problem is that for approximately the same amount of money I could eat in a number of fine, small institutions that Chestertown has to offer. For example, if you get a chance, go down to Ellen's Coffee Shop and look at the prices on the menu. Eight times out of ten a meal there is going to cost less than the dining hall and the quality will be substantially higher. Ellen's is a retail operation. If they were not showing a profit they wouldn't be there, case, then what is the dining hall doing? What makes their food worth my dollar? Why can't they compete in a free market (which they seem strongly to discourage)? I can only suggest two possibilities. I think either a case of poor management exists or someone is blowing smoke up my/your wazoo. If there is a realistic answer, I would like to hear it, but please don't offend my sensibilities. I have heard enough silly excuses already.

Another slap in the face I received was when I inquired about an alternative to the 19 meal plan that I felt was so extravagantly expensive. Much me for about $100.00 less. WHAT A DEAL!!! That's five meals less per week for the semester at a substantial discount. Think about this: 5 times 12 weeks per semester (let's be conservative) comes to sixty meals, less than $1.75 a plate. You can buy breakfast in town for that. What does that come to for a whole semester at that rate? 1.75 * 19 * 12 = $399.00. If we give the dining campus but off board. They hall a break and double that figure, they're still wacked out by $300.00! Enough math. I'm to my delight I discovered that sure you can figure out the rest.

John Owen

The only other alternative the dining hall offers is "you could live off campus." The fact is that I did live off campus last year. This had a good side and a bad side. I was able to feed myself and purchase cleaning items for between $100.00 and $125.00 a month. Anyone who knew me can testify to the fact that I didn't get skinny. The only problem is that most off campus housing available to students is in questionable condition. I would like to know what the problem is with giving students the option of living on

continued on page 6

John Owen is a senior majoring in English

I haven't gotten an intelligent ISSUE:

LAURIE PAULSEN Marion, MA Freshman

hardhere. The room is a little mall for a triple, however the bidisbetter compared to boarding school."

Campus Voices

Do you think that the amount of money you pay for board is equal to what you receive?

JENNIFER VALIGHAN Elkton, MD

Senior I don't mind the room and "Thave lived on campus for four years and have loved it. I think it is worth the money because the food is not half as bad as other schools I have visited."

CLAY EICHELBERGER Salisbury, MD Sophomore

"The board plan is better than other colleges, but for the most part, the food isn't worth the money. Sometimes it isn't even cooked. The rooms are good, though-even in Kent

STEPHEN LORENZ Alexandria, VA Junior

"No way. Campus housing is too cramped already without having to pay through the nose for it and the food may look good but it has so much starch in it I can sleep stand-

TIM MADISON Cherry Hill, NJ Sophomore

"You get the same amenities at any major correctional facility-only there you meet more exciting people and learn a trade.

by Maggie Carr

The WCDS: The best "bang" for your buck

The primary goal of the Dining Service. This means no Washington College Dining shopping hassles for you, no rvices is to meet student's lodservice requirements to the best of our abilities. We strive provide good service and to Ger a wide variety of foods in a leasant environment at a reamable cost to you as our cusumer. We of the Washington College Dining Service are here serve you.

The key is that we are tre to SERVE YOU, THE CUSTOMER. You ask yourself hat exactly are you getting for a monies that you have given the Dining Service. Most of boarding student. ar students who live on camadalso have an option to be on he 14 meal contract.

What exactly are you reming with the 19 meal contect? This meal plan entitles messy meal preparation, no clean up, and all you can eat. Homemade breads and desserts. Ice cream bar, an extensive salad bar, George's Snack

Jeff DeMoss

Shoppe, Breakfast to go, cheese bar, soup bar, as well as two and three entrees per meal are provided. This cost averages to $3.63 for food, labor, and clean up to prepare one meal per

"Is it worth that much are on the 19 meal contract money? What other special perks am I receiving for my board plan?"

The Dining Service has prepared theme nights: Eastern Shore Dinner to all meals served by the Midnight Breakfast

Lobster and Steak Feast Post New Years Eve Dinner Oktoberfest National Nutrition Month Fare

Grape Day Spring Feast Election Dinner

Colony Concept Food Show Thanksgiving Dinner Monthly Birthday Cake Winter Holiday Feast

WINNING THE CHOICE MENU has been established. This special menu is designed by a registered dietitian Itemphasizes those selections which are healthier and lower in calories. These choices are underlined on the weekly

The Dining Service has initiated a charging system for all boarding students. You as a boarder can use your W.C. ID Card to charge other meals for friends who visit our campus.

Payment is billed on a monthly account through the Business linen tablecloths and napkins.

The Dining Service recognizes that W.C. Students on a meal plan often wish to "CARRY-OUT" meals due to illness or other personal reasons. In order to support your boarding privilege we have initiated this policy.

During any meal time you can take out your meal. We give you utensils, carry out tray and cups to assist you with your

The Washington College Club is set up for all students. The Club is held in Hynson Lounge and is open for lunch from 11:15 AM -1:30 PM every Monday through Friday, unless otherwise noted on the "WC Club Calendar

Services are as follow:

1. Seating at tables with 2. A self-serve soup, sandwich, hot entree and salad bar. 3. Tables may be reserved or special arrangements made through Mr. Jester, Catering Manager (ext. 345) twenty-four hours in advance.

Hynson Lounge and the Main Dining Room are available for college related educational and social activities. These areas are ideal for semiformal or formal affairs. Reservations must be made with the Catering Department (ext.

Students and Student Organizations may purchase food from the Dining Service

continued on page 10 Jeff DeMoss is the Assistant Director of the Dining Services, and is Director of the Student

Presidential candidates debate on drug issue

drugs. What is there about these as use times that drives or draws so many Americans to use drugs?

BUSH: I think we've seen a deterioration of values. I think for a while, as a nation, we condoned those things we should have condemned. For a while, as I recall, it even seems to me that there was talk of legalizing or decriminalizing marijuana and other drugs, and I think that's all wrong.

So we've seen a deterioration in values, and one of the things that I think we should do about it in terms of cause is to instill values into the young people in our schools. We got away, we got into this feeling that value-free

The polls say the No. 1 domes- believe that at all. I do believe there are tic issue to a majority of voters is fundamental rights and wrongs as far

And, of course, as far as how we make it better, yes, we can do better on interdiction, but we've got to do a lot better on education. And we have to be tougher on those who commit crimes. We've got to get after the users more. We have to change this whole culture.

You know, I saw a movie, "Crocodile Dundee," and I saw the cocaine scene treated with humor, as though this was a humorous little incident. And it's bad. Everybody ought to be in this thing-the entertainment industry, people involved in the schools, education. And it isn't a Republican or a Democratic or a liberal problem, but we have got to instill values in these point drug program that includes what deal with the consequences. would do as president of the United States in terms of doing better on interdiction and in terms of doing better in the neighborhoods. But I think we're all in this together, and my plea to the American people is values in the schools. DUKAKIS: I agree with Mr. Bush that values are important. But it's important that our leaders demonstrate those values from the top. That means those of us who are elected to positions of political leadership have to reflect those values ourselves. Here we are with a government that's been dealing with a drug-running Panamanian dictator [Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega]. We've been dealing with him, he's been

And I have put forward a many- like me and others have been trying to remember being in a school in my own state as we wer organizing somehting we called the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs and a young 16-year-old girl coming up to me, desperate, addicted, depend ent, saying governor, I need help. We'n providing that young woman with help but I want to be a president of th United States who makes sure that we never again do business with a drug running Panamanian dictator, that we never again funnel aid to the contra through convicted drug dealers

Values begin at the top, in th White House. Those are the values want to bring to the presidency and to the White House beginning in Januar of 1989 continued on page 5

dealing drugs to our kids and governors education was the thing, and I don't young people. Drama department stages its first performance

by Ryder Daniels The first Washington Absher and Jodie Peebles College Drama Department Production this fall is Anne Frank by Meyer Levin, adapted from The Diary of Anne Frank. The play is directed and designed by Jason Rubin with lighting by Cindy Curley. The as Anne Frank, Joshua Buchman as Otto Frank and Derick Serra as Peter Van Daan. Other members of the cast include Deborah Nahmias, Cindy Croot, Stephanie Hess, Jason West,

Emily Lott, Nitza Morgan, Kate Anne's growth and maturity

Jason Rubin describes the play on two levels. "The first is the story of a girl just beginning her teenage years, and the concommitant struggles with her parents, awaking sexually, and a search for an identity. cast features Felicia Shackman The second is the Nazi persecution of the Jews between 1942 and 1945, which forces Anne, her parents and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Van Daan, their son Peter, and Doctor Dussel into hiding from their oppressors." David Purcell, Carey Smith, Rubin adds: "Both levels be-Geoff Girard, Raul Felipa, come intertwined, so that her adolescence is examined in the light of her nearly three years of confinement above Mr. Frank's business in Amster-

Anne Frank's diary has been adapted into two dramatic scripts, the most popular one is by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett. When asked why he was doing the adaptation by Levin rather than the more widely accepted one, Rubin responded "The Levin adaptation follows the true diary of Anne Frank much more closely.

during the formative years of ten several years before the more successful version by Goodrich and Hackett. What is significant in Levin's play, and why I have chosen to present it, is this... the Characters question their belief in a God who would allow their destruction. they question their Jewishness and wonder why they have been made different from all other

"The specificity of the Jews' suffering, however, is but one example of many people's oppression and eventual genocide - North, Central and South

As a matter of fact, it was writ- Amercian Indians are but

Rubin adds another significant reason he is producing the play relates to the speed given by Josiah Bunting IIIa Fall Convocation, Rubin on tinues "He [Bunting] urge students to vote - to put asid aspersions of apathy and inte est only in themselves and take a stand other than abu themselves. He characterize young people as materialist and practically without an moral or ethical values." Jaso Rubin concludes that "Am Frank makes people, especia young people, realize that the is a world outside of themselv and that they must do son thing to change it and make better." Rarely performed in North America, Anne Fran will be a fascinating first pro duction for this school year.

Anne Frank will be pre ented on Thursday, Fridaya Saturday October 6,7,8 at 8p.m in Tawes Theater, Tickets I free to students, $4 for geni admission and $3 for facu and staff. For reservations, to tention 269.

when it's Pizza Hut® pizza. It's so tasty because it's freshly made. With our crispy crust, our tangy sauce, pure mozzarella cheese and your favorite toppings. Here's a big discount to get you out of the kitchen. It's a great reason to try real Pizza Hut® Pan Pizza.

Kent Plaza Chestertown 778-1070

Onen Monday - Saturday

Welcome Back Washington College!

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

A & P Parking Lot Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Stop By & See Us!

778-4771

Phone

Both stress the importance of values

Governor, a follow-up question. You have two minutes to answer it. Are you suggesting, sir, that President Reagan is one of the causes of the drug problem in this country?

DUKAKIS.

I'm saying that those of us who are elected to positions of political leadership, Jim, have a special responsibility, not only to come up with programsand I have outlined in detail a very important, very strong program of enforcement as well as drug-education prevention. And Mr. Bush is right, the two go hand in hand

But if our government itself is doing business with people that we know are engaged in drug profiteering and drug trafficking, if we don't understand that that sends out a very, very bad message to our young people, it's a little difficult for me to understand just how we can reach out to that youngster that I talked about, and the yuoung people like her all over the country, and say to them we want to help you.

program for being tough on enforce- country, if he or representatives of the

ment at home and abroad, doubling the administration are either dealing with number of drug-enforcement agents, having a hemispheric summit soon after the 20th of January when we bring our democratic neighbors and allies together here in this hemisphere and go over this country? to work together. But we also have to take demand seriously. You know, we have 5 percent of the world's population in this country who are consuming 50 President. percent of the world's cocaine.

And in my state, I'm proud to say, we've organized a drug-education and prevention program which the federal Drug Enforcement Administration says is a model to the country. We're helping youngsters. We're reaching out to them. And we're beginning with drug education and prevention beginning in the early elementary grades in every elementary school in our state, and that's the kind of effort we need in every elementary school in the United States of America. And we've got to begin earlyin the first, second and third grade. before our youngsters begin to experiment with these very, very dangerous substances.

Mr. Bush is how we instill those values. how we create this environment for the Now I've outlined in great detail a drug-free schools that we want in this and involving people like Noriega in our policy or don't pursue that connection in a way that makes it possible for us to cut it off and to be an example to our kids all

LEHRER-A minute to rebut, Mr. Vice

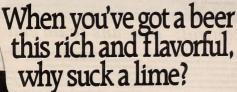

The other day my opponent was given a briefing by the CIA. I asked for and received the same briefing. I am very careful in public life about dealing with classified information, and what I'm about to say is unclassified. Seven administrations were dealing with Mr. Noriega; it was the Reagan-Bush administration that brought this man to justice and, as the governor of Massachusetts knows, there was no evidence that Mr. Noriega was involved in drugs. no hard evidence, until we indicted him And so I think it's about time we get this Noriega matter in perspective.

Panama is a friendly country. I went down there and talked to the presi-I guess the question I would ask of dent of Panama about cleaning up their money-laundering, and Mr. Noriega was there. But there was no evidence at that time. And when the evidence was there. we indicted him, and we want to bring him to justice. And so call off all those pickets out there that are trying to tear down seven different administrations.

Anyone interested in writing news for The Elm, Contact Susan Di Leo at extension 321.

Interested in advertising in The Elm? Call Erin Hodge-Williams at 778-3534 for information

Let's face it, amigos, any beer that needs a slice of lime to give it flavor can't be much of a beer. Discover Calgary Amber Lager... Its rich, imported taste is hearty and robust. Try it the next time you order beer, and hold the lime Calgary Amber Lager. Join the stampede.

A T-Shirt offer that's not for suckers.

| Quantity   | Size | Price   | Total |
|--|------|---------|-------|
|  | MLXL | 5800 cz |       |
| All Penn, residents add 6% sales tax.All prices effective through January 31,1989 Void where prohibited. |      | Tax*    |       |
|  |      | TOTAL   |       |

1011 Cedar Avenue, Croydon, PA 19020 Imported by Century Importers Inc., Baltimore, Maryland Payment □ Check □ Money Order □ VISA □ MasterCard □ American Express

In the World...

Secretary of State, George Shuf-fling, and the Soviet Foreign Minister, Eduard A. Shevardnadze, met last week for talks involving SDI, Human Right's es and strategic nuclear arms control. Little headway was made in any of the areas, although the USSR has agreed to release 36 prisoners held on political charges for religious activism. This ng is expected to be the last of a set of high-powered talks during the Re agan Administration.

Michael K. Deaver, a close friend of President Reagan who was once one of the most powerful officials in the White House was recently given a threeyear suspended prison sentence, placed on probation and fined $100,000 for lying about his lobbying activities after leaving the White House

The House passed an AIDS bill .16, spot-up 0.06 immediately fit calls for spending $1.2 billion over And finally, the dollar was down. that calls for spending $1.2 billion over three years to combat AIDS through testing, counseling and research. previously approved Senate bill emphazes education to the public. The House also approved legislation which would put limits on U.S. Imports of textiles, apparel and shoes. However, the bill lacks the support needed to override an expected Presidential veto

Federal researchers are exploring a possible new biological weapon against AIDS. Scientists at the National Institute of Health are studying a chemical cells without harming healthy ones police after a black man was killed by a white teenager in what was probably a drug transaction gone sour. No injuries were reported.

Rioting erupted in Shreveport, Louisiana as hundreds of blacks looted

Financial News:

Consumer prices rose 0.4% in August reflecting higher costs for en-ergy ,food, and shelter. The increase suggests a steady, rather sharp rise in inflation ahead.

Gold futures fell below $400 an ounce for the first time in 19 months and further declines are expected.

As of Monday, September 26,1988 STOCKS: Dow Jones was up

10.67, transportation was up 4.03, utilities were up 0.18. BONDS: The Shearson index

COMMODITIES: futures- off

TURKEY

Violence occurred Ed in Ankara, Turkey as voters rejected a constitu-tional amendment to hold local elecons in November rather than next March. Prime Minister Ozal had threatened to resign if the measure was over-whelmingly defeated.

SYRIA

Syria's rejection of Lebanon's in-terim Christian-led military govern-ment could formally partition Lebanon along sectarian lines and rekindle the 13 year-old civil war

FRANCE

France and China have both ap-pregnancy, and two family planning the executive commission was broad-experts said they believed an American ened from 15 to 21 members. company would soon apply for permis-sion to market the drug in the US, although it could still be years before the drug would receive government

EL SALVADOR

Salvadoran troops killed 10 peas-ants in a village 30 miles from San Salvador. A spokesman for the armed protest. forces first claimed that the villagers were subversives killed in fierce com

Although the Christian Democrats are confident that they will defeat General Augusto Pinochet in the plebiscite October 5, the Chilean Commu nist Party asserted that a provisional government would be established immediately following the general's

BURMA

Burmese security forces killed at st 12 people, as mobs looted shops in Rangoon and violated a curfew imposed by the new military regime . Additionally, General Saw Maung was named Prime Minister by a 9 member committee that he appointed. He led the coup that recently toppled civilian President Maung Maung

POLAND

The Solidarity Union expanded its leadership adding representatives of the younger workers involved in a recent wave of strikes. As the banne Louisiana as hundreds of blacks looted proved the marketing a new drug, trade union prepares for next month's and burned stores and clashed with RV486, that induces abortion early in talks with the Warsaw Government.

YUGOSI AVIA

Thousands of Yugoslavs defied the country's Communist Party and staged weekend demonstrations to protest the alleged persecution of minority Slavs by ethnic Albanians in the Kovoso province. About 170,000 people gathered in 3 Serbian cities to participate in the

JAPAN

Emperor Hirohito remains in seri-ous conditions within the walls of the Imperial Palace in Tokyo, while more than 25,000 people gather daily to pray for his recovery from probable cancer of the upper intestine

ISRAEL. Israeli troops clashed with Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip after a 13 year-old was killed by Israeli gunfire

Moscow imposed a curfew in the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh territory following a wave of violence. Meetings and rallies have also been banned Ethnic disturbances between the Armenians and the Azerbaijans have flared sporadically since February of this year,

> SOUTH AFRICA A bomb exploded at South Africa's main bus terminal for white commuters in Johannesburg injuring 19 people Additionally, Winnie Mandela said the US has placed restrictions on communications with the media by three antiaparteid leaders who took refuge at the US consulate in Johannesburg

...Jaqueline Collins

Arms control: a means to an end

by Monte Bourjailly

Last week the Reagan Administration announced that in the remaining months of President Reagan's final term there would be no new major arms control agreements between the United States and the Soviet Union. This announcement capped an unparalleled yet initially dubious arms control policy. The peak of the Administration's policy came on December 8, 1987, when Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev signed the historic Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty. treaty is historic because it is the first treaty since the invention of nuclear weapons, that actually reduces the number of nuclear weapons and does so to a whole class of nuclear weapons. Work towards a treaty started in 1979 with Jimmy Carter's Dual-Track plan and took it real shape in 1981 with Ronald Reagan's Zero-Option plan.

INF Treaty take six years to hammer out and finally sign? The answer lies in the fundamental difference between the practice of arms control as an end in itself and the use of arms control to achieve the greater end of national security. The former group believes that the elimination of all nuclear weapons, without regard to the impact on national security and the world balance, should be every nation's primary interest. The greater good of mankind going off board — they're big boys and feeding isn't wrong.

You may ask yourself, why did the objective. They believe, as most people do, that nuclear weapons are bad and that the world would be a better place without them. Unfortunately, this belief clouds their vision so they do not see larger importance of national security. The belief in eliminating nuclear weap ons without considering the bigger national security picture shows selfish and dangerous myopia. As only a madman can believe that nuclear war is winnable, only a naive man can believe that nuclear weapons can be disinvented and peace be the end result.

The more realistic and responsible view in the field of arms control is held by the group that espouses the use of arms control as a means to an end, the greater end of national security. The primacy of national security in today's world is not debatable. Every country has a duty to its people to put its needs ahead of those of other nations. This is especially true in superpower relations. The United States government's first responsibility is to its citizens. Its second responsibility is to the member nations of the alliances it belongs to, in this case meaning NATO and Japan. The Soviet government has the same responsibility to its people and to the nations of the Warsaw Pact. These two governments negotiate arms control treaties with one another out of self is a secondary concern when weighed cal and ideological domination of our against the security of the state and the ideology that it represents. The Soviets more coldly adhere to this brutal philosophy of negotiation, but the United States must also work within the rules of this game, working ever so carefully and moving ever so slowly toward a more humanitarian world. We cannot blindly dive into unilateral elimination of nuclear weapons because they are morally repugnant. The Soviets will not. They will, however, take ruthless advantage of any opening toward physi-

continued from page 3

certainly let them be on board and off campus. They have a ten meal plan expressly and exclusively for this pur-I didn't write this just so I could cry on the college community's shoulder, but to draw attention to the problem and to offer some solutions. The most drastic of these solutions would be to give all students the option of being offboard. Obviously, most campus housing is not equipped to handle this kind of usage and the parents of most incoming students would probably prefer to have their offspring's meals guaranteed. More realistically, I would like to see upper classmen given the option of

The leaders of the United States must play by the rules written down by Machiavelli over five hundred years ago and born with the first Homo Sapiens We seek a world dominated by goodwill and harmony. We live in a world dominated selfishness and brutality. Arms control for the sake of the nation and all it stands for is good for everyone. Arms control for its own sake is hopelessly girls now and are capable of feeding themselves; or let those living in buildings with kitchen facilities go off board. Did the school purchase refrigerators, ovens, plumbing and cabinets in Cardinal Complex just so they would look nice? Or did we, all of us, purchase them through the dining hall? If nothing else, let those on campus resort to the ten meal plan like the students living off campus

If Washington College were not 8 private institution the dining hall's policy would be in violation of Federal Anti-Trust laws but W.C. is private. To the best of my knowledge students have no legal means with which to fight however that is not to say that forced

Bush blows out the 1,000 points of light

The first great debate of the 1988 presidential campaign is over, and whatever one thought of the outcome, one must admit it was fascinating to watch. Here were two men engaged in a verbal chess game with the highest stakes imaginable, with a hundred million people watching their every move. They had to delicately dance away from embarrassing questions, while cleverly turning the answer around in order to strike at the opponent. They had to subtly reinterpret facts such that they put themselves in a more favorable light, without it seeming too obvious a tactic. They had to strive to control the flow of the debate and put the opponent on the defensive, in a tightly-structured,

And not all the strategic maneuvering came from behind the podiums, either. The reporters asking the questions were in the limelight as well, trying to come up with the one which could rattle a candidate and reveal a telling weakness. Peter Jennings looked and acted like he was either running for president himself or trying to be selected as the new James

If all this seems to you like something less than a logical, substantive discussion about the relative merits of different specific approaches to the nation's most urgent concerns, you're exactly right. Presidential debates are partly about real issues, but they're also about camera angles, witticisms, and zinging your opponent. I noticed that some of the people I saw watching the debate seemed genuinely shocked and surprised by the vapidity of the candidates' answers. 'Why don't they just give a straight answer," goes the de-spairing refrain, "Why can't they tell the truth and stop obscuring the issue?". Simply brilliant, unexpected question ways get blown out of the water when they run for president: witness McGovern, Goldwater, Mondale and Bruce Babbit.

> As far as issues go, I believe Dukakis won the debate easily, stumbling only in the area of crime, while Bush fouled up on nearly every subject, including defense and foreign policy, which he claims as his strong point. Bush was easily put on the defensive by the Iran-Contra scandal and J. Danforth Quayle. At various points in the evening, he also indicated that housing had nothing to do with the homeless, suggested the elimination of three weapons systems that have already been eliminated (one as long ago as 1985), said that he "hadn't worked out all the penalties" to be imposed on women having illegal abortions, and memorably declared that we'd have to make some tough choices "before we go to deployment on the Midgetman mis continued on page 10

talking, honest politicians al-Give us some substance, please put, that never works. Straight-by Arian D. Ravanbaksh bate fell flat. Really flat. Last Sunday, the two Presidential candidates got together in North Carolina to debate the issues that are crucial to this campaign. What really happened was a lesson in television politics. To say that too far. Monday's Baltimore. Sun ran an editorial proclaiming the debate as one of the greatest debates in the history transcripts of the Lincoln -Douglas debates of 1858?

Sunday night's attempt at de-

I guess it is too much to ask for the candidates to argue issues instead of recycling old campaign speeches filled with disjointed images and phrases that are becoming cliches Everything about this attempt this debate was good is going at debate was planned and coordinated by the two campaign staffs, Susan Estrich, Paul Brountas, and John Sasso for Dukakis and James Baker of American politics. One for Bush. The falling of these wonders: Were they reading candidates is witnessed by the fact that the vast majority of people who watched the debate stance. Picking a "winner" is equally difficult because everyone picked the candidate that they supported going into the

For example, if you were going to vote for Mike Dukakis long before Sunday night, then it is safe to assume that you thought he won the debate (or at least did marginally better than Bush.) You probably like the way that Ms. Estrich. Mr. Sasso, and Mr. Brountas are running the Dukakis campaign and really enjoy listening to Dukakis' campaign speeches.

highlights from every Dukakis speech since Atlanta. The campaign trio is running the campaign as if the American voter is 10 years old. They are trying to sell off Dukakis' shortcomings by hiding them under a glossy exterior

And the Republicans are no better. Under the leadership of Mr. Baker, the campaign has been the bastion of flag waving and good ole' patriotic ideas. It seems as if the Bush (and Dukakis) campaigns are aimed at the three networks and whatever issues they de-

Tom, Dan, and Peter to lecture the American public on tonight's broadcast. I am simply fed up with the treatment we are getting from the candidates. They avoid issues as if getting into an intellectual discussion about the future of this country is a sure sign of failure in Novem-

Not once during Sunday's debacle did either candidate say what certain programs and initiatives they would bring up if elected. Dukakis said that he would give more money for the

continued on page 10

Fine Cocktails and Light Fare Live Entertainment

Friday 30-Saturday 1-

Keith and Ken Bango & Guitar

Saturday 8- Swing Sisters

proper ID required

ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

You dial. We deliver.

337 1/2 HIGH STREET (301) 778-6779

The long road from theology to philosophy

"I wasn't a hellfire and brimstone preacher as such, but I did preach that you had to be born again. I was very evangelical. I tried to preach without notes and without reading from a manuscript. . . I think the congregation always appreciated that.

When he was a college student, philosophy professor and department more year. head J. David Newell had plans to become an ordained minister and teacher

As a child in Sydney, Nova Scotia, Newell attended the United Church of Canada where his mother was a church organist and Sunday school teacher. "I was only seventeen when I graduated high school and I had no interest in going to college or pursuing a career in the church, so I went to work for the Eastern Light and Power Company in Nova Scotia Newell found, however, that his office job did not prove to be satisfying "At some point in that year, I felt that I should pursue a career in the ministry I had an internal experience which at the time I took to be highly significant of what I should do with my life. With the financial help of his uncle in Boston, Newell went to Gordon College in Massachusetts with plans to study philosophy, to later attain a seminary degree, and to ultimately become ordained as a minister. It was there that he went from being a member of the United Church of Canada to a member of the Presbyterian Church in Part of the process of becoming a minister was taking charge of a parish during the summer. At the end of his freshman year, Newell was assigned three small parishes in Nova Scotia

"I preached at eleven a.m., three p.m., and seven p.m. every Sunday. I visited the sick and the shut-in on a bicycle. These churches were set up in a triangle, and I ran the circuit, going from house to house, drinking tea and eating cookies," he reminisces. Although Newell was only a student minister, he had the full responsibilities of a minister, which included overseeing church activites and performing funerals. "I organized the choir, put together the service and gave well Theological Seminary. He took a disenchanted with the limitations of he says. "I belong where I am: Hide your children: Skippy Bush is in the race...

the sermons. I also buried the dead. I student assistant mir did several funerals, and comforted the sick afterwards. I was the only minister they had," he emphasizes.

"The only thing I couldn't do," Newell adds, "was administer the sac raments. I wasn't allowed to give communion or baptize people." Newell continued to serve these parishes through the summer after his sopho-

But by the end of his junior year week and preach on the weekends. But

A student minister in his early college years, philosophy professor J. David Newell preached in three small parishes in Nova Scotia. Newell once had serious plans to Newell was ready for a different congre- I found that I really liked teaching, and five miles long, one mile wide, and twelve theology," says Newell.

was while Newell was in graduate school that he decided he liked teaching better than preaching. " I had decided in college that I would complete the college degree, get a theological degree, and then get a Master's Ph.D. in philosophy, and that I would teach philosophy during the

the largest Presbyterian church in New England while continuing to study.

"I like to look at ideas from all different angles and explore all the different possibilities," says Newell. "That's the principal difference between teaching and preaching. The preacher tells you from the pulpit what you should believe. The philosopher asks you what you believe and why you believe it." he

Newell also realized that he had a curiosity that went beyond what he was being taught. "Other divinity students were quite happy to get the definitive doctrine. I wanted to know why this and why that. I felt I'd be more at home in an environment in which I was asking the questions rather than giving the answers. I like the uncertainty of the questioning process," he says.

Newell, who is in his twenty-first year at Washington College, tries to take the Socratic approach in his classes. "When I first came here I lectured, but as time passed and I became more comfortable with the material, I became more comfortable with a free form of discussion in which I ask questions and try to get students to respond," he

"I like students to talk to each other instead of the professor standing up front, being the authority figure giving all the answers. Students should participate in their own educations." he emphasizes

"My job as a teacher is not to indoctrinate people but rather to get people to think openly and freely about the issues," states Newell. "What I personally believe is irrelevant to the teaching enterprise.

Looking ahead to the future, Newell hopes one day to write a book on ethics that would be significant as an academic treatise, and would be understandable to those not engaged in the study of philosophy. "I would not be the least bit unhappy if I spent the rest of my career at Washington College," Newell adds. "The college has been incredibly good to me."

Newell has had no lamentations in his journey from evangelism to teach ing over the years. "I have no regrets, become ordained, but abandoned them in favor of teaching.

miles from land. "There was no electricsermons by the light of a kerosene lantern. After graduating with a major in gation. He was posted on an island in I liked learning and studying philosothe Northumberland Strait that was phy much more than I did studying

Newell, who had completed semiity," he remembers, "I had to write my nary school and was in the process of obtaining his Ph.D. when he came to Washington College in 1968, abandoned the idea of being ordained as a minister philosophy, Newell began pursuing his because he found that teaching was a seminary degree at the Gordon-Con- full time job. Newell had also become

by Bill Beekman

WASHINGTON- George Bush today attempted to defuse the growing political clamor over the rumor that his evil twin brother Skippy has taken over his body

"Dammit, I've told you guys a thousand times that I am my own man I AM NOT MY EVIL TWIN SKIPPY!!!." Mr. Bush said as reporters drilled him with the Skippy question after Tuesday's depate. By previous arrangement, the four panelists at the debate were drugged and hypnotized so that they would not bring up the Skippy issue

The Skippy rumor was started by Gary Trudeau, creator of Doonesbury. "I noticed some fundamental changes in George Bush's character since he lost to Bob Dole in the Iowa caucuses," stated Mr. Trudeau. "He became mean as hell Then it hit me: George Bush has been taken over by his evil twin Skippy "

The "Skippy Factor", as Time then to divert the profits illegally to the when he he publicly supported the drug dubbed it, has forced Bush headquarters to make some startling revelations in the last few weeks, revelations that have been the trend since Gary Hart got caught with his pants down in last April.

"Yes, Skippy and I did have some differences when we were growing up," Mr. Bush admitted. "Skippy was for universal medical insurance and a responsible military budget. That should show you how far out of touch he is with the American public. That should show you that I could not possibly be Skippy.

But a high Reagan Administration official refueled many of the Skippy concerns yesterday "Skippy's been around lots of times during the seven plus years of the Reagan Administration. When Ollie North and company were asking the President to send arms to Iran for the return of hostages, and President-watcher Hugh Sidey has Contras, Skippy told the President that it was great idea. George Bush, as we all know, didn't know a thing."

"Well, that Skippy sure is a trickster. isn't he?" said President Reagan, when told of the rumors.

The earliest known public appear ance of Skippy in George Bush's place occurred this Spring when Bush and CBS anchor Dan Rather exchanged angry shouts in front of a national television audience. Some experts, however, have theorized that Skippy may have made occasional appearances as George since he first ran for President in 1980 and proclaimed Ronald Reagan's economic plan "voodoo economic:

Other times that Skippy Bush have taken over George Bush's body include when he "kicked a little ass" against Geraldine Ferraro in the 1984 Vice Presidential debates and same playben, and George shreddet smuggling Panamian leader Manuel Noriega. Experts have been unable to determine Skippy's degree of influence in the Reagan Presidency, although several Democratic Senators have deemed it to be "considerable.

Many followers of politics further contend that Skippy has been trying out the role of George throughout the Reagan Administration in order to re place George when he began his cam paign for the Presidency, and to become the next President of the United States

"Skippy Bush has a brilliant mind far superior to either George Bush of Michael Dukakis," said James Barber author of The Presidential Charact Predicting Performance in the White House. "It is very conceivable that Skippy has been planning this switch since George and Skippy were in the

Sophie Kerr leaves creative energy, spirit

She is everywhere on se, there is The Prize. If you haven't guessed which were published by the about my writing," Kerr once lready, that woman is Sophie Grr. Upon her death in 1965. gerr left almost a half million follars to Washington College is be used in two ways: One half funds the English Departent, supporting various scholrships, school literary publins, and visiting lecturers The other half is used as annual cash prize for the been chosen as having the best bility and promise for future Rerary endeavor."

Most students, or at least nost writers, are cheerfully, if painfully, aware of this fact. But Sophie Kerr was more than generous lady with a generus will. Kerr was a productive ariter dedicated to preserving he image of the Eastern Shore her novels and short stories

Born in Denton, Maryland 1880, Kerr was the second ughter to Jonathan and manda Kerr, who tended their mety-acre farm on the edge of

Although Kerr did not mjor in English and never tended to be a writer, she indearly on that writing was deed her true calling.

liversity of Vermont. It was ing this time at the Univerby of Vermont that Kerr wrote oi sold her first story.

After publishing several art stories, Kerr sold a story legraph. The editor of the nicle was so impressed that offered Kerr the position of mens' Page Editor. She repted, and later became angus. Her name heads up temporary halt when she maring for the magazine. In 1919, New Yorker, He is dismayed by Washington College was celeampittees, lecture series, she ried John Underwood of Boston after having published four her farm lifestyle and leaves. men has a room dedicated to in 1904. While residing in New novels in four years, Kerr left Eventually, of course, he realher in the library. And, of England, Kerr continued to the magazine. write short stories, many of

"There is nothing special returns to Lexie.

es. longer manage to write to her Maryland farm girl, Lexie, who table in a sunlit kitchen."

Kerr's career came to a full potential while still work catches the eye of a hotabot In 1942, the year izes he has acted hastily and > the staff, and eventually to her position as managing editor of that magazine.

Sophie Kerr wrote over 500 short stories, 23 novels and one play during the course of her career. Kerr's She got her B.A. at Hood bequeathal of a half million dollars allows one senior writer to make headway into the world each year.

career presented a conflict to tions of the Eastern Shore and obvious that not even her cookthe Pittsburgh-Chronicle John Underwood, and their its people could only have been books could escape her creative

Kerr then moved to New York and began to write in earnest. As her work began to illor of the Sunday supple- draw more attention over the llege and her M.A. at the Woman's Home Companion. said to a reporter, "I write only "Big Hearted Herbert," that was This led to her appointment to to entertain abnd I certainly not only successful on stage, Kerr's modesty, it is clear that have no message for the world. but was made into a movie the It is just light fiction." Despite same year it ran on stage, 1934. Cooking was also a great Unfortunately, Kerr's her vivid and poignant descrip- love of Kerr's, though it was marriage ended after only four written by anative of that land. pen. One recipe for frying One of her stories, "The chicken begins, "First set a large Silver Slipper," portrays a yellow earthen bowl on a clean in the future

In 1942, the year that brating its fiftieth year of coeducation, Kerr, along with Eleanor Roosevelt, was presented with an honorary de-Kerr also co-wrote a play, gree. Roosevelt reciprocated with a $25 check. College President George Mead then stood and addressed Sophie Kerr

"Of the Eastern Shore by birth and tradition; of the wider world of letters of genius and experience, you have stood for years in the choice position of a weaver of stories and novels wherein the hearts of mankind you have revealed through your skillful pen the web of their experience....We honor you as an adornment to the world of letters and a source of pride to your native community and

Kerr's reciprocating check came twenty-three years later.

Over the course of her career, Kerr authored over 500 short stories, 23 novels, and one play. More than 100 of her short stories appeared in The Saturday Evening Post and Woman's Home Companion before, during, and after her time as editor there.

Several of her books were serialized in The Saturday Evening Post, and some of her stories were published in Women's Day, McCall's, and Vogue as late as the 1960's.

Despite these hundreds of works, Sophie Kerr is not remembered today in the classroom as one of the great writers in literary history. Her artistic spirit is remembered, however, and perhaps that is more important. Her creative energy lives on through all those students who garnered the Sophie Kerr Prize in the past, and all those who hope to make it theirs

at of the Pittsburgh Gazette years, she felt that she could no ...and he may win

puts Skippy Bush in the nocratic Governor. lite House, they may be in- Atop aide in les as a world power."

tely traumatized by George ah for being a liberal when was very young," continues ther. "The effect of that iny Bush into a far right official. Servative. Skippy Bush is asa pyschological and ideo-

Democratic party Nomi-

roy the world."

by's American Civil Liber-Skippy Bush affair. "We're Union card." investigating the allegations investigating the allegations Barber adds that "if the that have been levied against erican electorate mistak- our opponent," garbled the tech-

A top aide in the Dukakis the fall of the United Campaign, however, said that Dukakis plans to hold back all Skippy Bush was se- of his Skippy information until the crucial final week before the election. "Dukey's having enough fun right now playing with the inadequacies of Dan ma has been to transform Quayle," said the campaign

The Dukakis aide also ill call an "active-negative"; cautioned that Dukakis may shell the entire Skippy Bush al make up that may well attack. "Early polls have indicated that Skippy Bush may actually be more liked than Michael Dukakis has been George," said the aide. "At least tlipped about the entire Skippy has a personality.

Corsages & Boutonnieres for Homecoming!

Roses, Sweetheart Roses, Mixed Spring, Carnations, Orchids.

Order Early

Prices starting at $2.95 fresh and silk

15% off to students with this ad and ID

"A trip to Elburn's is worht it for their low prices and high quality."

778-2200

C-Town liquors 8 Deli

511 WASHINGTON AVE. CHESTERTOWN, MD

778-2988

The Middendorf scholar,

Two senior 's awarded Middendorf Scholarships

continued from page 1

With the onset of her senior year, Kehoe's future plans include working as a journalist or in public relations for one year before attending graduate school where she intends to study English literature.

The Middendorf scholarship as well as the Beneficial Hodson, Sophie Kerr, and Maryland General State scholarships covers room and board expenses for Kehoe, who said the Middendorf scholarship is "a real help to my family."

Substance

continued from page 7 social agencies and programs without making serious cuts in defense. When pushed on where this money would come from, Dukakis responded by muddling the issue and bringing up that "drug-running Panamanian dictator." Anything to avoid saying that he would be forced to raise taxes

Atone point, George Bush was on a roll, listing defense programs that he would reduce in order to provide better social welfare. However, two-thirds of the programs he talked about have already been scuttled by the Pentagon and Congress, with the money saved probably going to research SDI instead of funding student loan programs

Rachel Smith, a Political Science major, is active in various aspects of the SGA. In her freshman year, Smith was Vice President of the freshman class. As a sophomore, Smith

served as a member of the SGA In her junior year, Smith

chaired the Student Conduct Screening Board, and a Resident Assistant in Reid Hall In addition to her positions on the SGA, Smith served as a peer advisor and, presently, she is a resident advisor in Cardinal Dorms. The only solution I can come up with is that maybe I expect too much from our national leaders. I want to be treated with some respect by the candidates. On election day, my decision will not come on the basis of phrases such as "card-carrying member of the ACLU." Hopefully, since only one out of three people even bother to vote, the decisions are made on the basis of differences in policy and programs. But votes are not made that way. Partly it is the fault of the campaigns: for hiding from serious discussion. Partly it is the fault of the voters: for not be willing to look beyond party labels to choose a candidate. Regardless, we all lose. No wonder the United States is no ton College, Smith held several jobs including library research officer, and assistant to Dean Baer and Dr. Newell. Smith also served as an intern for a lobby group and for the Mary-continued from page 3 dents on a meal plan are able to trade the appropriate meal for credit towards the bill of pur-

We strive to be an important part of your college educa tion and experience. Our sucess at achieving this goal is dependent upon your participation and interest. Come talk with us. Several forums for comments or suggestions concerning the meals or services are available for interested students. These are:

1. NAPKIN /SUGGES TION BOARD-LOCATED IN THE ARCHWAY OF THE

MAIN DINING ROOM. 2 SGA FOOD COMMIT-TEE-twice a month meetings are chaired by the Dining Services Supervisor and students selected by the SGA. These meetings are dedicated to improving the Dining Service through constructive criticism and student involvement.

3. Talk with the supervisor on duty for that particular

While attending Washing- land General Assembly. Rachel's plans for the fuship as well as the 1782 Society ture include doing well on her LSATs in order to attend law school. She hopes to attend U.N. Chapel Hill and specialize in criminal law > meal for immediate results. 4. Make an appointment ing for the money you pay for with either the Director or Assistant Director of Dining

I feel the student is getting the best "bang" for his/her dollars spent on board. Where else can you get all of these qualities went, which shouldn't matter but do, enormously, I was rather disappointed with Dukakis, who should have used the opportunity to smile more, not, so I feel that the victory or show some energy or emotion. I had to restrain myself from cheering when he socked it to Bush for trying to suggest that Dukakis is unpatriotic, but other than that greatly impressive moment, I thought Dukakis at times was repetitive and had difficulty stretching his answers

Light continued from page 7 sile, or on the, on the Minute man, whatever it is, we're going to have to-the MX-MX. We're going to have to do that.

Merit Trust Scholarship will allow Rachel to concentrate on her thesis without being "worried about paying for college," services and down home cook.

Scholarship and the Hodson

your board plan? Always remember our door is open to suggestions and thoughts from you the student, for you are the most important customer we have at Washing. ton College out to two full minutes. Or course, Bush's style was at least as bad; he stuttered and stumbled all over the place, saying strange things about it being Christmas and repeating his silly "thousand points of As far as their stylistic light" phrase at least five times with no explanation.

To my mind: Dukakis certainly helped himself on Sunday night while Bush did must go to Dukakis. Early polling has indicated that most viewers agree, but by a slim margin of only 44% to 39%. The Dukakis campaign has a r lease on life, but the electoral edge nationally must still gots Bush, and the race is far from # longer a great world power. Get A's and B's for your parents, and a CD for yourself.

Try a Macintosh today-you may win a Sony Discman.

Now that a new school year is under way, we have an idea that'll make both you and your parents feel a bit more confident come finals time:

Get a Macintosh® computer to help with your homework.

Then you'll never have to spend another all-nighter retyping a paper just to purge a few typos and dangling modifiers. You'll be able to crank out assignments that look as though you bribed a friend in art school. And with an amazing new program called HyperCard*-which just happens to come packaged with every Macintosh -you can easily store, organize, and crossreference research notes to your heart's content.

And if that isn't enough reason to look at a Macintosh today, here's

Right now, you have three chances to win one of Sony's Discman' CD players-including the exciting Sony Pocket Discman, which also plays the new 3-inch CDs And even if you miss out on the CD player, you may still win one of 15 Apple T-shirts. No strings attached-just fill out a registration form at the location listed below.

So come in and get your hands on a Macintosh. If not for yourself, do it for your folks.

The power to be your best."

Enter: September 12th-September 30th

WC BOOKSTORE

Fall baseball gears up for the Spring

by Brian Tabako

Here it comes again. It's ime to oil up the old glove, hat arm in shape. There's a arm breeze and the sun is starting so slip down behind he horizon at 6:30 again. 'It's me to start playing baseball gain and everyone knows what atmeans. That's right it's fall.

The beginning of a new aseball season has always been sponymous with pennants and but dogs and a good Sunday fternoon outing, but most of Il with spring.

However, here at Washngton College, as well as many her area colleges who want to ake an early look at the spring eruits, baseball begins in the "Fall Ball" begins in Sepmber and lasts a little over a onth. It is a series of light ekday practices and scrimige games lasting until the iddle of October

The team plays eight inmal scrimage games, the first which took place Friday the that Cecil Community Colge and ended in a 8-8 tie

The squad has played two er teams since then. e against Delaware Tech egame also ended in a tie at wall, in which W.C. had only hits in the entire game

The following game was a apointing 7-0 loss to Prince rge, in which the squad had ly four hits and the fielding wedthat it needed improve- can play ball."

are not significant, for the pur-WC's athletic director, is as positive signs than negative the bugs. It's a chance to take a pose of fall baseball is to help much of a fixture at Washing-ones. The team displayed despring look at the fall players, new and returning players get an early taste of baseball, and for the coaches to get some idea of the talent they will be seeing in the spring, when competi- and he, as well as the rest of the tive play begins

Eric Becker(left) and Steve Huet take part in "Fall Ball". ball squad finished 22-11 and was 4-3 on their annual Florida

This year was supposed to be a rebuilding year, due to the loss of a large number of key players from last year's roster, but after seeing how the team has looked this fall, head coach Ed Athey now feels that the team can be quite competitive

when spring rolls around. "What we've seen out here so far looks pretty good, and we have 3 or 4 players who aren't with us now due to soccer and other activities who we know ton College as Hodson Hall, or Smith Hall. He has been involved in the baseball program here for almost 36 years now coaching staff, also played base-Last year's spring base- ball here at the school.

Coach Athey, who retired

The team showed good progress and fundamentals in the short time they have been together this fall. Friday's tie cent early season pitching and a surprisingly explosive offen-

They distributed 13 hits ing several freshman who came up with some key hits in the game. Coach Al Strielman, also pleased with the team's perchance to teach some of the new against Cecil easily had more players early and work out all the spring, and so far it looks like we have a lot of guys out here who really want to play some ball"

So for now it's just light throughout the lineup, includ- practices and just a couple of scrimages, but hopefully it will all lead up to another winning season (Washington College baseball has had seven consecuformance said, "Fall ball is a tive winning seasons) and a chance at a division crown in

Recreational Sports

Rec-Sports enjoyed a suc- be readily accessible to all stucessful weekend last week. The dents. Surf & Turf softball team won the Theta Softball Tournament, and the AOn's won their football matchup against the Zeta's

The Softball Tournament was the first co-sponsored event with the Theta's working in conjunction with the Rec-Sports

gram has been linked to the are for the benefit of students

"One thing that people got upset about is that there was little publicity", says program coordinator Dennis Berry, now that is all changed. Also added to make the program more visible are the fixtures placed on walls around campus labeled Rec-Sports.

These fixtures contain Now the Rec-Sports pro- information on the program and campus computer network to interested in the program

Other schools have shown interest in the program here at Washington College, and are offering their assistance in helping it work for the school.

Yale University, Princeton University, Hartwick College of New York, and the University of Delaware are all sending Washington College information on how their programs work in the attempt to give ideas on how the program here can be improved.

Athlete of the Week

· For their victory last Sunday afternoon at the King of Prussia, Head of the Schuylkill, the re women's varsity eight receive honors as "Athlete(s) of the Week.

The crew consisting of coxswain Erinn Feely, stroke Adrienne DeAngelo, Laurie Paulsen, Genie Auchincloss, Jenny Pringle, Jen Mauser, Beth Speer, Elizabeth McGee and bowman Heidi Widrick managed a convincing win over rival LaSalle University walking through the crew near the completion of the first third of the race, going on to win the 2.5 mile race by 52 seconds over the LaSalle University crew

This is the first victory by a Washington College crew at the King of Prussia, Head of the

Since there is a great deal of competition in the Fall for seats on the boats, there is a distinct possibility that in the next race there will be some rowers removed in favor of others. This does not bother the girls on the varsity boat however, as Jenny Pringle says, "The most important thing The two ties and the loss last year after a long tenure as about our team is that we are all friends."

The 1988 Seoul Olympics: sport without the sportsmanship

by Brett Lankford The Olympics are alregarded as a symbol of difeelings and friendly comtion between the countries he world. In reality, this wof the games has been tared over the past ten years. The 1980 Games in ow featured a boycott by United States, and the ians followed suit in the 4 Games in Los Angeles. Te countries have been repated in this year's Summer pics than ever before.

Many memorable motshave occurred in the past weeks. Unfortunately, a essing number of these recttions are those of poor tsmanship and of constant ms with the participants. The most prominent of difficulties concerns the drug test of Ben Johnson. defeating Carl Lewis and a new world record in was found to have traces of someone else, and it appears sion to a Bulgarian fighter. The was awarded the gold medal, but there has been a great sense of bitterness from the Johnson camp. They have claimed that Johnson's pre and post-race drinks were spiked, and that Johnson did not take steroids.

It is easy to understand the disappointment of Ben Johnson, but the tests prove quite conclusively that the drugs were taken some time ago. Johnson should end his complaints and leave with a little respect for the Olympic committee

The United States hashad to deal with some of its own problems. Two American swimmers chose to celebrate their medals by stealing an $860 Korean mask. They claim that they had no intentions of keep ing it, and that they were just caught up in the excitement of the occasion. Joy has never 100 Meter Dash, Johnson convinced me to steal from steroids in his system. Lewis that the swimmers should show more respect in the future for both the host country and their own country

Most of the absurd events of these Olympics have taken place in the boxing ring. In many cases, these problems involve a South Korean and an American. Anthony Hembrick, an American fighter, was disqualified for showing up late for a fight. Did he take the blame for failing to leave with plenty of time to spare? No. Did the managers admit it was their fault for reading the schedule incorrectly? No. Naturally, it was the fault of the South Korean transportation system If the Americans had shown better judgment, this problem could have been prevented.

The most absurd incident of these Olympic Games also occurred in the boxing event. A riot broke out in the ring after a countries together, vet it seems South Korean boxer lost a deci- to be tearing them apart.

referee from New Zealand was attacked not only by the Korean trainer, but also by the Korean security guards. The other referees had to save him from his own protection. The fighter protested in his own manner, collecting his thoughts in the ring for the next 67 min-

This appalling exhibition has since been heartily approved by the Korean people. The newspaper the next day claimed that the referees were ruining the boxing event. They have been upset over the treatment of the controversy by the American people and media, saying that we have completely overreacted to the situation. It seems a bit strange for the Americans to be hated as a result of a lack of sportsmanship by the Koreans. The Games are supposed to bring

These have only been a few of the disturbances occurring in these Olympic Games. Other problems include a fight between an American and a South Korean boxer. This bout was fought twice as a result of a misunderstanding by the Ko-rean and a lack of a decision by the Belgian referee. Bulgarian weightlifters have also failed drug tests, resulting in the cancellation of their gold medals.

All in all, these Games have been marred by a lack of understanding between people and countries. Sports are supposed to be a form of entertainment and relaxation, but these Olympics have been very upsetting. One can only hope that when the flame is doused, the hostilities present in the Seoul Olympics will never be seen

Brett Lankford is a sophmore, planning to study English and hates poor sportsmanship

WC ties Bloomsburg - whips Haverford, St. Joes's

They say a tie is like kissing your sister, however, the Washington College men's tennis team was satisfied with their finish at the Millersville University Fall Invitational Tennis Tournament September 17-

Two Shore netters, Larry Gewer and Sol Schwartz, won their respective singles flights and the team finished the two day event deadlocked with Division II power Bloomsburg University for 1st place. Both teams scored 24 points. Host Millersville was a distant 3rd with 141/2 points while Lehigh University, Marcyhurst College, LaFayette College, Delaware State and F&M rounded out the 8 team field.

Gewer's triumph over Bloomsburg's Marc Billone was especially significant in that the WC All American avenged last year's defeat in the Eastern Small College (Rolex) Championships.

Trailing one set to love, Gewer regrouped to capture the 2nd set 6-4. The Washington netter grabbed a 3-0 lead in the 3rd and final set and held on to win the match and championship 6-4.

triumphs in the 4th singles flight proved to be pivotal in Washington's 2nd day run at Schwartz de-Bloomsburg. feated teammate Justin Behm photo by Dave Johnson Sophmore transfer Roman Inochowshy is a strong addition to the squad

sive showing at Millersville the Shore netmen traveled to Haverford, PASaturday to do battle with Haverford College and Division I St. Joseph's University

Displaying their unprecedented depth the Shoremen upped their fall record to 3-0 by stopping Haverford 7-2 in the morning and then St. Joe's by the same score in the afternoon Without the services of All American's Larry Gewer, Scott Read, and Peter Maller the burden of winning was put squarely on the shoulders of the new players that make up this year's roster. Freshmen David Moody, Justin Behm and Andy Bohutinsky went undefeated in singles and Moody and Behm scored an impressive win at #1 doubles against St. Joseph's. Veterans Bill Shaw, Vince Maximo and Andre Dries carried their share of the load as well.

Shaw after sitting out last spring has looked very sharp this fall and has a 4-1 record. Dries who gained valuable experience in his first year of college tennis is 5-1 this fall.

Another important addition to this year's team is Sophomore transfer Roman Incchowsky. Inochowsky who has been hampered by a back unjury nonetheless played well against Haverford defeating Wes Yokoyama 6-2, 6-4 at #1

Sports trivia The answer to last weeks

question

Craig Nettles is the Na. tional Leaguer who holds the all-time American League rec ord for career home runs (333) by a third baseman.

Because three students answered correctly, there was a drawing among the correct answers and ERIC BECKER was the winner. Congratulations also go out to Arian Ravanabash and Don Steele,

This weeks question: Who holds the record for the most fumbles in a N.F.L.

The correct answer to this question will win you a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. If you think you know the answer, fill out on a piece of paper, 1. your name 2. your dorm and room number or if you live off campus, phone number, and 3. your Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope (behind the

Women's tennis is undefeated

by Fred Wyman

After experiencing a disappointing and frustrating spring the women's tennis team at Washington College is "alive and well" this fall.

Holly Bramble's "rebuilt" netters (5 freshmen, 3 sophonever played varsity tennis) they will be a force to be reckoned with in '89 unbeaten, sporting a 2-0 recversity 9-0

This was the 2nd consecutive year that WC has defeated Navy. Last year the Shorewomen downed their hosts 6-3. Taking 5 of 6 singles matches Washington clinched this year's mores and 1 senior that has victory after singles. With the momentum on their side the have already served notice that Shorewomen went on to sweep the doubles.

First year players Monica Sofarthe Shorewomen are Blanco, Sara Coste, and Miriam Dittman made their net debut ord. The Lady netters destroyed a success. Blanco and Coste Navy 8-1 September 13th in won in straight set 6-3, 6-4 and Annapolis and a week later 6-3, 6-3 respectively. Dittman shutout Salisbury State Uni- won a 3rd set tiebreaker to secure her triumph. Veterans Meg Wheatley and Emily Bishop were equally impressive as they won in straight sets at numbers 2 and 6 respectively. Losing only one set in the entire match the Shorewomen had little difficulty in disposing of Salisbury State University Saturday September 24th Blanco, Dittman, Bishop, and Wheatley remained undefeated while Rachel Price and Helen MacMahon notched their first victories. Rice won 6-0, 6-0 while MacMahon rallied to win in three sets 6-1 in the 3rd.

Sports calendar

9/3 Tennis vs. James Madison University, UNC @ Charlotte, William & Mary (A) 10/1 Tennis vs. James Madison University, UNC @ Charlotte, William & Mary (A

(H) 1:30pm vs. Swarthmore (A) 1pm field hockey vs. Goucher volleyball vs. F & M, Lebanon Valley, Wilkes

(A) 10/3 Rec-Sports: Prescription Swim Lessons, Casey Swim Center 7pm

volleyball vs. Goucher/Hopkins (A) 6pm cross country vs. Loyola (H) 3pm Rec-Sports: Aerobic Dance, Cain Gymnasium 8pm Rec-Sports: Volleyball, Cain Gymnasium 8:30pm soccer vs. Western Md.

(A) 3pm

SEVEN HILLS

10 minutes from Washington College utes from W Coopers Lane . Worton, Md. . 778-0201

Instruction in Combined Training Show Jumping . Dressage Beginners thru Advanced

Horses Boarded. Trained. For Sale. Leased Track Shop

New Indoor Area Under Construction

GREAT STUDENT CAR

79' Blue Honda CVCC Wagon Hatch Back 4 speed stick shift, Excellent Condition Brand New Pioneer AM/FM cassette, $1,800. Call 778-1988. Ask for Beth

A Shear Design

Special for Students

FREE Gift with any Hair Service (limit one per student) ent for all Washington Colle (thru the month of Se

778-0898

She keeps on her toes, and wishes others would also

by Carter Boatner Professor Karen Smith is infatuated with the art of dance Her walls are adorned with pictures of dancers and the shelves on her wall are crowded with books on dance. It was no surprise to hear from her in a philosophical tone of voice that There is more to life than dance, but not much." Smith has an extensive hackground in dance which started when she was four. She took lessons "...a minimum of During high school she performed in several musical theatre productions in Washing ton, D.C. such as Oklahoma!, and Carousel. When the time came she attended Maryland University where she majored in dance which did more than keep her on her toes. Her strenuous major required three to four dance classes a day and about three to four hours of rehearsal a night, until the final weeks before a performance when rehearsal time was often extended. No matter how many hours she put into dance, she never lost her love for the art and it's varied forms.

When Professor Smith arrived at Washington College in 1969, she created the Dance Club and since then has been the guiding force behind the Club, "which leads into the Dance Company." The Dance Club is basically a group of dance, whether it be the crea- shows and performances. In House

tive or the fitness aspect of the 1976 and again in 1984 the

Essentially what Professor Smith is trying to get students involved in dance and the many forms that make up the art as a whole "I'd like to expose people to dance as integral parts of culture, in some countries dance is more a part of tradition than it is in the United states", for instance she goes on to say that, "In Hungary a young man has to learn to do certain dances Theatre of Annapolis before dating."

Dance Club performed in State Dance Festivals.

To propogate the interest in dance on campus she continues to bring in outside artists to perform and hold workshops for interested students of the College. Among the artists that have visited Washington College in the past are Edward Villella who is a principal dancer for the New York City Ballet, and the Maryland Dance

Coming this fall will be

Professor Karen Smith leads one of several clases she teaches dance will never reach that Ensemble which will perform position in American culture. she has not given up hope that others will give dance a try.

Professor Smith choreographs Dance Club performances involving college students. In the spring the Dance Hople who are interested in Club carries on with various

Although she admits that the Lyman Ukrainian Dance on campus October 23 for a Sunday matinee. The Ensemble will feature a group of 42 dancers each showing a different aspect of Ukrainian dance The Dance Club sponsors onthly Dance Film Series which are shown in the Coffee

Field hockey has playmakers, offense by Kathy Brewster

Playmakers are the backbone of a team and essential in making teams click. Fortunately the Washington College women's field hockey team has consistent playmaker in Carole Reece.

Reece has demonstrated her abilities all season and again in the 1-0 win over Albright last Tuesday. Coach Guinan stated, "Carole is the playmaker of the team. She sets up a great deal of shots and opportunities that enable us to score

Early in the first half Reece centered the ball into the net while the remaining Washington offensive surrounded the goal, refusing to allow the ball to escape. Washington displayed accurate passing and crossing plays which set up numerous opportunities to score. Support from defense and links also helped for offensive coverage, but they couldn't get the ball in the net fast enough

Leadership and strong aggressive play have been two factors that led Washington to their recent victories. Beth Matthews has been an outstanding player, demonstrating leadership and drive at both ends of the field. One of the newcomers to the team, Karen Reck, has been a positive asset to the team. As the season progresses her performance seems to exhibit a much stronger incentive which helps the team overall

Dominating offensive play coupled with a strong offense, however, was not enough for the squad to prevent the victories that Western Maryland and Wesley walked away with last week

Their third defeat of the season was at the hands of Western Maryland who ended up wining 2-0. The first half was launched by a quick and aggressive effort Washington's behalf. In the Western Maryland game Coach Guinan was "pleased to see us creating offense." However offense just wasn't enough for Washington to win this game. Washington's defense broke down which allowed Western Maryland to take advantage and maneuver down the field on several breaks which led them to victory.

In their following game Washington also dominated in play over Wesley College last Saturday yet came up short as the final score read 3-2. Coach Guinan found it very "frustrating to dominate and still come up with the short end."

Freshman Julie Schram rippled the net in opening thirtyfive seconds of the game on a push from Beth Matthews. Washington continued to stay on top offensively but the opponent knocked two shots in as a result of a defense mispositioning During the second half Wesley touched the goal once more for their final score. Washington with their final score on a well placed deflection from Sandie Coulter. Opportunities were abundant in the second half time but Washington couldn't capitalize on them

Women's varsity eight victorous at King of Prussia

oatner The women's varsity tionally a learning experience. In the Men's racing, the compete, leaving the "A" boat by Carter Boatner This past weekend, four mpeted at the King of Prusis, "Head of the Schuylkill" egatta in Pennsylvannia. Of ose crews only the women's varsity eight was successful, lifeating LaSalle University by ment (by the crew) in the last mping" the opposing crew the 1,500 meter mark eight, coached by John Wag-Washington College crews ner, completed the course in 15:50, well ahead of LaSalle who finished in 16:42. Coach Wagner said that the crew performed well and noted that he had seen "a lot of improve-> two weeks' The Fall season is tradi-

Wagner says, "We will switch around (rowers from one boat to another), which is what the Fall season should be, a learning and refining session

The women's varsity four raced the same afternoon, losing to F & M who finished in 16:42.55. Washington crossed the line in 17:38.53.

Washington "A" and "B" crews the only entry in the race. were placed together in the men's championship eight race against two LaSalle crews and a crew from Vesper Boat Club on boathouse row in Philadel-

Because of an unfortunate incident before the start of the crews finished in 14:04 and race, the "B" boat was unable to 14:49.

The Washington crew was seeded behind the Vesper crew who started off first. Vesper won the race in 13:49, in front of the Washington crew who finished in 13:53. The LaSalle

Kent Association of Riding Therapy

NEEDS VOLUNTEERS

Wednesdays & Thursdays

9:30-11:30 Side Walkers & Horse Leaders

Volunteer for 3 Sessions, receive a FREE RIDING LESSON at Seven Hills Farm

For more information call 778-3335

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP. 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

Twenty-five years of Forum and discussion

by Angela Henneman

The Silver Anniversary. That point in time in which the past has been filled with tremendous accomplishments, and the present is being used to create and mold a future that will be even more impressive. Twentyfive years is old enough to earn the prestige of silver, to be defined by wisdom and experience. Yet it is young enough to continue a vision, to elaborate upon ideals, and to become even better as it flourishes into its golden years. Indeed, the William James Forum at Washington College has achieved this great honor

As the William James Forum embarks upon its 25th year, it has made a name for itself as an organization that has educated, informed, and sensitized the Washington College community to current and controversial topics of our changing world According to Dr. Peter Tapke, moderator of the William James Forum, the speakers and their topics appeal to the community hecause "most of the issues are not temporary ones, but continuing ones."

In the past, the Forum has hosted such speakers as Robert E. Bauman, a former U.S. Congressman from Maryland, L. Patrick Grav III, Acting Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) during the Watergate scandal, and L Bruce Langin, a former hostage in Iran. These examples represent only an inkling of the many diverse and disputable contemporary issues that have been debated at the William James Forum throughout its history of "heated" speech and discussion with the arrival of Dr. Henry Nash on October 8th, 1988. The formal title of his presentation is "The Pentagon: The Bureaucratization of Nuclear Destruction." At first glance, Dr. Nash's topic seemed to be a very technical and advanced area that only a select few people might understand. However, upon further probing, it has become evident that Nash's experience while issue to which faculty and students alike can relate

The Bureaucratization of Nuclear Destruction is not defined by the involvement of big businesses in the building of nuclear arms, nor is it a summary of how many millions of dollars are being spent by our government on defense. Rather, this focuses on a moral issue: Why do the well-rounded, educated specialists that work in the missiles at other countries planning the now hypothetical demise of land and people and life as we know it—Why do these people feel no sense of guilt or moral anguish? Dr. Nash best explains his position by saying that "People that work everyday with nuclear destruction treat it as if they were going to work at a bank or some other place of business." He further states that he thinks people in these types of jobs are conditioned to avoid thinking about the final results of their day's "They function unimpeded by moral and ethical standards." Dr. Nash hopes to focus on and discuss the reasons why people in, what he calls, "a homoscidal profession" have lost, or at least misplaced, the compassion and value of life that is a common and basic human working in the Defense Depart- of speakers of the William ment of the Pentagon, and also James Forum, as it begins to through his incredible insight sowits seeds for another twenty and commitment to such a seri- -five fruitful years. ous issue, Dr. Nash is sure to Christine Pabon, Professor of

Dr. Nash promises to be an who understands and is ex-arouse opinions and emotions Spanish and French at WC, had throughout the college commu- the opportunity to hear Dr. nity concerning Nuclear De- Nash speak at the Mellon Facstruction and the future of those ulty Seminar in Williamsburg, who have made this devastat- Virginia. She extends her highing reality a business, a bu- est compliments to Dr. Nash and describes him as "a man

Through his experience in outstanding addition to the list tremely well informed on this particular subject. [Furthermore), He can communicate it "A man of great wisdom and vision." Dr. Nash will fit nicely into the informative, but controversial niche that the speakers of the William James Forum have created

Dr. Tapke, and President of the Forum, Perry Finney, are anticipating an exceptional twenty-fifth year of speech, discussion, and participation.

Funded primarily by the Stu dent Government Association the Forum committee welcom new participants who wish get involved with the continu ing efforts of this club to infor and enhance the WC commu nity on special areas of inter ests. Students or faculty v wish to hear a particu speaker or have a particu subject introduced are end aged to submit suggestions Dr. Tapke or Perry Finney.

The Monday Series: matters worthy and curious

The Forum will continue its The Washington College Writer's Union is once again sponsoring the Monday Tea and Talk Series (often called "Talks on Matters Worthy and Curious") and the fall series of lectures looks to fit both adjec-

The talks, all given by Washington College staff, begin at 4:30 in The O'Neill Literacy House, a suitable gathering place for these highly informal lectures Tea is served before working in the Pentagon is an the talk at 4:00 and discussions on the upcoming talk and other literary matters are often overheard. However, the talks are not simply a place to exhibit intellectual prowess, but a sharing of interesting ideas and knowledge

All of the professors step away from their classroom lecture podiums and probe deeper into their selected topics. The talks are a reflection of a teacher's core interest or an interest that Defense Department targeting does not normally come up in standard lecture. Each one of The series for fall 1988 includes the scheduled talks are unique the following; upcoming talks: and unlike any class offered at Washington College and are worth attending, not for the sake of getting on a professor's good side", but to expand one's knowledge of the issues in the world in which we must live.

The O'Neill Literary House, inaddition to being ta center for creative activity, is also the home of the Monday Tea and Talk Series.

Oct. 3: Professor Thomas

A Room Without A View: Impressions of NicaraOct. 10: Dr. Anna Kuhn-A sociate Professor of German Christa Wolfs Un pian Vision: From Marxism

Oct. 17: Professor Dona

Some Current Co cerns About the Health of Ib Chester River

Feminism

Oct. 24; T. Michael Kaylot Of the Making Books There Is No End: He lights of the History of Printi

Oct. 31: Walter C. Carrig Contemporary Pro lems in Africa

The talks for the sring sense ter have yet to be schedule However, if this fall sets the tone for what is to come later the year, then the Monday I and Talk Series looks to o tinue on its successful path matters worthy and curious

WC"s mystery class: the fifth obligation

by Michele M. Volansky

One of the most rewarding classes at Washington Col lege has no exams or papers, no attendance policy and no set classroom. There is also no physical way to monitor what is taught and the professor is whatever you choose to make

Does this sound too good to be true? Do you wonder how this may fit into distribution The answers lie in the individual student, for it is he who molds the class to suit his needs This mythical class is titled "The Fifth Obligation" and the instructor is the student himself This obligation is part of what makes a liberal arts school such an excellent way to be educated

According to Dean Sansing, thirty years ago Washington College, instituted the four ourse plan into the academic curriculum. This meant indepth studies in four classes rather than surface studies in five. Four classes, however, would mean that a student had more time to spend outside the actual classroom. Thus, the notion of a fifth, non-credit, self-

Although there has never been any concrete definition given to this fifth class, it has come to mean one thing: par ticipation. With participation in outside of the classroom activities, the student who once only excelled in academic endeavors may come to excel in all motivated "class" was sug- the William James Forum. The fifth obligation is a way of embracing the college and community, combining it with the studies learned within a classroom and creating a delicate blend of knowledge and application. There is, it is believed by many educators, merit and value within activity beyond the standard classroom.

somewhat perfect sounding perience, the fifth obligation class is the fact that the studentishisown instructor. Only he can attain the outcome and success that is desired of a liberal arts graduate, If he chooses his school may offer,

The only drawback to this not to, than the liberal arts exand roughly fifty-thousand dollars would have been idled away. With the experience, the student may achieve more than

Campus calendar: 9/30-10/8

October 1

The S.G.A., in conjunction with Greek Weekendis sponsoring an outdoor band festival this weekend. The Greeks are scheduled to host games and activities, followed by a number of on-campus bands as entertainment. The joining of the two organizations reflects an attempt to "fill up every week-Kent County, following in the end with events."

October 3

The Monday Series continies at the Literary House with Professor Thomas Pabon and his talk, titled, "A Room Without a View: Impressions of Nicaragua." Tea is at 4:00 P M with the talk following tea

October 6

Forum offers Henry Nash's The Pentagon: The Bureacratization of Nuclear Destruction", a fascinating study of the country's defense system. This event will be held in the Hynson Lounge.

October 8

historical footsteps of Chestertown, is offering a driving tour of the historic sites in and around the county. The tour in addition to being an interest ing way to further explore the area in which we live, also has ties to Washington College. One stop on the tour is Profes sor Davy McCall's home, cur rently undergoing an archeological dig. Further ties include Dr. Charles Halstead, retired WC professor of history, who is one of the organizers of the The William James upcoming event.

There is, it is believed by many educators, both merit and value within activity beyond the standard classroom.

facets of campus life

Ideally, the college wants every student to partake in any one of the many activities on campus: varsity sports, student government, and academic clubs or organizations. Howver, the fifth obligation's loose definition is broad enough to include mere attendance at the Lecture Series, Film Series, or

Although there is no way to monitor the number of students who actually participate in a fifth obligation activity, it is the hope of the college that all students are engaging in outside activities. The college likewise feels that a busier student is more productive than the student who does not take an active part in campus-wide entertainment and lectures

Like all liberal arts colleges, Washington College to produce a wellrounded student that is able to be at ease in any given circumstance, whether academic, business or social. With the fifth obligation and an active part in campus life, any WC student has the potential to be like this desired student

continued from page 16

evangelic movements in this country. The first two verses seem to be the standard tonguen-cheek approach to the subject, poking fun at the mythical Reverend Jack, an archetypal travelling Ain't no use vatching the road, son / When ou ride in his automobile / 'Cause we're all back-seat drivers / And there's nobody at the wheel. However, with the third verse, Timbuk 3 makes a wry comment concerning the nature of evangelism, once again creating a grey area of neither right nor wrong: Now for the wel-to-do doctor / There's a home and a summer retreat / And for the jet-settin' banker / There's a place in the social elite / But for the poor and the hungry

/ All the lost souls left in the lurch / There's just Reverend Jack and his roaming cadillac church.

Timbuk 3 has created a masterful album of poignant music, that, while may not be the best dance music available, it truly takes folk, soul, and blues music to a new level of intensity and social awareness

IN THE GRAND TRADITION

/ERSATILE

BOB DEMVER

ENTERTAINMENT

The unique sound of Timbuk3: Eden Alley

by Todd Karr

With Eden Alley, Timbuk 3 demonstrates an amazing capacity to incorporate moody, melodic folk music with the be the '80's most vital contribution to rock music. The album, released in the spring of 1988, is a compilation of quirky songs that stretch the boundaries of standard folk and sly, worldly view that will remain Timbuk 3's special hallmark Timbuk 3 hails from Austin, Texas, and is comprised of the pair demonstrates true harmonica and violin work. Sung in a silky, yet never be said on this subject: Timbuk polarize from one song to the drum machine, which many might see as being detrimental effect is obtained for all of their songs, whether it be the primal social thought. Life blues themes, and gives air to a Timbuk 3's music are the Church. Well, we were raised in potent, cynical lyrics that seem Eden Alley / Where the music so important to the music of the plays all night long / And duo. In the first track of the the children make love in the album, "Tarzan was a shadows / While the elders pray Bluesman," Timbuk 3 takes a for the kingdom come. Here, duo Pat Mac Donald and radical approach to the subject Timbuk 3 demonstrates their Barbara K. Mac Donald. In of innocence and experience: uncanny ability to create a grey song after song, this amazing Adam shot the apple into his area that hits home with a vein / Adam said to Eve "Me certain domestic realism, while musicianship, performing on a Tarzan, you Jane" and later, at the same time pointing out variety of instruments ranging Came from the suburbs from rough blues guitar and searching for truth / Ran thru bass, to haunting and subtle the jungle in his birthday suit / Tarzan was a bluesman smooth vocal style, Timbuk 3 the rest of Eden Alley, which achieves some truly subtle exists as a sort of "Songs of effects with the play on Innocence and Experience", comes "Reverend Jack." This harmonization and lyric although innocence and songisatimely piece, based as content. One more thing should experience never clearly

3 obtains all percussion from a next. Rather, Timbuk 3 prefers to juxtapose the states in each song, demonstrating their to their music, but the tracks knowledge of the '80's world are laid with such proficiency there is no black and white, cynical lyricism that seems to and skill that a clean rhythmic only an undefined grey area wich dominates much of our

"Tarzan was a Bluesman" or Aclear example of this approach the exotic easy-going "A Sinful exists in the the title track "Eden Alley" and "Reverend Couched in the unique sound of Jack and his Roamin' Cadillac uncanny ability to create a grey the dualism that exists in the social scenes that can be found anywhere in America.

Hard on the heels of this This first song sets the mood for bittersweet song (which is sung for the most part in a stunning a cappella harmonization) comes "Reverend Jack." This it is on the popular cynicism of

continued on page 15

Mom's Cookie Jar

Wednesday's Lobster and Steak Dinner was a huge success. As in the past, the total number of lobsters served far surpassed the steaks. The Dining Services also sold over two hundred lobsters to members of the aculty and staff

It has been brought to my attention that certain students are not pussing their trays at lunch or dinner. Also, certain groups are regularly eaving food on the floor, under and around their tables. Bussing tables s a rule of the dining hall, and if you are caught not clearing your dishes and trays, you could be fined Twenty-five Dollars. It isn't very appealing to those who come in to eat after a table has been left not bussed. Put your self in that positio. Would you like to eat at a table aden with dirty dishes?

Food fights, too, are another NO NO! This frequent practice will not be So, please make life easier for all of us, BUS YOUR TABLES and NO MORE FOOD FIGHTS!!

Upcoming events scheduled for the month of October are

October 12 - GRAPE DAY October 19 - FOOD SHOW October 26 - Manager's Dinner

The "Suggestion Board" is located on the bulletin board, on the left, as you enter the Main Dining Room. Please, feel free to use it to comment on the meals, service or make suggestions or requests. management staff would like to hear from you; good or bad.

in closing, I would like to leave you with a suggestion. If any of you are interested in shedding a few pounds, try cleaning your room. You'll burn up 100 extra calories by cleaning for half an hour!

Until next week.

Notice Regarding Apple Computers

Orders must be placed with the Bookstore by 12:00 noon, October 14, 1988, in order to secure current prices. Substantial increases effective October 15, 1988.

The Washington College Film Society and the Kent County Arts Council present

Washington College Film Series

October 3, 1988 (1 hr. 53 min.

The picturesque Provençal countryside is the setting for Manon of the Spring, the magnificent sequel to Jean de Florette. Evil is punished and good rewarded when the breathtakingly beautiful daughter of Jean de Florette overationary reasons caughter or Jean de Horello weraks vengance upon the cure pleasants responsible for her lather's death. Jean de Florette and Manon of the Spring were co-winners of the National of Review's Best Foreign Language Flim Award. Says Steward Klein, this is "a rich and delicious of greed and ambion, love and revenge... It has more inonic twists that a volume of O. Her

Friday, September 30 * Sunday, October 2 Monday, October 3 Norman James Theater, 7:30 p.m.

Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 5

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 7, 1988

Barricade removal proposed

by Tracey Connell Mayor Elmer Horsey and the Town Council considered recommendations from the Chestertown Traffic Committee last Monday. committee's recommendations were intended to alleviate some major inconveniences to the townspeople and College. The omittee's proposals have not set been officially approved.

The committee was ap minted by Mayor Horsey to review the problems caused orimarily by the installation of god barriers on Campus Ave-

According to Professor Daniel Premo, a member of the committee, the traffic patterns were examined after the closing of Gibson and Campus Avenues. Various difficulties ensued and petitions were signed that demanded the atention of the Mayor and Town

A principal concern of the mittee and petitioners was the fact that school buses and parents taking their children a school had previously used ampus Avenue in order to each the Garnett Elementary shool on Calvert Street. When he barriers were erected, this nute could no longer be used.

To alleviate this and other tion. ues the Committee recom-

-the removal of all barri-

-a provision for a left turn he at the corner of Campus d Washington Avenues; -Mt. Vernon Street should in a one way street: -stop signs on Campus and Among its other recommendations, the Chestertown Traffic Committee has recommended that this barricade at Gibson Avenue and all other barriers be removed. Mayor Elmer Horsey appointed the committee, which includes Professor Daniel Premo, to study the traffic flow problems created by the dedication and official opening of the recently completed Alonzo G. Decker, Jr. Laboratory Center. The ribbon cutting ceremony will feature remarks from President Cater and Mr.

Decker Center will receive dedication

by Judy Summers

October 22 marks the Decker; in addition, major contributors will receive recogni-"I think everyone will get a lot out of Mr. Decker's speech," remarked Marshall Williams, Special Events Coordinator. "He's not a scientist; his interest in the Center lies in his dedication to the College and making it a fine place to study. It's a good lesson in being very broad-minded and supportive continued on page 5 of the right things in life.'

Alonzo G. Decker, Jr. is the retired Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of the Black & Decker Corporation. He is currently serving on the Board of Visitors and Governors.

Two labs within the building are to be dedicated as well. The General Chemistry Laboratory was funded by the Olin Corporation in memory of Thomas Nichols, a former member of the College's Board.

With the promise of con tinuing support by AT&T, the Physical Chemistry Instrumentation Lab will be dedicated in honor of William Baker, a 1935 graduate of the College.

"When planning for the best day to dedicate the new Center," confided Martin Williams, Director of Development, "the consensus agreed that it should coincide with the 1782 Society Gala Weekend."

To become a member of the 1782 Society, one donates $1000 or more each year for unrestricted annual purposes, such as scholarships and faculty enrichment.

"Although the 1782 Society has nothing to do with the Center in terms of money," explained Martin Williams, "we thought they'd enjoy seeing the dedication and that visitors would enjoy meeting the pa-

Capital projects like the Decker Center are built with money from individuals, corporations, and foundations. The many state and local legislators who supported this project, partly through a state grant, have been invited to partake in the festivities, as have others who helped to make funds available. Included are Governor

Schaefer and the Speaker of the House of Delegates Those invited will attend a series of lectures given by various science faculty throughout the day. Dr. Rosette Roat, Dr. Glenn Cooper, Dr. Donald Munson, and Dr. Marcia Pelchat will speak on topics concerning chemistry, physics, biology, and psychology, respec-

"This is so that [visitors] can see what a classroom can do and how facilities will be used to teach more accurately and more in depth," explained Marshall Williams. "As well, the Science Department has invited science alumni so that they can see what kinds of changes have been made and how it will affect the Depart-

However, students may not attend these presentations; they are set aside specifically for the 1782 Society and other continued on page 5

Psychology switches to Science

by Susan Di Leo Earlier this week, the College officially approved the Psychology Department's transition from the Social Science division to the Natural Science division.

In a memo written by Psychology Department Chairman George Spilich-on leave this year-the reassignment "will help the psychology department obtain appropriate curricular review" and "insure a voice for the psychology department in decisions affecting the Dunning Complex."

Dean Baer notes that the move is appropriate, given the fact that "the Psychology Department feels that the discipline is moving in the direction of the natural sciences.

Much of the rationale in Spilich's memo centers on the theme of psychology's growing identification with the natural sciences. He points out that psychology [is] increasingly being integrated with biochemistry, neuroscience, and comnuter science

Psychology's integration with natural science at the College is evident in its curriculum, such as the recent course in biochemistry of behavior, taught by Dr. Creegan of Chemistry and Dr. Pelchat of Psychology. Furthermore, the Department has been the only major in the Social Science Division to require a year of science in addition to the distribution requirement; in addition. it offers more than ten laboratory courses, ten times that of any department in the Social Science division

But for most purposes, Baer asserted, "psychology will remain something of an amphibian at the College," floating between the social and natural sciences

She says that "from the student's point of view, there is very little change at the moment." Psychology courses will still count toward fulfillment of the social science distribution requirement, although in his memo, Spilich says that the Department "is studying the possibility of offering a natural science distribution course.

Also in the future, he writes that the Department will

continued on page 5

INSIDE: Voting & the college student......p.3 Students at the Fire House.....p6 Volleyball winning streak.....p8

Mary Lee Settle.....p10

Anne Frank production......p 11

Voting is power

It is interesting to think that in the Soviet Union almost one hundred percent of the people vote in elections - and they don't even get to choose between candidates, In America, Presidential elections have the best voter turnout over all its other elections, and only fifty percent of eligible voters participate. Forty percent vote in Congressional elections, and only ten to thirty percent vote in local elections.

It's hard to say why people don't vote when they have a choice to make, a choice that can affect their futures. People who do not vote must not realize that their single vote - the vote guaranteed to them in the Constitution - is a unit of political power. It may seem as if one vote doesn't matter that much when millions of people are eligible to vote, but it is important: in 1960 John Kennedy won the Presidential election by less than one vote per precinct.

When only fifty percent of the nation's eligible vot ers vote, Americans are consenting to an oligarchical system where the clique of voters rule the country. This is not the premise that the United States was built upon. It was assumed that citizens would not only take their duty seriously, but that they would perform their duty.

A major concern that faces us in this election is that less than forty-one percent of eighteen to twenty-four year olds voted in 1984. Between 1972 and 1980, voters in this age group dropped from over fifty percent to less than forty percent. 1984 was a comeback year for Americans who just reached the age of eligibility, but is still unsettling that participation is so low.

Certainly we can sit back and say, "Hey we'll vote later, when we're more settled and have more to say.' But the voice of America's young adults is muffled, and those of us who do vote, can't give the necessary opinions of our peers who do not. And those who do not vote, have no representation in the political system

As students, the future (jobs, marriage, children, bills) may seem very distant, but it really isn't. What if there continues to be a decline in federal assistance to students, and your student loan is no longer guaranteed? What if you can't return to college because of it? Or what if the economy plummets, and unemployment starts growing again, and you can't get a job when you graduate? And then, if these things happen, who can you blame

continued below

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                      |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso  |
| News Editor                   | Susan Di La          |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbau       |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne        |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk   |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnso         |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar             |
| Managers                      |                      |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma          |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William   |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobeza         |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Go           |
| Office ManagerJulie           | Greene and Cathy Lea |
|                               |                      |

The Washington College Elm is the official student newspa-per of Washington College. It is published every Friday during the scademic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks. Editorials are the responsibility of the Editorian-chief with the assistance of The Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opinion of the staff. Signed columns, commentaries, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the Editorial Board.

All letters to the editor are read with interest, but due to sp limitation, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without elding for spelling, punctuation or grammar. Let ters should be signed, except in rare cases where the author's privary include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members of less and include day and evening phone numbers in the event that clarification of portions of the letter is needed. Letters may be deposited in the marked box at the sellorist offer, or mailed of The deposited in the marked box at the sellorist offer, or mailed of The Elm, Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland 21820. Letters be-come the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received no later than Wednesday to be considered for publication in that week's

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the basement of Reid Hall, next to the Reid Hall lounge. Business hours are 790 to 9:09 PM of nuesdays. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief is (301) 778-290 extension 321.

JOHN COULD FEEL THE PRESSURE RISING ...

MOB AMERICA--250 MILLION STRONG -- WAS PUSHING THE PROCESS OF PERPETUATING THE INDUSTRIAL MILITARY COMPLEX

THEN, A VOICE OF REASON FROM SPIRITUS MUNDI SHOWED HIM WIS-

funding will keep getting worse. If you have experience should have more access to the Macs and more access to get ting your computer question

answered at the Computing

Center, please write a letter

Elizabeth Baer, Dean of the College. Her office is in But ting Hall. Although the ne pay scale program gave mem first raise ever at this school, would gladly return to $4.00a

hour to help keep the cent

open longer and help studen

use the computer facilities the

I think are worthwhile on th campus. It's really up to the students to express their an cern about this matter. It wi

take drastic measures to g the college to do somethin about this problem. It has at will continue to inconvience of us. For the amount of moni

the school asks for the educ

tion and environment provide the Computing Center shou

not only be open a great number of hours, but should staffed by experienced studen

Please write a letter to Des problem, or just think we

Computing Center loses hours 73.5 hours a week with Lab The inconviences caused hours. The Computing Center

Assistants working only 58.5 to students by this level of

To the Editor. I'd like to express some concerns I have about last week's decision not to approve the full amount of the Computer Center's budget for this year. I was told that because I was not on a Work/Study Program and because the requested Computing Center student payroll budget was cut 44%, the Computing Center could no longer afford to have me work for them. They found me another job doing clerical work for the Alumni House, regretting that I had to leave in the first place, having been an employee there going on three vears.

The problem here is that the College boasts it's excellent computer services: "always a Mac to use... free printing ... always someone to help you. Even after the immediate change in hours and staff occured last week, tours I heard while writing a paper continued to push how easy it was to have access to a computer and how even if you didn't know how to use one, there would always be a Lab Assistant to help you. This is a bit hypocritical now. Here are the facts. The Computer Center is now open

Voting

continued from above

if you haven't voted? It is the duty of the citizen to insure that he is represented by the government, and if you didn't vote you have no representative to protect or promote your interests. According to Psychology Today, when people are asked whether they would register to vote, ten percent of them are more likely to do so. When people are asked if they plan to vote on Election Day itself, twentyfive percent more voted. Well, we're asking.

is totally closed on Saturdays (a day I used to work). The center was open 87.5 hours a week with experienced Lab Assistants always available to answer questons. The statistics might not mean anything as numbers, but it has cost several long time student workers there jobs as well as making it difficult for new students to successfully use the facilities. Students having problems still ask me for help, whether I'm on duty or trying to write a paper. Any student using a Mac to write a paper or involved in a computer class should be concerned about the new changes. All the new Work/Study personel at the Center have not had the time to learn the use of a Mac and all the programs that go with it. Student questions are hard to answer and more people are going to be frustrated. The Computing Center is also the only place on campus where you can print your papers or whatever for free, as opposed to the ten cents a page laser printing at Miller library. Although the O'Neill

Literary House has two computers with free printing, they are almost always in use, day or

Baer. These changes will affe everyone, especially duri paper writing time or ex week. Ryder Daniels

The President and The Visitors and Governors of Washington College cordially invite you to the Dedication of

THE ALONZO G. DECKER, JR. LABORATORY CENTER

with the AT&T Physical Chemistry Instrumentation Lab in honor of William O. Baker '35 and The Olin Corporation General Chemistry Lab

in honor of Thomas S. Nichols Saturday, October 22, 1988 5:00 P.M. Decker Laboratory Center Lawn

Refreshments to follow Ribbon Cutting Ceremony

Elections don't steal our attentions from cartoons

WENTY-FIVE MILLION COPLE WHO WANT TO TE, CAN'T. IN AMERICA. CHTY-ONE MILLION MPLE WHO CAN VOTE. VOTE... that's what

commercial said anyway. So what is it? Why the athy in the American popuon of eligible voters? More eifically, why the lack of usiasm and participation m the college and eligible ers in this year's presidenselection? Are we all minds college pukes whose only ern is getting laid and ating the perfect buzz? Or we shunned and alienated a system whose members' ium age seems to be sixty-necessary to look at an aspect of this year's presidential race that One of these changes is our seems to affect the entire voter population. It ain't the fight of vote. In my case, my only prethe century. Many experts are pressed to find major differences between the two tickets. Neither candidate is an ex-general or the torch carrier for a political family's legacy. They don't even have cool sounding initials. In general the election is not catching our attention as it has in the past.

Should we, the college community, care more about the election and involve ourselves more intensely at least to the point of voting? Yes. Why don't

Before addressing the in our lives where change is obtaining an absentee ballot. vidual we must turn to be no near end to this change. newly acquired eligibility to vious association with voting and going to the polls was wait ing in the car or a school gymnasium for my parents. I think we question our own credability. Do I, one who is capable of watching hours on end of cartoons and the home shopping network, have the credentials to participate in the election of the president? Besides these seemingly noble speculations about our qualifications, there is also laziness. You have to register. we? It may be nieve, but I If you go to school out of state, believe most of us are at a point there are the extra steps of college community alone, it is dominant and there seems to Although seemingly insignificant we all know it's easier to walk past that little table in the dining hall, than to sit down of the world and our own nawith your food and start firing tion? Not get involved? Ignooff your vital stats.

Chris Deri

And what about the cold shoulder of the monster beauracracy? For the most part it is non-existant. Besides heavy advertising, the opportunities to register are spoonfed to newly eligible voters in places like student unions and school cafeterias. We are welcomed by "the system" into the sanctity of voting. When looking for an explanation to voter apathy it Chris Deri is a Sophomore, is more often than not the indi-

So what's to become of us? Is our generation destined to live life oblivious to the issues rant? No. Just like those mindless youths before us, we'll become interested and involved. Some more than others. Some sooner than others. Voting in an election is like gambling on a sports event. When some people put down a bet, they want to know the odds and who's on the coaching staff. Other's place their bets without even turning to the sports page. And there are those who don't even watch the game.

Chris Martir Junior Wilmington, Delaware ut think that college stus are separated from the side political world.

Campus Voices

Neal Boulton Senior Columbia, Maryland I don't think that young people take the responsibility to vote as seriously as older members of the community.

Sophomore Baltimore, Maryland I think that students will tell you it's because they're too busy, or they don't know enough about the candidates, or it's too much of a hassle to get an absentee ballot, but those are all just excuses. The real reason is that

Mike Hammer Senior

Kent Island, Maryland age, being in the sheltered college environment, feel as affected by politics.

Eric McCormack Freshman Fallston, Maryland

I don't think that people of that People our age just don't seem to be into getting to know the candidates or anything. It's tough to vote for a candidate who doesn't say anything that you feel is relevant to your life.

by Laura McGuire

people take the privilege of Imagine your existence is dependent on the outcome

voting for granted

Of the two men who could They all have opinions which being the philosopher that I am, deeply about who will be our haps your paralyzing fear of her gives a damn what you leunder twenty-five do not Naturally the candidate try not to do anything to tyou, but he will not make concerns his priority, bese the votes you give him not make or break this

Now the question is, why y particular age-group so represented at the polls? we say apathy is the I have been keeping an Den to the conversations of ment convincing either. ers, and I would say that Washington College student thing but apathetic. Being ard-carrying Republican tulpa, mea culpa) at a democrat school, I have ne our next President, they strongly hold to, and are more than willing to share with of him. Why? Because me. I would rule out apathy. Could it perhaps be that we are ignorant? Sure we're ignorant. Do you know your Congressman's name? If you do, you're in a very small mi-

Ken Winkler nority, and you probably have no idea how he has voted on anything. So we're ignorant. Big deal. So is the rest of the country, and they all vote. I do not find the ignorance argu-

Which leaves me with two choices for filling the rest of this page. I could talk about the Washington College student as atypical of his/her age group, and therefore come away with tered discussions with a no guess as to why the "typical"

I could come up with an off-thewall guess, and then try to convince you that it is actually true. The first option would bore both of us to tears, and so let us explore my off-the-wall guess. Suppose that there is something which leads us to believe that we cannot make a difference by voting; that no matter how much we care, our one vote will not change the outcome and therefore it's not important to our wise elders have seen the make the effort.

This idea was supported quite heartily by the WC popu ous that I came in contact with. Watching the debate, the general reaction was, "Good Lord, they're both morons! This is all fluff, it's all acting and oneliners! How can I take this seriously?" We have all seen examples of it on campus.

next President, but seeing as your vote is nothing next to the millions of others, it's really not Imagine a world without Mom worth the bother. And yet there must be something that keeps the other voting age groups from believing this way. One tends to vote more as one gets older; what is it about experience in life that motivates one to the voting booth?

Perhaps it is simply that difference a President can make. They have learned the importance of government. They have perhaps tried to buy a house in the face of high interest rates, or had to try to make a living while fighting doubledigit inflation. Let's face it, the government really does not touch us here at Washington

full-scale war in the Middle East, but it is not the same. or Dad. Imagine a world in which all you have is yourself to depend on, and perhaps a few people depending on you. Then imagine that you are facing the same governmental choices, only this time you very existence is dependent on the outcome. Perhaps were burned by the last election and life became that much more difficult. Then you would not care about the mathematical insignificance of your vote; you would feel obligated to do whatever you could to make a difference, no matter how small. This difference in attitude translates into a mathematical difference at the polls.

College. You may mention your Ken Winkler is a senior Philosodiversity of students, young adult does not vote. Or, Perhaps you yourself care shrinking student loan, or per- phy majorand a music minor.

This man is twice as strong as this man...

between Lloyd Bentsen and J. egy helped Bentsen to a 53% to Danforth Quayle reminds me of those beer commercials with the two arm wrestlers. You the voice-over that says, "This man is twice as strong as this man...". If these candidates are judged on their relative experience and effectiveness, Quayle will be white-bread toast before Bentsen's through with him.

Senator Bentsen has had a long and distinguished career. During World War Two he flew fifty bombing missions over Europe and was shot down twice, earning himself a Distinguished Flying Cross. At age 27, he was the youngest member of Congress. He set the tone for his political life early on, establishing both his conservative foreign policy stance and his liberal civil rights views by calling for the use of the atomic bomb against North Korea in 1950 and voting for the abolition of the poll tax which discriminated against blacks in 1949. After six years in the House, Bentsen temporarily retired to start his own life-insurance company, which soon grew into a corporate empire whose holdings were estimated at $25 million in

In that year he re-entered politics, as a candidate for the Bentsen won the Senate. Democratic primary in a dirty, divisive campaign, defeating populist Senator Ralph Yarborough with the aid of Texas' Tory Democrats-the conservatives who favored LBJ and John Connally. It was then that Bentsen locked horns for the first time with George Bush, his oppo nent in the general election. Bush, who had counted on running as a moderate against the liberal Yarborough, had to instead paint himself as a conservative in order to distinguish

47% victory

Since then, Bentsen has defended oil and big-busiknow, the one where they have ness interests in the Senate, and, in the 20 months since he became chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has received over $1.5 million in PAC money, more than any other Senator before him. To his credit, however, he fought for Texas workers as tenaciously as for Texas businesses. He was a leading proponent of the plant-closing notification bill, and has consistantly supported a tougher approach to countries indulging in unfair trade practices. Although his opinions on some social issues can be fairly obnoxious (he supports contra aid. Star Wars, and the death penalty, and opposes gun control), he is a staunch supporter of civil rights legislation and advocates federal health programs for prenatal and neonatal care. Bentsen is enormously popular in Texas, and was voted the single most effective member of the Senate in a poll of congressional aides. Bentsen's only defeat in public or private life came in 1976, when he ran for president and failed, mainly because of his lackluster style

Lloyd Bentsen is a savvy, experienced power broker who has been a major force in the Senate for eighteen years. At 67, and with Bentsen's patrician manner and air of gravitas, he certainly looks presidential, especially when compared with the Republicans blushing starlet, J. Danforth Quayle

Quayle's selection, the first official failure of the Bush Administration, was such a stupid move that most political observers initially didn't know what to make of it. The rationale seemed to be one of choosing a candidate so totally lacking in was the insulting, sexist belief, attested to by Sen. John McCain and others, that Quayle would repair the gender gap because of his good looks. In any case, Quayle quickly proved himself a liability, not because of his hypocritical draft-dodging, his by Jeff Vail his candidacy from that of stature that he wouldn't out versity law school, or his unimThe prospect of a debate Bentsen. Bush's confused strate shine George Bush. Also, there pressive legislative record, but Quayle sought by (get the lousy academic record, his suspicious entry into Indiana Uni-

because of the general belief that he is by no stretch of the imagination ready to take over the reins of the presidency should something happen to his boss. This is a man whose only Senate accomplishment was a job training act which he was unable to pass without the cosponsorship of none other than to be President than Quayle presenting Kennedy with cupcake with a candle in it an singing "Happy Birthday" him in a Senate hearing room in front of astonished aides an bystanders. No wonder a n cent Time Magazine poll foun that, 61% to 18%, people be lieve Bentsen is more qualifie opened its fall term this week. On the docket for this year, whether a municipality can display a nativity scene or a menorah during Christmas.

In the World...

The League of Women Voters has withdrawn its sponsorship of a second presidential debate between Governor Michael Dukakis and Vice President George Bush. The League wished to make changes in the format of the debate but the candidates refused. Both campaigns have stated that their candidates are committed to another debate

Police in Atlanta arrested 250 anti-abortionists as they participated in a four day sit-in at three Atlanta abortion clinics. The sit-in was organized by Operation Rescue, a New York Right-to-Life group that has been in Atlanta since the Democratic National Convention. Burma

The Military Government in Rangoon announced that nearly all striking workers had returned to their jobs. The strikes, which primarily had affected government and industry, began over a month ago and had been one of the reasons cited for the military coup that took place in Burma

Chile

Both sides are predicting victory in Wednesday's Chilean plebiscite which will decide the fate of Augusto Pinochet's presi-Mon. thru Sat.

10-5 pm

301-778-3483

dency. If Pinochet wins, he will The Supreme Court remain in power until 1997. If he loses, Chile might have its first free election since 1970. Hortensia Allende, the widow of Salvador Allende, Chile's last elected president, returned to Chile last week after fifteen years in exile. She, like many others, expressed doubt that Pinochet would lose or that if he lost, he would accept the defeat. The United States has expressed concern that the military will attempt to interfere with the election or the election results. Terrorists were blamed for a blackout which ocured after a "NO" rally on Saturday. There are fears that the regime will use similar tactics, including proclaiming a curfew on election day, if it appears that Pinochet will lose. Haiti

The government of Prosper Ayril has announced the retirement of former Duvalier aide Colonel Jean-Claude Paule from the armed forces. The United States, which had hoped for Paule's removal from the government, has not announced weither it will extend or increase aid to Haiti. Colonel Paule, who was indicted in Florida on drug charges, was the leader of on eof the most feared units of the Haitian Army.

Lebanon

The Islamic Jihad released Mithileshwar Singh after twenty months in captivity

Mr. Singh, a resident alien the United States, was kidnag ped along with three America teachers from the Bierut Un versity College in West Bien on January 24th, 1987. He wa released, and taken by th Syrians to Damascus, whereh will be released into America custody. There are nine Amer cans still held hostage in Lebe

Libya

Libya and Chad have agreed to restore diplomati ties, officially ending the fi teen year war between the two countries. The two cour tries have held a ceasefire sins September of 1987

Pakistan

Pakistinian Presiden Ishaq Khan said that election would take place despite the massacre of 182 people is Friday in Hyderabad by known gunmen. Mr. Khi claimed that those responsi for the deaths were trying create instability and he ww that they would be punished Soviet Union

Mikhail Gorbachev, in effort to solidify his position the Politburo, named Inter Minister Alexander V. Vlas prime minister of the Russi Federation, Mr. Vlasov replace Vitaly I. Vorotnikov. Mr. V rotnikov will replace the reli ing Andrei Gromyko as Pre dent of Russia, a ceremon

Laura Hopper Wall Street Journal, Baltimore Sun.

117 S. Cross St Chestertown, MD 21620

Reception to Introduce A New Print / Poster

Chestertown,"Treasures by the Chester River" by Artist, Kathryn Simons Cochrane

Also Paintings By Ten Area Artists

Saturday, October 15, 4 to 7 pm

Artwork

Fine Crafts

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

Psychology moves to Natural Sciences

continued from page 1 discuss the possibility of "the introduction of a dual track B.A. and B.S.) degree program n Psychology.

Such changes must make Faculty, says Baer, before they can be approved.

The department will offieially move into Dunning Hall next May. In Baer's estimation, "it makes sense for [the ministration then granted its sciences."

Psychology Department] to be approval. a part of the division of their colleagues in the building," a sentiment echoed by Spilich.

The change has been the grade with the Board and underdiscussion for some three years, during which time the Psychology Department proposed and approved the move, and the Social Science division accepted the proposal. The Ad-

Dr. Marcia Pelchat, Assistant Professor of Psychology, is enthusiastic about the divisional change: "I think it's great. It's something we've been working on for very long time," she said. "While psychology continues to have a lot in common with the social sciences, in this department I think the emphasis has moved to the natural

Committee proposes barricade removal continued from page 1

College Avenues

Premo stressed the importance of the committee: "Local fficials are responding to conterns of citizens.

The changes proposed by the Traffic Committee of 1988 tradicated all of the recommendations set by the Committee of 1984, excepting Mt. Vernon Street. Premo stated that the previous committee had no way caused by its decisions.

Because two council

accept the recommendations. Mayor Horsey also "wishes to clarify some minor points" with the College, according to Premo.

The Mayor will meet with President Cater and Gene Hessey, the Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, to discuss those points He did not specify their nature at the meeting.

"I anticipate that official o anticipate the problems action will be taken soon," said

Clint Baer, Director nembers were not in atten- of Planning and Special Proddance, there was no vote to ucts said that the College "fully supports the decisions that the Mayor and the Town Council will make. They will only benefit the campus."

He also stressed that the College has adopted a removed stance, stating that the decision belongs to the town.

President Cater was unavailable for comment; Hessey declined to be interviewed Chestertown officials refused comment on the grounds that official rulings had not yet been made and were not yet a matter of public record.

Phi Alpha Theta opens membership

The Washington College Theta) is beginning its formal the discipline of History, is not, class etivities for the 1988-89 acatemic year by opening its majors membership rolls to qualified students

Membership in the organi- "B" average in 2/3rds of the Chapter of the National His- zation, which recognizes inter- remaining course work; standary Honor Society (Pni Alpha est and high achievement in ing in the upper 35% of one's > however, limited to history If you are interested and believe you have the qualifications for membership, contact the chapter advisor. Professor

Requirements for mem-History majors who meet bership include the following: a therequirements are automati- minimum of four courses in Bob Fallaw (Ferguson Hall #24) ally notified of their eligibility. History with a "B+" average; a by calling ext. 274.

next May, its move from the Social Science Division to the Natural Decker Center dedication

Dr. Pelchat poses in front of the Decker Laboratory Center. While the Psychology Department will not move into the building before

continued from page 1

invited guests. Another of the ing in and fixing of classrooms festivities not intended for students is the 1782 Society Dinner Dance

Science Division was made official this week.

This year's theme centers around science. According to Marshall Williams, waiters will be wearing lab coats, drinks potential students a lot more in will be served in beakers with glass tubes for straws, and frog try," he noted. legs will be served as the main course

The overall cost of the project approaches 3.5 million dollars; however, that figure includes the ongoing work and renovation on all sections of Dunning

As a result of construction, Dunning is now approximately a third larger than its previous size, with space devoted mostly for labs and class-

After 14 months of building and 9 months previous to that of planning, the center is finished aside from some mov-

Marshall Williams considers the Center an important addition to the College, because it contains improved state-ofthe-art equipment in order to keep up with technology.

"It may attract and offer terms of biology and chemis-

Some of the new equipment available for student use includes a fluorescence microscope urchased with funds from the National Science Foundation: a laminar flow hood made available by a grant from Pew Charitable Trust:

-a high-speed centrifuge: - an ultraviolet-visible spectrophotometer;

- and an Atomic Absorption Spectrometer.

"This dedication." summed up Sherry Magill, Vice President and Deputy to the President," is an opportunity to celebrate the completion of the Center, celebrate and to call attention to the sciences, and through that celebration, to attract more generous donors to our College.

All students, faculty, and members of the community are invited to attend the ribbon cutting ceremony at the Decker Laboratory Center on Saturday, October 22 at 5 pm.

Freshman Election Results Christy Marshall-16 Deeann Pinzcok-22

Karen Stritehoff-20

President-Freshman Tracy Greenwalt-28 Kevin Kelly-43 Neiman-62

Vice-President John Benchley-40 Walker Davis-19 Todd Kagler-19

Auditions for

Camino Real

by Tennessee Williams

Super-spectacular

fantasy type drama

Tuesday, October 11

Tawes Theater

7:00 p.m.

Treasurer Adriane Beane-26 Leslie Newcomb-50 Troy Petenbrink-51

Jennifer Jaeger-47

Jr. Class VP Brian Kelly-21 Heath Bethune-13 Kevin Langan-10 Empty-1

CAMPUS REPS NEEDED

earn big commissions & free trips by selling Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun Mexico, and Ski Trips to Vermont & Colorado

For more information, call toll free 1-800-231-0113.

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5

De. 213 & 201

HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:38-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

778-1222

You've got something other people are dving to have.

Don't Forget: REGISTER AND VOTE

Growing in size, pride, and responsibility: the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department

by Troy Petenbrink

"The station is always looking for volunteers. Even if it is only for a few months," states Assistant Chief Walter

Volunteerism has always played an important part in the true spirit of the American way The dedicated men and women of the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department have kept that spirit shining bright in the Chestertown community for 80

In 1908 Chestertown became the owner of its own Fire Station. The station was given by the Mutual Fire Insurance Co., who owned and operated the station since 1845.

The Mutual Fire Insurance Co. gave the town its en gine house on Cross St. and all the equipment, which consisted of a hand pumper, a ladder wagon, a hose reel on wheels and various other items. From those days the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Company has grown in size, pride, and responsibility.

The company today is located on Maple Avenue where it has stood since 1979. The fire company is operated and serviced by 65 non-paid, volunteer members. The station presently houses seven pieces of major apparatus, the newest of which is a 1983 Hahn 1500 GPM (gallon per minute) Pumper. That is a substantial change from the early years of the sta-town, and most importantly, the citizens, who give, in donations, over one-half of the monies received to support the com-

of the fire department, it services roughly a two-mile radius from the center of Chestertown. The company re sponds to an average of 300 to 325 calls a year (10% of those calls on a serious level), approximately 1 call a day. Most the town, any company in Chcommunity.

The members of the com-area. Despite the small size of company and community.

These dedicated volunestertown has the same chance teers range from a large diver-of facing a major problem as sity of people such as construcany company would in a larger tion workers, local business owners, professional fire fighters, and college students.

for a full scale evacuation of the relaxation to help with the ently five active student mem bers: Michael Jenkens, Mat thew Weir, Sean Guiness. Russel Gardner, and Seth

Russel Gardnerfelthe was "taken in [by the company] very nicely." Matthew Weir ex pressed very strongly how he receives a "really good feeling from helping out." Both of these students spoke of how they enjoy being able to give some thing to the community. Walter Strong stated that it would be nice to have more help from college students in general. He added that the help would not have to involve going on calls, but helping with work at the station. The company is currently involved in a major fund raising campaign to pur chase a much needed $400,000 Sutpher Arial.

This is a truck used in multi-story structure fires which could occur at the College, hospital, or at the growing apartment complexes. Since this is a large-scale campaign, all volunteers wishing to belo out are welcome. The company is planning many activities and will need additional help.

Strong mentioned that the company needs people to pu together slide shows for train ing and to help with publi awareness programs. He als added the need for people is help with the large amounts paper work that accumulate during the year.

If you are looking for way to sincerely help the con munity, and a way to receive some work experience, thin about the dedicated men at women of the Chestertow Volunteer Fire Company Strong said "If people are sin cerely interested in the con

Washington College students Michael Jenkens, Matthew Weir, Russel Gardner, and Seth Powell all take time out of study and play to volunteer their services at the Chestertown Volunteer Fire Department. All volunteers completed 150 hours of training in order to qualify.

of these calls are to assist in auto accidents and to handle structure fires. Already this year the company has received 252 calls, 47 more calls from this time last year. The company must be ready to handle any emergency that arises, even though it may not have the necessary equipment

With the industrial pres-Funding for the station is ence in the community, the received from the state, county, company must be prepared for emergencies of a much more serious level

Many of the local industrial plants house dangerous fuel and chemicals that, in an As for the responsibility emergency situation, could call pany, who range in age from 18 to 66, give close to 40 hours a brings the people to the comweek in service. This time is pany, Assistant Fire Chief spent on emergency responses, Walter Strong said, "Most of drills, clean-up, fund raisers, the men in the company are and meetings.

This time equals that of firefighters." the average time spent at a

Volunteers must also give time for training. All members Eichler, who graduated from of the company must take ap- the College was a volunteer for proximately 150 hours of train- the station, and is now a volun- pany, I would be very happy ing. These people must take teer fireman in Dover, DE." He welcome them into our organ time outfrom work, family, and also said that there are pres- zation."

When asked about what from generations of volunteer

Strong also spoke of how normal paying job, but the some of the students at the devoted members of the depart- college have been active in the ment spend this time to con- company. He feels the students tribute a free, necessary serv- are "looking for something different and interesting. Strong added that "Paul

Drugs and homelessness are fronts to the real issues

by Bill Beekman

Happy lunch. Today we are going to learn about the relevant topics and problems in America in 1988. And no, they are not drugs, homelessness, the deficit, illiteracy, poverty, the trade deficit, the state of American education, the decay of cities, the environment, apathy, Central America, or AIDS. Instead, as George and Mikey have pointed out so well, our issues are much more impor-

The ACLU: That stands

members, or anyone who potentially may be a card-carrying member. They are out of the American mainstream, and this should prove it: the ACLU filed a brief recently to help protect Ollie North's rights against selfincrimination. But George and Skippy Bush and the ghost of probably win. But everything Joe McCarthy will stop them, so don't worry Wimps: Nobody likes a self-explanatory as bad as wimps. Particularly one, regardless of religious, watch for this: do they stutter political, or conscience beliefs, for America's Criminals Love when they say: "L-l-l-liberal." If to recite the Pledge of Alle-chair now, before some other l-1-1-liberal lets them get out of Joe Isuzu: This guy is running for President. The problem is that he seems to be running both as a Democrat and a Republican, so he will will be fine. You can trust me. Dan Quayle: This joke is

The Pledge of Allegiance: Liberals: They're almost A true American forces everypreme Court ruled mandatory recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance unconstitutional in 1943. Presidents don't live by the law anyway, do they?

1.000 Points of Light: Whateverthat means. Perhaps this is an allusion to a photo opportunity that George Bush once had in the dark, when 1,000 camera flashes suddenly blinded him

Immigrant parents: "When my parents came to America as immigrants..." If you can say these words, you understand all of America's problems, America.

Us. Beware of all card-carrying so, send them to the electric giance. Who cares if the Su- and you should be Presided Maybe you should write you

Now that you understan the REAL issues of 1988, y can make an informed decision when you vote in November. I'm sure glad that Geon Bush and Michael Dukak haven't clouded our minds wit specific ideas to solve our pro-

It's much easier to sit bat and relax, and watch all of th images and symbols float knowing that all is well

'Three Centuries of Kent' celebrates county

by Judy Summers

Three centuries of Kent County history are to be explored Saturday, October 8, during the third annual driv-County Historical Trust, the have been established since the county's founding in 1642.

large as the better known annual Garden Tour, the event's average turnout is comprised from only one piece of wood. of 200 - 250 people and usually the county's historical attractions. Each of the sites are privately owned and occupied; they are specifically opened for touring from 10 AM to 5 PM.

in 1773, the house was moved in 1973 when it was threatened way Administration by owners John and Cheryl versity of Delaware, will super-Lysinger. It is now on The vise the dig. Many thanks are extended to Burton Brown and Aaron Frazier

National Register of Historic Places and is one of only two 18th century commercial buildings in the county

Another of the attractions historical tour. is Klere Vue Farms, the home ing tour. Sponsored by the Kent of Mr. and Mrs. John Hopkins.

The 18th century buildtour includes various sites that ing, which is the oldest on the tour, has been converted to suit the family's 20th century life-Although not quite as style. However, there are still several period pieces in the house, including a chair made includes many return visitors. this year is an archaeological goalisthe preservation of build-The tour consists of 13 of dig to take place at two sites on Lower Cannon Street.

Exploratory digging will be done at the 19th century house, formerly belonging to Thomas Ringgold and currently The tour's first stop is at owned by David McCall, at 108 Chesterville Brick House, Built Cannon Street and at the Worrell Tavern (where George Washington stayed several by the Maryland State High- times in the 1780s) on the cor- for $12 at The Newstand, The ner of Cannon and South Queen The house, at its present Streets. Jay Custer, Professor ecation, was restored in 1985 of Anthropology from the Uni-featured on the drive. The 17year-old Gillespie House adds a 778-4195 (days) or 778-2552 available at The Newstand and bit of the 20th century to the (evenings).

The house displays various antiques, Audobon prints, a waterfowl stamp collection, and original artwork and watercolors by local artist Louise Gordon. As well, it has a golf course and entry gardens that overlook the Chester River.

According to Kathryn Pinder, a representative of the Kent An addition to the tour County Historical Trust, their ings such as these. By sponsoring the tour, they are able to raise funds for future projects.

Although in the past approximately 70% of the visitors have been out-of-town tourists, Ms. Pinder expressed the group's desire to arouse more local interest.

Corsica Bookshop, and Chestertown Town Hall (on the day of the tour they will be available at Town Hall only).

Bus transportation, which leaves at 9:30 AM from Town Hall on Cross Street is available for $4; however, reservations must be made in advance.

For more information, con-

Not only older homes are tact Charles Halstead, Route 4, Box 508, Chestertown, or call a map and tour directions, are Pamphlets, which include The Corsica Bookshop.

ALUMNI FALL WEEKEND

Friday, October 7 "Back to School" Alumni are invited to return to the classroom. Invitational Intercollegiate Volleyball Tournament Cain Athletic Center Hall of Fame Cocktail Party

Hynson Lounge Hall of Fame Banquet and Induction Ceremony The Drama Dept. presents ANNE FRANK Gibson Fine Arts Center

Saturday, October 8 Invitational Intercollegiate Volleyball Tournament Cain Athletic Center Alumni vs. Alumni Tennis Alumni vs. Alumni Baseball 11:30-1:00 Eastern Shore Barbeque

$6. per adult, $3. per child, Campus Lawn Alumni vs. Alumni Lacrosse Sho'men Club Reception for Alumni Athletes Hynson Lounge 5:00 Cocktail and Raw Bars

$10. per person at the door Alumni Crew Races Alumni vs. Alumni Volleyball Lelia Hynson Boating Pavilion ANNE FRANK Tawes Theatre

Sunday, Oct. 9 11:00 Fall Lacrosse Tourname Washington College, Duke, Loyola and Navy play 3:00 - 4:00 Lacrosse Foundation Symposium Norman James Theatre

A Shear Design

Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

for their help in moving The Elm to its new location

Fall Special -Special on Any Perm, Cut & Style (with Laurie) -Sunglitzing & Style $27.00 (with Jody)

778-0898

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists' Materials

POBox 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5292

F Bramble's

335 High St., Chestertown, MD

Traditional Clothing For Men and Women

Have A Great HomecomingWeekend!

Please Stop Down & See Us!

Mon.-Thurs. 9 to 5:30 - Fri. 9 to 8 - Sat. 9 to 6

778-6090

Volleyball enjoys six game winning streak laudet College, Salisbury State, the standings, it will all come

by Carter Boatner

The Washington College volleyball team has pulled off an impressive six - game winning streak on the road improving their record to 9-5. The team started off their road trip on a bad note arriving late to a match against Gettysburg College and missing adequate warm-up time. The team played well for three games yet lost the match to the strong Gettysburg squad. The girls felt they should have won,

Wilson College, starting off the winning streak

That night the squad travelled to Lancaster to face Franklin & Marshall for an intra conference game. The squad defeated F & M in three tight games, then continued to defeat both Lebanon Valley and Wilkes College. With four wins under their belt, the team faced John's Hopkins and played what coach Penny Fall called and battled back to defeat produced in the last 5 years." The match lasted two hours and 45 minutes with Washington coming out on top. Afterwards Washington defeated Goucher

College in straight sets, 15-5, The team has really meshed well, and just in time for their final home games which will be this weekend at the Washington College Invitational Tournament. Washington College will

Scranton University, Catholic down to who's doing the right College and Fall says that she does not think that any one

University and Notre Dame thing at the right time," says

Coach Fall says that re team will dominate play. gardless of the wining streak "There is a very even field, I she is dubious to say that the

anticipate some scrambling in team has turned around for W.C. innaugerates Fall Lacrosse Tournament

by Joe Van Name On Sunday Washington College will host its First Annual Fall Lacrosse Tournament

The tournament is designed to bring together high caliber teams and to open the air to discussion about possible rules changes. W.C. will be hosting Loyola, Duke and the United States Naval Academy. This round robin event will see all three teams playing each other under a different set of rules. The rules will be those seen in club lacrosse: substitution on the fly, horn only on penalties and only three long sticks on the field at a time. These rules are not desirable yet they may start some discussion on the subject of new rules

Following the game, a panel discussion will be held to discuss these rules and possible changes. The panel will be made up of Roy Simmons (Coach of Syracuse), Don Zimmerman (Coach of Johns Hopkins), Jim Garvy (Head of all officials), just to name a few. The panel discussion will be held in Norman James

The schedule for the games is: Kibler Field

W.C. vs. Loyola W.C. vs. Navy 11:30 am 12:45 pm 2:00 pm W.C. vs. Duke

Practice Field Navy vs. Duke Loyola vs. Duke Navy vs. Loyola

As for those who are not able to attend the contests then will be a 20 minute highlight show featured on Home Team

Athlete of the Week

The entire volleyball team receives honors as Athletes the Week for their comeback effort last Tuesday evening agains John's Hopkins University.

The win kept alive a four game winning streak that has ince been extended to six games.

John's Hopkins opened up by winning the first two sets,15 8 and 15-11. Then Washington battled back to take the following two matches at 15-12 each. With the teams resting even at iw games each, the fifth and final match proved to be the tie brake Hopkins opened up the match strong and it looked like the would walk away with the game victory, gaining a 11-4 adva tage. But Washington fought back with skill and determination to win the match 16-14 and come away with a victory. Coach Penny Fall commented on the Hopkins game saying it was "awesome", the best by any team in the past five years.

takes a lot of pride, character and heart to come back the way t girls did." Asked about her team's rapid turnaround, Fall said, "Ice point out any one player, they all have meshed well." She didno that team captains Debra Cohn and Sharon Orser have done excellent job directing a strong team effort.

W.C. Invitational Volleyball Tournament this weekend, come cheer the team on to extend their winning streak

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

"The best game our team has host defending champions Gal Field hockey defeats Goucher with domination in the second half Karen Reck and Julie affective drive which over- 4-4.

by Kathy Brewster

In second half play against Goucher College there was an all-round domination on the part of Washington College hockey and out scored their Goucher opponent with twenty-one shots in the second half and maintained total control of the field. With a total of only five shots in the game, Goucher lost momentum and barely crossed the 50 yard line. Washington started the game with a lack of drive and offense until the goal made by Goucher prodded them to play hockey up to their potential Goucher faced Washing ton ready for a quick victory early in the first half on their "Parent's Day" game. They came out with a strong and whelmed Washington. First half play was mainly concentrated in the center of the field, both teams having a few breaks toward their goal. Two minutes before the end of the first Washington outplayed half was over Goucher netted the ball for their first and only

The Goucher goal led to position changes that added the incentive Washington needed to rule the second half. Soon Washington began to pull things together and work as a

Julie Schram rippled the net in a slap rebound from the goalie's pads for the first Washington goal. A penalty corner shot enabled Amy Tiehel to engulf the net with the ball on a hit intended for Carole Reece, giving Washington the 2-1 win. The team's record now rests at outcome [of the season]."

Schram, two leading freshman scorers, had a few things to comment on about the attitude of the team. They believe that at this point in the season they can give anyone a hard fight and " its great to be on a team where everyone is considered an equal. The atmosphere is noncompetitive and everyone works as a team.

Coach Guinan believes that they are at a crucial time in the season. There time to gether is paying off a the team s playing as a cohesive unit.

Many challenges however still lay ahead. Johns Hopkins, Swarthmore and Roanoke College are tough competitors Washington will have to face. She concluded in saying that, "only the players determine the

Sailing team competes at national qualifyer

by Carter Boatner The Washington College sailing team entered two sailorsinto the "Area C Mono Eliminations" held last weekend at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis. This was an elimination regatta in which the top eight finishers qualify for the National Championship Regatta being held in November.

The two Washington entries were John Macielag and Robert Noble. The sailors competed in three races in the morning, in which 45 sailors were entered from 20 schools.

so tight, that many sailors crowded the starting line and the starters were forced to institute the one-minute rule. This rule penalizes anyone who crosses the start line one minute prior to the start, by making them sail around the pin and position their boat at the end of the line at the start, This starts the sailor at a distinct time disadvantage. In preparation for the afternoon races Noble capsized and suffered strained cartilage in his knee, preventing him

The start of the races were from participating in anymore

Overall Macielag finished in the upper half of the fleet in approximately 15th place. This year the team was only permitted to enter two sailors, yet following last weekend's performance the team was given clearance to enter up to five sailors in the next elimination regatta which will be held next Spring.The team is currently awaiting full affiliation with the Middle Atlantic Sailing Association which will be granted next January

Notice Regarding Apple Computers

Orders must be placed with the Bookstore by 12:00 noon, October 14, 1988, in order to secure current prices. Substantial increases effective October 15, 1988.

HISTORY, OH

WC netters battle opponents on the road

by Fred Wyman Monica Blanco's two singles victories combined with her first round doubles victory when teamed with Miriam Dittman, paced the Washington College women's tennis team to a respectable showing at the Eastern Regional Small College Championships held at Trenton State College last weekend. After bowing in her first University 9-0. round match to Concordia College's Malina Muerkiea 6-4. 6-1, Blanco notched two victories to reach the final 16 of the consolation draw. Pace University's number - one player, Beate Ellmerer stopped Blanco's streak with back to back 6-3 wins on Saturday.

Sara Coste (singles and doubles), Emily Bishop (singles and doubles) Rachael Rice (doubles) and Meg Wheatley (doubles) also qualified for the three day but lost both their first round and consolation matches

Bishop fell to Smith College's Jenny Beindorf 6-1.6-1 and then was ousted by Skidmore All - American Heidi Heusner 6-0, 6-1. Both Dittman and Coste were blanked in their respective opening round The tournament featured matches. Coste was topped by three Division I teams, William #2 seed Lisa Warren of Clarion University in back to back 6-0 matches. Dittman on the other hand was bested by Vassar's Sho'men came up short for the Stacy Lepprone in the same first time this season. fashion their opponents, the men's team travelled on the road to the James Madison University Fall tennis Classic without three of their top four players.

Earlier in the week the Sho'women suffered their first defeat of the Fall, bowing at Sho'men in contention for the Mary. Read knocked off Brix 7- his match to beat UNCC's home to Division l Villanova unofficial team title.

sailing club

volleyball

lacrosse

soccer

cross country

field hockey

10/7

The tournament featured & Mary College, University of North Carolina at Charlotte and host JMU. Unfortunately the doubles

Wins by Scott Reid, Andy Bohutinsky and Rich Phoebus were not enough to keep the

Despite a late surge on the second day of the tourna-While the women battled ment, the Sho'men could not overcome the UNCC for third place. The 49ers had built a substantial lead over the Houston Oilers. Sho'men by winning the major ity of their head to head con-

(A) 11am

(A) 1pm

Sports schedule

vs. Loyola/Haverford (H) 11am vs. Albright

Salisbury Invitational

W.C. Fall Tournament

vs. Johns Hopkins(H) 4pm

vs. Ursinus (H)3:30pm

W.C. Invitational (H)11am

field hockey vs. Randolph Macon (A) field hockey vs. Roanoke

Washington sophmore All-American Scott Reed placed third in singles and third in

Read downed JMU's number one and two players, Matt Goetz and Marc Brix, but bowed to eventual champion Scott Mackesy of William &

6-2. Mackesy dashed Read's hopes of the Championship, defeating him 6-4, 6-2. doubles Read teamed with Rich Poebus to defeat UNCC's Scott Berler and Larry MacNeil 6-1, 6-2, and the 49ers' number two tandem Stan Cocke and Jack Burke 6-3, 6-2. Freshman Andy Bohutinsky went to the wire in 6, 7-3 and trounced Goetz, 6-1, MacNeil 7-6, 4-6, 7-6.

Sports trivia

The answer to last weeks question Dan Pastorini holds the NFL record for the most fumbles in á season, with 17 in 1973, while playing quarterback for the

This weeks question:

What former Michigan "Wolverine" football player is given credit for "pioneering" the position of linebacker

The correct answer to this question will win you a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. If you think you know the answer, fill out on a piece of paper, 1. your name, 2. your dorm and room number or if you live off campus, phone number, and 3. your

Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope (behind the bar) and wait until next week's ELM to find out the winner and the correct answer The deadline for the Trivia questions are on Wednesday at

*In the event that more than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing among the correct answers to determine the winner. Please, only one entry per person.

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available cated Downtown next to the Court House

10/12 volleyball vs. Western Md. (A) 7pm SEVEN HILLS 10 minutes from Washington College

Coopers Lane . Worton, Md. . 778-0201

Instruction in Combined Training Show Jumping . Dressage

Beginners thru Advanced

Horses Boarded. Trained. For Sale. Leased Track Shop

New Indoor Area Under Construction

Kent Association of Riding Therapy

NEEDS VOLUNTEERS

Wednesdays & Thursdays 9:30-11:30

Side Walkers & Horse Leaders

Volunteer for 3 Sessions, receive a FREE RIDING LESSON at Seven Hills Farm

For more information call 778-3335

The.

River Inn

ROLPH'S WHARF

Restaurant

Rolph's Wharf

Proudly Presents... THE MOVIES

A Special OUTDOOR Event Tuesday, October 11 Beginning at 7pm $3.00 cover at the gates

For more info call 778-3227

Refreshments available no coolers

Settle and the South unite in the Beulah Quintet

by Elizabeth R. Baer Mary Lee Settle fairly bubbled with exciting news when reached recently at her home in Charlottesville, Virginia. Scribner's decided to reissue the Beulah Quintet in a boxed edition in fall 1988. For the first time, all five books (Prisons, O Beulah Land, Know Nothing, The Scapegoat, and The Killing Ground ) in this remarkable historical cycle will be in print at the same time. Settle wrote the novels over a 30-year period, publishing them with four different companies, and out of the chronological sequence in which they are best read. They are likewise almost impossible to aquire. The series richly deserves the publishing attention it finally will receive. The five volumes span two continents and 300 years; from England in Virginia to the Civil war to a coal miners' strike in 1912 led by Mother Jones to the story of a contemporary writer, Hannah MacKarkle, who returns to her West Virginia home after her brother's death to piece together her family story.

To achieve this historical sweep, Settle spent years in the British Museum reading history and used the state library in Charleston and other archives. Her reading tastes still run toward nonfiction. Settle explained, "I am not a good reader of contemporary fiction. I need to hear my own voice. I do read a great deal of history and geology and writers like John McPhee and Edward Hoagland. Proust, Conrad, and Hardy are also

At the Back of the North Wind , read often as a child, is a book Settle still picks up

Settle, who will celebrate her 70th birthday this July, was born in Charleston, West Virginia. Her childhood ac-quainted her with the difficult life of coal miners; her father was an engineer and coal mine owner. Although her childhood, adolescence, and early adultbond later provided material for both fiction and autobiography, she resisted the impulse, common in writers, to use this material early in her career. "So many young writers, start out by writing thinly disguised autobiography. I think you should end up with it, not begin with it," Settle told an interviewer in 1979. "A writer should start out by discovering what he doesn't know rather than 1649 to the settling of West depend so heavily on what he does-that's too easy.

When asked why her works had been neglected, Settle replied that she thought of the time as a "long and painful interim. My first four books got very good reviews and notice. It was the reviews for the novel which eventually became The Killing Ground , a novel that signalled this period of neglect. Then, too, the reviewing weather changed," Settle continued. "In New York reviewing became fashionable. Attitudes toward southerners were negative and then southern writers were just ignored." Agreeing with pleasure to the observation that southern writers are now back in vogue, Settle quipped, "We just kept writing anyway and finally they

Written in a jubilant mood

after she completed the Beulah Quintet and emerged victorious from a bout with cancer, on yet more meanings. Settle's most recent book, Celebration (1986), chronicles the adventures of a young widow following cancer surgery. stark comment precedes Celebration 's first chapter. "The real knowledge of death is sudden and certain. It takes different people different ways. After that crossing to the less naive side of the river Styx, stripped of the useless armor of blindness, nothing is taken for fined. Colors are brighter. People know this who have been in wars." The "unknown" takes Settle is currently workingon a novel and an autobiography, entitled Fragments... "That's the way it seems to come out-in fragments." Such an approach to autobiography is, like the emphasis on the personal, characteristic of women's autobiography. As to her work habits, Settle remarked, "The way I answer that question is 'I go there every morning.' I don't believe you can make yourself cussion."

granted. Objects are more de- write, but you can go there and be ready.

This spring the novelist travels to Australia for a literary conference. Mary Lee Settle has earned more than a trip to Australia. She has earned the respect of her readers and, at last, the literary recognition she Settle will speak as part of the Sophie Kerr lecture series on Wednesday, October 12 at 7 P.M. in the Sophie Kerr room of the Miller Library. Her talk will be titled, "The Beulah Quintet: A Reading and Dis-

Celebrating Chestertown through art

by Michele M. Volansky

Cross Street, Chester-town will be the site of a reception on Saturday, October fifteenth, to introduce to the community the print "Chestertown: Treasures by the Chester River

The print was chosen from a competition held by Gallery 5 in order to find a poster/print that would best represent the

The artist, Kathryn Simons Cochrane, has spent most of her summers on the Eastern Shore and as a result, is able to capture the feeling of the area and express her love of the Eastern Shore through her art.

Ms. Cochrane graduated from Pennsylvania State University with a degree in Landscape Architecture. Following graduation, she was employed by the National Park Service,

The painting, "Chestertown: Treasures by the Chester River will be introduced at the Gallery 5 studio on October tifteenth. in which her last years there has also previously been exhibwere devoted to designing small ited in Gallery 5 parks under the auspices of paign to beautify America. She has since studied drawing and watercolor painting with fellow artist and teacherMiles Batt along with other artists. Currently, her time is spent on commissions, and sport at 778-3483. painting. Ms. Cochrane's work

Her painting along with works by ten other area artists Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson's camwho participated in the competition, will be celebrated at a reception October fifteenth from four to seven P.M. Gallery 5 is located at 117 Cross Street Further information may be obtained by calling the gallery

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

You dial. We deliver.

Corsages & Boutonnieres for Homecoming!

Roses, Sweetheart Roses, Mixed Spring, Carnations, Orchids.

Order Early

Prices starting at $2.95 fresh and silk

15% off to students with this ad and ID

"A trip to Elburn's is worht it for their low prices and high quality."

778-2200

C-Town liquors Dali

FEATURING: HOMEMADE HOT SOUPS

511 WASHINGTON CHESTERTOWN, MD

778-2988

Freshman talent shines in season debut

by Kate Absher

Written by Meyer Levin, Anne Frank is a complex play based on the Diary of Anne Frank and one that explains young Anne's experiences as she hides with her family and another Jewish family during the Nazi takeover of Amsterdam during World War II The play has a "simultaneous setting facing the audience where characters are walking through rooms to get to other rooms. This stage is designed to emphasize the effect that people were almost on top of each other-within hearing distance of each other, " explains director Jason Rubin. Another effect that adds intricacy to the text is the use of slides showing pictures of the real Anne, the real Frank family, the secret door and even the listing of the Frank family name in a concentration camp. Yet, the ultimate complexity is the difficulty of the actors trying to imagine what it was like to Felicia Shackman, who plays Anne Frank in the play found it somewhat difficult to portray a character so much younger than herself. She also thought Anne "tended to be a spoiled brat." Shackman stressed that "the one thing I want the audience to keep in mind is that Anne is thirteen be hidden in an attic for three years, in addition to discovering the minute details of each and she's going through puberty

As youth is a factor with Shackman coming to terms with her role, so youth is an overall factor in the entire play for many of the mem bers of the cast are freshman Jason Rubin gives two reasons why there are six freshman out of fifteen: the first, he explained, was the significant number of freshman males competing for roles; the second, the director "likes to give different people opportunities to act." he concedes, however, that he wouldn't have given the difficult role of Anne to a freshman

Due to the fact that many members of the cast are new to the theatre department, some upperclassmen actors found it difficult to work with people they were unfamiliar with, particularly in the confining set designed by Rubin. Shackman cites her specific problem with the unaquainted cast, "Joshua Buchmann plays my father and right away we had to jump right in and become fatherly and daughterly Right now I'm just getting to know him off-stage. Everyone is really just trying to get to know one another off-stage

Peter Johnson, first-time stage manager of a production, supports Rubin's choice of actors, stating the fact that

newcomers to the Washington College stage is "a good way to initiate students into the department." Yet, to have so many freshmen performers was not planned. "I took part in the casting process. We picked actors to the best of their ability. It just turned out to be a big freshman show, " emphasized Johnson Derrick Serra, playing Peter van Daan, is wary about the number of freshman performing. "This play is much too heavy to start their college career with, " argues Serra. He believes that there should be a transition stage between high school dramatics and college dramatics instead of a full leap into a major role. "I see a lot of potential, but at the same time I think this play is very complicated in many aspects. I think it was a bit much for them to be introduced into college theatre production this way.

The freshman in Anne Frank are not hesitant in their ability to do justice to their roles and they think they are in touch with the problems the isolation places in their character. Stephanie Hess, who plays Mrs. van Daan, is a freshman who truly stands out in her part. She says, "I think being a freshman or a senior has nothing to do with the ability to play my part. Realistically, no one can imagine

Members of the cast rehearse for this weekend's performance of ti show which is dominated by newcomers to WC theatre themselves locked up in an interesting [to see] if we can attic for three years, but as an pull it off."

actor, I have to imagine myself in this situation." Joshua Buchmann is excited about this opportunity to play Anne's father. " It is definitely a challenge that the three eldest characters in the play are freshman. It will be

One can go to see if the do pull it off by attending Anne Frank from Thursday to Saturday nights at 8 P.M. in Tawes Theatre. Tickets are free to students. For reservations, call the Drama Department at extension 269

You Read Nothing Else,

Nicaragua in search of a view

by Stephanie Gannon Monday afternoon, the O'Neill Literary House was the place to be to hear Professor Thomas Pabon talk about his recent trip to Central America. Entitled "Room Without a View: Impressions on Nicaragua," the talk was a mix of personal experience as t related to the conditions of he poverty of this third world country along with the military operations perma nently installed in the cour

try. Both are, he feels, a function of a civil war.

Dr. Pabon and fifteen other academics spent two weeks this past summer travelling under the guidance of the Nicaraguan government. Because they had the advantage of not being simply "tourists", they were given access to members of both the ruling party, the FSLN, and the opposition Liberation Party. The group visited the National Assembly, and the highly protected U.S. Em-

The two week "journey discovery" was, for Pabon, time of awareness, and a pe sonal need for answers to lon held questions. He wanted know how the Nicaragus people viewed the ubiquitor war. Pabon recalled the title his presentation and found have a room with its own vie is a special privilege the Nic raguans are looking to achiev

APPROACHES, THE ETERNAL QUES HOW IN THE MEEDS DO I WRITE A REREAL PROPERTY S WOHYNA

Campus calendar: beyond Fall Weekend

October 6-8

Department of Drama opens its season with Meyer Levin's Anne Frank. Based on The obtained at extension 269.

Weekend of October 7th

The Film Series continues this weekend with Twist and Shout, a movie set during the era of the Beatles. The film traces two lovers who discover "the differences between life and the lyrics of popular music." A film not to be missed.

October 8 and 9

This weekend marks Alumni Weekend with the S.G.A. playing host. Events scheduled will be posted and look for a band on Saturday night.

Lacrosse will be the order of the at 11:30, a round-robin The Washington College tournament featuring WC, Navy, Duke, and Loyola will exhibit proposed rule changes, such as "club substitutions", or Diary of Anne Frank , this no horns, the prohibition of no version follows closely to the more than three defensive actual text. The play runs from sticks onfield and a fifty, not Thursday to Saturday at 8 P.M. sixty minute game. The and ticket information may be exhibition will be free Following this, at 3 P.M.., the Lacrosse Foundation will present a panel discussion on the "State of College Lacrosse", featuring all four coaches; the Syracuse and Hopkins coaches; the Athletic Director from Hofstra; Jim Jackson, sportswriter from the Sun and Leif Elsmo of Home Team Sports, along with other lacrosse fans and followers. The will improvements on the game, as Sports will tape the games and highlight them at least five times, in addition to presenting the tape to the NCAA rules committee to discuss possible alterations. If lax is your interest, this is the event for you.

day on Sunday. In the morning Also featured on Sunday information on how to "break with evening is the celebration of the opening of the new and improved Elm office. The Open House will begin at 7:30 P.M., and the entire campus is welcome to see the renovations in the basement of Reid Hall.

October 10

The Monday Series continues with Dr. Anna Kuhn's "Christa Wolf's Utopian Vision: From Marxism to Feminism", an interesting sounding talk. Come and find out what it is all about at 4 P.M. for tea, with the talk to follow.

October 11

The Center for Career discuss Development, directed by Linda Cades, will present a panel well as personal opinions of the discussion titled Careers in sport. Finally, Home Team Communication on Tuesday night at 7 P.M.. The discussion, held in the Sophie Kerr Room, will present such careers as public relations, advertising, journalism, photography and graphic arts. As part of the "Career Lecture Series", this discussion will provide basic into" one of the given professions, in addition to presenting a "living resource" for students to address their questions. October 12

The Sophie Kerr Lecture Series presents Mary Lee Settle and her talk "The Beulah Quintet: A Reading and Discussion" Dean Baer's article contained within this issue will provide a glimpse of the talk. The Sophie Kerr Room will be the site at 7:30 P.M. on Wednesday night.

October 17

The topic for this week's October 19 Monday Series will be "Current Thoughts on the Health of the Chester River." Presented by Dr. Donald Munson, the talk is sure to provide valuable insights into the river which flows at our feet. As usual, tea is served at 4 P.M. with the talk following.

The Washington College Concert Series follows its highly successful season debut workshop several times a year

Monday night's performance by the equally entertaining Baltimore String Quartet. The event, held in Gibson Fine Arts Center at 8 P.M., is sure to continue the musical tradition that the Concert Series is noted for,

Look to the C-House for entertainment the first night Scheduled is Salt and Pepper the guitar group whose previous appearances have been greatly received. This event begins at 9:30. Check the bulletin board outside of the C-House for further information and upcoming events.

The Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library will be the site for the Career Development Office's Resume Writing Workshop. The talk will begin at 7 P.M. and will provide infor mation on the format, order and emphasis of a resume. One plus about the talk is that if you cannot attend this one, th Development Office offers this

Greek update

by Emily Bishop

The Greek Community began their Greek Weekend festivities last Thursday, September 29 at the Chestertown Bowling Lanes. Greek Bowling began at 9:00 p.m. and included duck pin bowling as well as ten pins. After stiff compe tition Alpha Chi Omega and Theta Chi emerged victorious.

Saturday, October 1, the following Greek organizations gathered in front of Bunting Hall for the 2nd Annual Greek Games: the Theta Chi, and Kappa Alpha fraternities; and Zeta Tau Alpha, Alpha Chi Omega, and Alpha Omicron P cororities. The Games began at 12:30 p.m. with Dennis Berry officiating along with Panhel President, Denise Smith.

The fraternities and sororities were judged seperately but competed in the same events. Events included: a wheelparrow relay, a three-legged race, a piggy back race, body pass, orange pass (sororities), pie eating, egg toss, water balloon toss, two man relay race (fraternities), clothes obstacl course (sororities), and tug of war. The scores were close but Theta Chi defeated Kappa Alpha Order 95 to 92; and the results for the girls were as follows: Zeta Tau Alpha- 91, Alpha Chi Omega- 90, and Alpha Omicron Pi- 86

A huge attraction at the Games were $.50 whipped ream pies used creatively to decorate many victims. Panhel also held a 50/50 Raffle, of which AOn, Karen Reisinger was the winner. Both of these fundraisers along with the sale of Greek Weekend T-shirts were a great success

To end the weekend's activities, the IFC sponsored the 2nd Annual Greek Bash behind Tawes Theater. Admission was three dollars and contributed toward paying for the two lives bands which played from 9:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. The incorrigibles were the first band to perform, followed by The Rage who played for the duration of the party.

Norman James Theater, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, October 7 * Sunday, October 9 Monday, October 10

> Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All others $2.00

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

ume 60, Number 6

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 21, 1988

heir faces in the turf, two laxers get set for an opening faceoff. WC finished 1-1-1 in the inaug-Washington College Fall Lacrosse Tournament.

Fires alarm dorm residents

Julie Greene and Cathy Lease

the past two weeks, brmitory. Three of the sulted in the arrival of stertown Volunteer Fire my, according to Dean ing the residents to evacuate. while one involved the yville Fire Company as The fires are currently evestigation by the Fire in conjunction with ogton College Security.

One was in the southern stairwell of Queen Anne first floor, es were set in the Queen and was extinguished before the alarm went off.

Later, two more were lit, setting off the fire alarm, forc-

The following Tuesday morning at approximately 1:24, nearby another fire occurred. Lara Anne were awake at the time orly on the morning of the alarm went off. Buchanan by, October 13 three was the first to spot the fire in trash barrels were set aflame. the trash barrel in the stairwell next to her room

Simms grabbed the trash can from the laundry room, filled it with water, and doused the flames in the barrel, which had almost melted to the ground, and then dumped some water on the flaming pizza box

At this time Cyndi Bucci, Buchanan and her roommate from the second floor, came Katie Simms of first floor Queen downstairs and helped Katie pull the trash barrel outside so the smoke could clear in the continued on page 5

Computing Center receives money, sets additional hours for students

Judy Summers

Wednesday morning g, an additional $3000 cated to the Computer s budget in order to students with more and available assistants. is decision is the consestudent employees and amended. rease of center hours. i for an $8000 increase granted ording to Dean Elizated off the academic year deficit. Changes in the of the pay scale, in the closing of the Center on now receive higher hourly signals, as if [we were saying wages, had a negative impact on the center. This summer's three student workers were paid out of the center's yearly arose after the shortening of allotted sum. The Center was funded at the same level as last of a budget scare that year, yet with these increased ter on weekday mornings in the dismissal of demands, spending had to be However, according to Dean

Was never an actual where we realized that we had in funds, although a togoback to the drawing board," explained Dean Baer. "We realized that we had to-rectify it, and it was basically a mutual r, the Computer Cen- feeling. For instance, at a faculty meeting last week, serious concern was expressed about which experienced employees Saturdays. It sent out the wrong that I no studying should be done on Saturdays."

Another problem that the hours was the absence of student assistants at the Cen-Baer, it was agreed that staff "It created a situation will be there specifically for student help during those

> "The center will be open for five fewer hours than it was at the start of the year," ex-Computing Tim Kirk, "however, there will be significantly fewe continued on page 12

Helpline stirs up campus concerns

by Tracey Connell

setbacks, the campus Helpline has received funding from both the SGA and Student Affairs and is proceeding to tended the introductory/organtrain its student counselors. Despite its financial backing, student leaders are divided on the question of the need for the Helpline, and the qualifications Schanno. of students to handle crisis situ-

Senior Chris Schanno. coordinator of the student-run service, projects that phone lines will be installed and volunteers trained by the last two not readily available. weeks of this semester, "just in time for semester's exams....a crisis period for many people." Dr. Bonnie Michaelson-Fisher of the Health Center Counseling Service will train the student counselors

Perry Finney, President of the SGA, questions the existence of the need for the Helpline. "If there were something that wrong here, this is the wrong way to go about solving it.....what makes these people so qualified?"

Schanno's request for SGA funding was granted by a reported two-thirds majority of the Senate, according to Tom tion of existing resources and Jackson Treasurer Jackson added that of those Senators present for voting, some were leaving or had left when the issue of funding for the Helpline was raised.

At the same time, Schanno maintains that the recent suicide of a transfer student has played a major role in the Senate support of the Helpline: "It After more than two years got people up off their butts to do something about the prob-

> Eighteen students atizational meeting. "Quantitatively, I am very pleased. The a turnout of eight," stated

Schanno has attempted for more than two years, with little success, to organize the Helpline to provide "short term counseling and referral" at times when other resources are

Finney expressed deep concern that the student counselors are not equipped to handle serious situations and therefore may unintentionally in need. "They are greatly respected .... I think Mr. Schanno has a lot of good intentions..but can he really help someone who has been raped, or is a serious drug abuser....can he really empathize, care, treat, or help? This is a very touchy situation. You can't just say 'Oh, let's get up a club to deal with this.' It's a noble idea, but...

He proposes the examinaan increase in concern among students. If there is a failure in the system and a Helpline is required, then he hopes that it will be implemented in a professional attitude, twenty four hours a day, manned by intensively-trained individuals, which he says, "includes continued on page 12

INSIDE:

| Chilean plebiscite       | p4  |
|--------------------------|-----|
| Candidates of f the cuff | .p6 |
| Soccer season turnaround | .p9 |
| Meeting of the minds     | 010 |

Stop crying wolf

Getting out of bed in the middle of the night to stand outside has to be among the most unpleasant interruptions to a good night sleep. Unfortunately this is a prospect Washington College students have had to face again and again.

After many pulled or malfunctioning fire alarms last year, the Chestertown Fire Company stopped responding to alarms on the Washington College campus. Unfortunately students concern over the dissonance of a buzzing fire alarm has dwindled. They tend to respond slowly or not at all, and the prospect of being fined by an R.A. is more threatening than the possibility that there is

This week there were fires. So many trashcans have been burned, that Queen Anne's House is no longer allowed to have them. Maintenance is forced to work overtime in order to empty every trashcan in Queen Anne's and Caroline, including the ones inside the dumpsters. The fire company has had to leave their beds along with the students.

It is hoped that the fires will stop if there isn't any trash to burn, but people are worried about what will

As Mr. Powell, the Fire Marshall, investigates the problem, the case will be kept confidential. Gerry Roderick, director of security, has no comment to make until more evidence is uncovered. So for now we have to wait and make due with what students have seen and heard.

And the facts that we do have are scary. According to Dean McIntire, who was also awakened, the doors of Caroline and Queen Anne's were locked between the fires this past Tuesday. This indicates that it was probably one of the residents or a guest of one of the residents.

If it is one of the residents, he or she must have some strange attachment to repeatedly standing outside in the cold night air. It is amazing that any one person could have such blatant disregard for the well being of so many of his or her peers

There is the hope that the fires were accidental, for this would not be as bad as the idea that a classmate has an irresistible attraction to fire. Just say the first fire on Thursday was an accident, okay maybe someone emptied an ashtray that contained a half-lit cigarette and the trashcan burned. And then say the fire that occured later that night was the result of a burning cigarette tossed aside by an intoxicated student returning from Newt's. Stretch your imagination a little further and imagine that the first fire on Tuesday night was started by a match carelessly thrown aside. But after evacuating a building in the middle of the night because of an actual fire, how many people would be so careless as to toss a cigarette butt or match into the nearby trashcan? The imagination doesn't stretch quite that far,

Washington College Elm

| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso |
|-------------------------------|---------------------|
| News Editor                   | Susan Di Le         |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaur     |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne       |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson       |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar            |
| Managers                      |                     |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma         |
| Advertising Manager           |                     |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobcza        |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cvnthia Gos         |

MARY JANE TRIED TO MAKE THE BEST OF IT.

SO WHAT IF QUEEN ANNE'S WAS BURNING DOWN ? AT LEAST SOME ONE HAD THE FORESIGHT TO BRING THEIR GUITAR

BUT THEN CAME THE INQUISITION ... ALL QUESTIONS SUPPLIED

MARY JANE KN THAT SOMETH GOOD MUST COME OF THIS ORDERL.

Letters to the Editor

Security isn't securing

To the Editor:

I am writing in concern over the apparent changes in the Security Department. As far as I can recall, in the past ecurity was able to be reached at least until the switchboard closed. Recently however. when one calls security after 5 PM, there is an answering machine stating that the office is closed and only if it were and emergency to call 911. As most security-type problems occur after dark, I, along with numerous other students who have attempted to contact security, feel that the office, or at least the phone line, should be open to calls until the switchboard closes or 12 AM If security were going to really secure us, one would think that afterdark protection and accessibility would be part of the job. Perhaps security should re-evaluate their "after-dark" Michele Volansky,

Library van trips To the Editor

The library is delighted to announce a supplemental information service for the campus community - yup, you guessed it - transportation to and from two big time libraries: the Library of Congress and the University of Delaware.

The schedule is THIS Saturday, Oct. 22, 9:00-5:00: Library of Congress. Saturday, Oct. 29: Delaware Saturday, Nov. 5: Library of Congress

Saturday, Nov. 12: Delaware Saturday, Nov. 19: Library of Congress

I know-what a deal! The To the Editor: van holds 14 people, so reservations are strongly encouraged. Please sign-up either with me in the library or with Diane in Student Affairs Jeff Chaffin

MGA Applications

To the Editor:

The Department of Political Science is now accepting applications by students interested in the internship program at the Maryland General Assembly during the spring se

Preference will be given to political science majors in their junior year or students who will be first semester seniors in the spring. Students must have a GPA of a least 3.0 and a B in Forms of Lit. Preference will be given to students who have taken poli sci 391 or

Final choice of interns will be made in Annapolis. However, the department will make the first "cut."

The internship program counts a two courses. Students interested in details of the program and/or an application form should contact

Professor Weissman in 12 Ferguson Hall, ext 326.

This program is most rewarding, but is very demanding in terms of time, flexibility and work.

Professor Weissman

Cutting th ribbons

In keeping wift spirit exhibited at Fall 0 cation, Libby and I wish tend a special invitation students, faculty and sta attend the ribbon-cutting mony dedicating the new ence Laboratory Center honoring Washington Co trustee and benefactor A G. Decker, Jr., 5 P.M., 8 day, October 22. We hope Decker and the many whose generous contribu paid for construction of splendid new facility.

Sincerely. Douglass Cater

COME IOIN US FO HEALTHIER LIVIN

The Washington Col Health Services will be s soring a Stop Smoking Cl An RN from Kent & Q Anne's Hospital will bed ing the program here at WC Health Services Of We must have at least 6pe in order to begin the clim Please sign-up be October 27th.

Interested in express your opinion abou the election? Submit an essay of any aspect of the election to The Elm by Halloween (Monday, October 31) and you may be read your own opinion in the Election Issu of The Elm on November 4th

ISSUE:

Do you think a helpline would be beneficial to Washington College students?

The Helpline will solve problems

udents an opportunity to talk someone comfortably and onfidentially. Talking about a mblem is the first step in solv-

ng a problem. A Helpline will offer a good stener who is understanding nd will help students with heir problems. This listener, ho will be trained in problemlying devices, can help stunts resolve their problems on

Problems may arise that make one feel uncomfortle in discussing them with

A Helpline will definitely standing, refection, or judge- their problems. In understand- dents will be able to face their Helpline, it will benefit the beneficial to the students of ment. In these cases, talking to washington College. It will give an anonymous person can be an anonymous person can be beneficial.

> To solve a problem, one must first talk about it. The Campus Helpline will give students an opportunity their concerns and problems, and will patiently help them to understand exactly what the problem

Once the student has a clearer understanding of his/ her problem, he/she can look at it more objectively, and begin to uncover a solution to it. The Helpline "listener" can then help the students gends for fear of misunder- understand how they feel about actions and in this way stu-

ing how they feel about a problem, students gain a more complete perspective on the problem. Communicating with one's peers can lead to a better comprehension of problems and conflicts. Comprehension leads

Problem solving devices such as offering all options available to solving the prob lem and the possible effects of each action, allows students to rationally solve their problems on their own. This also prepares the students for any possible repercussions of their sponsibly. The idea is not to resolve students problems, it is to aid them in finding a resolution themselves.

Denise O' Connell

Peer counseling is an idea rooted in American society today. Even if the Helpline doesn't seek to change each students life, perhaps it can affect one student or a handful of students. And even if just a few students are aided by the problems confidently and re- mental well being of the rest of the campus.

Given the opportunity to air one's problems openly and with no threat of judgement, with reassurance of confidentiality, students may or may not avail themselves of it. However, the service will be there, it will be an alternative for distressed persons to consider. It will be another outlet for students to turn to in order to solve their problems. And if only one person is helped, isn't a Helpline

Denise O'Connell is a junior majoring in art.

J. Hardy Buchman Junior A suicidal persons desper-

ly needs someone to talk tothat someone must be a fessional- and trained in efield. If student volunteers wer the phones, the results sold be disatrous— and disartening

Heath Cooley Freshman Waynesboro, Virginia Wouldn't it be much more effective to have a hotline for pyromaniacs; we have RA's to force suicidal tendencies upon.

Debbie Johnson Queenstown, Maryland If the hotline can help one person, then its presence is

Jeff Vail Sophomore State College, Pennsylva-

but I do know that a fresh yam and a mugful of Mott's apple sauce can do wonders for your disposition

David Elliot Purcel Freshman Washington, D.C.

I highly doubt anyone I'm not sure about that, suicidal would pick up the phone and call these guys, but if it is there then it will give the façade that this group is helping people when it actually isn't. Therefore, both the faculty and students are content

The helpline will be help-less

accontial ashington College applied for dreceived funding from the GA. The Helpline is to be a n of crises prevention center re students phone in when ty feel the need to do so. Once bugh to the Helpline the ent can receive assistance their particular problem. Student crises, however thous they may or may not be, not properly addressed by a up of students at the other of a phone line. To begin th, most of the students inred with this program, dete their exhortations to the ltrary, do not even begin to the experience and qualitions which would enable to deal with situations y hope to confront. Suicide, substance abuse and leral depression are not just gs which you organize a

Recently the "Helpline" of money to deal with. To approach ation, ultimately making the net". These problems should be issues such as these requires a sort of formal training and education that goes far beyond what any of the present Helpline participants have

Advocates of the Helpline will argue that the allocation of

Perry Finney

funding to the Helpline cannot really hurt anything. I find this argument most unconvincing. This is because the logic behind this attitude is flawed. They argue that it can't hurt to try, can it? This is a terribly simplistic view which, if adopted can lead to a highly undesirable outcomes. I believe that it would probably be very easy for the people at Helpline to exacsituation worse. This is because most of these people at this Helpline have no real idea of troubled individual.

The professional shortcomings of this Helpline are bad enough. However, let's suppose, for the sake of argument that a Helpline is needed on this campus. Once we have identified the need for a Helpline then I think it is pretty safe to say that this is not of Helpline we want. I mean let's be realistic. Running a phone service from 5:00 PM to midnight with a bunch of untrained undergrads is hardly the way to approach the problem. Obviously an implementation problem also exists here.

If crises problems do exist on campus then they represent failure of the college noted and dealt with long before a person considers calling up a Helpline. The problems how to deal with a seriously should be addressed by the existing help structure at WC. The Resident Assistants, the Peer Advisors, the Faculty Advisors, the Student Affairs Office, the school psychologists, the teachers and most of all an individual's peers should be the people responsible for identifying and helping out troubled persons. Establishing a helpline does nothing for the current structure of the "safety net" at

> I find it quite disturbing that a College of this size, and particularly one such as ours which prides it self on a sense of community, would find it necessary to establish a Helpline. It seems to me that all the people Perry Finney is the President of involved with the Helpline much more effective, if they channeled the energies into something else. Such as a group talk session or an information campaigning about what is already available to troubled people at WC. There are all sorts ways to show you care about other people who need help. Unfortunately Helpline is not the way.

In writing this article, I risk being cast into the light as an uncaring, unsympathetic individual. I do not wish to been seen as this. In fact, I very much respect the concern of the individuals are involved with Helpline. However, I also sincerely believe that they do not even begin to understand the scope and magnitude of the issues that they have touched the SGA, and a senior majoring and petition the SGA for erbate an existing crisis situ- community's present "safety would be much more useful, in philosophy and economics.

In the World

mated cost for the first phase of Reagan's space based anti-missile system to $69 billion from $115 billion. A Defense Department review panel approved a restructuring of the first phase. The reduction follows a compromise reached by congressional leaders and the Pentagon last fall.

The Senate voted unanimously to exempt the interest on U.S. Sav ings bonds bought to finance postsecondary schooling from federal tax

The House joined the Senate in approving legislation to combat medical waste dumping. The bill requires the EPA to set up a system to track infectious or dangerous trash from hospitals , labs and clinics to disposal sites. Congress acted after publicity about used up syringes and blood vials washing up on heaches last summer

The EPA failed to act against Safe Drinking Water Act violations by local systems, according to the National Wildlife Federation. The group based its charges on a study of EPA computer printouts for fiscal 1987 that showed 101,588 violations. While the 1974 law requires that each violation be reported to custom ers, only 5,867 notices were issued

Crime levels increased 1.8% last year, ending a five-year decline that the White House attributed partly to vigorous law enforcement and tougher treatment of criminals. The ago in a scandal over alleged illegal eral people were wounded. Several treatment and the number of political contributions by the Flick ingovernment buildings have been depersonal and household crime rose 613,000 to more than 34.7 million

Seven men wearing camouflage clothing were arrested on charges that they shot up a Phi Beta Sigma fraternity party and stole stereo gear at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. No one was hurt by the automatic weapon fire, but one non-student was cut with a knife, police said.

TISSR

Communist Party leaders resigned from the Politburo that ruled Yugoslavia Vojvodie province after 100,000 protesters demanded they quit. The demonstrators support Serbian demands for greater control of the autonomous province. The resignations may prompt leadership changes in the national party and the six republics.

Latvians called for Democratic changes in the Baltic republic. About 1,000 delegates to a two-day founding congress of the Latvian Popular Front adopted a charter demanding greater autonomy from Moscow, and elected a 100 member ruling council. The political group appeared to be modeled after similar movement in Estonia

WEST GERMANY

The Free Democrats named Otto Lambsdorff party chairman over the weekend. Lambsdorff, convicted last year of tax evasion, resigned as Bonn's Justice Department said the number of political contributions by the Flick industrial group.

PERSIAN GULF Diplomats in the Persian Gulfsaid hopes of a breakthrough in Iran-Iraq peace talks have been dashed Baghdad's apparent failure to drop demands for a speedy clearing of war debris from the disputed Shatt al Arab waterway. On Saturday, Iran agreed in principle to U.N.-backed proposals calling for discussing the issue at a later date. The discussions occurred and Iran agreed to dredge the waterway as part of a four point proposal that also included withdrawal of forces to international borders a halt to Iranian searches of Iraqi ships in the Persian Gulf, and the exchange of prisoners of

SRI LANKA

Thousands of Sri Lankans staged News Agency demonstrations to demand that Indian eacekeeping troops leave the island nation. Police in three towns used tear gas and batons to disperse the protesters. New Delhi sent about 52,000 soldiers to Sri Lanka's northern and eastern provinces last year to help enforce a pact aimed at ending an ethnic conflict

ALGERIA

Algeria proclaimed a state of has raised scientific concern in recent emergency as police fought demonstrators in Algiers protesting price rises under an economic reconstructing plan. The army opened fire to disperse stoneeconomics minister about four years, throwing youths, and apparently sev-

stroyed by fire during the three days of protes

GREAT BRITAIN

British and U.S. scientists de veloped a new method to detect Down's syndrome, the major cause of severretardation in the industrialized world. They say the technique could detect more than 60% of the pregnan cies affected by the birth defect, about twice the proportion discovered by current methods

ISRAEL.

Israeli Army units killed three Palestinians and hunted agitators in 30 Palestinian villages as the occupied territories closed in general strike; troops wounded 22. The PLO leaders have approved plans to de clare an independent state in the ter ritories, according to the Middle East VATICAN

Pope John Paul II denounces anti-Semitism and racism, and launched an attack on "weakening" morality in Europe, saying the Ro man Catholic Church's teachings had been rejected in the name of liberty. ANARCTICA

The Anarctic" ozone hole", which years, seems to have moderated slightly according to observations made by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration compiled by Jaquie Collins

Chilean plebiscite shows suprising unity

litical community had its attention shifted from the lackluster political campaign in the United States to the Presidential plebiscite in Chile. What was at stake was simply the political future of a country which had a surprisingly strong democratic tradition that ended in 1973. General Augusto Pinochet, a member of the four-man military junta that seized power from Salvador Allende, has been running the country as a dictatorship since the 1973 coun What transpired last week may not lead to a return to democracy, but it clearly was an important step in the right direction.

First of all, it should be noted what exactly the plebiscite was and what it decided. The plebiscite asked whether Pinochet should stay in power or if there should be elections to find the next President of Chile. If the majority of the voters thought that Chile was doing fine under Pinochet and voted that way, then Pinochet would have been allowed to continue in office for another eight years. On the other hand, a vote against Pinochet would create a situation in which elections would have to take place before the end of 1989

The voters against Pinochet won by collecting nearly 60% of the vote. The voter turnout was quite large, in fact some polling places stayed open for up to three hours to accommodate the long lines that had gathered to vote. It voters voted. (As a point of comparison. most analysts would call a 50% turnout for the US election a significant sur-

But what does this apparent defeat mean? Probably not much in the long run. One thing that accounted for the 60% vote was surprising unity from all 16 of the large opposition parties. These parties represented almost every ideology under the sun, from the far left to the far right. The leaders of these opposition parties were able to unite behind one issue: getting General Pinochet out of power. It is safe to assume that they will not be able to agree on one candidate in order to beat Pinochet in the 1989 election. In fact, it is probably just as safe to assume that one of the reasons that Pinochet allowed this plebiscite to take place free from any significant military intervention is that he believed that these parties would not be able to unite

Arian D. Ravanbaksh

What should also be noted is that Pinochet was able to attract 40% of the vote, clearly the single candidate that had the most support on plebiscite day. Also, since the Chilean constitution requires only a plurality of votes to win

these 40% would allow Pinochet to continue in his role as President of Chile. After the success of the opposition with its own "Just Say No!" campaign in the plebiscite, it is highly unlikely that this cooperation will continue until the election in 1989. Simply put, the leftists will not like the candidate that the rightwing would offer. This leads to the destruction of the coalition that the opposition leaders were able to construct for the plebiscite.

This is a significant step towards a return to democracy in Chile. However, since the results of the plebiscite, Pinochet has become more restrictive in allowing the opposition to campaign. Recently, journalists covering opposition rallies have come under attack from members of the various Chilean police organizations. Pinochet seemed to be Chile, but around the world as well the plebiscite; again he did not feelth the opposition parties would unify. No that Pinochet is having to face a serie challenge to his continuance in offic he is beginning to assert some milita

Here is a good example. On ele tion day, General Pinochet was wear a button-downed Oxford shirt and to obviously trying to disassociate hims from his military role. After the trom his military role. After the the tion, Pinochet went on television in Chi and was wearing his official milita uniform, assuring the world that Pin chet still has the power in Chile. If opposition is allowed to campaign free and is able to maintain a significa portion of its coalition, then there is might be a return to democracy in Chi That would be welcomed not only earn big commissions & free trips by selling Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun, Mexico, and Ski Trips to Vermont & Colorado. For more information, call toll free

CAMPUS REPS NEEDED

1 800 231 0113

Fires alarm dorm residents

tinued from page 1

When Security arrived criticized the two girls for ing the evidence. Pictures taken of the melted trash elas well as the surroundrea, while firefighters used to blow leftover smoke out he hallways. By 2:10, the Anne dormitories were

Rachael Rice were in their on the second floor of en Anne talking about the and periodically checking hall for intruders whenever heard a door creak. Bucci led plastic burning again Rice sought the origin of

When Rice saw the smoke ingout of the stairwell, from shbarrel which was on fire he second floor, she pulled slarm and ran down the making sure residents got Meanwhile, Bucci used the h can from their laundry n to put out the flames

Realizing how many sthere were, she ran back room and grabbed a coat h she wrapped around her and then returned to finish putting out the fire. At the dential. same time the can was being refilled with water she atcongesting the area. The window would not stay up, so after broomstick to prop the window unts from Caroline and open. While she poured more water on the flames, a Security guard watched her, and when According to Bucci, twenty she had succeeded in putting the arson, that apparently she utes later she and her room- out the fire he told Bucci to go outside with the other girls. Fusty McCann, the house keeper of Queen Anne's Dormitory remembers "I found these little pieces of paper... folded second floor Queen Anne, they and burned at the end. At first are the ones who are suspected matches...almost fifty of them I main anonymous said, "We picked up." She found these have a very tight knit hall, and before the fires occurred.

Presently, the fires are under investigation by Dick is totally false, for we know each Powell, the Fire Marshall. other well and we are all very Although he was unable to give close friends." any information about the investigation, he said, "It is un- all that they can. It's important der investigation by the Fire to catch who it is extremely Marshall's office with the assistance of Washington College It's not just a prank, it's a dan-Security. Anyone who has any gerous game...I'm just worried information should contact Security." He added that any information will be kept confi-

"The Fire Marshall is very concerned, as we all are," says tempted to raise the window to McIntire. "One trash can fire let out the smoke, which was could be carelessness... four is deliberate. I suspect if they do uncover the person who is redumping more water on the fire she tried again and used a Marshall] will decide what jurisdiction will handle it."

Chip Schaller, RA of third floor Caroline, says that a fresh man girl has been accused of was always "in the wrong place at the wrong time. It's a lot of circumstantial evidence, but it all seems to point to her

According to the girls on though they were One girl who preferred to re I think their conclusion that it must be someone from this hall

> "I think security's doing quickly before anyone gets hurt. what's going to happen next. Now all the trashcans are gone, so who knows what will be next,"

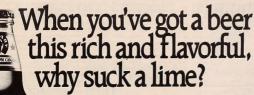

Fires intentionally set in trashcans like this have raised the ire and fears of residents in Queen Anne and Caroline. The fires are currently under investigation by the Fire Marshall's office in conjunction with Washington College Security.

said Wendy Kloiber, the RA of "someone be there to take first floor Queen Anne's.

Schaller stresses the im-names...to know the people in the building who don't live there, so if there is a fire they portance of keeping the doors can say these are the people in locked, and suggests that the building at this time.

Let's face it, amigos, any beer that needs a slice of lime to give it flavor can't be much of a beer. Discover Calgary Amber Lager ... Its rich, imported taste is hearty and robust. Try it the next time you order beer, and hold the lime Calgary Amber Lager, Join the stampede.

| AT-S | hirt off | er that's | not for | sucker |
|------|----------|-----------|---------|--------|
|------|----------|-----------|---------|--------|

| Quant               | ) Size  |              | rnce                       | 104            |
|---------------------|---|--------------|----------------------------|----------------|
|                     | ML  | XL           | $8,00 na.                 |                |
| All Pen            | residents add 6% sale                         | stax         | Tax                       |                |
| All pric1989. V | s effective through Januard where prohibited. | sary 31.     | TOTAL                      |                |
| Mail to             | Gold Medal Spo1011 Cedar Aver             | rtswear, Cro | Calgary T-Sydon, PA 19 | hirt O1020 |

| Mail to: Gold Medal Sportswear, Calgary T-Shirt O       |
|---|
| 1011 Cedar Avenue, Croydon, PA 19020                    |
| Imported by Century Importers Inc., Baltimore, Maryland |

| Address . | - '   |               |       |              | _                  |  |
|-----------|-------|---------------|-------|--------------|--------------------|--|
| City      |       |               | Sunc_ | Zip          | Phone              |  |
| Payment   | Check | ☐ Money Order | □VISA | ☐ MasterCard | ☐ American Express |  |
| Card #    |       |               |       |              | Eq                 |  |

Will the real George Bush please stand up

I am a Democrat who

the United States. I won't concede the election entirely, since the polls says. "I am an environmentalhave jumped wildly over the ist," he says. And he promises a last several months, But I know that things are near hopeless when Michael Dukakis narrows precious states that control 272 electoral votes - just two more than are needed to win the election. Dukakis' only hope is to win a squeaker, while Bush may win a landslide. Who is George Bush?

The George Bush who is

Bush's campaign has thinks that George Bush is shown several of his new faces, going to be the 41st President of depending on who is listening to him at the time. "I want to be the education President," he "kindler, gentler nation."

This all seems nice. But does any of it show who the real his 50-state campaign to 18 George Bush is? And is any of it

George Bush decided to delay regulations to reduce the amount of lead in gasoline when he chaired the President's Task Force on Regulatory Relief. But before we crown Lead is a leading cause of retar-George Bush President, I just dation in children. This is not vant one question answered: the decision of an environmen-

According to Time and running in 1988 is not the same U.S. News & World Report, George Bush who ran against other George "the environmen-Ronald Reagan in 1980, or who talist" Bush task-forces have has served as Vice President decided to suspend regulations for the last eight years. This that would prevent hazardous George Bush is more passion- chemicals from being dumped ate, more in command. And he into public sewer systems, and

tion that would require drug companies to warn parents that giving aspirin to children with the flu can cause the deadly disease Rye's Syndrome.

These things have to make wonder whether George Bush has any substance, or if his eight years under Reagan have taught him only to say one thing to please the people, and to do another. Another common Bush theme is to attack the stances of Dukakis as liberal and dangerous and out of the American mainstream. He has criticized Dukakis' veto of a bill to make the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance mandatory in Massachusett's schools, although the Supreme Court ruled that it was unconstitutional for schools to require students to say the pledge in the 1943 in West Virginia State Board of Education v. Barnette Does George Bush hold symbolic patriotism above the

Bush has also attacked the Dukakis stand on the death penalty and Massachusett's prison-furlough program. Yet in 1981 George Bush helped to found a halfway house that released criminals from Texas prisons. One criminal raped and killed a minister's wife while a resident of the house. Again, we have to wonder which George Bush will enter the White House next January. I remember George Bush whining that Ronald Reagan was too old to be President back in 1980, and that Reagan's economic plan was comparable to "voodoo economics." Today, Bush praises Reagan's success, and pledges to continue Reagan's course

In fairness, Dukakis waffles, also, though not as adeptly as Bush. In fact, one of the key reasons that Dukakis is trailing is because he has allowed Bush to define him while Michael Dukakis has thought.

While Bush

Dukakis as a "Taxach Liberal," we do not by whether Bush is the mode of 1980 or the Reagan co vative of 1988. Is Bush the American mainstream cause he is too far to then Moderates who su Bush are convinced that new-found conservatism front to win the support right; conservatives are vinced that Bush has been verted. But no one knows the real George Bush is. That is a sad states about American electorals tics, that candidates can tively run for office for two or more, and be more of all on election night than they when they started.

In all probabilty, Ge Bush will take the oath of President on January 20. Americans will not know he is. And that is a s

Womens' League unites town and college with even Panhellenic teas and other of chairs and needle point kits the league is planning a tri

by Jennifer Griffin

The Womens' League at Washington College, founded in May of 1951, serves to unite the town with the college com-

The organization's first formal meeting was held commencement weekend in 1951 From that time to the present the league has expanded and changed

In the early years of its formation, the league was comprised mainly women from Chestertown and other Maryland women

Over the years more women from other states have become interested in the organi-

The object of the league is to further the goals of the college through scholarships, donations to the College, sponsored lectures, and even volunteers to address invitations.

"One of the primary projects of the league is to donate an annual sum to the Miller Library," states founder, Mrs. Daniel Gibson Scholarships are another major endeavor of the league. Through the years the organization has also donated a portrait of George Washington, washing machines to dorms, a rug for the Norman James functions, and birthday cakes for students. Also the Womens' League sponsors exhibits and lectures at the College as well as trips to art exhibits and performances elsewhere women interested in the college such as professors, professor's wives, mothers of Washington College students, as well as local women from Chestertown

The league meets four times a year to discuss projects and fundraisers. Some of the organization's fundraisers include fashion shows, talent Theatre, china and silver for shows, bridge parties, the sale with the Washington College seal, and the sale of birthday

Mrs. Libby Cater, the college's current First Lady, hopes to revive the sale of The group encourages all Washington College stationary as another fundraiser

The Womens' League met once this year on Monday, September 26, 1988. There will be three more meetings this year to plan an annual fundraising event.

At least one meeting will be held on a weekend or eve ning instead of the traditional luncheon to encourage working

members to Washington. to see the Gaugin exhibit

The thirty year organization's goals can summed up in President) Booth Davis' statement in letter to new members. aim to further the goals of College-whether in sup ing deserving students thr scholarships, contributit the excellence of the libra pitching in to address in tions when a personal too needed."

To find out more about Womens' League contact women to be more active. Also Booth Davis at 778-3406

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

Friday, 28th....Dee & the Upsetters for the Halloween Party!

Friday, October 21

Disc-Jockey - Jeff Reed

Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers

Tuesday Wednesday 3 shots for $1 Imports the price of 1

Thurday Schnapps

Friday 4:30--6:30 Free Hor D'oeuvres

515 Washington Street 778-1984

GEORGY GIRL

BODY FITNESS CENTER

TANNING

TONING

Two horizontal tanning beds

SPECIAL FOR STUDENTS $6.00 for a 30 minute session

778-4144

819 HIGH STREET

CHESTERTOWN,

Dead air, long hours no threat to WC deejay

by Karyn Iacangelo

Kathy McGuigan, a second semester senior majoring in International Studies at Washington College is a parttime disc jockey at WCTR 1530

"I really have fun with it," she says, "it has taught me a lot." McGuigan got the job while she was living in Chestertown last summer. While here, she called the station and set up an interview and was hired.

"Kathy was interested and willing to learn, and she seemed to have talent and the ability to learn quickly," says station owner Dave Taylor.

The job entailed making sales calls and doing a Sunday show from 12-7 PM as well as relations at the station.

trained by the station manager John Link before she could go away prizes to her listeners, on the air. He was able to train her in three days.

"She came in here cold," says Taylor, "but she mastered everything. Kathy is able to run the shows without getting flustered if something goes

McGuigan learned how to operate their satellite, do local two steps ahead of yourself," be mindful of what people want microelectronics firm for two copy for commercials. learning every time I'm there," she says. Her Sunday show consists of NFL football, a classical hour, and playing music that she chooses

On one occasion a little old lady called her at the station and told McKinley how much she liked her show and the music she played. "It means a lot to me to know that people enjoy what I am playing," says McGuigan.

She has now been working at the station for four

"I try to run a very tight show...there is always something to do." She arrives at the station fifteen minutes before working in development and she is scheduled to go on the "It keeps me on my McGuigan had to be toes,"states McGuigan.

McGuigan enjoys giving and would like the college audience to be broader. "A radio show can never stop," says McGuigan. "Your worst enemy is dead air." The job is a good beginning for anyone who wants a career in broadcasting, she adds.

"You're always thinking a good format, and you have to is always something going on." events and in the summer the blend we're looking for. months updates on Ocean City says McGuigan, "because there to hear," she says. During her show, McGuigan show, says Taylor, who decides receives updates on national the station's format. She keeps

"Kathy runs a good music

Located on Flatland Road traffic. The station also has a in Chestertown, the station enior Kathy McGuigan runs her weekend show at WCTR, 1530 AM in Chestertwon. McGuigan was hired as a deejay last summer.

takes readings every two hours, and works a holder for eight track tapes that is used for commercials. The station's format is light adult contemporary. "It's day," reflects McGuigan transmitter from which she runs from sunrise to sunset daily from 7:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M. In the winter, however, the station runs from 7:15 A.M. to 6:30 P.M., "Sometimes I am really frazzled by the end of the the future, and to become an

McGuigan worked for a in radio

summers before going into the radio business. She plans to take the Foreign Service Exam in December and if that goes well, to work for the State Department and perhaps be a news anchorperson

If that doesn't work out McGuigan hopes to work at an FM station in Washington, D.C. and then move on to a Washington-based television station.

McGuigan enjoys all the people that she works with especially the station manager who trained her from the start.

Juggling her schoolwork and the weekend shows keeps her busy, but does not prevent her from taking pleasure in the experience she has gained as a disc jockey. Says McGuigan , "If you are going to be happy in a job, you have to enjoy it.

"Kathy has a good voice on the air and knows how to relate to people," says Taylor. 'In a one on one situation, it's important to make people feel comfortable.

"It's taught me a lot," continues McGuigan. She hopes to continue in radio in anchorwoman either on TV or

Kent Association of Riding Therapy

NEEDS VOLUNTEERS

Wednesdays & Thursdays 9:30-11:30

Side Walkers & Horse Leaders

Volunteer for 3 Sessions, receive a FREE RIDING LESSON at Seven Hills Farm

For more information call 778-3335

The Beauty Lounge

SUNGLITZ

Students!! Keep your summer Highlights this fall with this new method of lightening! Students only $25 with Sharl or Janie

SUNBED SPECIALS 10 Visits: $40 2 months unlimited visits:$75

Midtown Mall

Chestertown

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists' Materials

> P.O. Box 402 TII High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5202

SEVEN HILLS FARM

10 minutes from Washington College Coopers Lane . Worton, Md. . 778-0201

Instruction in Combined Training Show Jumping . Dressage

Beginners thru Advanced

Horses Boarded. Trained. For Sale. Leased Track Shop

New Indoor Area Under Construction

Field hockey gains high ranking

by Kathy Brewster The NCAA has acknowledged the success of the Washington College field hockey team by ranking them seventh in the South Region

This is the best ranking WC hockey has ever received in Washington College's defeat over Widener University came early in the second half with two goals netted by offensive player Carole Reece. Washington's offense outplayed Widener's defense by obtaining twenty-six shots in the game to their eight.

tered in the first half of the game caused WC to begin with only ten slots filled on the field, two of those players had never been in a starting role and another player was assigned a new position

With an unstable beginning some players plied above their potential. Washington lacked cohesiveness and both teams failed to score in the first

Second half play brought the team and individual skill together and gave Washington the lead on two shots by Carole

Reece with a feed by Beth Matthews.

Coach Guinan said that the key to their success has heen "their ability to pull things together in a team fashion." She also commented on their rank ing, "I'm very proud of what they accomplished, and we're all happy to be ranked seventh." Washington's games last week prior to Fall break amounted to two wins and one oss, WC encountered Randolph Macon on October seventh, and came out with a 8-0 victory Reece, Matthews, Coulter, and Reck each netted two goals a piece. The game was played with team effort, support and coverage and there was an impressive amount of skill demonstrated

Coach Guinan believes that the game against Roanoke was Washington's best game of the season. Reck and Schram displayed good teamwork in moving the ball downfield. They vere able to elude Randolph Macon defenders consistently, sending the ball to goal with Reece. For the second goal, Matthews sent the ball to Tiehel who rippled the net. Washington went on to win 2-1

The 2-0 loss on October 11th to third - ranked John's Hopkins, did not go without fight. WC totally dominated the game with 23 shots to Hopkins three, unfortunately two Hopkin's shots slipped in

The team is very excited and pleased with their ranking as seventh in NCAA Southern region. The fact that their skill and level of play has been recognized outside of Washington College is an accomplishment that has boosted the team's confidence for the remainder of the season.

Orioles 1989: is there any hope?

The year 1988 will remain in the memory of Oriole fans for many years to come. The season began with a disastrous 0-21 start and ended with the team losing 16 of the last 19 games. The middle part of the season was not much better, and the Orioles finished the year with a 54-107 record. Wade Boggs' batting average was higher than their winning percentage. This was a very bad team, and changes must be made to prevent a similar disaster in 1989.

Brett Lankford

Front office mistakes have played a key role in the downfall of the team. They have spent the past four offseasons looking for quick fixes to their problems. A great deal of time and money has been spent obtaining players like Fred Lynn, Don Aase, Lee Lacy and Rick Burleson. While some of these players made significant contributions to the ballclub, the Orioles farm system was being destroyed. Once one of the prides of the team, the minor league teams hit an all-time low in late 1986. This coincided with the downfall of the ballclub. Roland Hemond was named as the new General Manager after the 1987 season Hemond's name was always synonymous with trades for bigname players. Unfortunately, Hemond seemed to follow in the footsteps of Hank Peters at the beginning of the season. He traded two good minor-league prospects to the New York Mets for Doug Sisk, then sent Ken Dixon to the Seattle Mariners in exchange for Mike Morgan. His "big deal" of the offseason involved the trade of Mike Young to the Phillies. They received Jeff Stone, Keith Hughes and Rick Schu in return. None of these moves proved to be the least bit profitable for the team. The Orioles' place in the basement of the AL East was solidified when Hemond

He spent the second half of the season trading away many bigname Orioles for future prospects. Familiar names like Lynn, Boddicker and Dwyer were dealt away, starting the Baltimore youth movement. By the end of the season, the Orioles were dominated by young players with a great deal of talent but lacking in experience

It now appears that the Orioles are definitely headed in the right direction. The Pittsburgh Pirates made a similar decision with their ballclub in the mid-eighties. After years of mediocrity, they are now moving steadily up their division. If the Orioles stick with this plan for the next couple of years, they should wind up in a situation similar to the Pirates.

The Orioles do need veter ans to lead the young players through the difficult years. Eddie Murray has taken a great deal of unnecessary heat from the fans and media over the past couple of seasons. Still, he continues his steady play and now appears to be much happier in Baltimore. Cal Ripken Jr. should be a cornerstone on the Oriole foundation for years to come. Dave Schmidt was almost traded late in the season, and that would have been a mistake. He has been their most consistent pitcher over the past two years, and he could help the new pitchers considerably Before the Orioles can begin the overhaul, they must rid themselves of players that can no longer help the team. This is truly a lengthy list, with many players unable to produce. The housecleaning has already started with the release of Doug Sisk and Don Aase Sisk was one of the most ineffective pitchers in Oriole history, and Aase never fully returned to 1986 form after rota tor cuff surgery. Players such as Jeff Stone, Ken Gerhart, Rick Schu, Rene Gonzales and Mark Williamson should find the waiver line as soon as possible. This will make room for the promising young players.

These new players should fit into many of the hurting

Milacki showed a great deal of promise at the end of the year, while Pete Harnisch is generally considered to be the most talented of the starting pitchers. Curt Schilling pitched for the team late in the year, but he probably needs one more year in the minors. Gregg Olson, the Orioles #1 draft pick, could make immediate contributions out of the bullpen. A starting rotation of Schmidt, Ozzie Peraza, Jose Bautiste, Harnisch and Milacki would be a sign of things to come in Baltimore. Other positions could also be saved by fresh talent. Craig Worthington could add stability at third for the first time since the Brooks Robinson years. Brady Anderson and Steve Finley are two outstanding outfield prospects, even though Anderson struggled in an Oriole uniform. Pete Stanicek has shown ability at both second base and in the outfield. Keith Hughes may be able to contribute in the outfield in a year or two. The Orioles de need some more power, preferably in the form of a right handed outfielder. This may be the only free agent signing necessary in the building of the Raltimore nucleus This process will not show immediate dividends, and the Orioles should not be a con tender in 1989. Frank Robinson has done an excellent job with his handling of players, and Roland Hemond has moved in the right direction with the youth movement. If these players continue to improve and realize their talents, the Baltimore Orioles could return to dominance in a few short years. Brett Lankford is a sophmore, and any baseball team would be prov to have him in their front office

Make $6.00 an hour

Chestertown Police Station Needs School Cross Walking Guard

5 days a week Monday - Friday, Mornings & Afternoons

Come Down to the Station for Application 778-1800

Chestertown Sacred Heart

St.John's

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor

Office: Kent Street Side Entrance Rectory: 508 High St. Chestertown, MD. 21620 (301) 778-3160 of Sacred Heart Church Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pm

Religious Education Coordinator: Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F. Phone: 1-801-820-7437

MASS SCHEDULE

SACRED HEART Daily Mass 8:30am Rosary Recited Daily 8:15am Sat. Evening Mass 7:00pm 8:30am Sunday Mass

ST.JOHN'S Sunday Mass 10:00am CCD-Sunday 9 to 9:45am Confessions are heard before Sunday Mass

CCD-Sunday 9:30 to 10:30am Confessions are heard 6:15. Saturday Evening . . . . . . . . . . . . CHESTERTOWN, MD.

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD 778-1214

Rt. 213 & 291

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21020

301-778-358

Austin Carpet 778-4656 Rt .213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Soccer turns season around

by Don Steele disappointing season, but hings have changed.

Page 9

The team had won three traight games before Tuesday's ol loss to Widener and had layed some of the best soccer Washington College has seen a long time. The turnaround started with a 4-0 win over Albright. fike Bishop, Pete Van Buren, Genn Warner and Harry Kilroy all had goals for Washing-And goalie Kevin Kelly was given credit for the clean

When Ursinus came to town they were riding a win treak and did not expect to Washington came through with a Haverford player beat the

Not long ago the Wash- netted the score off a throw in agton College men's soccer from a Geoff Nelson. The dewas 2-6 and heading for a fense played a strong game against the swarming Ursinus offense and goalie Steve Leary earned the shutout for Wash-

Last Saturday against Haverford Washington's 14 year winless streak against them ended as the team played their best game of the season. The game was sent into overtime as Bishop answered two Haverford goals with an equal number of his own. Once into overtime, Kenny Hutchins blasted home the winner to wrap up the win. In this game Washington had everything going for them. even the crossbar. With four hal with the 'Sho'men omen'. seconds remaining in overtime,

Washington goalie, but not the post as the attempt was spoiled. John Seal, Glenn Warner and Scott Overend each had very strong performances for the Sho'men effort. The Haverford win had and that proved to be all they put the Sho'men in position for needed as the final score read a strong season finish.

On Tuesday the Sho'men faced Widener at home.

slow, and when the team got ing his season total to seven going it was too late. Widener had already scored two goals,

Washington score came from Bishop, as he extended his scor-Washington started off ing streak to four games, bring-goals. The team heads into it's final few weeks of the season and hopes to continue their

WC boasts a first in netter history

2-1 in their favor. The sole winning ways

Scott Read became the qualified to travel, all-expenses ships last spring first tennis player from a Divipaid to compete in the National sion lll college to capture a regional Rolex title for singles competition when he won the Eastern Small College Championships, sponsored by Rolex, at Swarthmore College in Penn-

Small College Championships being held February 4, at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis.

Read was named Division

Ill Rookie of the Year at the National Collegiate Athletic With the victory Read Association national champion-Lacrosse shows promise

the U. S. Naval Academy.

Washington jumped out to the that allowed them to win the game 5-6. In their last game of the day W.C. and Duke went failed to score, ending the game

(H) 11am

in a 9-9 tie

"This just proves the Rookie of the Year Committee was absolutely correct in selecting Scott," says Wyman. For the Regional title,

Read who was seeded sixth, had to win six matches, but he never even lost a set

In the semi-finals, Read defeated Lance Milener of Bloomsburg University, who had previously beaten second seeded and defending Division eventual tournament winner, Ill national champion Noel Occomy

In the finals Read defeated lead eventually leading 5-2 in Division ll All-American Oliver the third quarter. However the Merrill of Millersville Univermidshipmen staged a come back sity, 6-3, 6-3.

Sports trivia The answer to last week's into overtime where both teams question

In a 1905, Michigan Wolverine defensive lineman Ad-On the day the Naval olph "Germany" Academy was 3-0, Washington dropped three yards off the line 1-1-1, Loyola 1-2, and Duke 0- of scrimmage "To get a better The tournament was view of the offense", and thus played under club rules, with became the first 'linebacker'in the intent that this tournament the history of American foot would help to foster new dis- ball

This week's question Who was the last pitcher to win three games in a World series: The correct answer to this question will win a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. Fill out on a piece of paper, your name and answer Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope (behind the bar) the winner wil announced innext week's ELM

*In the event that more than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing among the correct answers to determine the winner.

Wanted: basketball managers and statisticians for the 1988-89 season. Contact Coach Finnegan

COFFEE HOUSE

Crew passes competition in Connecticut

by Chad Bently

en's varsity four crew trav-

This race is considered to cone of the top three regattas of each of them the East Coast; it included artmouth, and MIT. The crew, consisting of ed by five boats to finish the spring season.

three and a half mile course in The Washington College 19 minutes, 43 seconds

In a head race each crew ed to Middletown, Connecti- competes against the clock, with uton October 9th to row in the crews starting at 10 second had of the Connecticut Re- intervals. Washington College passed five boats, thus putting them at least ten seconds ahead

The crew entered the renews from Harvard, Yale, gatta viewed by the larger programs as a small, eastern shore team. They proved they can reg Terry, Whit Maroney, compete with "the big boys."
ady Walbert, Rudy Weitz and The crew team has every reasswain Mindy Stark, placed son to be optimistic because they th in a field of 27. It was a defeated many of the teams they didrace, as Washington pow- will compete against in the

770-4771

by Joe Van Name On Sunday October 9th the Washington College Men's Lacrosse team set the tone for. hopefully, a successful bid at a Lacrosse championship in the spring of 1989.

W.C. faced off against Loyola, U.S. Naval Academy, and Duke. All three of the opponents are considered to be Division 1 powerhouses thus making victory that much

In the first game against Loyola W.C. came out strong and proved that they were not going to be intimidated. Loyola, fought back but could not overtake W.C. After Winning their first game 6-5 Washington faced

cussions about possible rule Sports Calendar

after tournament

10/22 soccer VS. cross country F & M Quad 10/25 soccer vs. Gallaudet (H) 3:30pm volleyball vs. St.Mary's/Salisbury State

10/26 field hockey vs. Catholic U

(A) 3pm

Quite Simply,

YOUR FIRST VISIT'S FREE. At Slender You*, your first workout and figure analysis are absolutely free. No gimmicks. No obligation. Just give us a try, and then decide whether to make another appointment

Fin Fur Feather Inn 424 Bayside Ave

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

Rock Hall, Md. 639-7454

Specializing in Fresh Seafood!

Friday and Saturday Nights LIVE PIANO BY Mickey Dulin

Philosophical minds celebrate Marx, Brien

by Angela Henneman Beginning at 1:30 P.M. on Saturday, October 23rd, Washington College's Norman James Theatre will serve as host for one of the few great meetings of the philosophical minds. The William James Forum, in continuing its Silver Anniversary Celebration, will welcome the Washington Philosophy Club and the Greater Philadelphia Philosophy consortium to discuss, deliberate and debate "The Importance of Marx Today.

The Washington Philosophy Club, which originated in 1956 has "come to serve as the major regional philosophical association for an area which includes Washington D.C., and the neighboring parts of five states." The club presents professors form George Washington University, Georgetown University, The University of Maryland, and George Mason University. In addition to this contribution of impressive participants, the Greater Philadelorganization founded in 1981, offers participant support that includes members of nine of the major educational institutions in the Philadelphia area. The Greater Philosophical Philosophy Consortium receives tremendous support from the Pennsylvania Humanities Council, the Exxon and Rockefeller Foundations and the Penn Charitable Trust. As a result of this sponsorship, the Humanities Council.

Temple University, Swarthmore College and Mary Baldwin College

Washington College will add its name to the list of schools offering philosophical insights, as Political Science professor Dr. Daniel Premo and Philosophy professors Dr. J. David Newell and Dr. Kevin Brien serve as moderators and commentators during two of the three sessions

Dr. Brien will, in addition to serving as commentator to the session on "The Novelty of Marx's Theory of Praxis", but also celebrating the completion of his book Marx, Reason and the Art of Freedom. Dr. Peter Tapke, Philosophy professor and forum adviser, calls the book a "Labour of love." According to Tapke, the colloquium has been conceived at the college in order to mark the publication of Professor Brien's work. "[The Colloquium] is an appropriate way of taking note of Kevin Brien's book. It is phia Philosophy Consortium, an clear that there is a renewal of interest in the thoughts of Karl

The nature and caliber of such an event happens only once in a great while, (the last such event took place approximately ten years ago) and, as a result the college and the William James Forum is very fortunate to have received such support from not only the WC Lecture Series, but form the Maryland GPPC also offers speakers form council's purpose is to fund projects that will convey a deeper knowledge of the humanities to the public. In attempt to educate various communities in the world of the humanities councils such as this are set up in almost every state They are further supported through funding from a national endowment to the humanities.

The Marx Colloquium at Washington College hopes to provide an experience that will allow for a greater knowledge of a theory, an ideology and a way of life

Divided into three sessions, the symposium will entail two speakers elaborating upon specific issues of Marxism. The first session, from 1:30 to 3 is titled "Alienation in the Ideal Society", with the speaker from Vanderbilt University, the commentator from George Mason and the moderator is Dr. J. David Newell of Washington College. The second session, held from 3 to 4:30 is titled "The Novelty of Marx's Theory of Praxis". The speaker will be from Temple University, the commentator will be Kevin Brien, WC professor and the moderator will be from Swarthmore College and Mary dents to see and hear, in pe George Washington and the President of the Washington ney will preside and panelists partment. include staff members form the

Dr. Peter Tapke has played a vital role in organizing the Colloquiu

Baldwin college, along with the director of the Woodstock Theo-Philosophy Club. The third logical Center at Georgetown, a session, beginning at 7:30, is a Jesuit priest. The panel will be panel discussion on "Liberation moderated by Dr. Daniel Premo, Theology: Promise of Hope or chairman of Washington Unholy Alliance." Perry Fin- College's Political ScienceDe-

Saturday's Colloquium is University of Maryland, open to all students, faculty and members of theChestertown community and isfree of charge. Dr. Tapke stresses that "it is an important opportunity for stu- excellent book.

son, some of the well-know people of philosophy and polit cal science." It will provided experience of some of the gree est philosophers and educate of the era, in addition to sen ing thanks to philosophi among the college staff. I Newell states that, "the colle really appreciates the efforts both Dr. Tapke and Dr. Brien making this event a reality. think it is a fitting tributeta...

Campus Calendar: October 21-26

Friday October 21

The Alpha Chi Sorority will host the first official sororin the Coffeehouse. Performing will be "The Rage", aband comprised of WC students. In conjunction with Alcohol Awareness Week, the function will have limited alcohol.

The Film Series features Swimming to Cambodia. This filmisa"theatrical event" which depicts Spalding Gray's account of what happened during the making of 1984's The Killing their annual Oktoberfest at the O'Neill Literary House. The event features a full dinner and German beer.

Saturday October 22 A variety of great philosophical minds will convene in the Norman James Theatre Literary House. Tea is at 4 269.

at 1:30 to begin the colloquium, with the talk following "The Importance of Marx To-For more information day." ity party of the year Friday night see the article contained in this

> The Lambda's are at it once again with their party at Cecil from 10 to 2. The event hopes to abide by the foundations set by Alcohol Awareness Week

Sunday October 23 The Physical Education Department presents the Lyman Ukranian Dance Ensemble in Tawes Theatre at 3 PM. The event looks to be an The German Club hosts interesting perspective on the art of dance

> Monday October 24 The Monday Series presents T. Michael Kaylor and histalk "Of the Making of Books There is No End." Kaylor has operated the press in the O'Neill

Tuesday October 25 Writer's Theatre will be holding auditions for the staged reading performance of a workin-progress titled Window Seat The meeting will be held at four-thirty in the O'Neill Literary House. All are welcome to Wednesday October 26 The Coffeehouse will be the site for the Dance on Film Series. This week's film is titled, An American in Paris' Viewing begins at 6 PM.

Senior Steve Brody directed and designed the set for his Drama Department senior obligation, The Tooth of Crime . The play written by Sam Shepardopens Wednesday night in Tawes Theatre. Seats are limited and reservations may be obtained at extension

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chesterios

Fall Special -Special on Any Perm, Cut & Style (with Laurie) -Sunglitzing & Style $27.00 (with Jody)

778-0898

ENTERTAINMENT

Lyman ensemble enhances college's dance program

by Stephanie Hess

At first glance, the dance program at Washington College of the Athletic Department, one There is also a Dance Club Rhumba which meets Tuesday evenings ous aspects of dance, Professor

The students serve a sixteenthand dances from the Renais- and dance companies. sance period. This year the dinner will take place on the second and third of December. In addition to the Dance Club, there are two ballroom are being hosted in conjunction with the Coffee-House, and food related to the given dancing seems quite small. As one part styles will be served. The first workshop, taking place Wedwould think that the dance nesday the twenty-sixth of program would get lost among October at nine p.m., will teach acrosse and tennis. However, the Jitterbug and the Waltz. there are two dance classes Upcoming workshops include offered; one in modern dance a November Latin Nite, featurand the other in aerobic dance, ing among other dances, the both offered for audit or credit. Tango, the Cha-cha and the Student performances are for ballet and Thursday eve- not the only campus opportuninings for jazz. Fortunately for ties to view dance. The dance students interested in the vari- program also presents a dance "Dance on Film" movie series Karen Smith, director of the Top Hat, the first movie of this Danceprogram, has foughtlong year's series, was shown two and hard for extra projects that weeks ago to a responsive will enhance this core program. crowd. Scheduled for the fu-Everyyear, students of the ture include the classic An Dance Club join with students American in Paris , featuring from the Music Department to Gene Kelly, on the twenty-sixth put on a Renaissance Christ- at six p.m. in the C-House mas Dinner. It is not only an Baryshnikov: the Dancer and excellant way to combine these the Dance , and Seven Brides two departments, but a way to for Seven Brothers , a colorful elebrate the art forms con- dance musical. This variety of tained within each department. style is intended to give all costumes, who preserve their students, not just dancers, a century meal and perform songs look at professional dancers

An opportunity to see live dancing that one should not miss is coming up this Sunday the twenty-third at three p.m. in Tawes Theatre. The Lyman ancing workshops being Ukranian Dance Ensemble will night this fall. The workshops be performing dances, music ers of the Lyman Ukranian Dance Ensemble will be leaping, spinning and dancing this Sunday in Tawes Theatre. The ensemble is part of the enrichment of the dance program guided by Karen Smith.

and songs of the Ukraine U.S.S.R. The Lyman Ensemble is described as "Forty-two young dances performed, but also be dancers in colorful, authentic folk dance. These dancers re- Sunday at one o'clock, two hours what Smith describes as "a quire great ability and skill to prior to the performance. The means to introduce students to perform daring acrobatic leaps, turns and crouches which are an integral part of the dance of the Ukraine. Tickets are three dollars for students and can be purchased in the Athletic Office in the Cain Gym not only be able to see these folk country. view the excitement of tradi- the ordinary schedule

Interested students will tional folk dances of a paticular

All of these programs able to learn some of them. A serve as a means of enhancing Ukranian Folk Dance Work- the existing dance program at rich Ukranian heritage through shop will be taught also on Washington College by being workshop is free and will be the many forms of dance." All held in the dance studio, lo- students are invited to particicated in the lower portion of pate in the dance program and the gym. Professor Smith feels in the offered classes as a way that the dance company will of making one's academic pro give students the chance to gram a little bit different from

NOTICE TO ALL SENIORS

Any student expecting to complete all the requirements for the Baccalaureate or Masters degree by May 1989 must file an application with the Registrar. If you have not received this form in your college box, kindly stop by the Registrar's office at your earliest convenience. Our oder for diplomas will go out before the end of October, there fore your cooperation will be appreciated

More and New FARSIDE cards and postcards

Hot and New air mail stationery & writing tablets

NEW Cardigan-style sweatshirts

Washington College Bookstore (basement of Hodson Hall) 8:30 - 4:30 Mon through Fri 10:00 - 1:00 Saturday

NEWS

Helpline causes concern

continued from page 1 graduate degree

Finney has not attended the service, nor has any other that there was a need for it. member of the Student Gov ernment in that capacity, despite the fact that they have funded the project. Other Helpline service is greatly needed. "The students are obviously not using the resources that are here. The resources are not working. It's very hard to be personal dinator of the training for the when you only see your Peer program. She stressed that the Advisor once a year ... your RA service is only for short term is busy....and your Professors couseling and referral. have exams to grade .... I never even knew there was a counsel- dergo training to help the calling center my whole first year racted with suicide victims and teers will direct the callers to has himself undergone train- the correct counseling service follows ing to counsel peers, believes the program is a significant one. He sees no danger in having been successful elsewhere and make a few suggestions on where to go to get further help:

Speaking for the administration. Dean McIntire was at first unaware that a Helpline identities of all counselors be either of the open meetings for she expressed her agreement campus so small...someone

"Some students trust their peers more than anyone else. We have to acknowledge members of the SGA are in that...it takes training and ingbecause of (it)....people have apparent support of the sensitivity and I would assume that no one would be on the line unless they could handle the Jackson says that the situation." "Most colleges have peer couselors or a Help Line or both," commented Dr. Bonnie Michaelson-Fisher, a counselor at the Health Center and coor-

The counselors will uners clarify their own problems without giving advice or sug-Jackson, who has inter- gestions. Instead, the volunthat serve long- term needs.

"These programs have AM-11:00 PM students available to listen and don't so much point to problems in the existing programs as they compliment them," said PM-Michaelson-Fisher.

Schanno intends that PM-11:00 PM

was to be set up on campus. kept confidential, though he Upon learning of the service, admits it will be difficult "on a might recognize your voice." When asked how he believed the controversy will affect the service, Schanno replied, "I hope that a person doesn't avoid callto realize they are not dealing with me: they are dealing with trained counselors.

The Helpline will conduct no further open meetings. The training will last four to five weeks. The phone number will be posted in all phone booths and on bathroom doors.

Computing Center

continued from page 1 student assistant hours.

The new hours, which will take effect either Monday or Tuesday of next week, are as

Monday-Thursday 8:30

Friday AM- 9:00 PM

Saturday 6:00 PM Sunday

As part of the Kent County Historical Trust's annual tour of homes Economics Professor Davy McCall opened his house in Chestertown which he is currently renovating. McCall organized a dig to sill 1:00 through the excavated dirt under his home. Artifacts recovered included ceramics, coins, bones, buttons, and leather pieces. Some 1:00 of the highlights were a Revolutionary War-era shoe, an 1819 "Large Cent," and several pieces of "Chinese Export" porcelain.

Mom's Cookie Jar

Did you know salt is related to high blood pressure? Salt contains the mineral sodium, which stays in the body tissues holding water. This results in swelling and may lead to high blood pressure and increased pressure on the heart We need only about 200 mg, of sodium (or 1/10 teaspoon of salt) each day An average American consumes 4,000-8,000 mg. each

To reduce the risk of high blood pressure we should aim at a sodium intake of 2,000 mg. per day Sodium found naturally in foods is sufficient to meet our daily requirements.

Hope you enjoyed the "FOOD SHOW" Wednes day evening. This is oneevent that students seem to look forward to. Thank you for all your comments, good and not so good, regarding the items that were featured. Your input is greatly appreciated

The S.G.A. Food Service Committee will soon be handing out reservation forms for the Student's Thanksgiving Dinner, November 16th. Start getting your groups of four or eight together, now.

I guess that's it for this week. Until next .....MOM

SWIMMING TO CAMBODIA

"A theatrical event" depicting Spalding Gray's account of the making of 1984's

"The Killing Fields."

Friday, October 21 Sunday, October 23 Monday, October 24 at 7:30

In Norman Janes Theatre

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 7

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, October 28, 1988

The Alonzo G. Decker, Jr. Laboratory Center was officially christened at last Saturday's ribbon cutting paremony. Decker is the retired Chairman & Chief Executive Officer of the Black & Decker Corporation. it is "important for students to Currently, Decker is serving on the Board of Visitors and Governors.

College sponsors smokeout

by Tracey Connell

Washington College will hist a "Smoke-Out" seminar om November 14th to the Bonnie Gatton, of Kent Health Association ad Queen Anne Hospital, is ordinating the program in njunction with the W.C.

Associate Director of the Health Service Betty Schauber Westigated the possibility of a inar. She reportedly did so the expressed concerns of dents who wanted help to

According to Schauber, itton was the only individual te could locate in this area tecting such a program. Gathis currently in charge of the al hospital's drive for a hokeless staff within a year." The program at WC will ch participants to modify eir behaviour

The aim is to help stutsunderstand how seriously toking affects bodily health, ality of life, and even work formance. Schauber cited at smokers "miss more time an other workers due to high d pressure [and other dical complications due to tiking]."

To emphasize the seritaness of the problem

1988 Statement on Tobacco Use ucts." When complete bans are on College and University not practical, the ACHA advises Campuses. This bulletin was restricted smoking in a few from the Americal College areas ard." Further, it calls for colleges and universities to "prohibit the advertising, sale, or free sampling of tobbacco prod-

Schauber stated that The bulletin calls smok- "if the College were smoke-free ing a "significant health haz- we'd all be the better for it." She did not comment on any further actions of the College past the "Smoke-Out" Seminar

WC student dies

The Chestertown Police suicide occurred in the early Department press release morninghours on October 22nd stated that "on October 22, 1988 at approximately 11:30 A.M. David Campbell Tysinger was found at his residence on 537 High Street dead from an apparent self-inflicted gunshot wound. The Chestertown Police Department's investigation

The Security Department has learned that the apparent have suggested

Tysinger died from a fatal gunshot wound to the head A rifle was found laying next to Tysinger when the police arrived. At this time no note has been found.

This is the second suicide to occur within the semester. not the third, as recent rumors circulating around campus

Miller Library automates

Computer automation at Miller Library may finally become a reality. According to a proposal made in the fall of 1986, the long range goals of library improvement include automation of nearly the entire system: the card catalog, circulation system (inventory control), reserve circulation, the acquisitions system, and the periodical systems. The project fell into place in the fall of 1987 when the Academic Computing

continued on page 12

Peer group offers student support

by Susan Di Leo

The recent suicide of sophomore David Tysinger has prompted an effort to provide counseling services to students who are having difficulty dealing with the tragedy.

Foremost among these services is a peer support group which will meet at the Alumni House at 7pm every Thursday, beginning on November 3.

Overseeing the group is Dr. Marlene Walters, who is an College's show of support expert on teen suicide. The meetings will strive to help students to manage stress and to improve their coping skills.

Walters says that the support group is needed because work through [the tragedy] together."

She says there are several warning signs when a person is contemplating suicide, but it "doesn't mean that everyone displaying [these signs] is going to commit suicide."

Generally, a person whose normal behavior undergoes a dramatic change may be in appointment. danger. Other characteristics of someone who is considering continued on page 12 taking his own life include a dissatisfaction with life, a decrease in communication, withdrawing, sudden outbursts of anger, and giving away posses-

> A person who becomes involved with drugs and alcohol suddenly may also be exhibiting warning signs.

"the person says something to noon a 3:30 in front of the Elm.

someone about the fact they feel they just don't want to go on anymore

To the person who knows someone who is considering suicide, Walters advises, "Seek help immediately," even if it requires a breach of confidence.

"I'd rather lose a friendship than lose a friend," she said, suggesting faculty members as a possible source of help.

Walters feels that the through campus gatherings and providing transportation to Tysinger's funeral "is a very helpful way for students to work through their feelings."

"I think people do really want to make this tragedy a learning, caring [experience] for other students so that [Tysinger's] death will not go down in vain,"

There are additional serv ices to students who feel the need to talk to a professional. Students have access to three psychologists in the Health Service-Dr. Walter Rohmer, Dr. Bonnie Michaelson-Fisher, and Dr. Bruce Hutchinson-by

The Kent County Hospital runs a 24-hour hotline for emergencies. By calling 778-3300 and asking for someone from PERT (Psychiatric Emergency Response Team), the student can leave his name and phone number. Someone from PERT will respond within approximately five minutes.

There will be a memorial "Usually," Walters said, service for Tysinger this after-

INSIDE:

Is campus security adequate?.....p3 Students abroad.....p6 Women's field hockey.....p8

Album review.....p11

Students should give support face to face

The proposed Helpline, a project in the works since last year, has received a great deal of attention since the Student Government Association funded it at the beginning of the year. Although the project has been singed by the criticism of some student leaders, it appears to be moving forward with its plans.

Many look to the Helpline as a possible aid in pre venting of student suicide, for inherent in its premise is the platitude that students should help one another. While it is true that students should be supportive of each other, a student-manned helpline is not an effective approach to this goal.

The students involved in answering phones for the Helpline are not equipped to handle certain problems that may face them. No matter how many weeks of training they receive, students who work on the Helpline are still students - they are not counselors or psychiatrists. So far the Helpline has not proposed that the phone lines be monitored by a professional; this leaves the students on their own as they deal with the dilemmas of their peers

This places the Helpline volunteer in a precarious position. What if a "phone counselor" finds himself in a situation he simply cannot handle? Perhaps he recognized a caller's voice and although he was able to help the with the stated problem, it stilts social and classroom interaction in the future. Or perhaps the "counselor" is asked a question he cannot answer, or worse he answers incorrectly. Although peer counseling has the potential for great good, it is equally a hazard to both the helper and the helped

The training program that a Helpline worker will undergo is the most beneficial part of the program. Simply being familiar with the danger signs that troubled people emit is a knowledge that will help them function better as a part of a more general student support network. This training should not be limited to Helpline volunteers, if the majority of the student body knew what to be aware of, perhaps more problems can be solved before they end

A helpline could be a positive addition to the options already available for troubled students, however it should not be run by students. An informal student support network comprised of students well educated about the threat of suicide, and how to identify indicating factors, is the student body's best armor against the problem. Telephone counseling should be left to the professionals; the students' duty is to look after his friends and classmates face to face.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                      |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso  |
| News Editor                   | Susan Di Le          |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaur      |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne        |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk   |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson        |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar             |
| Managers                      |                      |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma          |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William   |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobeza         |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Gos          |
| Office ManagerJulie           | Greene and Cathy Lea |

AS USUAL, SECURITY WAS MISSING. AS THE FOAMING-MAD KILLER ADVANCED ON MARY JANE, SHE MAN, BUT SHE CONSIDERED HER OPTIONS. KNEW THAT SHE WOULD

Greek Newsletter

by Emily Bishop In order to keep the Greek

Community from seeming like several faceless organizations we would like to take the opportunity to introduce the leaders of the sororities and fraterni-

Zeta Tau Alpha: President: Veda Gresser-Sr. English major- Baltimore,

First Vice President: Chrissy Wiant- Jr. Psychology major-Philadelphia, PA econd Vice President: Adrienne Cupka- Sr. Sociol ogy Major- Kendall Park, NJ. Secretary: Melanie Wade-Sr. History major- Tuscon, AZ Treasurer: Vicky Carroll-Jr. English major- Virginia Panhel officer (Treasurer): Carrie Blackburn- Jr. History Philosophy major- Reston, Va Historian: Anne Andrews Sr. Philosophy major- Ashton,

The ZTA's national philanthropy is the Association of Retarded citizens. They are presently collecting aluminum ans to help raise funds for a W.C. employee's daughter in medical need, and are holding a raffle for the same purpose. Soon they will be starting an intra-fraternity food drive for town/Kent County area.

The goals set by Zeta Tau Alpha this year are to: increase visibility on campus through Rec Sports, fundraisers, and social and cultural events; and to hold onto the Loving Cup for next year.

Kappa Alpha Order: President: Andy Webb- Sr. Business major-Salisbury, MD Vice President: Mark Bradley- Sr. Political Science major/Philosophy minor-Milford,

Recording Secretary: Mark Malkus- Sr. Chemistry major-Cambridge, MD

Corresponding Secretary: Davis Jefferson- Sr. Political 24 hours a day.

Science major- Milton, DE Historian: Mike Jenkins-Je Business/English Finksburg, MD

Treasurer: Tony Caliguiri-Political Science major- Annapolis, MD The KA's have been as tive in the community thus far this semester by helping at the hospital and also helping the Lion's Club with functions, sui as their chicken barbecue white was held on October 1. Another very admirable activity some the brothers are involved wit s the fire company. Junio Seth Powell; Sophomore, Mil Weir; and Junior, Mike Jer kins are volunteer fire fighter for Chestertown, and are once

Trick or treat

fifth annual Trick-or-Treat Hour will be held Sunday, October 30 from 6:00 to 7:30 p.m. Local children will go through Minta Martin, Reid, Caroline and Queen Anne's dormitories.

Students can sign up to distribute wrapped candy, nuts and other treats on the sheets posted on each floor of those dormitories; residents of other

Washington College's buildings should plan to give out their treats in the app buildings. Deadline sign up is tomorrow. Partit pants will receive an oran paper pumpkin to post on door. Approximately 200 d dren are expected.

Further informal about the trick-or-treat h can be obtained from And Kehoe, 778-9839 (Reid 100)

The Elm wishes to extend condolences to the family and friends of David C. Tysinger

There will be a memorial service today at three-thirty in front of the Elm tree.

ISSUE:

Do you think there is an adequate amount of security at Washington College?

Students must share the responsibility of security

for the last few years sparked much criticism from the Washington College student body. Widely accepted is the idea that the college administration is unsympathetic to the present issue of inadequate student protection. Security, however, is a broader issue than that of the College's security service. And the responsibility for cam- protecting them more visible. pus security is not solely the responsibility of the administra-

Foremost in the minds of many is the Campus Security iself. Many have raised complaints over the long response

The lack of security has to dorm fire alarms, the long control disturbances that occur spaces in between monitoring the answering machine in the office, the number of people assigned to patroling the campus at night, and the number of times that a security officer passes through a dorm per hour. Perhaps the best way to make students feel more secure about their security is to make those

The issue of locking the tion, but of the students as well. entrance doors to the dormitories, at night, by residents is a major security concern. As long as students refuse to assume this responsibility, the college administration cannot rity can be curtailed.

from sources outside of the campus community. Yet, this is not to say that the college should not install automatically locking doors and other forms of security equipment to assure the safety of students in the dorms, but rather until the administration takes action it is up to the dorm residents to look out for their own well being It should not be the Resident Assistants' duty alone to lock the dorm doors after 10 PM. Each student should share in the responsibility. If the doors around the inadequacy of cam-

Chip Schaller

pus lighting at night. For the most part the campus is completely black accept in a few select places. For example large spot lights like those lighting the Reid parking lot should also be spotted on the Minta Martin parking lot and between the two dorms. Lights should also be installed behind Caroline House, on the access road to the is the R.A. of the International Cardinal Dorms, and in the Floor on 3rd floor Caroline.

Another issue revolves Cardinal parking lot which is completely dark, and better light could be used around all dorms which at present only have small entrance lights.

> Campus security is an important issue for all Washington College students, consequently, it cannot be ignored. In order to create a safe environment for living and studying at Washington College, we must be willing to share in the responsibility.

Chip Schaller is a senior majoring in International Studies and

Sophomore Essex, Massachusetts

adget into any building. More sturity is definitely needed."

R.J. Eldridge Freshman Chevy Chase, Maryland

Anyone can walk around this "Does it exist?" mpus at 4:30 in the morning are kept locked then most problems concerning campus secu-

Brian Gimelson Freshman Doylestown, Pennsylvania

"Sure, there's enough security on campus. I actually like having strange people with big be available when needed. The knives and guns wandering into my room "

Adrienne Cupka Senior Kendall Park, New Jersey

Cindy Croot Freshman Crownsville, Maryland

"Washington College needs "It would seem to me that more security officers who will campus security is both understaffed and unavailable most of problems in some dorms also the time. I have been made lie with the residents. They keenly aware of this thanks to should stop propping doors the recent fires in my dorm."

Staffing is adequate

The Washington College dents, faculty and staff outlintreased in recent years and are currently staffing two hers per shift Wednesday rough Sunday. We feel this is dequate staffing.

editor in the last edition, I uld like to reiterate the portance of our emergency imber procedure. At the onning of the semester a was sent out to all stu- lege turity Department staff has ing the proper use of the emer-

Gerry Roderick

In response to the letter to gency numbers. This is the second year that these particular procedures have been in effect.

Gerry Roderick is the Director of Security at Washington Colt new Gibson Avenue enince to the College this week.

No Parking

NO PARKING signs are entrance will be ticketed and/placed on both sides of ortowed at the owner's expense.

The new parking lot be-Enning Monday, October hind the Fine Arts building is tvehicles narking along the available for student parking.

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

open!"

Friday, October 28th

Come to the Halloween Costume Party at the Newtowne Pub!

Featuring..... Dee & the Upsetters

Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers

Tuesday 3 shots for the price of 1 Wednesday $1 Imports

Thurday Schnapps

Friday 4:30--6:30 Free Hor D'oeuvres

515 Washington Street 778-1984

In the World

A jury in Atlanta found two white supremacist groups responisible for the violent breakup of a civil rights march in Géorgia last year. The court has ordered that the Ku Klux Klan and the Southern Knights pay $400,000 to the 50 plain-

In a speech at Fort McNair, President Reagan gave Vice President Bush the credit for planning the invasion of Grenada by U.S. troops five

The Congress is blocking economic assistance to Somalia because of human rights viola tions. The aid package includes $21 million in economic supPresident Reagan banned visas for visiting Nicaraguan government officials. This came in response to the expulsion of U.S. Diplomats from Managua The bann is only on Nicaraguan government employees and will not apply to Nicaraguans with diplomatic stand-

A federal grand jury in New York indicted Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos and seven others on charges of embezzle-

The Phillipines The Phillipines have been battered by typhoon Ruby, the 18th tropical storm this year. port, as well as the possibility of The storm is responisble for the sinking of a Phillipine ferry with 500 passengers aboard

Peace talks to end the Iran-Iraq war will resume in Geneva on Monday according to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar

Libya The CIA disclosed that Libya is building a chemica weapons plant 45 miles southwest of Tripoli. According to CIA director William Webster. the plant could pose a serious threat to the balance of power in the Middle East. Webster also said that the CIA is seriously concerned about the possibilty of increased nuclear or chemical weapons capabilities in the Middle East.

Economic woes for Peru are causing serious problems for Peruvian President Alan Garcia. Garcia is being blamed for high inflation, strikes, and decreases in the standard of living. Garcia has denied rumors that he is going to resign, or that a coup in immenent.

22 people died and 53 were hospitalized when their plane crashed in the Andes Mountains. The plane was on its way to Lake Titicaca when a turbine failed, causing the plane to Poland

Solidarity Union leader Lech Walesa refused a governent demand to hold talks with Polish Interior Minister

Czeslaw Kiszczak. Wales announced that he will not mee with the Minister unless that government allows two men ers of the Solidarity delega tion to be present at the talk The two members, Jacek Kuron and Adam Michnik, were re moved from the delegtion be cause the government felt the were too exteremist.

> South Africa Violence plagued the re cent elections in South Africa Although the election is only for municiple governments, marks the first time that whit and black have been allowed by vote together. The election ended with a crackdown b

- Laura Hoppe

Bush or no Bush, the democrats will control Congress If anybody wants to argue for a Democratic victory, but the chief executive. The desire control of Congress will not only If Bush is able to keep Reagan

with the arithmetic, they can, but the facts are that George Bush is seven to ten points ahead of Michael Dukakis in the popular vote, and has more than a two-to-one advantage in the electoral college. At one point Dukakis led by sixteen every region of the country, but that lead has fallen steadily and irrevocably, thanks to the scurrilous, sleazy, McCarthyite tactics of the Republicans and the monolithic ineptitude and incompetence of the Democratic such an outcome looks increasingly remote. It is therefore time to look at what has been and will be gained in 1988, and what the prospects are for 1992

It seems to be intrinsic to points and was ahead or even in human nature to want to be led by one strong and charismatic figure, and to want the powersthat-be to wear a single human face. Ever since the defeat of George III, there have been Americans seemingly willing to give some of the power and campaign. One may still hope authority of monarchy back to House and Senate, so their

to glorify our presidents, and be maintained but also even to worship them, in some cases, is always there. Consequently, people seem to forget the bat. Fortunately, if the that the executive and legislative branches of our goverment are more or less equal in influence and importance, and one should therefore remember that even though Democrats will have have lost five out of six presidential elections, they still retain a majority in the Con-

Democrats are expected to have a net gain of seats in the strengthened. Bush will be a 101st Congress is as half as effective as the 100th in pushing through legislation that the president doesn't want, there nay not be much to worry about. Since 1986, the House and Senate have put more progressive legislation on the books than at any time since LBJ's Great Society, despite opposition from one of the most reactionary and popular presidents in our times. Although the Republicans will claim that the 1988 presidential campaign amounted to a final rejection of liberalism by the American voter, 1988 will nevertheless see the landslide reelection of staunchly liberal Senators like George Mitchell, Paul Sarbanes, Howard Metzenbaum, Teddy Kennedy and Daniel Patrick Moynihan, to name a

Jeff Vail

After November 8, assuming Bush wins, we may expect a battle royal for control of the Democratic party. Perhaps it's about time. After all, as DNC chairman Paul Kirk has said, when you're brought to your knees that many times, you ought also to be brought to your senses. Jesse Jackson, who in four short years has changed his image from that of a meddlesome radical to that of a selfless, persuasive champion of the disenfranchised (in truth he is both), will loom as the brightest star on the horizon. her dignity and return to He will definitely run for presisociety's mainstream as soon dent in 1992

As for his potential opposition, a lot depends on what happens in the next four years.

stop-gap "recovery" going far that long, then New York Mario Cuomo, New Jersey's Bil Bradley, and Georgia's San Nunn will probably displayth same wisdom they displaye to run. If there is an econom downturn, or Bush's presiden is in some other way going so in 1992, then any one of the excellent candidates may st forward and wrest the On Office from the Republicans Governor Cuomo hasla been touted as the most in have, and I wholehearted agree (a debate between Cum and Jackson: now that woo be something to see). Evens today's electoral college and matic suggests that a mode ate-conservative white Soul erner should be given then nation, and fast, before Reagan Democrats who mil up 12% of the electorate irretrievably lost. Nunn a Albert Gore would be perfet but with the potential for veritable bloodbath during between either one Jackson

Although the it seen inevitable that yet anoth Republican will be sworn is president, Democrats should content that two-thirds of elective offices in the coul still belong to them. What! DNC and the DemocraticLe ership Council must work ward now is the nomination a viable moderate in l Victory is possible as long Democrats learn from mistakes and realize that to ing further to the political as some will now want to absolutely not the answer.

Government gives a hand

People deserve a hand up, not a hand out. Congress is attempting to provide that hand up, through the Family Security Act of 1988. This piece of legislation is designed to educate and train welfare recipients so they can get jobs and be removed from the welfare rolls. The target group is the longterm welfare family. Welfare is designed to help people with short-term problems, not to provide a career opportunity for people who do not wish to work. Unfortunately, it has been abused and must be reformed

Legislators realize what needs to be done, but have a hard time implementing the tough statutes needed to force welfare recipients to earn what they are given. If a person does not have a forty hour a week job and is collecting welfare instead, then he or she should be in a classroom, a job training program or state or federally provided job forty hours a week to earn what the Government is currently handing out. Government's job is not to support those who will not support the less fortunate to help them-

The key program of the Family Security Act, The Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Training Program (JOBS),

Monte Bourjaily

seeks to provide education, job training and job placement. The program will force welfare recipients to receive job training and/or basic education to prepare them to enter the work orce and will help place these trained individuals in jobs. The program is a step in the right direction, but it is not perfect. The program must demand 100% participation. There are too many loopholes for parents with children. The younger adults must be in school, looking for jobs or working at jobs. Child care can be provided by the elderly members in the welfare system. Every adult collecting welfare political science major.

themselves but, to encourage benefits must contribute to his or her eventual exodus from welfare status. Over a year ago the Nation's Governors declared that we must "turn what is now primarily a payments system with a minor work component into a system that is first and foremost a jobs system, backed up by an income assistance component."

Welfare recipients should not be parasitic. They must contribute to the well-being of the State, as the State is contributing to their well-being. The State must help those who temporarily lose their footing to regain that footing as soon as possible. The State owes it to its citizens to require that they earn the money that is given to them, just as any job would require them to do. Welfare must not be considered a path of least resistance, but a rigor ous aid program that allows the individual to maintain his or as possible. Monte Bourjailly is a senior

Jeff Vail is a symbomore " involved in Crawive Writing

Alchohol Awareness Week is a success

by Michele Hartnett Last week, college campuses throughout the United States participated in National Alcohol Awareness Week for the purpose of educating students alcohol. Here at Washington College, the Student Alcohol Awareness Committee, the Coffeehouse, and the SGA sponsored a week of alcohol awareness activities.

Activities included three the problems associated with excessive alcohol consumption. Alively, yet informative film on the effects of alcohol on the body was shown on Tuesday night. On Thursday night, Mr. Joe alcohol-related problems and Rage".

solutions concerning Washington College students. After this event, Trooper Prince of the Maryland state Police, demonstrated how the breathylizer worked, and discussed the about the misuse and abuse of general procedures of drunk driving arrests. A $50 gift certificate, donated by the Washington College Bookstore was given away as a doorprize. The Dining Service and Coffeehouse helped by supplying free pizza and cokes.

Interspersed throughout educational events focusing on the week were non-alcoholic "fun" activities, such as the a cappella group on Sunday night, the Baltimore String Quartet on Monday night, Steve Taylor and Rick Rose on Wednesday night, and the Alpha Chi's party Gladu spoke about the specific on Friday night, featuring "The Senior Steve Brody will be fulfilling his Drama Department Senior Obligation in the form of Sam Shepard's play Tooth of Crime. Steve both designed the set and is serving as the show's director. The show, which runs Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at eight p.m. in Tawes Theatre, features an extremely talented cast. Reservartions, which are suggested, can be obtained at extension 269

Dukakis is no JFK

continued from page 7 Nevertheless, on Novem-Dukakis. My vote will be more vote for Michael Dukakis.

Remember the 1960's, ing. when political and cultural upheaval upset the status quo in America? I smell the same type sfunrest returning to America in the near future, as people re-long been pushed aside, like drugs and poverty and the deher 8th I will vote for Michael cay of the American educational system. And I also sense that of a negative vote against America's Presidential leaders George Bush than a positive of the 1990's are not prepared to handle this potential upris-

When the turmoil of the near future comes, we can all do what Dan Quayle will do if he becomes President: we can all say a prayer. That looks like ultagainst problems that have the best hope for America.

continued from page 10 process of writing a book that deals with the exploration and critique of conservative idealogy in the United States.

The thread which holds these together is his strong work in the field of philosophy. Brown graduated from Haverford College and later attended Columbia University where he earned his PhD. He further continued school grounded in classical graduate work in Public Affairs study. In 1976, he founded the Center for Philosophy and Public Affairs in College Park and played a key role in the establishment in the School for Public Affairs. He currently teaches and resides as Dean at the University of Maryland. his work at the Urban Institute Brown is interested in meeting issues.

and taught for five years at St. on an informal basis with those John's College in Annapolis, a students who are interested in

However, all-students are encouraged to take this opportunity to better understand the reasoning and thinking behind conservative politics. In this election year, attendance at a talk such as Brown's is highly encouraged in the hope of shed Along with his lecture, Dr. ding some light on the various

$2 OFF ANY LARGE PIZZA!

Kent Plaza

$2.00 off any large Pan Pizza, or $1.00 off any medium Pan Pizza. Hurry! This special offer expires soon. One coupon per party

Pizza Hut" restaurants.

Trease present coupon when ordering. Not valid in combination with any other offer 1/20. 34 https://graption.value.c.1983/9228 Huly Inc. Good pnly through 1864.331, 1988

Chestertown 778-1070

A Shear Design Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

> Fall Special -Special on Any Perm, Cut & Style

(with Laurie) -Sunglitzing & Style $27.00 (with Jody)

778-0898

Have Your Shoes Lost Their Sole?

Tired of walking around in shoes that are just about to fall apart? Well stop hurting. Paul's Shoe Store has just what your looking for. Whether you're a man or a women, looking for casual or formal shoes, Paul's has your shoe, in your size at your price. So stop walking in mfortable shoes and walk on down to Paul's. where buying shoes can be a Heavenly experience

Paul's Shoe Store

on diese who art had suffer Trans and collection

An American in England - and France, and Germany: students find liberation abroad

by Anne Lindenbaum

"Going to France gave me a better understanding of different cultures, and of myself," says senior Molly McMahon after spending her junior year ahroad

For some students, going away to college offers not only studying new and different concepts, but the chance to study those concepts in the place where they first originated. McMahon, a French major, attended the University of Strasbourg in France, and studied French literature, history, civilization, German, French grammar, and the American The structure of the education process differed greatly from the structure at Washington College, McMahon found

"My classes met once a week for an hour all year," she says, "They were all in French, and there were no semester breaks, so there were only two exams per class during the whole year - comprised of one question each

"You don't have people telling you what to do," McMahon emphasizes. "You have to take responsibility for yourself. It takes a lot of discipline"

McMahon, who lived in a studio in an apartment build ing, found that living by herself make my own food," she re- quickly." members. "I'll never complain about the cafeteria food again." tion system proved unhelpful, expect to be so accessible.

Walking also enabled McMahon and her friends to As the French transporta- see other places they didn't

All in all, McMahon found the experience a positive one. "I think I'm more independent having done this," says McMa-"Strasbourg is in the cen- hon, "because I had to discover ing abroad not only enhanced her studies but opened her mind as well. "It's really important not to compare one culture to another. You just have to an cept each culture for what it is. and to appreciate the best parts of that," she emphasizes.

Brinkley, who will continue her study of English literature after college, and one day hopes to teach on the college level, recommends a year abroad for anyone who needs time to think about what he wants to do with his life

"I think I really grew a lot as a person. I gained a different perspective on the world, and saw that there were other ways of living. As much as I appreci ate the American culture, I've realized that other culture have just as much to offer, Brinkley says.

Spending a semester in Germany intensified senior John Buettner's studies of philosphy and German. Buettner attended the University Freiburg in Breisgau for semester by means of the Insti tute of European Studies, private organization.

"In German universities things like theology, philos phy and literature are suffixe by the German word whit translates as 'science,' so th study of literature is not j 'literature,' but 'literary : ence.' They're very intens says Buettner.

"I also had the opport nity to study the German the ogan Eugen Dwererman whose works are not availab in English," he adds. Buettner found the Ge man culture took some getti used to. "I wouldn't call ite ture shock. . . it was more ! cultural irritation. You had get used to German hab People are aware if you act ferently. If you're trying speak German, then people respect you and try to help, if you don't know the language and you act loud and dem ing, then people will notice and will give you stares. It culture where a lot of perf

you. Like McMahon, Buetl had to get used to his own o ing. "It was horrible," he si "But otherwise the food in watch

eral was fine." Buettner hopes to atta Fulbright Grant so that het return to Germany and tinue his studies follow graduation. "I consider kni ing the German languages boon to my study of phil phy," says Buettner, "Andh ing lived in foreign cultur also benefitted my educat

Senior John Buetlner spent a semester abroad at the University of Freiburg in Breisgau, Germany. The philosophy and German major studied a German theologian's works not published in English.

"I walked twenty minutes to school each day. The buses was as challenging as the were inconvenient, so the five classes themselves. "I had to mile walk became natural very mile walk became natural very have in France," says McMa-

Germany, so we would cross the bridge over the Rhine, and go to Germany for the day to get Diet Coke, which they didn't anothermode of transportation ter of Europe, bordering on my own strengths without people there to support me. I had to rely solely on myself." "Going abroad has also helped my understanding of the French language and culture; at the same time, it also made me appreciate my home too."

For English major Mona Brinkley, spending her junior year in England meant gaining a greater understanding of the literature she was studying. Brinkley, who attended Manchester College through Washington College's study-abroad program, studied Shakespeare, the Romantic poets, Virginia Woolf, and Oxford Local History. "The intellectual vitality and seeing the environment there bettered my understanding of what I was studying," says Brinkley.

Manchester College used the tutorial system as opposed to having large classes. "Each trimester I met once a week with my tutor and each time I prepared an essay on the assigned reading. You really have to discipline yourself to do the reading and to get the essays done," states Brinkley.

"Having a sense of humor really helped me get through. It's a different culture," relates Brinkley. "They have a different way of being around people. They're not as outwardly affectionate as Americans are, and that was hard to get used to." - Brinkley found that study-

Quite Simply,

SEVEN HILLS FARM

10 minutes from Washington College Coopers Lane . Worton, Md. 778-0201

Instruction in Combined Training Show Jumping . Dressage

Beginners thru Advanced

Horses Boarded. Trained. For Sale. Leased Track Shop

New Indoor Area Under Construction

Guest editor Clark guides student writers

by Troy Petenbrink

"I hope I'm a represenstion of the time between whool and becoming famous You can not stop writing," says Mary Clark, Editor-in-Resi-dence of the O'Neill Literary House.

The Editor-in-Residence Program began in 1986, with Sarah Gearhart, a pubshing editor, as the first guest to the program. Kathy Wagner and Professor Robert Day(on leave this year), English Department, worked together to form the program and to find persons interested in the guest esition of Editor-in-Residence.

Kathy Wagner renarked that the reason for the program was to help with "the ragazines taking place on ampus."

"Last year we hoped hat the resident's living quarers upstairs [in the literary suse] would be remodeled, so didn't plan for an editor. changes take place there may help with the literary house."

She says that the reodeling is one of the things ewould like to see happen in contacts in finding participants writing and familiarity with the

the future, as well as a stipend for our program," states Wag- college made her a perfect can never be a time like this again for the residents, since they ner. "We try to find people to diddleas a Editor-in-Residence for me. I think that might have Wagner feels that if these person with the students and

However, the construction be a wider pool of applicants for ever took place," notes Wag- the position and help it to con- for the last two years as a creaur, and was the reason there tinue. However, there has been tive writing instructor with the no specific discussion at this summer Gifted and Talented Writing Progam sponsored by "We have used personal the college. Her experience with

"Mary Clark is a good lit-member of the literary commusome time to write. nity," Wagner says.

the University of Arizona where received a great deal from the she received her B.A. and her program. One evening I was M.F.A. from the University of reading and I realized that I Iowa-Writers Workshop.

"Poetry is the thing I great feeling. feel I'm the best at," comments

"I've been trying to publish for two years, but with no luck. However, I aim high and ing something magical and never give up; I send and send. spiritual." You have to keep a positive ability and knowledge by sponsoring seminars for the students. Since the start of the year she has given a poetry advice for any of the students reading and a workshop on "Making Your Own Magazine."

"I hope to help the stuwhile I'm here," says Clarke.

"I also hope to write as much as I can while I have the others' work. You will find writ-been the reason I was asked to be the editor. Kathy [Wagner] erary intellect and a valuable knew I had no plans and needed

But for the most part, Clark is a graduate of Clark asserts, "I feel I have was surrounded by an environ-She has taught as part- ment of literature and people time college instructor and as a who live and work in a literary community and it gave me a

"I hope to be a memorable and extraordinary writer," Clark notes as her goal in life. "To have the experience of writ-Clark is planning to make an ongoing campaign of Clark has shared her her stay here and to help as much as she can with the students and their writing.

Clark adds that the best who are writing is "to be original; say things your way. Read a lot and learn from the writing dents as much as I possibly can then forget what you have read and be original. You don't want to get caught up in mimicking chance. There will probably ing fulfilling even though its hard and difficult at times."

Hey Michael Dukakis, you're no John F. Kennedy either Question: What does Mrs. At first glance, the simi- Lyndon Johnson. Dukakis has future of America, or if he does, in the Democratic primaries,

Mary Clark has worked

ayle remind Dan after every making session? Answer: "Senator, you're are striking. Dukakis, the himself to John Kennedy. Massachusetts liberal, is run-Bill Beekman When Lloyd Bentsen

Vice-President of the last eight years, just like Kennedy in 1960. The 1980's, like the 1950's, are an era of conservatism and esidential debates, Bentsen peace and prosperity, and rectly put down the Indiana Dukakis, like Kennedy, is run- you're no JFK. nator's misguided reference ning on a platform of change.

The most notable similarity between Dukakis' and Dukakis has no vision for the works. Dukakis ran as a liberal continued on page 5 m Bentsen has failed to Kennedy's campaigns is in running mates. The conservative Texas senator Lloyd er candidate is Michael Bentsen is a virtual mirror image of Kennedy's VP choice, larities between the 1988 cam- played up this similarity, going he has failed to tell it to the and then became more conseraround the country comparing American people.

Dukakis plays the role of JFK. puts them to sleep.

But Governor Dukakis,

make this comparison invalid: attempt to find something that to give America

Superficially, the Massa- Kennedy is that he gave the populist tone — "better jobs at ning against the incumbent chusetts-Texas, liberal-conser- country a vision. He gave the vative connection of 1960 seems United States a sense of purto come to life again in the pose, a set of goals to strive for. Dukakis-Bentsen ticket. So He motivated people. Dukakis erage-American theme.

vative for the general election. The greatest legacy of Since then he has picked up a better wages" - and, more recently, a George Bush-is-aracist-but-I-represent-the-av-

Dukakis jumps from The Dukakis campaign theme to theme because he does has been wishy-washy, jump- not have one basic theme. He One big factor makes ing from theme to theme in an does not have a concrete vision nded Dan Quayle the same ach line during the Viceat he was equal to JFK.

But throughout the camoper another candidate's parisons to Kennedy. That

> BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:38-4

> > 778-1214

AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

De. 213 & 201

Make $6.00 an hour

Chestertown Police Station Needs School Cross Walking Guard 5 days a week Monday - Friday, Mornings & Afternoons Come Down to the Station for Application 778-1800

ATTENTION WASHINGTON COLLEGE STUDENTS Don't be haunted by Look Brand New at Slender You! ghastly cellulite.....

Call for your appointment today 778-0922

~1st session FREE ~ No Contract ~No Membership Fee ~FREE Figure Analysis

Located in Back of The Pub

Bring your student I.D. & get your 2nd session FREE!

Manager E. Harris demonstrates the leg table under the supervision of assistent manager Missy Piver.

This is one of six calathenic

Field hockey rides wave of success

by Kathy Brewster Washington College field hockey continues to ride a wave of success After being ranked seventh in the southern region by the NCAA, the team has soared with confidence and has re corded seven wins in their past eight games. Their 9-5 record has been attributed to six shutouts and this year their offense scoring thirty-one goals while their defense has allowed only thirteen

Another highlight of the season is Washington's competition for the second year in the MAC tournament

Only one goal, which was scored in an overtime defeat against Haverford has kept the team out of the tournament

Carole Reece places a shot on the goal during a team's recent win enroute to their winning streak which has closed out the season.

College last week came in a 1-0 struggle in which neither team dominated play. The opponent had prepared for Washington from scouting reports detailing tory, freshmanKaren Reck at- who have supported Hockey the teams strengths and weak-

What makes this win so substantial is that this is the first time in the history of the hockey program that Washington has defeated Swarthmore.

The goal scored by Sandie Coulter and the seven saves by goalkeeper Linda Anders were contributing factors which led to the win

Beth Matthews linked the team by feeding the offense with the ball, while on defense containing the Swarthmore attack.

Wednesday night's 1-0 win over Catholic University ended the thought of last years win as being a fluke.

Defeating last years nationally ranked team again this season proved that Washington hockey is capable of win ning consistently, even against the recent Swarthmore victory, teamwork and enthusiasm. Julie Schram rippled the net on a feed from Sandie Coulter. tributed the win to the fact that through the 1988 season

The win over Swarthmore teams of national caliber. In the team "dominated by our Appreciation goes out on Summing up the past vic- behalf of the team to the fans style. John Bodnar, Steve Leary Lee. The team played inconsis-The Sho'men soccer sea- and Alan Lerch all had strong tently and had trouble breaking the Generals' defense. The Sho'men were defeated 3-0. Goalkeeper Steve Leary played well however, making several point blank

This evening the team win. two in the victory. Andrew plays Johns Hopkins and on On Tuesday the team Prevost and Pete VanBuren Tuesday they will play Delaware Valley. If the team plays well they will qualify to comgame of three seniors. The traveled to Lexington, Virginia pete in a Maryland state tour-looks on In recent action the Volleyball team lost the match against Salisbury State University this past Tuesday. The squad went on the road yesterday to compete in the CWAC tournament which continues unit today. Next week the women will travel to Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania. The next and last home game of the 1988 season will be held on Wednesday at 6:00 against Wilmington and Anne Arundel Community College in the Cain Gymnasium.

Three seniors close out career at home with 9-0 win over Gallaudet

son is now winding down to a games for the Sho'men close With two regular season games remaining the teams record now stands at-6-8. In the past week the team has played two games with one loss and one win played their final home game of the season. It was also the final seniors ended their careers in

Leary and Lerch both had goals in the 9-0 win over Gallaudet. Leary started in goal, gaining credit for the shutout. Mike Bishop had three goals and Rob DiGiovanni had also had goals in the win. On Saturday the team and played Washington and nament

The new label of Jose anseco This year's World Series American League Champion- being one of the great clutch League pitching in 1988, becontributions of these player and why breaded is one of the great clutch League pitching in 1988, becontributions of these player showed why baseball is one of the most enjoyable sports around. It had excitement, drama, and a team that battled against all odds to win the championship. The Los Angeles Dodgers were an example of an American success story. The towering home run by Kirk Gibson in Game 1 will be remembered as one of the greatest blasts in baseball history. Jay Howell was able to battle adversity and come out on top, and Orel Hershiser appeared infallible

There was one other important footnote to this series. The media has found a new player to label as "unable to with the tags M.V.P., superstar and idol, Jose Canseco will add the title of "choke artist" to his collection. Despite his heroics in the regular season and the his last 21 at-bats. Despite ship Series, Canseco was un- hitters of the time, Murray was able to produce in the World Se- also given this burdensome tag. ries. After a grand-slam home He continued to press throughrun in his first trip to the plate, out the 1983 Series, finally exhe went hitless over his next 18 ploding for two monstrous home Brett Lankford

Orel Hershiser had more hits than Canseco and teammate Mark McGwire combined (3-2). McGwire also put up impressive numbers this year after leading the majors with 49 home runs in his rookie year. Still, Canseco's brilliant season qualifies him as the newest superstar who is sup posedly unable to handle the pressure of World Series play.

This is hardly the first produce under pressure". Along time that a superstar has been pinned with this label. In 1979, Oriole phenomena Eddie Murray went 4 for 26 against the Pittsburgh Pirates, hitless in runs in the clinching game. After the 1983 Series,

Murray passed his title on to Mike Schmidt. The Philadelphia superstar went 1 for 20 in the series, and the media soon labeled him as a player who choked under pressure. This is despite the fact that Schmidt won the M.V.P. in the 1980 Series, batting .385 against the Kansas City Royals. Dave Winfield is another great player who supposedly disappears in big games. He went 1 for 22 in the 1981 Series against the Dodgers, and owner George Steinbrenner still reminds him of this slump.

Jose Canseco had a poor ending to an incredible year. He demolished American the 40HR-40SB club. Canseco slugged 42 home runs this season, and it is estimated that he lost 10-12 more because of the winds in the Oakland Coliseum. He is generally regarded as the strongest man in baseball, and has unlimited potential. He has only been in the league for three years, and he seems destined to have a great career in an Oakland A's uniform. Despite the fact that he is a shoo-in for the American League M.V.P. award, some of the media will constantly remind fans of Canseco's lack of contributions in the World Series.

This labeling of superstars goes with the idea that the World Series may be changing 162-game season from a baseball game to a media event. There is far too much ignored.

Jose Canseco carried the Oakland A's to the America League West pennant an belted three home runs in the Championship Series victory over Oakland. He went through a few five-game slumps during the regular season, but thes streaks are now meaningless The fact is that Jose Cansecol yet another recipient of the media's choke label.

This tag is completed unwarranted, and it is a tremely unfair that Cansa must live with this label unit he wins a World Series for his team. It is time to change be direction of people's concern from a best-of-seven series by Brett Lankford is a s attention directed to the statis- phmore and has a definate and ties-in the World Series. The tude-towards the media-

Lambdas win I-M football championship

by Dennis Berry The Pseudo Lambdas faced the Dorchester Dawgs for the Intramural championships Tuesday afternoon in the Elm Bowl and avenged last seasons loss by winning 26-6. Pat Youngs was named MVP for his efforts as quarterback and on the defensive line

Below is listed the first annual Joe Isuzu All - Intramural football team. Each position has been evaluated during the course of the season and Joe has identified his choices for Quarterback "Boomer Esiason Award" - Here the choices came down to Phil Ryan for short range precision, Chris Long for middle range and Matt From the women's championship April Dean gets the nod when running the option or veer. Joe still can not decide so all four get selected.

Lineman "Mark Gastineau Award" - Kevin 'Mad-dog" Doyle who over a mid - season tear had 14 solo tackles including three faculty members who were not even on

"Gipper Award" - Jeff Troester who in his 13th consecutive season played in spite of the odds and fading legs

Petz for coast to coast bombs. Dorchester Dawg Dave Pushkar carries the ball outside on a kickoff behind the interference of fellow dawgs (center picture) Chris Rosfelder, right and Chris Deegan left. However, he Dawgs' effort to repeat as intramural champs was for naught as the lambdas triumphed 26-6.

"Jim Thorpe Award" - sively. Greg was named to the Greg Rupert who was outstand- "Leather Magnet" squad for ing both offensively and defen-numerous TD's on offense and

Sports calendar

| 10/28   | volleyball CWAC Tourney           | (A)    |     |
|---------|-----------------------------------|--------|-----|
| * 0 (00 | soccer vs. Johns Hopkins (A)      | 7pm    |     |
| 10/29   | volleyball CWAC Tourney           | (A)    |     |
|         | cross country Lebanon valley Tris | ble(A) | 1nr |
| 11/1    | volleyball vs.Swarthmore          | (A)    | 7pn |
| 11/2    | volleyball vs.Wilmington/AACC     | (H)    | 6pm |

vs.Del Valley (A) 3pm CAMPUS REPS NEEDED

earn big commissions & free trips by selling Nassau/Paradise Island, Cancun Mexico, and Ski Trips to Vermont & Colorado.

For more information, call toll free. 1-800-231-0113

COME JOIN US FOR HEALTHIER LIVING The Washington College Health Services will be sponsoring a Stop Smoking Clinic. An R.N. from Kent and Queen Anne's Hospital will be directing the program here at the WC Health Services Office. We must have at least 6 people in order to begin the clinic Pleas sign up before November 27th, the program will last from November 14-18, the fee is $10 or $15

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

MASS SCHEDULE SACRED HEART

SACKED .... aly Mass soary Recited Daily sat Evening Mass sarday Mass ST.JOHN'S Sunday Mass 10:00am CCD-Sunday 9 to 9:45am

9:30 to 10:30am fessions are heard 6:15 Saturday Evening

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor lery: 508 High St.
Chesterlown, MD. 21620
(301) 778-3160
Chesterlown, MD. 21620
Office: Kent Street Side Entrance of Sacred Heart Church
Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pm

Higious Education Coordinator: Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F. Phone: 1-801-820-7437

RIVER INN

RESTAURANT

ROLPH'S WHARF Water Front Dining

open: Mon-Sat 11am til 10pm Sunday 11am til 9pm Closed on Tuesdays

interceptions who participated had fun and on defense

"Red Tide Award" - The KA fraternity which could not score, could not prevent a score but fielded more different players over the course of three October 31 teams com-

individual enjoyed the competition.

In future Rec-Sports action, The AOII Turkey Trot is accepting registrations for the four-mile race around campus on Sunday October 30 at 2pm. All participants will receive a free Rec-Spoorts painters cap. See Denise Smith for additional information.

The Co-ed Volleyball the season than leagues competition begins on Registration is going on for the One on One Single Elimi-While Joe nation Basketball Tournament could not men- which will be held on Sunday tion all the afternoon, November 11.

Innertube Basketball stars from the begins November 28, Co-ed competition, all teams should sign up immediof the students ately.

Sports trivia The answer to last week's piece of paper your name and

question

Mickey Lolich was the last pitcher to win three games in a House in the Trivia Question World series. Congratulations answer envelope (behind the bakhsh who correctly answered be in next week's ELM. last week's question.

This week's question: style kicker in the NFL?

The correct answer will Drop it off in the Coffee are in order for Arian Ravan- bar). The correct answer will

*In the event that more Who was the first soccer- than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing among the correct answers to win a free cheese pizza from the determine the winner. Please, Coffee House. Fill out on a only one entry per person.

WEEKLY DINNER SPECIALS

Wednesdays Crab Cakes $8.95

Fridays All you can eat Shrimp $9.95

Saturdays Land & Sea Buffet all you can eat $13.95

778-3227 Live Music Entertainment on Thursdays & Saturdays Directions: Take 213 south, 4mile past Chestertown Bridge, make right at Rolph's Wharf Road, follow toward water

Kent Association of Riding Therapy

NEEDS VOLUNTEERS

Wednesdays & Thursdays 9:30-11:30

Side Walkers & Horse Leaders

Volunteer for 3 Sessions, receive a FREE RIDING LESSON at Seven Hills Farm

For more information call 778-3335

Talk explores literary center in capital

by Michele M. Volansky

The Literary world, as past history reflects, establishes centers in places noted for their wealth of writing material. Such cities as New York, Paris and London instantly spring to mind when one suggests a center for writing activity. The latest "hot spot" to be included in this illustrious list is Washington, D.C. as presented by The Sophie Kerr Lecture Series in the talk "Washington, D.C. as a Literary Capital". Aided by fiction writer Marita Golden and poet E. Ethelbert Miller, the talk hopes to bring the idea of poetry-reading and lectures to one's mind in reference to the capital, rather than of smoky conference rooms.

Marita Golden is a native of Washington, D.C. She is the author of Migrations of the Heart, an autobiographical memoir, and the novel A Long Distance Life, is due out next fall. Ms. Golden attended American University and the Graduate School of Journalism at Columbia. Her literary work University of Lagos, and writer- follow with aspirations to exin-residence positions at the University of Michigan and Wayne State University. She is past executive director of The Institute for the Preservation and Study of African-American Writing and current president/ founding member of the African-American Writers Guild. She is at present, an arts and educational consultant in D.C. Poet E. Ethelbert Miller was born in New York City and currently resides in Washington, D.C. He attended Howard University and is, at present, director of the Afro-American Resource Center there, along with director of the Ascension Poetry-Reading Series and host for the WDCU-FM radio program "Maiden Voyage". Miller's literary achievements include books such as Migrant Worker, Season of Hunger/Cry of Rain and Where are the Love Poems for Directors? He is also editor Woman's Place. Hernext novel, of the Washington Review, and works on the boards of a variety of cultural councils in the District of Columbia

While the talk will begin with the readings by Golden has taken her to Nigeria at the and Miller, a discussion will plain the current literary activity taking place in D.C. Calvin Forbes, coordinator of this Sophie Kerr event, believes that not many view the capital in respect to its literary activity. He sees, however, a number of reasons that have caused many to move towards the capital in search of a new literary world. He cites the boom of activity in the various arts councils and commissions, the headquarter ing of Pen/Faulkner Foundation and the vast number of creative writing programs in being painted in the capital. He adds that the Folger Library, the Library of Congress and the Kennedy Center have likewise added elements. The literary climate has centered around poetry readings and the high quality theatre which exists and, as a result, young playwrights and poets are finding a store of support from the community itself.

Forbes, who has lived in the capital for the past five years, states that Washington is a "literary alternative to New the universities of the city as all York City" and furthers the

that the city has "a strong sense of community." He believes that, for a young writer, the feeling of community is a much. needed part of the life of a writer and one that does not exist in other literary centers.

Marshall Williams, director of Special Events feels that the talk will paint "not only a picture of writing itself, but of writing in a major city." For all those who view Washington D.C. as simply a political haven, this talk will attempt to change one's view. The talk will be held Tuesday at sevenpieces of the literary picture above statement with the fact thirty in the Sophie Kerr Room

James Forum celebrates with Silver Anniversary lecture

by Valerie Walbert The William James Forum will hold its Silver Anniversary Lecture on the evening of Wednesday, November 2, 1988 at eight p.m. The talk will be presented by Dr. Peter Brown and President Cater will make the introduction. Several past presidents of the forum will likewise be in attendance. In the past twenty-five years, the Forum has covered various topics of interest ranging from ethics and religion to art and politics. The organization was student-founded in 1963 and continues to be supported primarily by the Student Government Association. The Forum was founded in honor of the esteemed Harvard Professor William James, whose contributions to the intellectual and scientific circles of the academic world covered thoelogy, philosophy, medicine and psychology.

The anniversary lecture will feature Dr. Peter Brown. head of the School of Public Affairs at the University of Maryland. His chosen topic, "What's Wrong with the Right?" is a philosophical critique of conservative politics that expounds on the validity and meaning of right-wing political views. The unique aspect of Brown's talk is that he approaches political beliefs in large number of events put on by the William James Forum. terms of philosophical reason- ticles pertaining to these que ing. He will attempt to shed tions, in addition to exploring light on what is actually right conin some intellectual deta by philosophically answering various topics such as popular questions such as "What do I tion policy and ethics, foreign want to achieve?" and "Why policy, social experimentation." should I want to achieve this?"

Last weekend's Philosophy Colloquium is only one example of the

He has written numerous ar-and nuclear waste. He is in the continued on page

Toxic Waste Dump.

EVERY OUTTTER IS A WINNER The Great American Smokeout. Nov. 17.

Editors appointed

Broadsides Editors: Cindy Caroot, freshman

Stephanie Hess, freshman

Kevin Holland, sophomore

WCR Editors:

Michele Balze Susan Di Leo Kristen Davies

Rattle and Hum brings stage and studio to U2 fans

by Todd Karr

Rattle and Hum is an apt name for U2's latest release: this eclectic album incorporates music from the different faces of the band's shifting style. Some of the songs are designed for "rattling," and some were written just for humming. Some are recorded live, and some are not. And some songs are highly spiritual and sensual, and some most definately are not. With this album, more than any classify their music. Helter Skelter, which the band covered live during their one of the various faces that U2 demonstrates on this album. Their version of the song is as unique as the original Beatles classic. The crashing guitarwork of The Edge against the pounding drum rhythms prove that U2 can still rock with that militant fever they possessed when they first began to catch America's eye.

Other songs that were performed during the tour that have found their way to this berl album include All Along the Watch Tower, I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For, Silver and Gold, Pride, and ullet the Blue Sky. I Still aven't Found What I'm Lookg For is a credit to U2's abilyto captivate an audience with mgs that are radically differit from the recorded versions

The song begins with the in- steers away from that theme skeleton of the music, but Bono's passionate vocals fills that framework and fills it maryously. To emphasize the intense spiritual feeling that U2 creates during this performance of the song, back-up harmonies are provided by a gospel choir, which adds a feverish sweetness to the sonority of an already emotional song.

There are several passionother, U2 defies attempts to ate, spiritual songs among the studio-recorded tracks that make up about half of Rattle and Hum. Among these, Heartlast tour, is a good example of land and All I Want Is You are most worthy of note. Heartland is a haunting song that demonstrates that U2 has not tired of the vision of America as an apathy-maker and a crusher of dreams. All I Want Is You struments toned down, a mere and engages in a wholly personal realm of a nameless individual love. Both songs represent different aspects of a spiritual world.

On the other side of the spectrum are the tempestous Desire and the crisp, hard-hitting blues song, God Part II. Desire is the type of song that summons the intense rhythms of Sunday, Bloody Sunday without the tense politics. Here the lyrics are focused on evoking the mood of intense desire: the drum rhythms in this song are much like fast-pace heartbeats, while the guitar and bass summon the fever and color of pas-

Rattle and Hum is an album of eclectic music and the songs cover a wide variety of unity in the arrangement of the songs, primarily due to the While it lacks some cluded, it still maintains the expect from U2 suousness and hard-edged dewide range of song types in- fiance songs that we've come to

A guide to campus events: calendar 10/28-11/2

October 28, 30, Novem-

lege Film Series presents a Halloween Double Feature. which includes Invasion of the Body Snatchers and Friday the 13th. The two have been called the "best in sci-fi horror films Worth watching to get into that Halloween spirit

Saturday, October 29 The annual Phi Sigma The Washington Col- Kappa Halloween party will take place this Saturday, 9:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. in East Hall.

Costumes are encouraged. Monday, October 31

The Tea and Talk series wraps up this semester's event with Walter Carrington's talk on "Contemporary Problems in Africa". This is the last oppor-plore "matters worthy and curious."

Tuesday, November 1 The Sophie Kerr Lec- ber 2 ture Series presents a combination reading/discussion on "Washington D.C. as a Literary Council". The reading will feature fiction writer Marita Golden and poet E. Ethelbert tunity for this semester to ex- discussion. The event will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room

Wednesday, Novem-

The William James Fo rum will host its Silver Anniversary talk with Peter Brown on "What's Wrong with the Right?" Brown will be speaking at 7:30 p.m. in Hynson Miller, with the two leading the Lounge.

ROLPH'S WHARF

Welcome Parents

Alumni!

Washington College only 6 miles to Inn.

COUNTRY INN

Bed & Breakfast on the ChesterRiver Private Baths ~ King Size Beds ~ Visa/ Master Chg

301-778-1988 CALL NOW

Restaurant and Marina on Premises

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP. 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21000

301-778-350

NEWS

WC sponsors smokeout

continued from page 1

The charge for the proten or fifteen dollars for our further information.

students," says Schauber. Participants must register by gram, directed by Gatton, has November 1. Schauber can be been reduced from the usual reached at the Health Center twenty five dollars to "about for registration forms and for

Miller Library automates

continued from page 1

Committee cited library automation as one of its priorities.

The project is comprised of 2 phases. The first phase involves cataloging information, at a cost of $150,000.

Committee has pledged a sizable sum to the project, but approximately half of the funds one, are still "up in the air."

Grant proposals have been coming weeks. submitted to two foundations, one regional organization interested in library improvements in this area, and one national foundation which has supported such efforts in the past elsewhere in the country. Therefore, the acquisition of funds looks promising.

The second phase of the automation plan involves choosing and purchasing the system. The system will cost between $150,000 and $180,000. A library automation consultant familiar with the pros, cons, and financial pitfalls of such an endeavor has been appointed to seek computer companies which would have a properly sized system for Miller Library's The Academic Computing needs. William Tubbs, the Li brarian, attended a National Library Automation convention in Boston, and contacted six necessary to complete phase appropriate vendors who should respond to his inquiries in the When the vendors respond, a variety of programs may be available for perusal in the library. Students and faculty are encouraged to voice their opinions, for their input may influence the choices in programs.

Once a decision has been reached, Tubbs feels the system could be running smoothly in about 2 years. Funding for the second phase of the project is still under investigation

WILLIAM JAMES WATER CALLERY

Last weekend, WC hosted the Washington Philosophy Club and The Greater Philadelphia Philosophy Consortium for a colloquium entitled, "The Importance of Marx Today." The colloquium was spo ed by the William James Forum, which celebrates its Silver Anniversary this year. Other gains include eas- network in order to illustrate

The primary focus of the automation plan is on the improvement of students' learning opportunities and offering a more organized, faster system to work with

An automated catalog offers greater efficiency, information, and more access points while bar coding will speed checkouts and returns, according to Tubbs.

ier inter-library loans (via the value of such a system. an computer) access to library information though all linked library's resources. His preterminals on campus (one can gram is a mix of digitized pic research a topic without leavingone's room) and an improved and features of the library, with college image with respect to informative cross reference incoming students.

Jeff Chaffin has devised a is very simple to use, and show computer program available to how computer automation wil anyone through the campus improve the library system to familiarize students with the tures depicting various areas and explanations. The program

Mom's Cookie Jar

I would like to start out by reminding you that Monday, Oct. 30, is Halloween. To acknowledge this event, the W.C.D.S. is having a Halloween Dinner in the main dining room. There will be a best costume contest, beginning at 6:00 PM. An apple bobbing contest will be held throughout the meal. And for those of you with a flair for the imaginative, there will be a pumpkin carving contest. Prizes will be awarded in

Wednesday, Nov. 2nd, is "Election Night". The menu will feature baked chicken, served from the line and a buffet set up in the main dining room featuring such items as shrimp egg rolls, hot wings, bay birds, mini burritoes, mini tacos and Yoplait yogurts

There will be square dancers preforming for your entertainment

So, plan to attend Congratulations to Norareen Hicks who was awarded the W.C.D.S. "Employee of the Month" award. Norareen, for those of you who don't know, runs the snack shoppe at dinner, Sunday through Thursday. Keep up the good work, Norareen!!!!

While I am in a grateful mood, may I say "Thank You" to all the students who have been utilizing the Napkin Board. The Dining Service Management Staff enjoy hearing from you - even when the comments aren't too nice. Keep writing to us.

In closing, I would like to bid a warm "WELCOME BACK" to Dave Knowles and Jeff DeMoss. They have been away all week, attending a Region II NACUFS seminar in Richmond, Virginia. I am sure they had a good time and have brought back a wealth of new ideas for us. It is good to have them back and I'm sure they are ready to "get back to business as usual

Until next week

MOM

You won't want to miss the Halloween Double Feature:

Invasion of the Body Snatchers

Friday the 13th

Friday, October 28 Sunday, October 30 Monday, October 31

In the Norman James Theatre All shows begin at 7:30

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 8

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, November 4, 1988

Last Sunday, WC students welcomed ghosts, gobilns, and feroclous were at odds as to who had the dragons for its fifth annual Trick-or-Treat Hour.

Committee plans revisions for SGA Constitution

by Tracey Connell

An ad hoc committee is currently revising the SGA Constitution. Comprised of three executive members and one senator, their recommendations have not yet been finalized or voted on by the Senate. Perry Finney, President of the SGA, and Tom Jackson, Treasurer, both members of the Committee, agree that the current document holds inconsis-

Jackson traces the problems to an ad hoc committee of "two or three years ago." In revising the Constitution, he stated, "they didn't go as deep as they should have.

there were disagreements between the President and vice President over certain rights right to make appointments to the faculty committees.'

Finney pointed to different problems. "The President wanted leniency and he got it." He also remarked that although very few people are aware of the intricacies of the document, "anyone dealing with the Constitution would notice the problems. I see no difficulty in gaining (Senate) support.

The current ad hoc com-

Constitution in detail. Said Jackson, "we are going through it article by ar- and Professor Newell are workticle and bylaw by bylaw."

Jackson says the commit-Jackson also cited that tee hopes to see some major changes instituted. For example, they are considering giving voting rights to class officers and executive members Senate by the middle of the

Also proposed are revised attendance policies to get and to keep senators at the meetings. The changes would make certain meetings mandatory. The committee has discussed making provisions for growth in the student body. One other major consideration is the opening up of all SGA committees to the general student populous. They have also discussed granting representamittee is reviewing the tion to non-traditional stu-

> Vice President Rob Albers ing in conjunction with the committee. Though they have no specific list of proposals as yet, this week they plan to begin the actual rewriting of the Constitution. A final draft of their proposal should reach the spring semester.

Chaffin exhibits computer guide to Miller Library at EDUCOM

by Ed Schroeder

Last week, five members of the Washington College faculty-Paul Bishop, Tim Kirk Elizabeth Baer, Rosette Roat and Jeff Chaffin-attended a computer conference at the Washington Hilton, EDUCOM. a national conference for information technology and higher education, met under the sponsorship of the University of Maryland. At the conference, Chaffin had an opportunity to show off some of the software that he created for Miller Li-

Administrators, professors, and librarians from across the country, along with representatives of major corporations such as Apple and IBM, and experts such as Steve Jobs (showing his NeXT model) turned out to share what they had learned over the past year, and to take aim toward the

"The top minds had gathtred to play mind games," Chaffin commented. "It was a fun way of learning."

Through a hypercard program, Chaffin developed a Miller Library Information Hyperstack, a "friendly user" that helps you around the li-

"It had to be something appealing," Chaffin explained, "because the more appealing it is the more the user will get involved and the more the user will learn. He credits a good deal of success of the hypercard program to the graphics. Many who have witnessed its showing, commented that the program took seemingly monotonous information and used it in a quick, appealing manner.

The system opens up with a revolving earth that after a simple maneuver of the mouse will zoom in, as if it were a space shuttle camera narrowing in on a location. That loca tion, no doubt, is the Miller Library. Once past the vivid introduction, it is only another 'clicking' on the mouse that begins the tour of the library and its facilities

The hypercard allows the user to access on all of the library's holdings and services: the new book list, periodical holdings, video selections and cassette tapes (among other things). Each of these locations has a digitized picture and can also be found on the floor plan illustrations. If perhaps the brary. It is complete with graph- user wishes to invoke the assistance of an aid, a simple 'click' cessing information forty times along with those of other of the mouse brings another digitized picture up; this time of the person who can be of assistance. Along with each of the pictures, there is information on where each can be reached.

Gradually, the library will have developed the means to send information faster to students. The imminent installation of an Ethernet backbone will increase the speed of ac-

"What someone can curently researh in a day, I can do researh from the computer in a few seconds with this." Chaffin remarked of the com puter. "Today, it's a matter of the scope and speed, how much useful information you obtain and how fast that it can be accessed."

The hope is that a database will be created to hold all schools. In the future, students will be able to do much of their console in their rooms.

"It's just preparing us for the day that everything will be automated," Chaffin added. "The modern world requires that useful and comprehensive information be obtained quickly, and that's what we're the resources in the library, hoping our system will achieve."

Too drunk to drive? Help is on the way

by Lynn Burris

In cooperation with the national SADD campaign (Students Against Drunk Driving), junior Debby Cohn has initiated a local program at Washington College to help combat some of the problems associated with students and drunk driving

Cohn is operated on a strictly student volunteer basis, every Wednesday and Thursday eve ning from 11:30 PM to 1:00 AM. Students who find they need a ride home from a local bar because they have had too much to drink may simply call 778- flexible, but Cohn stresses that between 11:30 and 1:00.

make arrangements to deliver the student, and his or her car home safely.

Cohn also notes that the bartenders of local establishments will have the driving service telephone number availstudents will take advantage of The program founded by the program, and if successful, Cohn. she plans to extend the times > and nights it will be available. Because the service is a new venture, many more volunteers are needed to help man the telephone and provide rides. The times people can work are day and Thursday evenings 5494, and the volunteers will in order for the program to be successful, more help is needed.

"We urge people to use it so that no one gets hurt and to avoid people getting Dwi. Both of these have happened this semester and in the past, and this is just a much safer way of able for use. She hopes that dealing with the problem of drinking and driving," stated

If anyone has questions about the program, or would like to volunteer, they should contact Debby Cohn through campus mail, or call the hotline number (778-5494) on Wednes-

EDITORIAL

Mudslinging splashes back

According to Lynn Burris' poll, Washington College students believe that the biggest threat to the future of the United States is the decline in values. This is not surprising when the two men vying for the Presidency place before the nation their fine examples of mudslinging.

As so many people have complained, the election has been issueless- it is hard to remember any straightforward answers to the questions of the American public. Instead the words of the candidates are loaded with insulting accusations; as the Sun points out, this is the Year of the Mudslingers.

Right now the mudslinging has become a big issue in Maryland, as the Republicans attempt to recover from the Willie Horton fund-raising letter that was written by the Republican Party chairman in Maryland, Daniel E. Fleming, and signed by Michael W. Burns, the executive direc-

Both Republicans and Democrats were shocked and horrified by the flyer that connects Governor Michael Dukakis to the criminal. About 8,000 Maryland Republicans received a letter in late summer that suggests that Mr. Dukakis' real partner in the race is Willie Horton, a murderer who raped a Maryland woman while on prison furlough from Massachusetts. It states, "You, your spouse, your children, your parents and your friends can have the opportunity to receive a visit from someone like Willie Horton if Mike Dukakis becomes president." Naturally the Republicans denounced any involvement or support for the letter, and the Democrats played it for all it was worth.

Statements like these are uncalled for in an election: this is the lowest point that mudslinging has reached. No matter how you look at it, the letter is wrong. Not only does it exploit Horton's victims, but it causes anger in the community-both black and white as it panders to white racism. In general it hurts Bush's campaign, and the campaign of state Republicans. Not only is it an example of the decline in values, but it shows the one of the side effects of mudslinging: getting hit with your own mud.

Washington College Elm

| 116601661691                                    | Editors                  |                        |
|---|--------------------------|------------------------|
|   | Editors                  | Tourison M Horrison    |
| Editor-in-chief                                 |                          | Susan Di Leo           |
|   |                          |                        |
|   |                          |                        |
| Sports Editor                                   |                          | Michele M. Volansky    |
|   |                          |                        |
| Arts and Entertainment EdPhotography Editor |                          | Todd Karr              |
| Photography EditorGraphics Designer         | ************************ |                        |
|   |                          |                        |
| Managing Editor                                 |                          | Prin Hodge-Williams    |
| Advertising Manager                             |                          | James Sobezak          |
|   |                          |                        |
| Assistant Circulation Man                       | nger                     | Corres and Cathy Lease |
| Assistant Circulation Man                       |                          | Greene and Carry many  | per of Washington College. It is the official student newspa-sed mineral per college. It is published every Friday decide the scademic year with the exception with the control of the faiter-in-chief with opinion of the staff. Signed columns, commentates, be considered the opinion of the staff. Signed columns, commentates, be made and editorial carbon to make the columns, commentates, be another and are not seen to the columns, commentates, be another and are not seen to the columns, commentates, but quite to prac-tion the columns of the columns of the columns of the columns of a column to the columns of the columns of the columns of the columns of the seen to the columns of the columns

The Elm's business and editorial office is bested in the basement of Ried Riall, next to the Ried Hall lioning. Business theories are 750 to 560 PM on Tuesdays and 750 to 1100. Wednesdays. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in (30) 178-2500, schemios 21.

Restore America's tanh Pledge of Allegiance Social Security federal deficit abortion Education TEST Bush YOUR Duke Quayle STRENGTH VOTE NOVEMBER 8

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I am concerned that the Elm's response to the Helpline issue has become so narrowly focused: what if a student is asked to deal with a question he or she can not handle?

Peer counselors, community-based hot lines, drop-in resource/information centers, and similar programs have proved to be effective in a variety of settings, including many high schools and colleges. One of the most critical issues in the volunteer's training is the iden tification of problems which are appropriate for the Helpline. Clear guidelines are established for the management of those which are not appropriate.

Only a small percentage of calls to such programs are "crisis" in nature. Most calls community are great.

deal with issues related to the Fisher, Ph.D. clarification of problems so that the most appropriate resource can be found. Back-up systems and procedures are already in place. In some instances, callers are referred to "professional" counselors either on an emergency or non-emergency basis. The response to most calls will be the general sharing of information, and referral to the appropriate resource. In many instances, no further action or referral is required.

If a student is seeking help during crisis, the Helpline may provide the first link to finding appropriate help. With training and back-up support, the risk of inappropriate intervention is small, and the opportunity for enhancing the range of useful service to the campus

Michaelson-Bonnie Director of Counseling Washington College Health

License Psychologist

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the Editor an welcomed. Send them care The Elm through student mi or Intermail, or drop themoffs the Elm office in the basemen of Reid Hall

Correction

In an article entitled "Helpline stirs up campus on cerns," in issue 6, the quot attributed to Dean McIntin were in fact stated by Des Sansing. The Elm regrets this

What's hot????

- * DISK FILES ARE BACK IN STOCK
- * BLACK V-NECK PULLOVER
- * NEW GREETING CARDS AND POSTCARDS
- * WC TEA
- * NEW TRADE BOOK SELECTIONS

Washington College Bookstore (Dasement of Hodson Hall) 8:30 - 4:30 Mon through Fri 10:00 - 1:00 Saturday

ISSUE:

What qualities do you look for in the next president?

The President must be almost everything to everyone Choosing a qualified per- foreign policy issues such as are bringing drugs into the by the public. The Vice Presi-

thing to everyone. He or she environment. has to say enough about the issues to show his or her stance without saying too much so that he or she will be branded a "liberal" or "conservative." The current Presidential candidates are attempting to do just that.

America by taking (or not takperson has to be almost every- is a worldwide concern, the America will choose a President on November 8 that will address these issues and decide what the government should do about these problems. The qualified President needs to know how to deal with irate George Bush and Michael foreign leaders. He needs to Dukakis are trying to reach know how to clean up the environment and protect it from ing) their stance on issues that further damage. He needs to oncern American families: have a strong policy against ocial issues such as drugs, drugs and the countries that that works with the Congress for a balanced budget and a deficit reduction would make a highly qualified President.

Another issue that recently has become a major factor in choosing a Presidential candidate is his choice of a dent should die. running mate. The role of a Vice President is a very importantone but he or she has never to be as qualified as the Presi-vote on November 8 been highly visible. The choice dent. One should not consider of a running mate is the first important decision of the Presidential candidate that is seen consume a quantities per long, and the property of the action on these dent should be aware of all the attitudes are please consider issues coupled with a President decisions made by the President and should be able to take over in the event that the Presi- concerned about.

Jennifer Hannum

the Vice Presidential position as an apprenticeship for a future hope to become President. their stance on the issues and their previous accomplishments and not their looks. Whichever your choice, Bush/Quyale or Dukakis/Bentsen, consider what he and his running mate are going to do for the country and the issues you are deeply

No matter what your The Vice President needs choice is, please remember to Jen Hannum is a freshman planning to major in political science.

Sophomore Lutherville, MD litary forces should help results." enforce the beliefs of the U.S.

gwernment."

Junior Reston, VA neone who will be fair to all "Someone with true leadership et hold a strong stand in for- qualities who is capable of facign affairs. I feel that our ing the problems and getting Baltimore, MD "I'm not really sure, but I did vote this year.

Freshman Whaleysville, MD "A liberal Republican that will lead this country towards the dent ...? His ideas should be beliefs of Herbert Hoover."

Amy L. Undercoffler Freshman Dover, Delaware "How scary...our next Presireal stable and realistic...and he better just get this country out of the hell hole it's in."

I would like the president to be an honest person I will begin by saying that I'd just like to say, stay on the White House. The only for Oval Office today: personal of the ones the candidates sess. I see the United States' wernment as the sometimes athetic and always bureauratic system that it is. The te for Presidential office is no eption. Nevertheless, I tinue to hope to find a man woman who can accept that resome responsibility with re thought for the people of s country than for them-

, politicians are notorious lying. They skirt the issue e and delicately avoid the stion there. George Bush, instance, is famous for his onslaught of empty toric during debates. "And no room for vested interests in he characteristics I look for in course; city of a thousand points thing that should appeal is that President are almost always of light. Thank you." Beauti- of having a stake in the country ful, George, but what about as well as any other American. nuclear arms? What about At the risk of sounding too

Alison K. Auber

housing and social security? What about the environment? "You still have one minute and ten seconds, Mr. Vice President." Didn't you sit in front of the television screaming, "Just I would like the president answer the stupid question!" be an honest person. Ironi- Buthejust continued to blather on: "Stay on course; a thousand..." It's like a nightmare. I would also like the president to be someone who is running because he or she truly wants to help people. There is patriotic, the goals of the president should be the common goals of all Americans. According to Charles Beard's An Economic Interpretation of the Constitution, the Founding drafted Constitution with the idea in mind that a financially stable government was needed to pay back that handful of people, namely the Founding Fathers themselves, who lent money to the government to pay for the Revolutionary War. Many people were aghast at this seemingly insulting interpretation of the revolutionaries' motives.

It seems, though, that these are exactly the reasons for the quest turn and you're forced to pro-

the power of the presidency.

It would be nice if the president cared about the same things I care about although this is a difficult desire because when you're twenty years old, usually you care about different things than when you are (in the case of our current president) seventy years old. (Perhaps the Republicans should give a little more thought to social security). Winston Churchill once said, "Young people with hearts are liberal. Old people with minds are conservative." I think that makes a lot of sense. When you're young, you want a cause to fight for and there is no one to look after but yourself. When you get older, suddenly the tables vide a certain standard of livproperty and financial gain and ing for your family. Unfortunately, not all Americans want the same things.

There are a lot of problems in this country. Trying to choose a president is an extremely challenging choice to make and it is not always black or white. I have fundamental arguments with many Republican policies, but the Democrats are far from lily-white themselves. Sometimes one must choose between the lesser of two evils and I think this election is the perfect example. No matter how you choose, it is important that everyone exercise his or her own right to actually make such a choice.

Alison K. Auber took time out from composing poetry tomuse on the future of politics.

PERSPECTIVE

In the World

UNITED STATES

The White House is expected to relax some diplomatic market it. and trade restrictions against North Korea as part of a coordi- tion from American rice grow- clamped a curfew on the city nated strategy with South ers for legal action on Japan's and searched for suspects. The Korea to ease tension on the market, gambling that it can assault came as extra soldiers divided peninsula. current Iran-Iraq cease -fire is on rice import fragile. The truce began Au-

from the gulf this week. million from the Manila govraignment has been delayed for "to his economic appeal. Bush health reasons may generate a black market in and denied that the GOP ticket presidents, in a communique the U.S., some pharmaceutical was losing ground. and public-health officials said. They don't expect the drug, RU 486, to be sold legally in the busnear Jericho, killing at least curtailing drug trafficking and U.S. Last week, the drug's three people Military officials ending Central American wars. maker suspended distribution said the assailants hurled fire-

The U.S. rejected a petiwin concessions with Tokyo were deployed throughout the Persian Gulf peace talks without making Bush appear occupied territories, torn by the have resumed in Geneva and weak on trade issues. Yeutter U.N. Secretary-General Perez said he will trust in Japan's ing for fear that the elections clear of the Enertia booster de Cuellar has said he is anx- assurances about its willing- would bring more violence. ious for progress because the ness to give up a near-total ban gust 25. In Bahrain, U.S. lican presidential nominee sources said the pentagon plans Bush on the run. On a whisto withdraw its first warship tlestop train tour through Cali- the Liberal party. which opfornia, the Democrat acknowl- poses a U.S.- Canadian trade Imelda Marcos arrived in edged that he was a liberal "in New York City to face arraign- the tradition of Franklin ment this week on federal Roosevelt, Harry Truman, and charges that she and Ferdinand John Kennedy." With recent to win this month's election. Marcos embezzeled about $100 polls showing him narrowing Bush's lead, Dukakis said, ernment. Her husband's ar- People are beginning to respond leaders vowed to devise a com-

meanwhile, made a quick A French abortion pill campaign trip to Pennsylvania

ISRAEL

of the pill, but then was ordered bombs at the passenger vehicle West Bank. Five people were reported wounded. Troops reported wounded. ten month old Palestine upris- ment platform failed to swing billion CANADA Dukakis said the Repub- groundinthe country's national election campaign. A poll published Saturday showed that pact, moved into a tie with the Progressive Conservative Party, which had been favored LATIN AMERICA Seven Latin American mon strategy to persuade creditors to write off part of their $339 billion foreign debt. The released Saturday after a threeday meeting in Uraguay, also Arabs attacked an Israeli called for talks with the U.S. on by the Paris government to as it traveled in the occupied missed a last minute halt to the Moscow, also called for restor maiden flight of the space tion of Soviet citizenship shuttle Buran as a minor hitch exiled writer Alexander So and said the next attempt to henitsyn. put the spacecraft aloft will take place after the Revolution Day holiday on Nov. 7. The lift-off nobyl nuclear disaster for the was aborted when an equip-

USSR

> -Canada's ruling party lost ence proposed Nobel Peace was beaten by the far-rie laureate Andrei Sakarov as a Conservative Party in doze candidate for Soviet Parlia- of white towns's election ment. The conference of lead- Archbishop Desmond Tu ing intellectuals and Human- denied government claims Right's activists from across the large black turnout.

Soviet space officials dis- Soviet Union, meeting

Soviet officials blam falling revenues and the Che first budget deficit, of $57

SOUTH AFRICA

South African Presid An anti-Stalinist confer- P.W., Botha's National Par

S.G.A. notes

by Robbie Albers The SCC jurors have been apointed and I will list the tee on the Constitution has be names of those appointed: Chris doing work on revisions. The Warren, Dawn Dams, Kelly will probebly submit a propo Fyans, Jeff Huebeck, Stacy at the next senate meeting Hewes, Luke Short, Neil MacIndoe, Tracy Greenawalt, and Adreienne D'Angelo. Also appointed to the SCC were: clubs know that if you me Ombudsman-Will Edwards, your bills paid please sendits. Chief Investigator and Investigator-Steve Attais and Steve them offin the C-House. Please Lorenze, and Clerk-Mike Win-don't chase our treasures to him via campus mail ord over campus

Restaurant Manager- Chuck Rider Assistant Manager-John Nadolny Maryann Gullett Breakfast Manager-Barbara Mills Delonia Black

701 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md.

778-6622

Rts. 213 & 291

OPEN DAILY 7 A.M.-11 P.M.

Look at our Specials...

Sunday - Whopper $.99 Monday - 2 Burgers $.99 Wednesday - Whopper $.99

with the purchase of a Large French Frus Plus a Medium Soda

Burger King #5306

Politically involved students broaden interest, awareness

by Anne Lindenbaum

"I went to the Democratic Convention to help with Students for Dukakis, and because wanted to see what it was like," says senior Sean Ken-

Attending the Democratic Convention in Atlanta was just one of the opportunities Kennedy was offered while completing his summer internship with Maryland senator Barbara Mikulski

Kennedy's original intenship with the Governor of Maryland. "Professor Weissman recommended that I try for the Governor's internship, but while I was in the Career Development Office filling out the form, Linda Cades also encouraged me to apply for the Mikulski internship, and that was the one that accepted me,' says Kennedy

Although Kennedy hesitated in taking the internship ecause it was unpaid, he was mable to resist the challenge it offered. "It sounded exciting and met with the group there. and fun," he adds ience especially rewarding because the interns were given substantial work to do.

percent clerical work and sixty percent research," he says. "We the interns worked for one of the legislative assistants."

Kennedy was assigned to the State Projects Director. That involved large-scale case work, working with the constituents, so what I did really never came up for debate on the Senate floor," he says.

When a constituent wanted to build a bridge on a piece of property he had purchased, other constituents felt their property values would be lowered significantly, and contacted their congressman for assistance

"My job was to research the bridge permit that was granted by the merchant marines, and it turned out that they had not given the resition was to obtain an intern- dents proper notice about what was going on," says Kennedy.

"I called various agencies and explained constituents problems and said that the senator would appreciate it if they could look into it," he explains. "I also did a lot of letterwriting to different constituents and agencies."

Students For Dukakis, a national organization, contacted Mikulski's office about a week for the Convention and asked for volunteers. Kennedy rented a car, drove to Atlanta.

"We did a lot of stapling, Kennedy found the expe- unloading posters, and running messages," says Kennedy, "And in the afternoon we attended seminars about things like "I'd say it was about forty campaigning for a candidate on campus

"It was a madhouse," he weren't just gofers. Each one of continues. "I was only able to get on the floor twice, but it was a good time. It was a week of living on the edge."

Working as an intern for Senator Mikulski and seeing the candidates in action at the Convention broadened

Senior Sean Kennedy Interned for Maryland senator Barbara Mikulski, during which he attended the Democratic Convention in Atlanta. Kennedy's awareness of how substantially."

tion I picked up just from being what you stand for unless you surrounded by it, and seeing understand politics, or you try the bills get passed every day in to understand," he states. Washington, and the debates

"It's important for people "The amount of informato be informed. You can't know

"Every politically interwas incredible," says Kennedy. ested person should try to at-"My interest in politics rose tain an internship," adds Kennedy, "because he will learn a

Amy Caddle, a freshman from New Jersey, spent part of her summer campaigning for Michael Dukakis.

"I found about it in high school," says Caddle. "On Sat-urdays we would distribute materials, and on the day of the Primary election, we distributed literature all over the county.

"A lot of the work was just word of mouth, making people more aware. There were a lot of swing votes out there," says Caddle of Monmouth County, one of the most densely populated Republican counties in the Caddle also had the opportunity to attend a dinner hosted by Euterpe Dukakis, mother of Michael.

"It was very interesting. I'm very issues-based for choosing candidates, and since both my parents were Republicans, I really had to re-evaluate my political upbringing. You can never put total faith in a candidate, but I like Dukakis and what he stands for," says Caddle

Although Caddle will not be old enough to vote in the General election, she still felt. it was important to let others know what her candidate stood for "I felt that even if I couldn't vote, I could still help out," says Caddle. "I don't like to watch things pass by. I try to get involved, because if you don't care, then nothing will ever be accomplished."

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

St. 213 & 201

778-1214

Catholic Church Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

MASS SCHEDULE SACRED HEART

7:00pm 8:30am 11:30a

9:30 to 10:3

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor Clory: 508 High St. Office: Kent Street Side E Chestertown, MD. 21620 of Sacred Heart Church (301) 778-3160 Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pm Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F Phone: 1-801-820-7437

Subs & Salads

Join Our Sub Club& Earn a Free Sub!

*Buy 12 - 6" subs and get the 13th FREE or

*Buy 12 - foot long subs and get the 13th FREE

Having A Party? Try our Party Platters & Six Foot Subs

> Mon ~ Sat 10am - 11pm Sunday ~ 11am - 11pm

Located next to the Newtowne Pub 778-6998 or 778-6999

Presidential ballot needs 'none of the above'

for President by opting not to endorse Michael Dukakis or George Bush. Neither man deserves an endorsement, and neither deserves to be Presi-

"This has been a terrible campaign, a national disap-pointment" the Post's editorial complains. "We feel that neither man is compelling enough to endorse." Hear, hear! I only wish that we could vote for "None of the Above" instead of having to choose between these guys. I'm sure that "None of the Above would win

But one of these men will become President on January 20th. Probably both men are competent and capable enough

however, is that no matter which man wins, the country

Bill Beekman

will be worse off four years from

I only hope that in 1992 the Presidential candidates have the courage to talk about ways to solve America's problems instead of bickering about trivialities and symbols and making unreasonable and unwise promises. But back to 1988. The nature of this year's campaign has been one that divides rather first thing the winner does is than unites. It has been negative. It has been nasty. The legacy of the campaign will be tries to mobilize the country in any particular way, he's going to face resistance from those whom he mocked. Can you imagine, for example, President George Bush trying to get additional funding for all of his weapon systems from the Democratic Congress?

Or President Michael Dukakis attempting to win broad-based support for liberal social legislation after adopting an Us-vs.-Them mentality throughout his campaign? Both men will fail.

The best hope is that the try to reunite the country on moderate ground. If we can stop waging ideological battles per- Reagan have been a painkiller. wait too long.

On Wednesday, the Wash- to run the country. My feeling, that once the new President haps we can move forward to- But the diseases of homeless

But even that will not make up for George Bush's coldness toward helping America's social problems or Michael Dukakis' foreign policy deficien-

America to stop ignoring its problems and to start solving them. That should not be a Democratic or a Republican concern, but an American con- America forward.

illusion that America is per- painkillers and start healing fect. If we do, we will only bring about our downfall.

ness and poverty and inade quate public education and deb that afflict America are presen

I doubt that George Bus can kill the pain as adeptly a

Reagan. And equally, I doubt the The time has come for Michael Dukakis has the sup port or ability to start confront ing these problems head-on, a he has pledged he will do. As result, neither man will mon

Sooner or later, America We can not maintain the is going to have to stop taking its problems in a realistic way The 1988 campaign has taugh us at least one thing: the an The eight years of Ronald swer is later. Let's hope we don

Foreign students compare campaign techniques to U.S.

by Karyn Iacangelo and Jennifer Griffin

The upcoming election in November has brought forth a number of different opinions from foreign as well as American students. Jutta Hammann, of West Germany, Petra Fajerson from Sweden, and Pascale Derakshani, of France, awaiting United States citizenship, offered a new perspective on American politics

Hammann stated that in general the candidates are emphasized, while the media and political parties do not play a large role in West German politics. The Socialist and Conservative parties promote ideas through candidates in contrast to the U.S. system. Their candidates represent the ideas of the party and express the views of the party as a whole.

public opinion is swayed by the pare the Swedish and Ameri media coverage of the candidates. States, politics play an active part in every West German's life. Today, the Conservative party is in control of the govern-

Fajerson stressed that experience is necessary for political office. The candidates must play a role in government for many years to become a government leader. Swedish candidates are aware of the media in similar ways to U.S. candidates. In Sweden, like West Germany, everyday life revolves around politics. Sweden has both a Socialist and a Democratic party, with the Socialist party in control today. As in West Germany, Swedish candidates focus primarily on the ideas of the parties.

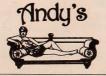

can political systems because Unlike the United of their different views

Derakshani expressed that in France the election more closely resemble those the U.S. There is a focus by the media on the personalities the candidates, however, tele vision in France is controlled by the government. The predominant party in France is the Socialist party of President Francois Mitterand. French citizens are much more involved in politics while Americans terd to be passive on political issues

In general, European express a greater interest is their respective political sys tems. Also, they have for the most part a better comprehen sion of their parties which rep resent the basic political idea of their parties.

Petra Fajerson of England, Jutta Hammann of West Germany, and West German opinions do not Pascale Derakshani of France are part of the International floor

Saturday, November 5th An Evening of Music & Intrigue!

Fine Cocktails and Light Fare

proper ID required

337 1/2 HIGH STREET

(301) 778-6779

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists Materials

> P.O. Box 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5292

Michael Dukakis

"It's time to meet the challenge of the next American frontier - the challenge of building an economic future for America that will create good jobs at good wages for every citizen in this land"

Governor Michael Dukakis

Democratic Presidential more than 3,000 babies. nominee Michael Stanley Dukakis, 54, was born November 3, 1933, in Boston, Massachusetts, and raised in nearby Brookline father, Panos His Dukakis, was 16 years old when he came to America from Greece in he spring of 1912. His mother, Euterpe Boukis, was just 9 when she arrived the following year. Panos worked in the mills of Massachusetts, studying at night to complete high school and college. In just 12 years, he became the first Greek immigrant to graduate from Harvard Medical School.

Euterpe worked her way through Bates College in Maine, graduating Phi Beta Kappa. After facing rejection for teaching positions because of her foreign birth, she was accepted as a high school teacher in New Hampshire.

Panos and Euterpe were sity. married a month before the stock market crash in 1929. For 50 years, Panos Dukakis practiced medicine in Boston, working six or seven days a week

Michael began his political career in the third grade, as president of his class. Known for his brilliance as a student, he graduated at the top of his class at elite Brookline High. He played varsity basketball at Brookline, ran cross-country, and was captain of the tennis

At Swarthmore College outside Philadelphia, Dukakis abandoned his pre-medicine studies after receiving a "D" in physics, shifting to political science. He played baseball for Swarthmore, hitchhiked across country, and wrote for the school newspaper, "The Pheonix.

While an undergraduate, Dukakis learned Spanish when he won a fellowship for a summer at the University of San Marcos in Lima, Peru. He also spent a semester in Washington, D.C., at American Univer-

Immediately after graduating, Dukakis was drafted into liberal of the two candidates, the Army. He served much of Dukakis is Pro-Choice, against his 21-month stint in Munsan, graduated with honors, 71 st in a class of 468.

Dukakis won his first public election, becoming a town meeting member in Brookline, in 1959. A reform Democrat, he was elected to the Massachusetts House of Representatives

He lost as a candidate for lieutenant governor in 1970. After serving as host for public television's "The Advocates, Dukakis returned to politics and was elected governor of Massachusetts in 1974. Shortly after his election, he found Massachusetts near bankruptcy. Dukakis cut social expenditures sharply and raised taxes to stem a huge deficit

In 1978, he was defeated for the Democratic nomination for governor. After serving on the Harvard faculty, he again won the governorship in 1982 and was elected to a third term

Known for being the more the death penalty, and intends Korea. In 1957 he entered to balance the budget with until he was 82, and delivering Harvard Law School, where he stricter tax enforcement.

Republican presidential California from 1948 to 1950, Liaison Office. In 1976 he was nominee George Herbert Walker Bush, 64, was born in Milton, Massachusetts, on the southern edge of Boston, on 1951 June 12, 1924

Prescott Bush, served as U.S. Senator from Connecticut from

Bush attended Phillips Academy in Andover, Massachusetts, graduating in June 1942. On his 18th birthday, he enlisted in the U.S. Navy Reserve. Bush received his wings and commission while still 18, becoming at the time the youngest pilot in the U.S. Navy. From August 1942 to September 1945, Bush was on active duty. He flew torpedo bombers in the Pacific from the USS San Jacinto, receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross and three Air Medals for his serv-

After World War II. Bush attended Yale University, graduating Phi Beta Kappa in 1948 with a B.A. in economics. He was captain of the Yale varsity baseball team.

Following his work for Dresser Industries as a trainee Bush was co-founder of a small oil royalty firm, Bush-Overbey Oil Development Company in

In 1953, he co-founded His father, the late Zapata Petroleum Corporation and one year later, at age 30, he became president and cofounder of Zapata Offshore Company, which pioneered in offshore oil-drilling equipment.

> In 1964. Bush was defeated in a bid for the U.S.

His run for the U.S. House of Representatives from Houston in 1966 was successful and he was re-elected to this post in

In 1970, Bush lost the race for U.S. Senate to Houston businessman Lloyd Bentsen Senator Bentsen is currently the Democratic nominee for Vice President. In 1971 and 1972 Bush was President Nixon's Ambassador to the the following: he is Pro-Life United Nations.

After serving nearly two years as Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Bush was sent to China, where and salesman in Texas and he served as Chief of the U.S. nuclear arsenals in Europe.

named Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. After leaving the CIA, he taught at Rice University in Houston.

Following his unsuccessful 1980 campaign for the Republican nomination for President. Bush was Ronald Reagan's choice for Vice President. He was inaugurated on January 20, 1981, as the 43rd Vice President of the U.S. He was reelected in 1984.

During nearly eight years as Vice President, Bush has chaired task forces on regulatory relief, on Atlanta child murders, on South Florida crime, on narcotics crossing the border, on community assistance in the Southwest, and on Japanese training.

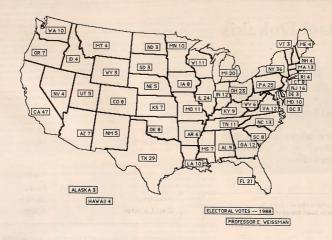

As Vice President, he has traveled over a million miles and visited 74 foreign countries.

Bush's policy stands are and adoption, against a gun ban, his plan to cut the deficit is by increased capital gains leading to the expension of the economy, for the death penalty, in addition Bush wants to keep

or George Bush?

Voting and the electoral process

by Monte Bourjailly

The presidential campaign season officially begins in February of the election year. February is the start of the primary season, where the candidates within each party battle one another for the nomination of that party. This intraparty competition to represent the party in November can be drawn out, as in Michael Dukakis' war with Jesse Jackson, or it can end quickly; agreat example of this is George Bush's victory over the other Republican challengers by Super Tuesday.

The two indispensable keys to success are: money and organization. Money is the most important asset of a campaign because without money a canpaign organization is necessary in order to reach the voters in potential administration. Many

all of the key states. The key states are the states with primaries. When a candidate wins a primary, that candidate wins delegates who vote for him or her on the first ballot at the party's national convention. If a particular candidate wins a majority of the possible delegates, then he or she automatically wins the nomination of the party

Approximately two-thirds of the convention delegates are chosen through primaries. The primary season ends in early to mid-June. If no candidate has a majority of delegates, then the party's national convention becomes what is called a brokered convention, where the candidates with fewer delegates trade their delegates to one of didate cannot create a campaign the stronger candidates for organization. A strong cam- planks and policies and positions in the party platform and political analysts were predict- continues through election day, that state plus the number of ing that the Democratic convention might be a brokered convention. Senators Gore and Simon were holding on to their accumulated primary delegates in hope that neither Jesse Jackson nor Michael Dukakis would have enough delegates to win the nomination without their assistance. Michael Dukakis did win a majority but Jesse Jackson did so well that Jackson was able put a few planks of his own into the Democratic platform Each party's national convention is held during the summer following the primary season These conventions are wonderful tools for rallying the party faithful, sewing the party back together after a divisive primary season and kicking off what is known as the "general election" which officially starts the first Tuesday after the first U.S. Representatives in that Monday in November.

The general election pits a "unified" Republican Party against a "unified" Democratic Party. The candidates, both Presidential and Vice Presidential, of both parties try to persuade the undecided American voters to vote for their ticket, as the President and Vice President package is called. The two tickets use money and organization to reach the voters in all fifty states

On election day the voters go to the polls and indirectly chose the man they feel will do the job best. The vote is indirect because the voter is actually choosing electors who will represent him or her in the electoral college. The number of electors per state is equal to the day after Labor Day and the number of U.S. Senators in state. The candidate who gets the most popular votes in the state wins all of the electors of that state. This relic of our Constitution was designed by our Founding Fathers to protect against what they perceived as the ignorant and whimsical nature of the general voting public. The College is now mainly symbolic but remains in place nonetheless.

The electoral process is continually changing. The current election has been condemned as issueless and savage. Conflict in politics is natural. What we, the voting public, must demand, is a debate over the issues, not an avoidance of the issues. Politicians must not be allowed to insult our intelli gence freely. We must work to perfect the democratic way of choosing our leaders.

Washington College students choose sides A poll by Lynn Burris

If the election were to be held tomorrow for whom would you cast your vote? choice percent

Rush 47.561 Dukakis 42,683 Don't know 4.878 Neither 4.878

What is your political ideology?

very liberal 6.024 liberal 25,301 somewhat liberal 16.867 moderate 21.687 somewhat conservative 13.253 conservative 10.843 very conservative 1.205 other 0 don't know 4.819

Do you feel a woman should have the right to choose to have an abortion?

agree 90.361 disagree 2.41 don't know 7.229

Do you feel the government should fund abortions?

agree 30.12 disagree 55,422 don't know 14.458

How do you feel about the way Reagan is handling himself as President?

approve 51.807 disapprove 39,759 don't know 8.434

Do you feel the U.S. can trust Gorbachev?

agree 3.373 disagree 32.53 don't know 24.096

As a senior Political Science major student's background, including everyin an election year it was hard for me to thing from home state, class rank, major, pass up the opportunity to write a thesis party identification, political ideology that deals with the current campaign. With this in mind I chose as my topic a study of Washington College student personal attitudes and opinions, also on attitudes toward the presidential elec-

The following tables demonstrate eral spending. a small portion of what my thesis studies have begun to prove. Using a sample on interviews with 82 students; although of a total of 109, randomly selected there are roughly ten interviews restudents, I asked a number of different maining the following numbers are a questions of each individual. The ques- very good representation of the views of tionnaire begins with a focus on the most WC students.

and a number of other important facts. The remainder of the survey deals with a range of issues including abortion. drugs, the pledge of allegiance and fed-

The results shown here are based

Who do you feel would be better qualified for the job of president, should the vice president have to take over?

Ouavle 12.048 Bentsen 71.084 don't know 16.867

Do you feel legalizing drugs would be a tragic surrender to the U.S. war on drugs?

agree 61,446 disagree 28.916 don't know 9.639

Whodo you feel would be more effective in dealing with the federal deficit?

Bush 34.94 Duke 38.554 don't know 20.482

Do you feel the Pledge of Allegiance should be mandatory in public schools?

agree 49,398 disagree 46,988 don't know 3.614

What do you feel is the most serious threat to our country today?

deficit 15.663 decline of values 24.096 soviets 8.434 competition $ 14,458 aids 15,663 other 21.687

Imagine "green-house effect "as a household

from now and George Bush has abuse been responsible for the environment. Two of the past three summers have broken temperature records around the country, drought has cut agricultural production by one-third, and the "green house-effect" has become a household term. Acid rain and pollution have killed all of the lakes along the continental divide, including one of the Great Lakes

There have been two accidents at nuclear power facilities and New York city now dumps all of it's garbage in the ocean after running out of available land two years ago, and this results in several health disasters along the Atlantic coast. The average water bill has tripled with the increasing need for water purification plants. These are only a handful of the catastrophes that will happen if the next President does not take drastic and immediate steps to reverse the version to the role of environ-dumping in Ocean City.

sit, and upgrading the state's aged a bill to upgrade Dulles on the Housing Committee and strongly supports education and community-development block grants. He believes that a financial-aid package for students should include grant, loan, and work.

Airport to also include BWI

Sarbanes encour

Sarbanes presently serves airports.

No one can lay the blame our first taste of the green-house effect this past summer entirely upon the Reagan/Bush administration, but the conservative

Stephen Lorenz

tendency for deregulation, loosening pollution controls on industries that depend on coal and oil, will result in only further increase acid rain production and the heating of the Earth's atmosphere. Don't be surprised if the next Ice Age comes a few thousand years early when the polar caps begin to melt. Furthermore, anyone who remembers the accident at Three-Mile Island can see what the result of further weakening by the of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will be complete disregard for the environment, or perhaps his ignorance of the problem, has lead to his support of Reagan vetoing the Clean Water Act twice and the appointment of James Watt as head of the Environmental Protection Agency. Watt sold off thousands of acres of national forests to private industry and claimed that leaves were the cause of ninety percent of the country's pollu-

George Bush's recent con-

Bush's anecdotes about walking through the woods with his children seem to be just that, stories about a once beautiful America. He doesn't talk about the hundreds of endangered species in the U.S. or the fact that we are running out of places to dump toxic wastes. His fishing trips with the press become hypocritical when compared with his lack of concern for the

Imagine it is four years current trend of environmental mentalist is certainly a surprise whales or the chemical annihi- has done more than its share of now and George Bush has abuse. Considering his past record. His late of the marine life in the polluting air and water. In Chesapeake Bay.

If elected, it can only be expected that Bush will continue with this lackadaisical attitude toward the environment in the next few years and his facade of concern will soon fade after the election. He will "stay on course" with the progression of cuts in funding for the E.P.A. that have gone on in the Reagan administration in order to pay for his myriad of new weapons. Perhaps he plans to solve the problem of the green house effect by steering us to a nuclear winter. Surely that would cool things off. In the next decade we will

will be too late to stop the steady decline in our planet's health. There will be nothing anyone first century. can do to bring back the deci-Stephen Lorenz is a junior mated rain forests, restore the loss of wildlife, or to clean the transfer from Rutgers; he is atmosphere. The United States majoring in English.

should learn to clean up it's own mess and it needs someone who will take the responsibility for doing it. George Bush is the former head of the C. I. A. . His idea of getting rid of pesticides that are harmful to the environment is to sell them to third world countries where they kill people as well as endanger wildlife. If allowed, the combination of Bush's policies of deregulation and minimal protection of the environment may culminate in an ecological disaster that could be an irrevers ible threat even to human life The American public must become aware of the doom over our heads and hold the next reach a critical point when it President to his promises concerning the environment if we are to survive into the twenty

for the Senate Democrats and the G.O.P: ing incumbent Roth for and transportation. The incum-Alan L. Keyes (R) SENATE

Alan L. Keyes plans to fight for the office of Maryland Maryland Paul S. Sarbanes (D) representative in the U.S. Senate against incumbent Paul Senate incumbent Paul S. Sarbanes, age 55, is seeking a Sarbanes. Keyes, an ex-assisthird term in the U.S. Senate. tant Secretary of State, empha-He previously served two terms sizes the empowerment of the (12 years) in the Senate and six people years in the House before that He supports tenant management in public housing, a Sarbanes encourages "opportustrong defense, a strong foreign nity and fairness", education, policy, and says he believes in a "living in a decent neighborhood", and "sharing economic strong family life. Keyes, considered to be a black conservabenefits' tive, believes in strict interpre-Sarbanes also supports affirmative action. He has been tation of the constitution and described by others as a "quiet supports affirmative action senator", and a "lobbyist in the To aid the situation in intellectual mold." South Africa, Keyes says he Throughout his terms in would propose what he calls a office, Senator Sarbanes "democratic empowerment chaired the Maryland delegabill." This bill would allow the tion in the Congress, which U.S. to give support in developconsisted of two senators and ing trade unions, civic associaeight members of the House. tions, and the like

He also worked to stop Phila Concerning the Chesap delphia and Camden from eake Bay Clean-up, Keyes believes the answer is providing money for research.

The Senator worked to Keyes encourages job crea improve the transportation tion, but is against a health network. The programs underinsurance mandate for workers. He is pro-contra-aid and taken involved: dredging the port of Baltimore, development believes that financial-aid for of the rail system, the highway students should be based on network, opening of an interstate to the midwest, mass tran-

Delaware

At age 62, William V. Roth is the incumbent U.S. Senator from Delaware. He was a senate sponsor of the Kemp-Roth bill and of Reagan's tax-cutting legislation. He claims his challenger, Woo, will raise taxes if

William V. Roth (R)

S R Woo S.B. Woo, age 51, is oppos-

Delaware's U.S. Senate seat. Woo, a professor of physics at the University of Delaware, won the lieutenant governors race by 429 votes-his first try for office. He says 1981 tax cuts by Roth benefited the rich. Woo believes there is a need for scientists in politics.

illegal slaughter of bow-head

New Jersey

Frank Lautenberg (D) New Jersey Senator Frank Lautenberg is looking forward to a second term in office. Lautenberg, at age 64, has "worked on the 21-year-old drinking age, reauthorization of Superfund and banning ocean dumping of plastics." His main concerns are the environment bent is an entrepreneur and co-Candidate Joe Vignola (R) founder of Automatic Data Processing.

Peter Dawkins (R) Pete Dawkins, age 50, is running for political office for the first time. He is challenging incumbent Frank Lautenberg for a seat in the U.S. Senate. Dawkins won the Heisman Trophy at West Point in 1958. Other of his accomplishments include being a Rhodes Scholar and Army brigadier general at 43, making him the youngest Army general. After retiring from the Army, Dawkins was an investment banker with Lehman Brothers moved to New Jersey in 1987.

Pennsylvania

age 39, challenges incumbest John Heinz (D), age 49, for his seat in the U.S. Senate.

Virginia

Charles Robb (D) Charles Robb, age 49, seeks another term in the U.S. Senate. He faces allegations that he attended parties when illegal drugs were used.

Maurice Dawkins (R) Maurice Dawkins, age 67, challenges incumbent Robbin his seat in the Senate. Dawk ins is the first black to be nominated for state office by

The Young Democrat's Poll would vote for in the election,

Two hundred and fifty people were randomly polled on October twentieth about their political views on the upcoming Presidential election.

Of the 250, 87 were registered Democrats, 76 were registered Republicans, 60 were Independents, and 27 remain undeclared.

123 responded in favor of the Bush/ Quayle ticket, 73 supported Dukakis and Bentsen, and 54 were undecided From this poll of 144 females and 106 males, three major trends seemed to emerge: ther Democrats or Independ More females tended to be reg- ents.

When asked who they istered Democrats, while mes males tended to be Republicans More Democrats crossed over party lines, voting for Bush and Quayle, than Republicant crossed over to vote for the Democrats. The majority of those still undecided were

A Presidential quiz

1. Name two presidents who ran for president as third party candidates after they'd cloth coat? left the White House?

What was Lyndon 1964? And, what happened to song? campaign songs anyway?

ton, and Fish?

4. Who was Fala? 5. Who wore a Republican What Presidential 6 campaign used an Irving Ber-Johnson's campaign song in lin song and what was that

7. Who described Ike's 3. Who were Martin, Bar- Secretary of State as Dull, the House of Representative after he'd left the White House 10. Where was George Bush on November 22, 1963?

Send answers to Pro Weissman. Winners announced on election night.

9. What President satio

Duller, Dulles? 8. Name Gerry Ford's Vice

1988 debates had little effect on the campaign

exchange of 1960, televised debates have been perceived as pivotal events in the process of electing a president. The campaign of 1988 has been no exception. During the spate of presidential and vice-presidential debates waged this fall, hardly a day passed when we were not reminded by the press that these joint appearances were decisive, represented a make-or-break effort for one or the other of the candidates, were the single point upon which the entire election turned. Even in their aftermath, the debates are still being credited with determining the shape of popular opinion. Baloney. The fact is that the Great Debates of 1988 have had a negligible effect, if any, on the campaign. Indeed, the election results will probably be diametrically opposed to those of the actual debates

Let's look at the numbers According to most, Michael Dukakis "won" the first presidential debate in September, with an ABC News poll gauging the margin of victory as high as 54% to 46% for the Governor. The subsequent vice-presidential de-

Ever since the Kennedy-Nixon bate went even worse for the Republiabout 10 points. cans, with Lloyd Bentsen trouncing the bumbling Dan Quayle by over 20 percentage points in the polls. George Bush regained some ground in the second presidential debate, but even this was a rather narrow victory that changed few peoples minds. Therefore, in terms of who was perceived as winning the debates, the Democrats came out on top with a 2-1 performance. Yet through it all, the Republican ticket has consistently held the edge in presidential preference polls. Although Dukakis scored higher in the first debate, he managed to climb barely to dead even with Bush in the polls, Even after Dan Quayle's disastrously sophomoric performance, Bush was shown to be building a commanding lead in the popular vote and an almost impervious edge in the electoral college. And in the wake of his mediocre show ing in the second debate, Bush still

Jonathan Sarris

What these facts show is that while voters feel the Democrats are better debaters than the Republicans, they do not see this as a decisive factor in determining their actual vote. Dukakis may have presented his ideas in a prettier package, but voters did not buy his product as a result. Factors other than the debates have been motivating this campaign. It has become a battle of the sound bites, with each candidate focusing attention not on reasoned oratorical exchange, but on short, glitzy, accusatory television spots. The debates were sideshows, extended sound bites out of which TV commercials have been carved. For both candidates, the debates were not events to be "won," but simply not to be lost. And this George Bush has done with great proficiency. He did not lose any of his debates decisively by a conspicuous gaffe or the sort of dithering babble he has been prone to in the past, and by staving off defeat in the debates he was able to build on his lead in the polls.

Why have the debates played such managed to solidify an advantage of a minor role in the 1988 campaign? electoral politics.

selves to be intimidated by the candidates into participating in debates whose format precluded anything like a substantive discussion of the issues. Extremely limited in their ability to ask follow-up questions, the media representatives moderating the debates allowed Bush and Dukakis to dance around the issues without really giving a straight answer. Governor Dukakis, by some feat of rhetorical gymnastics, managed to turn a question about his position on capital punishment into a statement on drug policy. Bush, questioned about his policy on the homeless, mumbled something about the McKinney Act and "a thousand points of light." And both were able to get away with it. Little wonder that the League of Women Voters pulled their support from this spectacle.

So the Democrats won the debates and the Republicans, in all probability, will win the election. Until presidential contests become debates in the true sense of the word, they will continue to play a negligible role in

Human nature places limits on every endeavor That the Vice-Presidential debate upper limit of human longevity, despite the power-of-positive-thinking line— as the hangover from those two failed

had all the substance of cotton candy is something that I have yet to hear anyone deny. Yet despite the best efforts of each candidate and his advisor's to build awall of meaninglessness, something of substance occasionally seeped through the cracks.

One inadvertent revelation was the credo, as it were, that Dan Quayle delivered near the end: "You can do anything you want if you just set your mind to it." Like every other phrase spoken by Quayle or Bensen, it is a platitude. But it is a platitude that means something. Its meaning is one that is taken to heart by many Americans, perhaps most. Unfortunately, it all the advances that have been made in medicine since the time of Pasteur, hovers around the century mark. No man, no matter how great his ability, has more than a hundred years in which to fulfill his ambitions. Humans are further limited by each other. All the resources of nature will only go so far, and since we must contend with others for those resources, someone is bound to be disappointed no matter how the spoils are divided. And if competing with our contemporaries is not enough, we must contend with our ancestors who in inumerable decisions over centuries, have created the political, social, and economic realities that we now live in.

Human beings have limits. The the last president who not only talked

If this seems too abstract, consider

Ronald Reagan does that right now- crusades but practiced it: Lyndon Johnson Johnson may not have had the inspira-

Jeff Schneier

Quayle, revealingly, tried to compare himself), but he set himself like a bulldog to the task of making those visions live. He waged war, with little thought to the expense, on poverty and Communism. It didn't work: the poor are still with us, Southeast Asia is under the most brutal of tyrannies, and the economic misry of the seventies can be seen left?

What is disturbing about Quayle's credo is that Quayle is from what is tional vision of his predecessor (to whom allegedly the conservative party in American politics. Yet what is mo gent in conservative doctrine, what the conservatives could well teach the rest of us, is the idea that human nature places certain limits on every human endeavor, including every political endeavor, and that we should adjust our institutions around such limits instead of trying to adjust people to some institutional ideal.

If the right loses this insight, then what can we expect from them but a slicker, meaner, more traditional version of what we can already get from the

For Men and Women Welcome Parents & Enjoy the Weekend!

Please Stop Down & See Us!

Traditional Clothing

Mon.-Thurs. 9 to 5:30 - Fri. 9 to 8 - Sat. 9 to 6

778-6090

TONING

Two horizontal tanning beds

SPECIAL FOR STUDENTS $6.00 for a 30 minute session

778-4144

HIGH STREET

CHESTERTOWN, MD

Affirmative Action: Reforming the status quo

receive special treatment when but not a free ride. their applications for employment and professional schools into consideration past injustices one develops a tolerance and understanding as the present hurdles faced by disadvantaged groups are recognized.

The consequences of past discriminations on today's women and blacks establish a legitimacy of need for affirmative action and this should be considered in an election year.

woman or black win, but rather, a preference for hiring from these groups under certain conditions. By special treatment, I

Women and Blacks should mean deliberate consideration,

An objection for affirmative action illustrates the failare being considered. Taking ure to see that discrimination affects the group and not just individuals. Some might ques tion: How can preferential treatment benefit a dead slave? Blacks and women were not discriminated against singlehandedly, but rather collectively; therefore a logical and Affirmative action is not a suitable remedy would be for catch-all phrase for letting the rights to be assigned to the group rather than particular individuals.

Laura McIntire

Politicians and others who do not support affirmative action fail to take into account the power of social control. Some want to maintain the status quo of discrimination because they find it comfortable. Homoviable society, like "the old boy network," and such solidarity is threatened with the intro duction of different individugeneity of class and social expeale The more competitive and rience builds a feeling of communion among members of a conservative a business is the more difficult it seems to be for women and blacks to enter it In the face of the obstacle of confronting the established order, women and blacks need the government to act as their defender.

The Democrats:

down but not out

As 1988 and the Reagan era near an end it is important to take a long look at the Democratic Party and its future. If this presidential election is already over, as many people already assume, there are many questions we must ask. Is the Democratic Party falling apart? Are its ideals and goals a thing of the past? Must we adapt to the conservative tendencies that the American Party has held firm for so many forward.

Wendy Kloiber

people have shown through their support of Ronald Reagan and now George Bush?

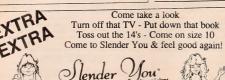

My answer to these questions is a definitive "no." The Democratic Party is far from giving in. It is a strong party that shows its strength in its control of both houses of the national legislature and some of America's most outstanding governors. True, much more could be accomplished if there were a Democrat in the White House, but if we have survived and grown stronger elsewhere during the conservative reign of Ronald Reagan now is no time to give in.

years are ones of honesty, compassion and fairness. minorities deserve equal opportunity to do something with their lives is not an ideal of the past, but one of the future Helping to provide young people with a college education is not an out-of-date goal, but one just created. Providing shelter and food for the homeless is not a concern of past decades but of future generations. To deny these ideals would be to dem the accomplishments th Democratic Party has worked hard for in areas such as civil rights, social services, education, and environmental protection. Now is not the time to The ideals the Democratic give in, but the time to move

Dukakis

for President

Chestertown 778-0922

ఆring your student I.D. & get you 2nd session FREE!

1st Session Free

- No Contract
- · No Fee

 Free Figure Analysis of The Pub

Located in Back

Endorsed by: THE NEW ENGLAND HEART CENTER, P.C. A PROVINCE CARDING INSTITUTE DEDICATED TO THE BECOCKETING AND THE RATEUTS WARMED TO OF COMORANT FROM E STANDARD, MITTER FORMAT ALAPTATE SANTENAN ESTATA AND COMORANTO

After

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

Hockey improves on past achievements

by Kathy Brewster In only their fourth year of intercollegiate play Washington College hockey has improved on past records and achievements.

This year WC hockey has increased their winning percentage with a 9-5 record against a tougher schedule compared to last year. Currently they are ranked seventh in the NCAA Southern Region and third in the MCA Southeast Region, which is calculated by post-season results.

Among other accomplishments nine players submitted their names to participate in the Maryland and Washington Colleges Field Hockey Association (MWCFHA), Select Team and all were accepted. Jenny Blenkstone, Beth Matthews, Brin O'Neal, Carole Reece, Amy Tiehel, Linda Anders, Julie

Karen Reck have the option to their own players be considered to represent the Beth Mathews (left) assisted to lead a strong Washington attack this season Southeast Region in Nationals.

Coach Guinan and Coach Armstrong are both taking a team in the Southeast tourna- half play gave two goals to

Schram, Donna White and ment enabling them to coach Western Maryland and ended defeated the higher ranked

This past weekend Wash ington College competed in a urnament organized by the USFHA which, as Coach Guinan stated, "allowed the girls to experience hockey on a different avenue." The teams were divided into two sections with Washington in the top division.

The first game started off slow for WC against Mt. St. Mary's Washington had trouble offensively and was unable to match their opponents goal from a penalty stroke. The game ended in a 1-0 loss for Washington College

Washington's play against Western Maryland was not up to their usual style of aggressive play. Offensively they pulled together and scored twice in the first half but this didn't stop their opponent. Second

the game with a tie

Georgetown and Catholic University were the last teams faced on Sunday. Washington held the score to a scoreless tie against Georgetown, the eventual tournament champion

Catholic University Washington's biggest rival presented another close game but Washington came out on top with a 2-1 victory. Amy Tiehel and Julie Schram provided the winning goals.

Coach Guinan believed that the "greatest aspect of the win was the style of play in which we ended regular season play." This was the second time in a week that Washington has

At the end of regular season play the leading players of the Washington field hockey team were selected to receive team honors from their team-

The leading scorers this season were Carole Reece and freshman, Julie Schram. Leading in assists this season was Beth Matthews and most defensive saves were registered by Amy Tiehel. These are just some of the outstanding players on the Washington field hockey team who have helped their team reputation as a contender in any game.

Novice crew competes on Chester

mates

by Julie Greene On the Chester River this past Sunday afternoon, the Women's Novice Crew team competed in their second fall race which will prep them for their race this weekend. Two Washington Eightman crews competed against one crew from the Potomac Boat Club in Washington, DC. The Potomac Boat Club crew finished the three mile race 45 seconds ahead of both Wash ington crews

The two Washington Eights kept close to one another coming across the finish line. "The last 10% [of the race] showed their three months superior extra training," said Coach Mickey Doulin, about the opposition. Doulin added that the race was "a very valuable learning experience for the

The entire crew team from WC will travel to northern Virginia tomorrow to compete in "The Head of the Occoquan Regatta," which is a major Washington area fall regatta

On the Occoquan Wash ington will again compete against Potomac, and most likely will also compete against crews from rival George Mason University

Soccer enters must win situation tomorrow in state tournament

by Don Steele

The Washington College soccer team is now in the final ference in the game was the stage of their season. The team breaks that the Sho'men did plays John Hopkins tomorrow not get. A penalty shot was not in the semifinals of the state called for Washington and a tournament. A win would place bad bounce led to the second them in the finals and a loss Hopkins goal. The Sho'men would end their season. played a strong defensive game

Tomorrows game will give just as their game plan dictated the Sho'men a chance to avenge To win tomorrow they last week's 2-0 loss to the Blue must show the offensive powethey showed against Dela-

The Hopkins game last ware Valley on Tuesday. week was fairly close. The dif-

The team dominated the game and came through with an aggressive second half. The team scored three goals and won 3-0. Mike Bishop scored two goals and Rob DiGiovanni scored the other. Steve Leary was credited with the shutout

The team now is in a must situation. They have to beat Hopkins or else their sea-

The N.F.L. at midseason: a look back

This NFL season is only half over, but there have already been a number of interesting twists to the predictions made in the preseason. There has been the regular share of excitement, disappointment, superb performances and lastminute heroics. Some of these performances are most definitely worth noting.

SURPRISE TEAM OF THE YEAR- The Cincinnati

Brett Lankford

Bengals. Coach Sam Wyche was nearly fired after last year's atrocious performance. The Bengals lost games as a result of poor coaching manuevers and anonexistent defense. There is a world of difference between this year and last

The Bengals, 7-1 at midseason, are led by the aerial accuracy of Boomer Esiason and the stellar receiving of Eddie Brown. Sam Wyche is now the toast of Cincinnati, and his job seems uncharacteristically safe

The Phoenix Cardinals have also turned it around in their new town, but they are not talking Super Bowl in Ari-

DISAPPOINTMENT OF There is now word of a steroid missing from the first part of warmer in L.A. After falling to THE YEAR - TEAM - The Indianapolis Colts. Great things were expected from this team in 1988. They made the playoffs for the first time in ten years in 1987, and Eric Dickerson was supposed to lead his team to the promised land this year. Dickerson has continued to run for 100 yards a game, but the team has fallen apart around him. Coach Ron Meyer has spent too much time with the quarterback controversy, starting three different quarterbacks in the first eight games. Owner Robert Irsay is not happy with the team's play, and it could very well be downhill from here. They have traded away their first round picks for the next couple of years, and the future looks bleak for this BIGGEST STORY OF

THE YEAR - The drug problem in the NFL. This is also the most alarming story of the year. The preseason was dominated by the suspension of big-name players as a result of substance abuse. The problems reached an all-time high with the cocaine-induced death of David Croudip of the Atlanta Falcons.

problem in the NFL. Pete Rozelle is attempting to institute a get-tough policy against both steroids and illegal substances. One can only hope that the new policy is effective Otherwise, the game may lose some of its glamour, along with some of its players.

BIGGEST NON-STORY OF THE YEAR - The rash of quarterback injuries. Many people seem to be suggesting that quarterback injuries are completely new to the game of football. This idea is absolutely absurd. Football is a very physical game, and it is only natural for there to be injuries at a specialized position such as quarterback. None of these injuries were a result of a cheap shot, which has been a problem in the past. There has only been one claim of a deliberate attack on the quarterback the entire year. This brings up the next

THE IT HAD TO HAP-PEN SOMETIME AWARD Jim McMahon's twenty-third injury of his career. The Chicago quarterback quite possibly injures himself getting up in the morning. Something was the season, but this empty feeling came to an end last Sunday against New England. McMahon has a sprained knee and will be out for four to six weeks.

At least this will give him time to return to his favorite hobby - advertising. It will be interesting to see if the Bears collapse with the loss of their leader. Still, it doesn't seem very possible

JERK OF THE YEAR . Brian Bosworth, Seattle Seahawks. This hardly needs any sort of explanation. "The Boz" wrote(?) a book in the offseason describing everything from corruption at Oklahoma to his hatred for his Seattle teammates to that neat little haircut of his. Still, he will have to suffer in Seattle with a six million dollar contract. Here's hoping that Bo Jackson does a tap dance on his forehead again this year - that was the most gratifying moment of DISAPPOINTMENT OF THE YEAR - PLAYER - Jay Schroeder, Los Angeles Raiders. In one short year, Schroeder has gone from a star in the third string in the offseason, Schroeder demanded a trade. He wound up with the Raiders, where he has exhibited the disturbing tendency to throw more passes to the other team than to his teammates. This is a monumental fall for a player who was supposed to be a superstar for years to come.

There is, however, one positive point in the situation. If nothing else, his blond hair fits in nicely on the California

These ideas also help to develop some interesting questions for the second half of the year. For example, are the Cincinnati Bengals for real? Will three teams from the NFC West make the playoffs? Is the Giants schedule really as easy as it looks? Has Tom Landry lost his magic? When was the last time Tampa Bay was on national television. These and other questions should be answered in the second part of the NFL - 1988.

Brett Lankford, a resident of the writers floor, looks forward with anticipation to the nation's capital to a bench remainder of the N.F.L. season.

"A celebration of great joy": Election '88

by Michele M. Volansky

Tuesday November eighth will be, for most students at Washington College, the date of their first voting Presidential election and many students look to obtaining quick results of the election. The College, aided by the Lecture Series. Committee and Political Science department member Dr. Edward Weissman will provide this much-needed "instant analysis" as they celebrate the occasion with in-depth Election Night Coverage

The coverage, deemed "A Party in Honor of Democracy" will be begin at eight-thirty p.m. in both Hynson Lounge and the Coffee-House. Only those who registered and voted in the election will be admitted, howhe will be able to tell exactly who voted "by looking into their eyes and asking them if they did or not" in the hope of obtaining a politically-aware audience for the coverage.

Weissman, who appears rather excited at the upcoming election and the issues contained within it, will be running a computer with election data stored in it, while at the same time serving as the "resident expert" for students who have questions regarding not only the candidates, but also the election process itself Further information may be obtained through the three televisions that will be set up in the Coffee-House, along with the three additional televisions that are being placed in Hynson Lounge. All of the major networks will be able to be viewed and are expected to provide all-

> FOR RENT The Glass House

On the water Quaker Neck Jan 17th to May 16th 8 miles from campus * Furnished

- * 5 bedroom
- * 2 bath* Laudry * Equipped kitchen Deep water pier

Call: Tom at 648-5708 (after 4)

night coverage, along with expert analysis throughout the night. This, coupled with the information of Weissman and his computer, is sure to give students a full picture of the electoral process and the in-

Although the lowest voter turnout is consistantly the 18-25 age group, Weissman expects that Washington College students will give a larger than average turnout. He states that the reason for this is that WC students are often more politically aware of not only the candidates, but of the issues as well. He adds that it has recently been discovered through a student thesis that the largest number of politically aware students here at the College ever, and Weissman states that are liberals, which should furnish an interesting amount of conversation at the election cov-

Both food and drink will be provided on Tuesday night, along with door prizes and contests for the best predictions. Jokingly, to this regard, Weissman predicted that "George Washington will not win." He was somewhat evasive of his personal predictions, but added that, "George Bush will win. Or

The election coverage looks to be one that celebrates with "great joy." However, on a more somber note in regards to our voting responsibility and democratic system, Dr. Weissman states, "People are dying around the world for something we ignore and take for granted and whatever you take for granted, you lose." All students are urged to take these words to heart and vote on November eighth, then join in the celebration at eight in both the Student Center and in Hynson Lounge.

Dr. Edward Weissman of the Political Science Department will serve as the "resident expert" for the Election Night Coverage on Tuesday.

On campus events for week of 11/4-10

Weekend-11/4, 6,7

The Washington College Film Series this week presents Aria, a movie which visually celebrates selections from famous operas as interpreted by ten of the greatest directors in film today.

Sunday-11/6 The Lecture Series will be hosting a variety of activi-

Presidential election. On Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Alumni House, the first of these activities will be a viewing of the 1960 Kennedy-Nixon Debates All are welcome to come and relive, or experience for the first time, these historic debates

Tuesday-11/8

Literary House. Wednesday-11/9 The Dance on Film Series this week is titled Baryshnikov: the Dancer, the Dance. The film will be shown at 6 p.m. in the Coffee-House.

The Voices and Visions Follow the dance film Film Series on American poets series with the Lecture Seties this week for the upcoming will be showing a film on Sylvia ries presentation of Dr. Avery James Joyce's Nausiciaa.

Plath at 8 p.m. in the O'Neill Gilbert's talk on "Scratch and Sniff: a Serious Discussion on Olfaction." The talk will be held in the Sophie Kerr Roome the Miller Library at 7:30 p.m.

Thursday-11/10

The Sophie Kerr Series will host to Dr. Margot Norris at 7:30 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room. Her talk is titled "Modernism, Myth and Desire in

Austin Carpet Rt .213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport

1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET

Fin Fur FeatherInn

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall , Md. 639-7454

WELCOME PARENTS!

Great Place for Family Dining! We Specialize in Fresh Seafood!

> Friday & Saturday Nites LIVE PIANO BY Mickey Dulin

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21020

301-779-300

You dial. We deliver.

Local artist captures Washington, Ringgolds

by Deborah R. Nahmias According to Art History ofessor, Dr. Janson-LaPalme, rist Charles Willson Peale has her painter." That is only one the many connections that eale has with not only Washhore, Chestertown in paticuhis most important connecbunty School (the predecessor sonal and professional relaily and his close relationip with George Washington.

unty School was made the American Revolution. ndation for Washinton Colabecause his father was the After trying his hand at a wide

Master of the Kent County variety of professions, he found School. After a large gap in time wherein his father passed away, William Smith took over the best living was through ortrayed [George] Washing- as Master. Smith is the man painting portraits. Atthistime credited with turning the school there were not many quality into the basis for Washington College.

seems to think that, years later, nate demand that needed to be aton College and the Eastern because his father was once the filled and Peale was lucky Master, Peale and Smith were Janson-LaPalme states able to maintain a friendly, close to fill the demands. Through at though Peale had many relationship whenever Peale this early career choice, Peale nnections with the Eastern returned to Chestertown.

os were through his father's his family moved across the Bay "He painted himself quite a few sociation with the Kent to the port city of Annapolis, where Peale spent the rest of Washington College), his own his childhood. It was in Annapolis in this time period hat time in Annapolis, he decided aship with the Ringgold Peale made the important contocontinue his education. Prior nections that would later lead to this time, Peale had not had him to paint portraits of some any disciplined education with Born in Queen Anne's of the most historical figures of banty in 1741, Peale lived in the Eastern Shore, and more asstrown far before the Kent important, portraits of the

While his residency was ge. For the first eight years of still based in Annapolis, Peale life, Peale resided in the tried many different trades.

that his most successful trade and the one that earned him portrait painters in the state of Janson-La Palme Maryland. There was a defienought to be around in order painted somewhere in the range When Peale's father of one thousand portraits, of passed away in 1750, Peale and which Janson-LaPalme said,

> In 1768, after Peale had spent a considerable amount of which to support his paintings. "A handful of supporters, stated Janson-LaPalme, including Mr. Ringgold, "gave him [Peale] the backing to finance a trip to England" so that he could work on independent study. Artist Charles Willson Peale was called one of Maryland's finest continued on page 16 portrail painters of his day, due to his work with George Washington.

Opera highlights come to Chestertown and WC

of Boris Goldovsky. Goldcomes to Washington ge as a prominent memof the Opera community. m for his witty and inforwe intermission programs Seville by Rossini, La Bohime mann, tenor; and Michael the program allows for an ex- sion.

18.00pm in Tawes theater tan Opera House, his shows The Old Maid and the Thief by Washington CollegeConcert have been the inspiration to Denotti, Rigoletto by Verdi, and Grand Piano, which was refor interaction between the both expert and novice listen- Samson and Delilah by Saint. ers of opera for years composed of six different opera Goetz, soprano; Caroline Thoscenes, including The Barber of mas, mezzo soprano; Kirk Red-by Todd Deitelbaum on the Saturday afternoon by Puccini, and Carmen by Willson, baritone. Goldovsky cellant introduction to the fast-This evening, November broadcasts from the Metropoli-Bizet. Other samples include-himself will be accompanying cinating world of opera. Mr.

Accompanying Goldovsky gifts of music patrons. Mr. Goldovsky's concert is is a quartet of distinguished himself will be accompanying cinating world of opera. Mr

as diverse as his talents. It is singers that include Candice enjoyable evening for both the dentsof Washington Collegeare opera lover as well as first time reminded to bring their concert listeners. The wide diversity of series tickets for easy admis-

the group on the Steinway Goldovsky's outstanding talent cently restored by the generous music and the audience distinguishes him as one of the great The concert should be an performers of opera today. Stu-

Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

A Shear Design

Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

Fall Special -Special on Any Perm, Cut & Style (with Laurie) -Sunglitzing & Style $27.00 (with Jody)

778-0898

Mon-Fri Free Hors D'oeuvres

Happy Hours

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

FRIDAY NITE ENTERTAINMENT

Friday, November 4th ~ D.J. Steve Taylor Friday, November 11th ~ Heat & Cold Sweat Horns

Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers

Wednesday Tuesday 3 shots for the price of 1

Thurday Schnapps 4:30--6:30 Free Hor D'oeuvres

515 Washington Street 778-1984

SPORTS

Intramural football All-Star teams

by team representatives the Lambda's following players have been selected to the 1988 All-Star Intramural Football teams. Western Division Ben Lamana: Budha's

Based on ballots returned

Brothers Matt Petz: Budha's Greg Rupert: Budha's

four-man relay event in the time of 20.35.

Brothers

Matt Kelly: Pseudo Kevin Colbeck: Pseudo

Lambda's

Tim Hormes: Pseudo Lambda's Bob Martino: Pseudo Lambda's Graham Wildman: Toxic Avengers Phil Ryan: Toxic Avengers

Avengers Eastern Division Joe Boan: Boan's Bomb- ester Dawgs

Kevin Doyle: Death Be- Dawgs Steve Klien: Death before Dawgs

Pete VanBuren: Death Dawgs

Brian Kelly: Toxic Before Disco J.

Crow Warren: Dorch- Dawgs

ester Dawgs Chris Rosfelder: Dorchmous selection by team repre-David Pushar: Dorchester sentatives.

Chris Long: Dorchester A game between St. John's College in Annapolis is sched-Frank Crivelli: Dorchester uled for November 13.

Sports trivia

Jeff Troester: Dorchester

Bold represents a unani.

Andy Webb: KA's

The answer to last weeks

Pete Gogolak was the first soccer-style kicker in the N.F.L. This week's question:

Which was the final team to desegregate in the N.F.L? The correct answer to this question will win a free chess

Janson-La Palme that this, of pizza from the Coffee House Drop it off in the Coffee

*In the event that more

"At this point," stated than one person answers co-

Turkey Trot winners

The Lambda Pi Delta Fraternity team, consisting of Kevin Colbeck, Pat Youngs, Bob Martino and Tim Hormes won the men's

The AOII's won the women's four-man relay event with members Judie Berry, Mary Bisset Mc Curdy, Denise Smith and Krises Schimminger in the time of 27.20. The Magill/Davies team won the women's two-man relay in 32.29. Sean O'Conner won the men's individual event in the time of 22.43. Stephanie Milton won the women's individual event in the time of 28.06. Congratulations to all of those who entered this year's Turkey Trot!

continued from page 15 Later on, after he had come back from England, Peale made several trips to Annapolis and Chestertown, depending on ing at the time. He trips were made for the purpose of painting both Mr. and Mrs. Ringgold. Peale painted a regular size portrait of Mrs. Ringgold and both a regular and miniature portrait of Mr. Ringgold. In fact, this miniature has recently tinue painting the first presi-

the Hynson-Ringgoldhouse, the his life. current home of the College's presidents.

"Peale moved around a lot where the Ringgolds were liv- [after his stay in Annapolis]" said Janson-LaPalme, "but finally settled in Philadelphia", where he became an important figure in the world of art. Here he was able to strengthen his early connection with George Washington and further con-

been restored and still hangs in dent during different stages of Janson-LaPalme's information on the late painter comes not only through his role as a professor of Art History, but through a vast amount of independant research. He and history department member, Dr. Guy Goodfellow, collaborated and wrote a biougraphy of Peale as part of a project for the Smithsonian Institute in Washington D.C. It seems to all biographies of Peale is most Fill out on a piece of paper, you important because of Peale's name and answer. close relations with the college. There have been, however, a House in the Trivia Question few complications with the answer envelope (behind the publishing and the Smithsonian bar). The correct answer will keeps postponing the date of be in next week's ELM. publication.

Janson-LaPalme, "I hope the rectly there will be a drawing book will come out in 1991, the among the correct answers to year of the anniversary of determine the winner. Please,
Peale's birth." only one entry per person

Mom's Cookie Jar

It is documented that if a person exercises the heart at 120-130 beats per minute for half-an-hour, three days a week, that person would undergo what is known as a training effect.

That person, all else being constant, would lose weight, have lower blood pressure, be less tired during the day, tend to stop smoking if a smoker, have lower cholestoral levels in the blood, be less prone to heart attacks and strokes, and have a stronger sense of well being

People who exercise regularly tend to live longer and lead more fulfilling lives. SO EXERCISE - PRUDENTLY!!!

There are still some positions available on the serving line and in the dishroom. A weekend numbers person is also needed. Anyone interested in working for the W.C.D.S. contact Mrs. Crew.

For those students enrolled in our linen package service, don't forget, you can pick-up your clean linens on

Thursdays during the dinner meal

There are several students who have paid for service and as yet have not availed themselves of the service that's been paid for. If you have any questions regarding this service, contact Mrs. Crew

I trust all of you who attended last Wednesday's dinner, had a good time? Congratulations to the winners of the cooler and the sail boat, drawn at that dinner. The prizes were donated by the Coca Cola Company.

"Breakfast To Go" seems to be quite a success. For those of you who have not heard about it, the Dining Service is serving juice, coffee, hot tea, and the pastry of the day, from the front line area, from 9:30 A.M. to 10:00 A.M. Next Wednesday' dinner will feature an Oriental Night . The menu will feature: Pepper Steak, Pork Eggrolls, and Almond Chow Mein. There will be fortune cookies, too.

Well, I guess that's it until next

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 9

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, November 11, 1988

Young Republicans toast the good life and the victory of President-elect George Herbert Walker Bush at Tuesday night's Election party, held in Hynson Lounge. The party was sponsored by the Lecture

Psychologist discusses research in stress

by Ed Schroeder

Dr. Robert Kriegel, Ph.D. authority on defusing pressure, will hold a free seminar at he University of Maryland open to all on the stresses that re encountered at a college evel. Dr. Kriegel's visit is part fanational tour that is sponored by the Nuprin health care

"You'll find that that stutests put themselves under so such pressure that they don't now what they're thinking," riegel pointed out. Under the nding of Nuprin, he visited arious colleges both as a peaker and as a learner. When I first went out, I was old to find out what I could and use it in a way to help [college tudents] reduce their stress.

Kriegel started out as ngineer, and because of his interest in that field moved n to advertising, where his ireer as a psychologist began. "It was the Sixties, and one was questioning evething," he commented

This led him back to Co-Imbia University, which later wolved him in sports psychol-& He became concerned with letes and the pressures that by face with both Olympic professional teams. His

their fears in this area

From sports, he started to apply his knowledge to the other aspects of life. Serving on the Board for the California Governor's Council on Wellness and Physical Fitness gave him some information for his next book, The C-Zone Peak Performance Under Pressure, illustrating the findings and research he had put together over the last sixteen years.

"Stress is an energy," Kriegel explains, "an incredible energy that can be put to some good use. It's not so much that you overcome it, it's that you learn to control it."

Dr. Kriegel found that the fundamentals of many individuals are awkward and out of order. He pointed out that people in the past, for the most part, were out looking for jobs that would put them off best financially. This not only led to many losing their heads, but also many became heavily addicted to illegal substances.

"You have to be happy with what you do," he says It'll allow you to be more creative and to illiminate a good deal of unneeded stress."

The inevitable buildup of stress can cause many problems for college students, Kribook, Inner Skiing, was egel says. Not only is it imporhitten to help people overcome tant to keep up with studies; tact security.

but there is this new lifestyle to adjust to, the dealing with roommates, financial troubles, future job interviews, and not to forget the encompassing threat of one's parents. These can create headaches, backaches, sleepless nights, apathetic behavior, and restlessness. This, says Kriegel, could lead to the worst inability to continued on page 12

Disco ball found by Patricia Karnes On Friday, November 4,

at 5:15 A.M., Security Officer Williams, while on patrol, discovered several cereal dispensers and the Grand Ballroom ball missing from the Dining

Joe Roberts, Chief of Security, said that the assailants entered and exited through the dining hall's roof hatch

The Grand Ballroom ball was returned November 9, at 2:30 A.M. It was followed by an anonymous phone call, to ensure that the ball had been received. The cereal dispensers, however, are still missing.

This incident is still under investigation by security as a breaking and entering. Anyone having any information about the incident should con-

College initiates revised calendar

by Tracey Connell

The Maryland State Legislature took a recent stand on the issue of summer employed college students. Though no bill or state law was passed, many public institutions voluntarily adjusted their calendars to better accommodate summer work schedules. Washington College has made no such Maryland's Governor

Schaefer introduced the discussion at the state level. Schaefer demic years; it commences both wanted to address concerns years before Labor Day raised by a coalition of Ocean City businesses.

The coalition stated that they were greatly inconvenienced by the mass exodus of employees who returned to colleges and universities before Labor Day. They argued that the tourist season does not slow until after that date.

businesses used an incentive plan to try to alleviate the problem. Employees who were able to work until Labor Day received a bonus. Those who left before were ineligible. The plan was not successful overall.

Higher Education State Board. stated that "no bill was passed most of the public institutions in Maryland agreed to change their calendars.

A representative of the Maryland Independent College and University Association reported that legislature may currently be in the works.

Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, said, "I would be amazed if there were legislation on that issue.

College adjusted the calendar "five or ten years ago" to help of the semester.

students with summer jobs in

In years when the schedule commenced before Labor Day, "we were not aware of any student concerns." pointed out that no official complaints had been made. In addition, he stated that the College is not aware of any significant rise in absenteeism because of that issue

The schedule has already been set for the next two aca

When asked if the administration would consider making adjustments in the calendars, Hessey replied, "Yes, if we had a compelling reason to Hessey said that the faculty has recommended acceptance of the calendars. Various summer conferences have also In the past, Ocean City been turned down because of the schedules

"It would be interesting if someone would solicit student opinions. Would it be a concern?" asked Hessey

He stressed that the College wishes to encourage the Sandy Allard, of the continued on page 12

SCC finds student guilty

On Monday evening, the Student Conduct Council (SCC) found defendant Scott Smith guilty of bringing alcohol into the Coffee House, and of behavior unbecoming of a Washington College student. Smith pleaded responsible to both

Smith is barred from en-According to Hessey, the tering both the Coffee House and the game room for the rest

Tom Larsen.....p7

Superstar holdout.....p8 Stanley Plumly......p10

From zero tolerance to total acceptance?

At its roots, the discussion on legalization of drugs is a debate about whether the law in the United States is responsible for forming the nation's moral standards. Some people contend that the government has no business telling its citizens what they are allowed to do with their bodies. Others look to law as an expression of society's moral disapproval of an activity. Within this debate is a disagreement on whether or not drugs are morally wrong, or only physically harmful.

Drugs are ethically neutral. They aren't good or bad it depends on how they are used. And how they are used in today's society has created a seemingly insurmountable problem.

The Harrison Narcotics Act was passed in 1914, setting up the federal prohibition of drugs. According to San Jose police chief Joseph McNamara, "The fight against drugs for the past seventy years has been one long glorious failure. The courts are overflowing, there is violence on the streets, and the problem seems to be getting worse," Eight billion dollars are spent on interdiction and local enforcement, and billions more are spent for care and feeding of imprisoned drug dealers.

One third of the people incarcerated in federal prisons were convicted of drug related crimes. Drugs in the United States seem to breed criminals: those who deal drugs to make money, and those who steal to pay for drugs. And those imprisoned think "going to jail is just part of the cost of doing business. It's a nuisance, not a deterrent," says Kurt Schmoke, mayor of Baltimore City.

Theoretically the legalization of drugs will wipe out the criminal population, and drug related crime is more detrimental to society than the drugs themselves. Without the crime, the government would save the billions of dollars that are invested in the "zero tolerance" policy of today, and some proponents of drug legalization look to the sale of drugs as another source of revenue. They propose to use this money to fund an anti drug program that might work: a long persistent educational effort like that on cigarette smoking, and expanded treatment programs for drug abusers. England legalized the use of heroin in 1920. Since then the number of addicts enrolled in the country's programs has tripled: one person in every 5,000 is addicted to opiates. And worse, an illegal drug trade flourishes in England today with a revenue of about $280 million annually.

So it seems that the only way to eliminate illegal drug trafficking is to make all drugs available free of charge in any quantity desired by anyone who desires them. This is continued on page 5

Washington College Elm

|          | Editor-in-chief               |                       |  |  |  |  |
|----------|-------------------------------|-----------------------|--|--|--|--|
|          | News Editor                   | Susan Di Le           |  |  |  |  |
|          | Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaur       |  |  |  |  |
|          | Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne         |  |  |  |  |
|          | Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk    |  |  |  |  |
|          | Photography Editor            | David Johnson         |  |  |  |  |
|          | Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar              |  |  |  |  |
| Managers |                               |                       |  |  |  |  |
|          | Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma           |  |  |  |  |
|          | Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William    |  |  |  |  |
|          | Circulation Manager           |                       |  |  |  |  |
|          | Assistant Circulation Manager | Cvnthia Gos           |  |  |  |  |
|          | Office ManagerJulie           | Greene and Cathy Leas |  |  |  |  |
|          |                               |                       |  |  |  |  |

Letters to the Editor

In the November 4 Elm Bill Beekman expressed a wish for the presence of "None of the Above" on the presidential ballot. He further expressed his confidence that such a ticket would win. But in a sense, it has won, at the very least, the last four elections In 1972, for example, there were approximately 140 million voting-age citizens. million voted for Richard Nixon and 29 million voted for George McGovern. But 62 million, a plurality of 44%, voted for nobody. In 1976, the breakdown Ford: 26.2%, Carter: was. 27.0%, Nobody: 45.4%. In 1980: Reagan: 27.0%, Carter: 21.8%, 3.5%, Nobody: Anderson: 46.8%. In 1984, Nobody slack ened off a bit (46.6%), but still finished way ahead of Reagan (31.4%) and Mondale (21.7%). I certainly expect that Nobody will have won heavily by the time this sees print, the only question is if he can raise his total to an absolute majority, rather than an overwhelming plurality.

What accounts for Nobody's perennial popularity? Two explanations are generally advanced

1) contentment: People are doing well, and see no reason why the present situation should change. They figure that anyone with a chance of winning the election won't do much to change it, and so don't vote at

2) despair: People believe that the present situation cannot be improved by any of the

the second explanation, but don't think that a gloomy word like "despair" is an accurate description of the motivation of the nonvoting plurality. "Rational self-interest" would be closer to the mark. For almost anyone, it is much easier to achieve one's goals outside of politics than through it.

For example, in 1969, Dan Quayle didn't want to get drafted and sent to Vietnam. He could have joined any number of organizations that opposed the war, or for that matter, the draft (the conservative Young Americans for Freedom was among the latter). But bringing either threat to an end would have taken timeenough time, certainly, for young Quayle to have been drafted, sent to Vietnam, and perhaps killed. So he joined the National Guard. He didn't save the world, but he certainly saved himself.

It might be argued against this kind of behavior that saving the world (or, more modestly, improving the nation) would have salutary effects on one's own situation. This is, on the average, true. The problem is, nobody is completely average. Fortunes were made during the Great Depression, and there is abject poverty in the Reagan Prosperity. Even the relatively average person is likely to find the costs of effective political activity (which consists of more than just voting-that, alone, really doesn't make a difference) to far out-

In general, I lean toward themselves, and the relative small portion of governme workers who are political a pointees) are those who or sciously identify their fortun with that of everyone else. To are the passionate idealists, if you prefer, the nosy busyb ies. There aren't too many

> But perhaps that is ago thing. Beirut is full of passis ate idealists, and so is Belfa It may not be civic-minded Americans to prefer their vate goals to the common go but in doing so they cause the neighbors less misery that their preferences were revers The only drawback is that because of this general profi ence, fewer and fewer per vote, we may reach the poin which the passionate ideals make up the majority of the still voting. We could end with Jesse Jackson or I Robertson in the White Hou Such an outcome might enough to rouse the masses fr their apathetic slumber, and the next election, Nobody will become Somebody

Jeff Sch Sophor

FOR RENT On the water Quaker Neck Jan 17th to May 16th

8 miles from campu * Furnished * 5 bedroom

* 2 bath* Laudry * Equipped kitche Deep water pier

Call: Tom at 648-5708 (after 4)

ISSUE:

Do you think all drugs should be legalized?

Eliminate the laws and eliminate addiction

eral law enforcement officials and accurate portrayal of ernment to fight against the fought the illegal traffic. State and local reinforcements were called in to help. The fight was always frustrating and too often futile. The enemy used guerrilla tactics, seldom came into open fight, blended easily into the general population, and when finally subdued turned to the United States Constitution for protection. His numbers were legion, his resources unlimited histactics imaginative Men of his resolve and determination were summoned to Washington to direct the fedgovernmental drug policies. eral forces. The enemy was Advocates for escalation pursued relentlessly on land in the war against drugs suband sea and in the air. There were an alarming number of casualties on both sides and, as in all wars, innocent bystanders fell in the crossfire. This fairly grim summary today's war on drugs. Even more interesting than its content is the fact that the piece was not written with any reference to America's war on drugs, but was written in the 1920's in reference to prohibition of alcohol. It is a classic example used by those who are, in growing numbers, beginning to look at the possibility of the decriminalization of drugs, similar to the decriminalization of alcohol, as an answer to the devastation resulting from present scribe more to an emotional conviction rather than unemotional logic. Simply put, most who oppose decriminalization are committed to the fact that drug use is immoral, and it is abuse of drugs. They tend to argue that it is not a question of financial reasonability, but that the cost of eliminating both the supply and demand for drugs is a burden that society has a moral obligation to accept.

The argument for decriminalization of drugs rests on two basic platforms. First, decriminalization will undermine and end illegal drug trafficking and the organized crime associated with it by removing the high profit motive of the black market. Second, the billions upon billions of dollars spent each year in a futile attempt to stop träfficking could be channeled into education and health care which, after absorbing the initial burden of the present drugusing population, would demote the use of drugs and successaddiction, Advocates of decriminalization recognize that reasonable arguments against the use of drugs cannot in any way combat the appealing profits made by drug pushers. In addition, the argument rests on the assumption that drugs are highly accessible and that common sense, not the threat of legal penalties, prevents most non-users from becoming users, therefore assuming that decriminalization would not lead to significantly increased drug

Tony Caliguiri

Present policy assumes that if the supply of drugs coming into the country is de Tony Caluguiti is a junior macreased by using military forces joring in political science.

production sights, the price will be forced up and drugs will become too expensive, resulting in decreased demand. There are two basic problems with this theory. First, military programs may have yielded some success in stopping the flow of drugs, yet in no way have they even made a dent in the total number of drugs coming into the country. The only way this could be possible is to have completely closed and controlled borders, a virtual police state, which is a physically impossible task. Second, drugs cannot be treated as a normal good in the economy. The crucial difference is that drugs are addictive, therefore

continued on page 5

Brian Russell Freshman Baltimore, MD I don't think that drugs should I don't see the point be legalized because that would jeopardize my future career as a drug kingpin.

Clair Capuzzi Freshman Severna Park, MD

Junior Brussels, Belgium Does it really matter? As long as there is a demand there will be a supply, be it legal or not. The question that should be asked is how do you stop a 15 year old from becoming addicted

Kevin McLaughlin

Ken Winkler Senior Catonsville, MD people dying of substance abuse and body

Debbie Smethhurst Sophomore Port Chester, NY Sure - legalize them. It's not No, because some drugs have as if we don't have enough an adverse effect on the mind

beyond any legalization issue. Legalization of drugs is warped

to crack or blow. This goes

In this election yearfull of criminalization of drugs. addicts created by the legalizaboring topics, meaningless issues and a couple of really lame tandidates, it seems to be difficult for any of us to get excited, or even interested in this year's campaign. Yet, one issue has arisen which has, at the very least, stirred the masses into some sort of thought: the legalization of drugs. This year, according to polls, drugs are the voting population's number one concern. Many are willing to accept harsher, stricter laws to facilitate the "zero tolerance Policy" on drugs initiated by the Reagan Administration.

Despite this sentiment

Among these leaders are Mayor Kurt Schmoke of Baltimore, Mayor Marion Barry of Wash-

Peter Johnson

ington D.C., Conservative Commentator William F. Buckley and economist Milton Friedman. Legalization, they claim, would allow legislators to tax the drugs, using the revenue to fund rehabilitation programs for drug users.

I don't know, color me towards drugs by a vast seg- naive, but isn't there a sort of ment of the voting population, warped logic involved here? ing from alcohol and tobacco

tion of that substance in the first place seems to make about as much sense as "Grape Day" at the WCDS. The absurdity of this position is overwhelming, not to mention it sends a mixed and convoluted message to society

If legalization did occur, however, mass rehabilitation would be very necessary, since. ipso facto, a tremendous increase in drug abuse and addiction would result. Since the repeal on the prohibition of alcohol in the United States was instituted, the number of alcoholics has steadily risen to 18 million persons. Deaths resultdeleterious effect the decriminalization of a substance can have on a population.

implications of legalization; a cality. restructuring of our society would be required. An entirely different moral code than the one most Americans live by now would become the norm. Parents would have to learn to accept the fact that drugs would become readily available to their children legally. Would we, as a society, be ready to accept free and open advertising of drugs like they were Spam or Rice-a-Roni? Plus, any legislation of drug use would re-

hol, but merely to illustrate the available, and where would they be sold, among others. In short, we could not legalize drugs without encountering a myriad of moral and ethical questions, Consider, too, the moral as well as questions of practi-

> The question over the legalization will no doubt be debated for time to come: it is a subject with many faces and sides: far too many for me to explore here. The simple truth of the matter, however, is that ours is not a society ready to accept the problems and implications that legalization would bring at this time.

Peter Johnson is a sophomore

In the World

Election Results Following a disappointing voter turnout of 49%, the Republicans won the White House, out the Democrats made gains in both the House (262-173) and the Senate (56-44). The Democrats also made gains in guber natorial races, important with the upcoming census in 1990. President-Elect Bush returned to Washington on Wednesday. He promised that he would build on the acheivements of the Reagan Administration. He also named James

Baker his Secretary of State Andrei Sakharov entered a Boston Hospital. He will be tested to determine if he needs a pacemaker. If he needs a pacemaker, he will remain in the IIS for an additional two weeks to receive it granted Ferdinand and Imelda Marcos a temporary stay on a New York Court order to produce their bank records. The stay will keep the Marcoses from facing contempt of Court

Soviet Union:

A Soviet spokesman said that a US-Soviet summit following the Bush Inaugural is a that the Soviet Union will release 11 political prisoners within the next three years. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl expressed hope that all 11 will be released by the end of this year. Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev met with Estonian Leaders in Talinn on Wednesday. The Estonians are conthe Soviet Constitution that yould centralize power over the 15 Soviet Republics. The Estonian Popular Front, which has een working for greater eco nomic independence from Moscow, is afraid that such amendments would destroy any progress thay have made. There are also concerns that should the amendments be passed, Estonia would attempt to suc-The Supreme Court ceedfrom the Soviet Union. The proposed amendments, scheduled to be voted on November 29th, are also unpopular in the Soviet Republics of Latvia and China An earthquake 7.6 on the Richter scale struck China near the Burmese border on Sunday. The quake, described as the worst in more than a decade in China, is being held respon-

The Kremlin announced sible for more than 900 deaths

El Salvador was named cheif of staff. He replaces General Adolfo Blandon. Ponce's promotion is un-usual because he is 41, and everal senior officers were passed over. It is part of an effort to revitalize the El Salvadorian Army and end the nineyear geurilla war. Ponce, who commanded the prestigious Third Brigade, has been criti-cal of the civiallian governments inability provide internal servaces and improvements.

South Korea: The South Korean National Assembly began hearings about alledged corruption and power abuses by former President Chun and members of his government. One of the first to testify, Chung Doo Hwan, who had run the National Security Planning Agency, the South Korean equivilant of the CIA. was met by considerable hostility from the panel. Among other charges, Chung denied reports that Chun embezzled millions from a research organization that Chung established

Japan:

Hirohito has sparked a controversy in Japan. The controversy is over whether his heir, Crown Prince Akhito, should receive the sword and necklace, symbols of the Sun-Emperor, in a public or private ceremony. The Imperial Household Agency has reportedly decided that the ceremony will be public. Several Christian groups, a decided minority, have protested this

Hundreds of shipyard workers rallied in Gdansk and called for a strike. This is in defiance of a decision by Lech Walesa not to further antagonize the Polish Government. Mr. Walesa, who led a rally in the Lenin Shipyard but avoided calling for a strike, said that if the workers decide to strike, he will consider resigning. He feels that such actions would indicate that he has lost a significant amount of influence.

Iran and Iraq have agreed to an exchanged of sick and wounded prisoners of war. The exchange, which is to be arranged by the International Red Cross, is considered to be progress in the slow moving peace talks between the two countries ing of the health of Emperor compiled by Laura Hopper

Bush's bitter victory

It is currently 10:13 P.M. on election night as I sit here writing this article and watch. ing the election coverage, and the expected outcome has come to pass; the Republicans have won the presidency again.

As a result of the nasty, cynical, outrageous campaign run by Bush's sleazy Machiavellian cronies, George Herbert Walker Bush has suc ceeded in both drastically low ering the level of political de bate in this country and sneak ing in the back door of the White House without articulating any kind of coherent national agenda or gaining any kind of positive mandate from the people.

Hopefully this lack of a mandate, along with the active opposition of a resentful and strengthened Democratic Congress, will make it difficult for Bush to govern and to accom plish whatever offensive goals he may have hidden away in his tiny mind.

continued on page 5

You don't need your parents' money to buy a Macintosh.

Just their signature.

It's never been difficult for students to convince their parents of the need for a Macintosh® computer at school Persuading them to write the check, however, is another thing altogether

Which is why Apple created the Student Loan-to-Own Program. An ingenious loan program that makes buying a Macintosh as easy as using one

Simply pick up an application at the location listed below, or call 800-831-LOAN. All your parents need to do is fill it out, sign it, and send it If they qualify, they'll receive a check for you in just a few weeks.

There's no collateral. No need to prove financial hardship. No application fee

Best of all, the loan payments can be spread over as many as 10 years.

Which gives you and your parents plenty of time to decide just who pays for it all

Introducing Apple's Student Loan-to-Own Program

Washington College Bookstore (basement of Hodson Hall) 8:30 - 4:30 Mon through Fri

Bush wins through mudslinging & sleazy campaign tactics

continued from page 4

The Bush "campaign' reversed a sixteen point poll deficit by appealing to the worst, darkest emotions in people, the most brutish fears and resent-

From the beginning, Bush had decided that Massachusetts of communist beachhead on American soil, and that the liberal philosophy which saved this country from depression and racism was un-American

The fact that Governor Dukakis vetoed a bill to make Dukakis had "a problem" with had suddenly become some sort the Pledge of Allegiance man- the Pledge (as well he should; were blatant and grotesque lies, datory in schools, inasmuch as it proved anything, proved Dukakis' staunch devotion to the individual and religious freedoms which this country allegedly stands for, yet Bush claimed that this proved that loyalty oaths are not required and Bush and his people knew in a free society) and that he it. They could not help but was therefore "unpatriotic." know it Flags and oaths and pretty words are not patriotism; deeds Lie," that is, telling a lie so and beliefs are

All through Bush's disgusting demagogic campaign, he implied that Dukakis was not a true American, thus courting latent xenophobia and suspicions of ethnicity.

The contention that Dukakis was far to the left of Teddy Kennedy and was more liberal than George McGovern Democrat.

But the tactic of the "Big alarming and unexpected that people believe there must be some truth to it, worked for Hitler and McCarthy, and this year it worked for Bush I do not hesitate to make the comparison. One can only hope that Bush ends up more or less the way they did.

Jeff Vail is a sophomore who is proud to be a liberal

Eliminate the laws and eliminate addiction

continued from page 3 the demand will be virtually unaffected by increased prices The only result of increased prices is increased crime and atrocities in order to obtain the product, despite its price.

It has been estimated that anywhere from 75 to 90 percent of the profits made on drug sales take place after the drugs have entered the United States. The "say no" campaign may seem to appeal to the simple logic of a poverty stricken teenager from an inner city neighborhood sees that it is easy to make thousands of dollars in cash each week by dealing drugs, the farthest thing from his mind is an image of Nancy Reagan reminding us the immorality of drug use. This could only be countered by the destruction of the black market with total decriminalization, allowing the legal, safe, and controlled production addiction could be conquered So much time and money is wasted on dealing with the crime of drug use, that drug addiction is virtually ignored The legal processing of arrested and convicted pushers and users is not only bottle necking the judicial and legal system into virtual chaos, but the money spent on patrolling, investigating, arresting, processing, and incarcerating the drug potential drug user, yet when a user is costing the American taxpayer billions of dollars annually. At a time of mammoth national debt and overwhelming national budgets, the taxpayer can hardly be satisfied with a drug policy that funnels more money into dealing with the drug trafficker than dealing with the disease of addiction. Those billions, in addition to all the time spent on the criminal aspect, if redistribute to the medical problem of drugs until the problem of of addiction, would provide the resources needed to wipe the problem off the face of the planet, therefore drug production would be unprofitable and undesired. Despite the emotional appeal of an escalation on the 'war against drugs", logic points to the only solution: first eliminating drug traffickers through elimination of the illegal black market, then channelling those resources into the elimination of the problem's source, not the jungles of South America, but the disease of drug addiction. The social and health problems of drugs are a result of the drugs themselves, yet the criminal problems of drug trafficking are a product of the laws. First through an elimination of the laws, then through an elimination of the disease, both of these problems be solved, allowing the world to turn its much needed resources to productive and positive uses.

Should drugs be legal?

continuued from page 2 a disquieting idea for many Americans, when an estimated 75 percent of regular drug users could become addicted. Others add that removing the legal restrictions may make drug use socially acceptable.

Supporters of drug legalization claim there is a natural limit to addiction, and those who don't have addictive personalities won't be tempted whether drugs are legal or illegal. They point out that it is a peculiar aspect of our society that little distinction is made between what is legal and what is socially condoned

People tell themselvesif only these awful illegal drugs would go away everything would be all right. But according to Andrew Weil, a University of Arizona physician and author of several books on drugs, "The fact is we are a drug-using society, always have been and always will be." Drug legalization is one way to attempt to integrate our moral personalities with the problem, but it will be a long time before America can begin to accept this

Let's face it, amigos, any beer that needs a slice of lime to give it flavor can't be much of a beer. Discover Calgary Amber Lager... Its rich, imported taste is hearty and robust. Try it the next time you order beer, and hold the lime. Calgary Amber Lager. Join the stampede.

| Г |  |                  |
|---|--|------------------|
|   | A T-Shirt offer that's                         | not for suckers. |
|   | Please send me the following Calgary T-Shirts: | (PLEASE PRINT)   |

| Quantity     | Size                       | Price      | Total | Name    |
|--------------|----------------------------|------------|-------|---------|
|              | MLXL                       | $8.00 ea. |       | Address |
| All Penn. re | sidents add 6% sales tax.  | Tax*       |       | City _  |
|              | Sective through January 31 | TOTAL      |       | City _  |

Mail to: Gold Medal Sportswear, Calgary T-Shirt Offer, 1011 Cedar Avenue, Croydon, PA 19020

nt □ Check □ Money Order □ VISA □ MasterCard □ American Express

Veterans of war remember fighting days

by Troy Petenbrink

21.835.000 American Veterans from the Spanish-American War to the Vietnam conflict are the living reminders of our country's past, and a possible hope for our future. Who are these people who gave so much-where are they now and how do they feel about the past? Washington College is the place where many of these people are now continuing their lives. The battles of the past are now memories for each to deal with in his own

Dr. Dave McCall, Economics Department, enlisted in the U.S. Army, 1943 to 1946, during WW II as a Chinese interpreter and a member of one of the last horse cavalry units formed

"I anlisted because it had to be done. We all know what Hitler was doing, and the Japanese attacked us. My grandfather and father served; that's what you do," says McCall

McCall feels that many people forget the fact that the government has done a great deal for the American Veteran and still does great deal. Many of my friends would never had the chance to for the government."

World War II was a war the American people knew had to be fought; there was little controversy over this fact. Vietnam, on the other hand, did much in dividing the coun-

"The Vietnam Veterans have suffered for something they had no control over. I think it is much less a problem ans. I don't think the govern-" remarks McCall drafted in 1969 and served to

Dr. John Taylor, Political Science Department, who was eran.

"The GA will helped a Dr. Raymond Turner served in Vietnam from 1967 - 1970. Next to him

Intelligence for the Army, feels go to college if it hadn't been very much the same about Viet-

> "After WW II we felt we owed them [the veterans] something. However, after Vietnam's unpopularity and the numerous problems of the new veterans [drugs, psychological instability] the respect for the GI dropped," says Taylor. "The needs of Vietnam Veterans were much more difficult than that of past veteramount for the Vietnam Vet-

"I hope the veterans would is the suitcase Turner used throughout his tour, and still uses today. us as we try for a more peaceful future. I hope we don't fight anymore wars to have veterans," expresses Taylor, Twenty years of service in the Army is something David Butters has as part of his memory as a American Veteran. Butters retired as a Seargent-Major after serving from 1952

"I was a young adventurous lad who had seen too many

> Pub Hours Opens Daily

Mon-Sat

4:30

ment has done a sufficient II; nothing overly bad ever really happened in the movies. My whole perspective about war came straight from Hollywood. So at the beginning of my senior year I was able to enlist and join the Army to serve in Korean War." explains Butters. "I had no big political ideologies about the war at that time; I > was just a kid. At the end of six months, however, I knew that I was going to make it a career." When I went to Vietnam in 1967 I felt the same way about it [the Vietnam War] as I did about Korea. I was a professional soldier; it was my job. I was there because my government said I was needed I couldn't understand the antiwar campaign that I was hearing about," says Butters.

"Within four months, however, I began to see and experience things that I never saw before. I was beginning to form a very deep ideology about the war. I wasn't a pacifist or anything, but I did begin to question what we were doing there [in Vietnam]," he says. "I saw atrocities that I did not understand. All those things you saw happen in that movie 'Platoon' were very true. I could tell a hundred stories about the horror of Vietnam. The pure hate I saw in the eyes of the people [South Vietnamese] that we were suppose to protect was very scary. "I went back to Vietnan to serve a second tour in 1970. I hoped that maybe I could find a way to do some good to makeup for all of the bad I had seen

"After Vietnam the government and people just wanted to forget about it. I think the government has, however, done Veteran as any other war veteran," says Butters. "I do he. lieve that there are a lot of Vietnam Veterans who blame their problems unnecessarily on the war. I think they are look. ing for an easy way out."

"Today, it seems the Korean Veteran has become the forgotten veteran," explains Butters. "The present generation has only seen or heard about Vietnam. I don't think the youth of today know what war is all about."

"If I had to do it [Vietnam] all again, I just don't know. expresses Butters as a final thought on the subject.

Dr. Raymond Turner Economic Department and Business Management, enlisted in the Navy as an officer in 1967.

"I had already planned to go in to the Navy, so when the Vietnam War began I stopped my graduate studies and enlisted," says Turner. "I spent six months in DaNang and six months in Saigon and the Mekong Delta, I had mixed feelings about it [Vietnam] then. and I still have mixed feelings about it now. I always asked myself if I was part of the solution or part of the problem in Vietnam

"It was a bad place to pick a fight. In that type of environment we were not able to handle ourselves," concludes Turner. "The time I personally spent in the service helped me find direction. I don't know if it would have been different without the war, but I know it did help me after. When I left Vietnam in 1970 I was offered a position at the Naval Academy, continued on page 7

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 216

10:00am

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

MASS SCHEDULE

SACRED HEART

day Mass Rosary Recited Daily Sat. Evening Mass

CCD-Sunday 9 to 9:45a 8-30om 9:30 to 10:30s CCD-Sunday

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor ctory: 508 High St. Office: Kent Street Side Entrance of Sacred Heart Church (301) 778-3160 Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pm s Education Coore

Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F. Phone: 1-801-820-7437

CNTOUR

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

THIS FRIDAY.....

November 7th

HEAT &COLD SWEAT HORNS

$5 cover

Coming Next Friday....

November 14th * Jeffrey the DJ * $1 cover

Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers Tuesday 3 shots for the price of 1 Wednesday $1 Imports

Thurday Schnapps $1

Friday 4:30--6:30 Free Hor D'oeuvres

515 Washington Street 778-1984

Tom Larsen: never too old to rock and roll

by Anne Lindenbaum

"I used to write prose, but when I made music the main thing in my life, I derided to speak through that into my music, though," says blues man Tom Larsen.

Larsen will return to rock the Coffee House, this time with a new band. Charles time," says Larsen Smith, who has played with O'Brien will debut with Larsen playing the bass. now Kent County High School, Larsen took classes at Washington College through a program for "advanced goofy vania area

St. John's College - rather than W.C. for the sake of his own ied music. After taking a few writer as well," states Larsen. years off, he graduated from Salisbury State University in 1978 with a major in music.

"We started playing Wash- perience on the road instead. I'm still trying to ington College in 1980, and we figure out how to put my life caught on. That enthusiasm by the blues artists, but I was seems to have been passed down also influenced by the sixties' through each class to the point soul music, which was good to that W.C. is one of our favorite Washington College tonight in places to play. We look forward to coming and having a good school," he states.

Larsen in the past, will return also making headway into the to make a living doing what I on the drums, and Alan mainstream of popular music.

Their most recent album, Larsen Looking For Trouble, featuring As a senior at what is singles such as "Bodacious" and exposure, we could go national "Too Old To Rock And Roll," is instead of just regional. But presently receiving airplay in the Baltimore-Washington-Pennsyl-

"The title song, 'Looking For expresses. Following his gradu- Trouble, was picked up by Withtenyears experience ation, Larsen chose to attend Johnny Winter, who was big under his belt, Tom Larsen will around the time of the sixties, on his album Winter of '88, so I'm Larsen says his music is a combination of different musical genres and his years of ex-

"I was mainly influenced party to, and a bit of psychedelia that I listened to in high

"This is my tenth year of Larsen and his band are playing music full time . . . just like is a goal in itself," says

> "If we could get enough once you reach one goal, there are always more to achieve. There is no ultimate goal," he return to Washington College to prove once again that you're independence-where he stud- getting recognition as a song- never too old to rock and roll.

WC war veterans relate fighting days, experiences

continued from page 6 so I finished my graduate work Orange have been handled and began teaching. I think I well," says Turner.

adjusted very well after the war "I absolutely do not believe people have built a stereotype the government has done image of the Vietnam Veteran

"I think the American enough to help many of the as a fumbling fool who is a Vietnam Veteran. I personally psycho, and I think that's

Live Preformance

BLAKE THOMPSON

Saturday Night

do not believe things like Agent wrong."

Each of these individuals has his opinion about the difand each fulfilled his necessary served.

dividuals feel that the Ameriturn; let us hope that war will past and see that the world can filling that preservation be a very difficult place that fering wars he was involved in nonetheless needs to be pre-thing that would make a can people needed to look at the not be one of the choices in ful-Know someone or some great features article? Contact Anne Lindenbaum or They have done their part Jennifer Harrison through However, each of these in- and it is now this generation's studentmail.

RIVER INN

open: Mon-Sat 11am til 10pm Sunday 11am til 9pm Closed on Tuesdays

November 12th 8pm til 12pm for more information call 778-3227

Walking on holey shoes isn't always a heavenly experience.

Tired of walking around in shoes that are jus about to fall apart? Well stop hurting. Paul's Shoe Store has just what your looking for Whether you're a man or a women, looking for casual or formal shoes, Paul's has your shoe, in your size at your price. So stop walking in uncomfortable shoes and walk on down to Paul's where buying shoes can be a Heavenly experience

Suds N Soda

Discount Beverages

6am - 12 midnight 7 days

Rt. 213 & Rt. 297 1 mile north of campus

I.D. Required (drivers license)

Snack Shack & Video

Helium Ballons for all occasions

Open 10am - 10pm Sun - Thurs 10am - 11pm Fri - Sat

We tent nintendo machines & Games

Fried Chicken * Subs Made Fresh to Order * Hand Dipped Ice Cream

Basketball team hopes to net winning season

by Don Steele

"If we avoid injuries and are good enough to make our own breaks we should be in for a very strong season." That is Coach Tom Finnegan's view on this year's basketball season.

With only one player lost from last year's squad which finished 19-7, the team looks "...individuals must accept and adapt to new roles."

ready to go even farther this Only injuries and bad breaks seem to stand in their

The team is also playing a very competitive early schedule that should set a tone for the season Games against

In a recent practice junior Charles Duckett (far right) takes a shot as seniors Any Bauer (middle) and George Small (far left) .ook on.

Widener before Christmas could be major factors in the team's advancement into postseason play. The squad also looks forward to the an nual Wild Goose Classic which will be held December 9-10

Another important factor in this season is how the team progresses as a unit and also how individuals adapt to new roles. "The team must improve from last year and individuals must accept and adapt to their new roles," commented Coach

Finnegan

So things look set for an outstanding season for Sho'man hoops this year. If things click and the team can have an in jury free season who knows how high the team can fly

Volleyball finishes season with CWAC tourny win

by Greg Oliver
"I think these players worked as hard as any group I've ever had here," praised women's volleyball coach Penny Fall. It proves that this season was not a fluke. of goals before the season even 15-8 15-5 started off things that they wanted to achieve by the season's end. Those goals were to have a .500 season or better and to win the Chesapeake Womens' Athletic Conference end of the season, they had Last year, Washington College lost in the finals of the CWAC to Gallaudet University, but this year the tables turned the leadership of captains achieved both.

volleyball tournament. By the found themselves in the winners position. The team progressed through the tournament without dropping a single match, and wound up playing Gallaudet in a re-match of last The team had set a couple years game, this time winning

This 1988 season has been the most successful in recent years. Despite a heavy road schedule, the team was able not only to maintain a positive attitude, but a winning record

With the road trips consisting of long hours in the van, as well as several nights in motels it would have been easy for the team to fall apart. It was and the Shorewomen happily Debbie Cohn and Sharon Orser that held the team together Coach Fall also recognized juniors Ann Urban and Valerie Williams as contributing both on the floor and with the leadership of the team. Cohn and Williams were selected to receive All-CWAC honors for their perform over the course of the

> It was athletes like senior Dawn Dams that made the difference between the caliber of this team and that of an average team. Dams came to Coach Fall four years ago and had never played volleyball before. Over the years she turned her self into an excellent volleyball and earned a starting position

"As an educator, I take over the course of the season. great pleasure in seeing her (Dams) make that commitment, remarked Fall. Also, Fall felt that the newcomers on the squad, freshmen Laura McClelland and Theresa Sganga,

With the loss of only one player to graduation, the team shows potential to improve on this season next year. Hopefully, 1989 will have a playoff bid in store for the women's

Washington to play St. Iohn's in football

On Sunday afternoon Washington College will engage St. John's College in Annapolis in a game of football for the first time in 50 years. Emphasized in the contest is the return to the old days when football was not yet as big an American institution as it is today.

A women's team will also play St. John's on the following weekend. Both games will be played in the good spirit of competition which characterized the sport before it blossomed into the institution it is today.

Danny Manning: superstar holdout headache that has split loyalty

As a rookie in the National Basketball Association, former Kansas superstar Danny Manning will have to go through a learning process. He will need to adjust to the superior strength and quality of the opposition, the length of the season, as well as the fact that he can take four steps and not be called for traveling, but unfortunately, Manning does not seem very willing to start this new career. He is starting off on the wrong foot with his holdout from the Los Angeles Clip-

Brett Lankford

Danny Manning is a basketball player of extraordinary He almost singletalent. handedly led the Kansas Jayhawks to the NCAA title last year, and he was the obvious choice for College Player of the Year. The Los Angeles Clip-

the draft, and he was to be the key player on a revitalized Clipper team. Manning was to start along with Charles Smith, Gary Grant and Reggie Williams on a team with a bright future. Instead, Manning decided to sit out training camp in a contract dispute, and as of this date he has still not signed. Manning has been offered an enormous sum of money to play for the Clippers - two million dollars a year, to be exact. This is a larger salary than many NBA superstars, such as Charles Barkley, Mark Aguirre and Karl Malone. These players have proven themselves in the league and take exception to Manning's holdout. Barkley has already suggested that Manning's popularity is not at an all-time high around the league. He has irritated the opposition before even setting foot on an NBA court.

pers made him the #1 pick in The agent of Danny Manning has heavily influenced his decision to holdout. The Kansas star has been told to hold out for more money and a shorter contract, no matter how long it takes. He claims to have been "offended" by the early offers from the Clippers. Despite the constant badgering by the agent, it is still Manning's decision. It appears that he has made the wrong choice.

There is a definite feeling of betrayal in Los Angeles. The Clipper players, fans and management were relying on the welcome addition of Manning to help turn the team around. They are now having to face live without Manning for at least the early part of the sea-

The Clippers believed that they were drafting a player with talents comparable to Bird. Johnson and Jordan. In reality, they were picking up a had scored any points in the

among the fans. Some fans say that more of an effort should be made to sign Manning, while others claim that management has done everything realistically possible to get him in a Clipper uniform. This is hurting a franchise that was never stable in the first place, and much of Los Angeles remains

It is time for Danny Manning to make an important decision. Should he sign with the Clippers for two million dollars a year or continue to hold out until he receives a contract to his liking? Greed is keeping this superstar from making the right decision. Manning is being offered a huge contract without any previous NBA experience.

fans of the Lakers

Many proplayers are turning against Manning, as well as much of the media. One reporter was heard to say "If he game against the Russians maybe he would have a legit mate argument".

There is now even mor pressure on Manning to produce once he begins his caree Not only does he have to prove himself worthy of the #1 pickii the draft, he also must develo a favorable rapport with h teammates and other player in the league. A rookie is a waystreated roughly in hisfin ear (does anyone remember Kareem Abdul-Jabaar deckin Kent Benson in Benson's fire NBA game?), and the veteral will be even tougher on Man ning because of his holdout seems that it is time for Dans Manning to turn professi not only in basketball, but i his attitude.

Brett Lankford is a s phmore and wonders if anyon realizes that the Major leag Indoor Soccer season has start

Swim team dives headlong into season

by Kathy Brewster

This weekend the Washington College swim team will additions to its ranks. For starters coach Berry Americans. has bought an assistant coach and conditioning of the team. Densyich's past coaching expe- of sixteen swimmers, return- about the season in the number team will have a more balanced riences have been delegated to give headlong into their fourth "age-grouper" teams which gason under the direction of consist of swimmers under the head coach Dennis Berry. This college level. While being inrear's squad has several new volved in age-group swimming the team will definitely have a Berry said. she recently coached twenty all-

With Denvitch's influence down from New Jersey named his years squad is practicing Kim Densvich to assist as a harder and adding several new tchnician, with the hopes of training techniques in prepamoroving the style, training ration for this season.

This years team consists ing which will provide a strong of recruits that have arrived on attack backbone of experience.

Senior Elizabeth Rexon, (freshman recruits) will com- of the MAC relays will be held is the team captain and believes pliment the upperclassmen," at Franklin and Marshall on winning season and each indiwho is the reigning state 50meter champion and Saman-mers, now with the addition of will be on December 6.

What excites Berry most several promising freshman the the team,"...we think they

Saturday , November 12. The In the Past he noted that MAC relays will have ten to viduak will lessen their times. much of the burden rested on twelve teams competing in dif-Returning along with Rexon the shoulders of a handful of ferent types of relays. will be seniors Jenny Korton older, more experienced swim- Washington's first home meet

Soccer wraps up season

by Don Steele

second to 7-10

such of the play and also be back and more mature. dapted to the conditions easdnar, Steve Leary, and Alan end his season

The season has been a

Last Saturday in the driv- dation is set. The team is only ig rain the Washington Collosing the aforementioned Rob DiGiovanni, John Seal, ge soccer team ended its sea- three, two year starting goalie so with a 2-0 loss to Johns John Thomas will be back after and Pete Hagen all started Hookins bringing their overall a year lost to illness and the games this year and have pack of freshmen that were the proven that they have what it The Blue Jays controlled nucleus of this year's team will takes to play soccer on the col-

This year has seen a new erthan did the Sho'men. John brand of soccer at Washington Nelson, Larry Kilroy, Steve College. The team has shown Attias, and Kenny Hutchins, erch all had fine games to end the ability to beat anyone on hir college careers and Mike any given day but have also back for next season! shiphad another stronggame shown an inconsistent side to their game

aller coaster ride for the strong season and should net seasons at W.C. as long as this sloppy play but now the foun- sweeper and will be hard to replace next year. Freshmen Glenn Warner, Andy Prevost, lege level

Pete Van Buren, Geoff all starters this year, should be

The basis for the future next week's ELM has been set. There is the Mike Bishop had a very chance for future outstanding There have been some post-season honors. Alan team progresses and matures

Sports trivia

The answer to last week's question: The Washington Redskins was the final team to desegregate in the N.F.L. Congratulations go to Arian Ravanbakhsh who correctly answered the question. This week's question:

Which two N.F.L. teams were involved in the "Heidi" affair in 1968, in which NBC cut viewers off in the final minute of play to show the movie "Heidi" instead, meanwhile one of the teams made a miraculous two-touchdown come from behind victory in the final 45 seconds of regulation play. Such an outrage ensued that NBC adopted a policy never to cut off football viewers proir to the end of any games that they televise?

The correct answer to this question will win a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. Fill out on a piece of paper, your name and answer

Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope (behind the bar). The correct answer will be in

The deadline for the Trivia questions are on Wednesday at 12 PM *In the event that more than one person answers correctly

there will be a drawing among the correct answers to determine the winner. Please, only one entry per person. Rts. 213 & 291 701 Washington Ave.

Chestertown, Md. 778-6622

ells of greatness and spells of Lerch also had a great year at at this year's pace. Restaurant Manager- Chuck Rider Assistant Manager-John Nadolny Maryann Gullett Breakfast Manager-Barbara Mills Delonia Black

OPEN DAILY 7 A.M.-11 P.M.

Look at our Specials...

Sunday - Whopper $.99 Monday - 2 Burgers $.99 Wednesday - Whopper $.99

with the purchase of a Large French Frys Plus a Medium Soda

Burger King #5306

Poet's inner world revealed in works

by Michele M. Volansky

The personal life of a writer is often sharply reflected in the works that he or she creates. Often a writer will attempt to understand the world around him through the words that he uses and his ability to manipulate them to arouse inner emotions. Such is the case with poet, critic and editor Stanley (Ross) Plumly. It has been said that Plumly's poetry is "personal and subjective, yet avoids self-pity and sentimentalism." His poems "capture the sensations he felt at the moment" and give a reader the sense that men are all united with the same beliefs and fears, a gift that few have.

Plumly was born in Barnesville. Ohio in 1939, the son

Esther. It is this background lessen the pain many feel. that Plumly has drawn from to seems to me our one and best Poems, Giraffe:

of a farmer and carpenter, find some insight into the Herman Plumly and his wife human condition and works to

His works have gained create some of his greatest acclaim due in part to the lyripoems . Plumly stated in an cism contained in them. Collecinterview with Contemporary tions such as Out-of-the-Body Authors that "A poem does not Travel, which has been called overstate, exaggerate, the emo- "a direct confrontation of the tional life. Life has a way of poet with his parents, a steady doing that already, and art, as exercise in understanding and a transformational medium, compassion", In the Outer Dark: chance to read our lives as if the Stanley Plumly and How the gods had editorial function." His Plains Indians Got Horses and writings allow others to gain Summer Celestial have all insight into the lives they lead. pushed the poet into the lime-He sees an "emptiness in life" light of the literary world as but truly believes that man has they offer a refreshing example the capacity, through interven- of lyric poetry, rather than the tion with the natural world, to more dominant plain style. It fill some of the emptiness which has been said that Plumly, deep-rooted emotion before him, and for the most part accomplishes it." He deals with his life in terms of his poetry

Plumly received his B.A. Wilmington College in 1961 and his M.A. from Ohio University. nomination for his book Out-of. the-Body Travel. He is cur He is currently Professor of English and Creative Writing at the University of Houston. He has also held visiting lecturer positions at the University of Iowa, Princeton University, Columbia, and the University of Michigan and instructed courses in creative writing at Louisiana State University. While he also held editorial positions at the Ohio Review and the Iowa Review , he is most known for his poetry. For exists. He writings attempt to through his poetry, "sets the this, he has received such hon-piece of everyone within it difficult task of dealing with ors as the Delmore Scwartz Memorial Award, the Guggen. heim Memorial Foundation Award (both in 1973), a Na. tional Endowment for the Arts Grant in 1977 and a National Book Critics Circle Award > rently at work on a book of criticism titled Chapter and Verse. Plumly will be reading from his poetry as part of the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series on Wednesday night in the O'Neil Literary House Reading Room at eight-fifteen. All are wel come to come and listen and explore the dark, subconscious world of Stanley Plumly, a world that all can gain something from and a world that contains a

Washington College's weekly events: 11/11-17

Weekend-11/ 11, 13, 14 The Washington College Film Series will be showing The Milagro Beanfield War this weekend. The film, directed by Robert Redford, is adapted from John Nichols cult novel of the same name. The story is about a bean farmer who tries to protect his land from developers who wish to turn it into a golf course. Called a "labor of love" for Redford, the film is worth viewing. Friday-11/11

Washington College to sing the blues once again for the uncountable time, this time in the Coffee-House. More information on Tom can be found in this issue of the Elm.

Tuesday-11/15

The Lecture Series Department Lecture at eight P.M. in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library. The talk, given by Claude Gaignebet of the University de Nice, is titled "Rabelais et Les Mythologies Galliques."

Film Series, sponsored by the Writer's Union, this week presents a film exploring the life and work of Ezra Pound. The film begins at eight P.M. in the Tom Larsen, returns to O'Neill Literary House Reading Room.

> Wednesday-11/16 The Music Department presents a Student Recital at four P.M. in the Norman James Theatre.

The William James Fopresents a Modern Languages rum further explores topics of interest with Norman Bowie and his talk, "Business Ethics The Paradox of Profit." The talk will be held at seven-thirty in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library

The Sophie Kerr Lec-The Voices and Visions ture Series presents poet Series, sponsored by the Stanley Plumly reading from his work at eight-fifteen P.M. in the O'Neill Literary House. A biographical article is contained in this issue of the Elm.

Thursday-11/17

The Lecture Series continues the current topic of Nicaragua in Dr. Thomas Walter's talk, "Reagan vs. the Sandinistas: A Historical Background." The talk will be held at eight P.M. in the Sophie Kerr Room

Paperback Bestsellers

- 1. The Essential Calvin and Hobbes by Bill
- 2. Night of the Crash-Test Dummies by Gary Larson
  - 3. Tales to Ticklish to Tell by Berke Breathed 4. The Power of Myth by Joseph Campbell and Bil
- 5. Something Under the Bed is Drooling by Bill Waterson
  - 6. Patriot Games by Tom Clancy 7. Fallen Hearts by V.C. Andrews
  - 8. Presumed Innocent by Scott Turow
  - 9. Feeling Good by David D. Burns
- 10. The Last Temptation of Christ by Nikos Kazabtzakis

A Shear Design Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

NOVEMBER SPECIALS

-Perm, Cut & Style ONLY $30 with Jody -Fingernails- nailtip& overlay regularly $35 this month ONLY $25! 778-0898

You dial.

Austin Carpet 778-4656

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

Bowie's visit and talk explores philosophy, economics and business

by Stephanie Hess

Norman E. Bowie, a nationally recognized philosopher and authority on business and ethics, will speak on "Business Ethics: the Paradox of Profit, @ Wednesday, November 16 gspart of Washington College's William James Forum. Professor Bowie's presence is made cossible by the visiting Philosopher Program, a national program sponsored by the Council or Philosophical Studies. The grogram is funded in part by a dowment for the Humanities The National Endowment for the Humanities was established by Congress in 1965. It was created to "promote and support the production and dissemination of knowledge in the humanities, especially as they relate to the serious study grants awards to individuals and groups as well as to such institutions as schools, museums, and libraries.

Washington College is a recipient of this grant from the Council for Philosophical Studies mainly because of the efforts of David Newell, chairman of the Philosophy department. Dr. Newell, who worked on revisions of a book that Dr Bowie co-edited, was interested grant from the National Enin bringing Dr. Bowie to speak at Washington College. To do this, Dr. Newell wrote a two page grant proposal to the Council for Philosophical Studies requesting a two day visit from a nationally known philosopher. Norman Bowie agreed to be the Visisting Philosopher to Washington College

values and public issues. It Originally, the visit was to coincide with a seminar on business ethics that Dr. Newell intended to teach with Professor Michael Bailey this fall. Dr. Bowie's book, Ethical Theory and Business, was to be the text for the seminar, making Dr. Bowie the ideal guest speaker to support class lec-Unfortunately, Dr. Bailey developed medical problems, and plans for the seminar were cancelled. Instead of giving up the topic, Dr. Newell turned Dr. Bowie's visit into a lecture for the William James

Dr. Bowie, who received his doctorate from the University of Rochester, is presently the Director for the Center for the Study of Values, an interdisciplinary program at the

also a professor in the philosophy department at the University of Delaware, and he is the Distinguished Visiting Professor at the School of Business at the University of Georgetown. Along with his scholarly duties, he is responsible for initiatives in program development, conferences and symposia for the Center for the Study of Values, as well as for outreach programs from the University into the business community. In 1983, Dr. Bowie was twice a speaker for the William James Forum. He spoke on "Reasonable Lies and Rational Choices in Business" on November 29, 1983, and on "The Stereotyping of Persons" on April 20, 1983.

According to Marshall Williams, the Special Events Coordinator of Washington and discussion of contemporary following Newell's proposal. University of Delaware. He is College, Dr. Bowie's upcoming, return lecture is a "great opportunity for business and economics majors to expand their studies." Dr. Newell claims that one particularly good aspect of Dr. Bowie's lecture is that it will be relevant to three different departments: philosophy, business and economics. However, it should be noted that the lecture will be aimed at business students and at community members involved in business at all levels. Dr. Newell says that Dr. Bowie "will address problems and solutions that affect business-people ranging from store operators to corporate managers. Bowie addresses chambers of commerce across the country and his talk should be of interest to many people involved in business in the Chestertown community.'

Dr. Bowie's visit will also give him the opportunity to speak with other groups on campus. On Wednesday afternoon, he will speak to Phi Sigma Tau, the philosophy honor society. The topic here will be, "Is Moral Knowledge Possible?" On Thursday November 17, he will speak on "Fair Market," in the Business Law class. He will also lecture in an introductory philosophy class. Dr. Newell relates that the "philosophy department is very excited by the prospect of Bowie's visit.

Dr. Bowie's lecture . "Business Ethics: the Paradox of Profit," will be held at 7:30 PM on Wednesday November 16 in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library. The talk is free and open to the public.

*1st Tanning

FREE

*1st Session

*No Membership!

*No Contract! No Feel

Drama Department works on mainstage production

by Ryder Daniels The Drama Department is busy at work on the mainstage production for the Fall semester, Camino Real by Tennessee Williams. The play is directed by the Chairman of he Drama Department Tim Maloney and designed by Assstant Professor Jason Rubin. Their designs are further supported by Nancy Schertler, a Lamond, David Cohen and Japrofessional lighting designer from Washington D.C. Schertler is teaching a lighting design course here this semester, and will be designing the lights for the upcoming show. An added feature of this production will be the appearance of several faculty members in the cast, including Bennett son Rubin

Rubin says of the set, "...for this production we have quite a few things to stretch the skills of the students. Although the set follows standard scenic practices, it involves a great deal of teamwork to put together. Even though the actual building process is not difficult, there is an awful lot to be built and painted." He adds "Seating will be in the auditorium." The technical director for this production is junior Alistair Paget. He states that "...a lot of work hours need to be put in. We really need all the help Bring W.C.

ID& get an extra session

FREE

of organizing and running work calls where most of the building gets done for the set. Paget says, Anyone who wants to help is welcome. You don't need to have any experience at all, just come down to the theaterand help put this thing together. Just come whenever you can, we need everyone, any time you can spare." The major work calls are run primarily on the weekends and hours are always posted on the Green Room blackboard in Gibson Fine Arts

Anyone who would like to something new and help with the production in any way is welcome. It is an exciting we can get." Paget is in charge group project to take part in.

Slender You

Get the Glitter, Get the Glamour .... Get the All Year, All Qver, Bronze Body Tan!

Tan & Tone all in 1 day .... Do it the easy no sweat way!

NEWS

Scholar to lecture on Reagan & the Sandinistas

ing the campus on November on "Reagan vs. the Sandinis-tas: An Historical Background." The International Relations Club will host a reception for tage immediately following the lecture. He will also be available Friday morning at 9:00 in the Sophie Kerr Room to talk informally with students on

Dr. Walker is the author 4 of numerous books and articles on Latin America in general and Nicaraguan politics in particular. His book Nicara-gua: The Land of Sandino remains one of the principal source books on that country. He has edited Nicaragua in Revolution , Nicaragua: The First Five Years, and Reagan vs. the Sandinistas: The Undeclared War on Nicaragua. All of Dr. Walker's books will be made available to students at

Professor Walker began

Dr. Thomas Walker, one field research in NIcaragua in of the country's leading authori- 1967. Since the Sandinista ties on Nicaragua, will be visit- victory in 1979, he has made thirteen trips to that country 17-18. Dr. Walker will give a In 1982, Walker travelled talk on Thursday evening at throughout Central Anerica 8:00 in the Sophie Kerr Room and to Cuba as part of the national Central America Task Force of the United Presbyterian Church's Council on Church and Society. In 1983-Dr. Walker at the Brown Cot- 84 he was founding co-chair of the Latin American Studies Association's Task Force on Scholarly Relations with Nica ragua and in 1984 he served as the co-ordinator of a LASA delecontemporary issues in Latin gation sent to observe the Nicaraguan elections of November

> Dr. Walker's visit is sponsored by the Lecture Committee, with assistance from the International Relations Club.

Kriegel continued from page 1

mented after hearing of Washington College's experiences going on.' with suicide. "Sometimes the pressure just builds up to much.

"Take the stress you have

The tension just gets to be too

Dr. Peter Tapke receives a gift from Dr. Newell and President Cater in appreciation for his lasting service and committment to the William James Forum. Tapke was honored at last Wednesday's "What's Wrong with the Right?" talk.

writing a paper that you're illfive times that, and you have cope: suicide. "It's happening college," he points out,"People nationwide," Kreigel com- are making things happen so quick that they miss what's > Kriegel points out that a good deal of stress can be eliminated if people develop a way to think with out creating tension. He points out that the top prepared for and multiply it tionallhadC averages through Tydings Hall, room 0130. most of their schooling.

"I think that students should chase their dreams, do what they love, take chances, think about what they're think- idea of public and private eduing about and don't be afraid to cation as one component is fail," Kriegel says.

Dr. Kriegel's seminar it interests. If legislation wan will be held at 2pm on Monday, passed, we would not seek a November 14 at the University exemption."

members of the Ford Corpora- of Maryland at College Park's Academic calendar continued from page 1

Maryland. "We have commi

Mom's Cookie Jar

And provides lots of complex carbohydrates and protein wih virtually no fat? If you guessed grains, consider yourself knowledgeable about nutrition

Grains - the rice, corn, wheat, barley, rye, millet, and oats are the fuel source of the body. They are comprised basically of starch. Grains provide the body with the power it needs to function. Additionally, they supply the body with protein, significant amounts of minerals as well as vitamins B and E.

Variety is the spice of life - so, if pasta, rice, and catmeal are the only grains with which you are familiar, expand your horizons and taste buds by trying some of the other grains; barlev, brown rice, buckwheat, millet, rye, cornmeal and bulgur wheat. It is easy to do, because everything you can do with pasta you can do with other grains.

Congratulations to all the contest winners last Monday night. Thank you for participating. To Mr. and Mrs. Cater, Terry Scout, Ed Weissman, Diane Guinan and Dennis Berry a special "THANK YOU" for serving as judges for the various Halloween contests. Your time was greatly appreciated and I know the students enjoyed your Thanksgiving Dinner reservations will be available beginning Monday, at dinner, from the Numbers Lady. The last day to turn in your reservations will be Monday, November 14th, at dinner. Remember, you must make your reservations for four or eight people.

For you board students who attend classes during the lunch hour, did you know you can order a box lunch to go? Just contact a supervisor, give him/her your request (must give 24 hours notice) . We will prepare your lunch to go and have it ready for you when you come to pick it up. This is just another of the services we offer to all board students

Well, I quess that's it for this week. Until next time

DOES THE LEGALIZATION OF DRUGS INTEREST YOU?

then you are invited .....

To: Watch A Heated Debate Where: In Hynson Lounge When: Thursday, November 17th

7:30 p.m.

Watch both sides of the W.C. Debate Club battle it out!

Wine & Cheese Reception Afterwards

Norman James Theater

7:30 p.m.

Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All others $2.00

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 10

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, November 18, 1988

Faculty courseload studied

by Ed Schroeder

The increasing enrollment at Washington College brings with it an expanding work load that is put upon numerous professors; as a result, the issue of the student-teacher ratio has become a concern of each of the involved parties.

"Ultimately," an upperclassman said, "it's the students who will suffer because the teachers will be so swamped with work that they will lose interest to what the students needs are."

Teachers who teach over three classes a semester include many of the part-time teachers that have the same course load s that of the full time faculty. With this in mind, the total number of faculty members is sixty-nine; compared to an approximate 879 students, a figure of 12.7 to 1 stands as the current student-teacher ratio.

"It's a fairly impressive figure from a student's point of view," Baer said. "We can boast to having 9% of our classes that have over fifty students in them duties as well." and 64% that have nineteen or

For some faculty members these figures are not something to boast about. Professor Richard DeProspo said, "I'm teach-read the following statement at

On the advice of my cardiologist, Dr. John Russo, and with approval of the Board's

Executive Committee, I will be taking a form of sabbatical

during the spring semester

While I am away from the ampus, Provost Baer will chair the Executive Council as well as preside over the Faculty meetings. Vice President Magill will coordinate with me the tegular business of the President's Office. I plan to attend the meetings of the Beard, key College events, intluding the BIrthday Convoca-

Monday's faculty meeting:

Poet Stanley Plumly gave a reading at the O'Neill Literary House on Wednesday evening. Plumly is the author of Out -of-the-Body Travel and Summer Celestial. Plumly's reading was sponsored by the

have the work from these classes, but I have my advising thing that I've never done other

Most full-time faculty members have the responsibility as advisors to incoming freshmen. Many have senior theses to assess and are often alone. And I just don't have the required to do thorough reing over a hundred students search to know the material

Cater to take sabbatical next semester

"I have had to do some years," DeProspo stated, "and that's edit a syllabus. I had to omit an assignment because it would make me have to put in a

40 hour work week on those

President Douglass Cater tion and May Commencement, I hold high hopes for continuing as well as scheduled appoint- leadership. ments and fundraising travels in The Campaign for Excellence. At no time will I be more than a be a year when Provost Baer phone call away. Hynson leads the effort involving fac-Ringgold House will continue ulty and students to examine to serve as a gathering place for the curricular and co-curricuofficial social functions. should not provoke alarm conport prepared by the subcom-cerning the continuity of lead-mittee of the Academic Council ership at the College. My heart after intensive work last sumcondition originated with a bout mer. This year is a time for of rheumatic fever during my campuswide deliberations. early teens and has not handiplan to write my own reflec-capped my work pace over the tions on the future of Washingyears. Dr. Russo advises me ton College as we approach the that a change of pace and locale seventh anniversary of the should provide me "second Birthday Convocation in 1982 wind" for the challenges ahead. when I accepted the Presidency.

I also hope that this will lar life of the College. This had This need for respite good beginnings with the re-

Larrabee funds Arts Center

ing contributions to the Creative Arts Center, Constance Stuart Larrabee states that the Center "will enhance all aspects of the arts curriculum at Washington College. It will provide a much-needed building in which all who enjoy painting, sculpture, and photography can study, create, and celebrate." Larrabee took her own statements to heart and earlier this week announced her decision to bequest the necessary funds, as well as her name, needed to set the construction of the Constance Stuart Larrabee Creative Arts Center in motion.

In September of this year, the Washington College Friends of the Arts-which Larrabee founded-decided to conduct its own fund-raising drive apart from the College's endeavors for the Creative Arts Center. At that time State of Maryland

Facilities Grant had provided In a brochure encourag- $500,000 for the Center, an amount which needed to be matched in order to begin con-

Additionally, Larrabee, Elizabeth White, and Edward Nielsen gave "substantial contributions," to the Center according to Larrabee. Nielsen is President of the Friends of the Arts and son of Lynette Nielsen. whose namesake Memorial Prize honors an outstanding student art exhibit each year

Larrabee says that the idea of further funding the Center sparked her interest at that initial fund-raising meeting, when Director of Development Martin Williams mentioned that "it was possible that if someone gave a large amount. they could have their name on the building." This was a rare opportunity, he said, since the shell of the future Center alcontinued on page 12

Brain Atlas makes waves in Psychology

The Psychology Department is beginning to make projections for the employ of its Brain Atlas, a computer-based EEG system. The equipment continued on page 12 should be directly available to students by next semester

According to Professor Marcia Pelchat, the Brain Atlas "does the same thing as a polygraph machine, only not with pens and recordings on paper. It is not electromechanic. It is a powerful microcomputer."

Brain Atlas is more efficient machines record the electrical activity of the brain but "with the polygraph, you get squiggles on paper. Lots of paper.

The Atlas displays activity on its computer screen. Storage of subject records is also more efficient on a computer with the added option of printing them out.

The Atlas, or "brain mapper," maps out electrical activity onto a picture of the head. Top or side views are available. Pelchat stated that the They show specific colors corre

continued on page 12

INSIDE:

School before Labor Day?.....page 3

Goose hunting season.....page 6

Sports world.....page 8

Camino Real.....page 10

20 million people have nothing to be thankful for this Thanksgiving

As Thanksgiving approaches, little progress has been made to eliminate hunger in the United States, and according to the United Nations World Food Council, the outlook on world hunger for 1988 is not an optimistic one.

During 1988, the number of hungry people increased by an estimated eight to ten million, continuing the trend of the 1980's. This brings the number of hungry people worldwide to approximately 750 million.

It is estimated that over twenty million of those people, including twelve million children, are residents of the United States. In August 1988, the Census Board reported that 32.5 million people lived below the federally-defined poverty line and were at risk of hunger.

These statistics about hunger are reported about a country whose government collects twenty percent of the gross national product in taxes, and spends twenty-five percent. Not enough of this twenty-five percent is spent helping to prevent hunger in Americans.

The Special Supplemental Food Program for Women Infants and Children (WIC) is one of the most successful programs that the federal government operates. As it stands, WIC reduces infant mortality and anemia and improve children's cognitive development. But WIC can't respond to all who are qualified for its benefits: funding limitations prevent over half of the eligible people from receiving aid. A Harvard University School of Public Health study showed that this program saves three dollars in immediate medical costs for every one dollar it spends on prenatal nutrition and screening.

There is a disturbing gap that is widening between wealthy and low-income people in the United States Presently, the wealthiest forty percent of American families receive almost sixty-eight percent of the national family income; the poorest forty percent receive about fifteen of the national income- the lowest percentage ever recorded

The United States has a comparative advantage over most of the countries world wide. With the vast amounts of farmland in production, farmers are still hurting financially and require federal subsidies to maintain their standard of living. This year, however, North American crops were greatly reduced because of the droughts this summer: grain crops dropped by twenty-five percent, corn by thirty-two percent, and barley and oats by fifty percent as compared to 1987. Food prices are expected to increase, as has already happened with some productsany price rise adversely affects low-income people.

In 1985, Vice President George Bush was able to over come State and Defense Department objections and used American planes to airlift 800 Ethiopian Jews to Israel and saved them from inevitable starvation. Let's hope Bush includes further reduction of hunger in his plan to make the United States a "kinder, gentler nation.

Washington College Elm

|          | Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso |  |  |  |  |
|----------|-------------------------------|---------------------|--|--|--|--|
|          | News Editor                   | Susan Di Le         |  |  |  |  |
|          | Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaur     |  |  |  |  |
|          | Sports Editor                 |                     |  |  |  |  |
|          | Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk  |  |  |  |  |
|          | Photography Editor            | David Johnson       |  |  |  |  |
|          | Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar            |  |  |  |  |
| Managers |                               |                     |  |  |  |  |
|          | Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma         |  |  |  |  |
|          | Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William  |  |  |  |  |
|          | Circulation Manager           | James Sobeza        |  |  |  |  |
|          | Assistant Circulation Manager |                     |  |  |  |  |
|          |                               |                     |  |  |  |  |

Assistant Circula Office Manager ..

FIRST, WHY IS IT THAT THE AND WHAT ABOUT WEDS HASTHIS STRANGE THANKSGIVING DIN IT'S TIME ONCE AGAIN TO THANKSGIVING DINNER!
YOU'RED AM NED IF YOU DON'T GO, AND YOU'RE DAMNED IF YOU DO
GO, TO SPEND A MOMENT REFLECT-FASCINATION WITH SENDING US LARGE DISTANCES FOR DINNER? (LETURNER REEK)
WE JUST PASSED ELIZABEN ING ON OUR CAFETERIA AND SOME OF ITS PRACTICES WE COULD TALK ABOUT TERGEN LINE THE FOOD, BUT OBVIOUSLY YOU CALL THAT WON'T MAKE A DIFFERENCE THAT A TURKEY OR WHAT ABOUT THOSE ETHNIC DINNERS? TRYING TO SALVE THEW.AS.P. CON-CH, ISN'T BY THE WAY, HUMANITY DOESN DIVIDE BASILY INTO MEXICAN TODAP KARR DE

Letters to the Editor

A few minutes and a stamp

To the Editor:

The world of academia can sometimes be a world of isola tion. Those of us who spend our days sitting in class and our evenings pouring over the books or socializing with our classmates sometimes forget there's a world outside the college community. This point was recently brought home to me when I was glancing through an edition of UConn's The Daily Campus from October 26th. The article that caught my eye was written by Kevin Kleinbart, the paper's Features Editor, and he told about a dying 11-year

The boy's name is David. David has one wish that he would like granted before his death. He wants to be in the Guinness Book of Records for having received the most postcards in the world. That's all this child is asking-five minutes of your time and the cost of a stamp. I'm asking you each to take time out and send David a picture postcard, or a plain postcard. Or, if you don't have the time or the money to pick one up, just send an index card. The address to send your cards

.. Cynthia Gos

Julie Greene and Cathy Lease

David, c/o McWilliams St. Martin de Porres Infants School Luton, Bedfordshire, U.K.

You probably have five minutes right now. Use the time to write "hello" on a card and send it out. It isn't any great sacrifice on your part, but it will mean the world to a dying little boy. Don't put this off, because later may be too late.

Kim Harb '88 Vail "sneaks" past jounalistic integrity

To the Editor:

After reading Mr. Jefferv Vail's account of Bush's victory in the November 11th edition of the Washington College Elm, I realized that he had somehow been greatly misinformed as to the campaign tactics of President-elect George Bush. I would like to take this opportunity to enlighten the misinformed Mr. Vail by explaining to him some of the reasons behind George Bush's landslide victory over Michael Dukakis There have been very few presidential campaigns in which neither side has not succumbed to mudslinging. Mudslinging is a tradition in presidential campaigns, but it has never been powerful enough to cause "latent xenophobia and suspicions of ethnicity" as Mr. Vail so eloquently stated. hope Mr. Vail would agree with me when I say that the American public is far too intelligent to be duped by undesirable political tactics. The actions of the American public speak for themselves. They voted for the man who they believed had the most experience and would do the best job to keep America on ton This man is George Bush I question whether Bush would have been voted into office if he had, as Mr. Vail stated, "... snuck in the back door of the White House without articulating and kind of coherent nation agenda or gaining any kind of positive mandate from the people." It is a statement such as this that makes me question Mr. Vail's knowledge of the certain stances taken by Bush or even Dukakis during the presidential campaign

graphic by Todd Kur

Although Mr. Vail ha declared himself a liberal dem crat. I still consider it impo tant to know where both cand dates stand on crucial issu before attempting to tear aps one candidate's campaign to tics or even before attempting to vote

Mr. Vail stated thath does not hesitate to make comparison among Bus Hitler, and McCarthy in the all three men used the tactice the "Big Lie." I find this out parison to be quite extreme at unfounded. Not once in campaign did Bush attempt misguide or lie to the America public

Although Mr. Vail doeshi utmost to berate mudslingi tactics, he, himself, seems to quite an expert at it. It seems me that Mr. Vail is not famil with the wonderful concept journalistic integrity. Geon Bush's ideals may not be pleas ing to much of the liberal pres but it is very important for ! press not to lose sight of theft that Bush is going to be th next President of this grt country and he deserves do I can only hope that in th ext election Mr. Vail will take the time to learn the facts abou the candidates before tearing them apart, and I hope he give the winner the respect that he or she deserves

Freshmi

ISSUE:

How do you feel about returning to school before Labor Day next year?

Accrediting agencies ask schools to teach 14 weeks

For a college degree to have any meaning, the school granting the degree must be accredited. Accrediting agenries ask schools on a semester system to teach fourteen full weeks. This amounts to fortytwo class periods taught on a Monday-Wednesday-Friday sequence, and twenty-eight periods taught on Tuesday-Thursdays. Additionally, in May, 1985, the faculty of Washington College, passed the following resolution:

"Beginning Fall, 1986, each semester shall consist of fourteen weeks in all cases, except when the requirement of beginning after Labor Day in the Fall necessitates a semester of less than the full fourteen weeks."

pears to give the college the choice of beginning the fall term either before or after Labor Day In a simplistic sense it would seem to be more beneficial to students and the college to begin after the holiday. But alas, life is not so easy. Two facts dramatically influence the "before or after" decision. First, Labor Day always falls on the first Monday in September. As a floating day it falls anywhere between the first and seventh of the month. Second, the end of the term is always determined by Christmas which

With these two facts in mind, let us build the calendar for next year. We begin with Christmas and work backwards after Labor Day? With the same

remains constant

On the surface this ap- for forty-two, and twenty-eight class days. You should immediately observe several problems. Should we keep everyone on campus until the 22nd of December? That is too close to Christmas. Do we wish to avoid finals over a weekend? Classes are not scheduled on Thursday and Friday of the Thanksgiving holiday. A Tuesday and Wednesday are appropriately needed for advising. Should we cancel Fall Weekend?

When we subtract the five days of canceled classes we are exactly at Labor Day. Continuing backwards to add those days, we now find ourselves beginning school a week ear-

What if we began the day

David F. Butters

restraints mentioned earlier. plus the loss class on Labor Day and the following day for checkin, the college would be teaching only thirty-eight, Monday-Wednesday-Fridays, and twenty-five, Tuesday-Thursdays. This is a reduction in class time over ten percent. Stretching finals closer to Christmas would still to add sufficient days to the schedule for faculty to teach a full term.

Much time, effort, and thought goes into the planning of an academic calendar. Input is obtained from all facets of the college. Parents, taking time off from work to bring you to school have also offered suggestions. Decisions are made based on this input, the needs of the student, and the college requirements. As Labor Day migrates farther from the seventh of September, beginning school after the holiday becomes more probable.

As a final note, Washington College is not the only school to begin before Labor Day. All accredited schools are faced with the same problem. Colleges and universities who are as concerned with the quality of their degree as we, deal with the problem in much the same

Mr. Butters is the registrar at Washington College.

Sandie Coulter Senior Harrisburg, Pa.

who need to work over the holiday weekend as well as pulling students away from our fami-

Jonathan Sarris Senior Bethesda, Md.

It's an inconvenience to those I suppose I would rather start I think that it would be better I don't think its a good idea, School might as well start beafter Labor Day and stay in to start school after Labor Day school later into the spring to because of summer jobs. allow for completion of any lies and friends over a holiday. summer jobs or internships.

Heather Patterson Sophomore Annapolis, Md.

Cathy Lease Freshman Frederick Md especially for those of us working over the summer. Employers usually need people to work

Brian Tabako Freshman Westmont, NJ

fore Labor Day because my work in the summer ends at least two weeks before Labor Day anythrough Labor Day Weekend. way.

by Laura McGuin

Keep the 1988-89 academic calendar

Last week's issue distussed the establishment of the next two academic calendars which will bring Washington College students back before Labor Day Weekend

Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance stated that years ago the college adjusted to students schedules with summer jobs and will considered adjusting the calendar if there were complaints.

Complaints and adequate reasons for changing the schedule have been discussed and debated in the Washington College Community.

Kathy Brewster and Debbie Johnson

Several reasons come to mind when contemplating the proposed bill of next year's academic year beginning in August 1989. The main reason is that the earlier return conflicts with summer job schedules which progresses into an array of serious problems.

Employers follow various stipulations when hiring employees for summer jobs. Most will not hire someone who cannot work through Labor Day

If one quits a job before this weekend all bonuses and benefits are lost. For the employer, losing workers before Labor Day results in the loss of summer staff before the tourist season comes to an end. This leaves them in a bind as well.

Interms of education most King, is opposed to the early students who obtain summer employment depend on that income, not to mention the bonuses, to aid in payment of college tuition and expenses. Without this money many Washington College students will have additional problems in financing their educational career and may not be capable of finding other means of funds.

This may prevent some students return to Washington College and has similar effects on students attending other institutions.Junior, Jeanne return and believes it to be "unfair to those with summer jobs that depend on their bonus for educational purposes."

The majority of Washington College students are op posed to the early return. They ask that these reasons be taken into consideration and change the academic calendar back to the 1988-89 schedule.

Dehhie Johnson and Kathy Brewster are freshman. Look for Kathy's sports article on field hockey this week.

In the World

Bush is expected to begin naming his economic policy team this week, probably start

Treasury-Secretary Brady. The U.Sordered drugtests from having abortions for about four million transportation workers, saying the rules dissident Andrei Sakharov to would take us as far as practically possible toward a drugfree transport system. The Transportation Department all political prisoners were because of what were termed was denounced immediately by labor unions

ing with the reappointment of fused to give husbands the le- countdown aboard the space

the White House and said human rights would remain an irritant in U.S.-Sovietties until layed until early December ordered the extensive random freed. The physicist made a minor technical problems.

personal appeal on behalf of two Soviet political detainees and expressed opposition to the checks of workers. The move president's space-based anti-missle project. The five Atlantis astro-The Supreme Court re- naunts completed a practice gal power to prevent their wives shuttle at Cape Canaveral, a major step toward launching Reagan welcomed Soviet the craft on a classified military mission. But NASA said the shuttle flight, scheduled for later this month, could be dein a speech to a meeting of the Organization of American States foreign ministers in El Salvador, also said nations in the region should consider ways to make Nicaraugua feel a sense of isolation.

U.S.S.R.

Gorbachev summoned ton Soviet officials to discuss farm problems. The Kremlin leader convened a meeting of the

The U.S. secretary of state, Communist Party and govern ment officials in the provincial town of Orel and said his program of political and economic structuring would fail unless agricultural output improved Gorbachev called the country's food supply difficulties " the most important problem "facing the Soviet Union

'U.S.A. Today ,The Wall Street Journal Jacque Collins

Greek newsletter

by Emily Bishop This week we would like to continue to better acquaint the student body with the leaders and goals of the Greek Community Alpha Chi Omega: AX Debby Cohn began the Safe Driver Program last week with a committee consisting of other Alpha Chis. The committee hopes that they can assist in limiting the number of drunk people driving themselves home from Newt's and the Vern on Wednesday and Thursday Some of the goals that the AXΩs have set for themselves include becoming more involved in the community, and improving their total scholarship. They hope to continue their excellent Phi Sigma Kappa: Among our campus leaders are Sigs Perry Finney, President of SGA, and Sophomore Mike Winkleman, SCC Clerk The Sigs have also taken an active role in the community through speaking to the Kent County High School seniors about alcohol Awareness, and President John Bodnar is work. ing to get a radio station for W.C. Last spring he organized classes at K.C.H.S. radio station for a group of students to learn how to D.J. Thirty six students now are licensed to Further goals this semester include donating turkeys for the elderly at Thanksgiving. establishing a more positive representation of the Beta Pi relationship between faculty Chapter at National Convenand Greeks; and to keep their

Student Government notes

by Perry Finney The faculty is currently considering a course proposal cally alter the freshman experience at Washington College. The course is designed to educate students on the canons of Western Civilization from the planned as a formal event. time of Ancient Greece to the Renaissance. It is to be a team semesters and count as eight credit hours. As the course is planned it will take the place Composition in the Freshman's required cirruculum. If the course is accepted by the faculty it is to have a student ceiling and it will be on a trial basis

The SGA Christmas party

for three years

is still in the planning stages. If which, if accepted, could drasti- all goes as planned it will be held on December 14th in th Dining Hall. Bobby and the Believers is the tenatively scheduled band and it is

The SCC heard it first case of the semster last Monday (the taught course which will last 7th). Chairman Scott Jones tion reported that the hearing went without problems. The SGA has received permission from of Forms of Literature and the Student Affairs Committee to expand the SCC jury poll to twenty members. If you are interested in serving on this body contact Perry Finney

The Constitutional Committee will have its final open meeting on Thursday November 17th , at 6:00 PM on the main floor of the Library. If you have any matters which you would like to bring to the attention of this Committee, please attend. After this meeting the newly drafted version of the Constitution will be passed on to the Senate/SAB for ratifica-

The SAB is currently reviewing the policy of not requiring or allowing English Majors with a GPA below 3.5 to submit a thesis. If you have any thoughts or concerns on this issue please pass them along to the SAB Chairman (Rob Albers) via student mail.

Restaurant Manager- Chuck Rider Assistant Manager-John Nadolny Maryann Gullett Breakfast Manager-Barbara Mills Delonia Black

Rts. 213 & 291 701 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md.

778-6622

OPEN DAILY 7 A.M.-11 P.M.

Look at our Specials...

Sunday - Whopper $.99 Monday - 2 Burgers $.99 Wednesday - Whopper $.99

with the purchase of a Large French Frys Plus a Medium Soda

Burger King #5306

You don't need your parents' money to buy a Macintosh.

Just their signature.

It's never been difficult for students to convince their parents of the need for a Macintosh® computer at school.

Macintosh® computer at school.

Persuading them to write the check, however, is another thing altogether.

Which is why Apple created the Student Loan-to-Own Program. An ingenious loan program that makes buying a Macintosh as easy as using one.

Simply pick up an application at the location listed below, or call 800-831-IOAN. All your parents need to do is fill it out, sign it, and send it. If they qualify, they'll receive a check for you in just a few weeks.

There's no collateral. No need to prove financial hardship. No application fee.

Best of all, the loan payments can be spread over as many as 10 years.

Which gives you and your parents plenty of time to decide just who pays for it all.

Introducing Apple's Student Loan-to-Own Program

Washington College Bookstore (basement of Hodson Hall) 8:30 - 4:30 Mon through Fri

@ 1988 Apple Computer, Inc. Apple, the Apple logo, and Macintosh are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

New regulations curtail Canada goose hunting season, affect local business

by David Snyder

Fall: raking orange and red leaves from the backyard, roasting marshmellows to a golden brown over oak and cedar logs crackling in the fireplace, taking down the window screens and replacing them with storm windows

If, however, you're a hunter on Maryland's Eastern Shore, the lawn stays covered with leaves, the fireplace stays cold, and the screen windows

Goose season has arrived.

With the arrival of Fall comes the arrival of Maryland's Canada goose flock. While hunters are busy oiling the shotguns and dusting off the decoys, fields and ponds all over the Eastern Shore fill up with hundreds of thousands of the migrating birds

Goose hunting guides book multitudes of hunters, many from out of state, who in turn pour hundreds of thousands of dollars in license fees, supplies, and hotel accomidations into Maryland's economy.

of the goose blinds, sporting goods stores and hotels are empty. Because of overharvest a decline in Canada goose production, the 1988 Canada goose season has been shortened, with the first part of the split season running from November 11 to November 25, and the second part of the season from December 8 to January 21

While hunters could bag three geese per day last year, the limit has been reduced to just one goose per day in the first part of this year's season, and two per day in the later season. Since 50 percent of the

The FPWS's regulations have dramatically shortened the goose hunting season and bag limit.

the first two weeks of the early ago, it was being greedy. Now, and reduced limits, the huntseason , the Maryland Forest, Park and Wildlife Service hopes that the one goose per day limit will help to reduce the harvest, thus increasing the flock in This year, however, many years to come

may be good news for geese, they are definately bad news by hunters in recent years and for Maryland's goose hunting guides

According to Floyd Price of Vonnie's Goose Valley Hunting, business this year "is almost non-existent. Hunters from out of state just don't want to come here due to the one bird

He adds, "last year on the first day we took out 171 hunters. This year we took out 23." Mr. Price, a guide for over 32 years, has proposed reduced limits in the past, but was denied. "When I wanted to have the limit reduced three years when the bureaucrats do it, it's called management." He continues, saying "(the FPWS's) purpose is just to put the commercial hunter out of business." Goose hunting outfitters

While the new regulations aren't the only ones feeling the effects of the new regulations. The dramatic decrease in hunters means a sharp decline in sales of hunting licenses and required waterfowl stamps, a ajor source of revenue for Maryland, much of it going to support state owned Wildlife Management Areas and wildlife refuges.

Price, who is also associated with Vonnie's Sporting Goods, reports losing more than $8,000 in license sales over last year's figures during the same

While guides and sporting goods stores are both hurt-ers, too, are affected. Sophmore Kevin Knox says he's been an avid hunter since the age of five, and while he doesn't like to see the bag limit reduced, he understands why the new regulations have been imposed."A lot of people will still shoot more than one bird," he says, but adds that he doesn't think it will have much effect. He echos the conservation policy behind the Forest, Park and Wildlife harvest, saying "Production has Most hunters seem to support the new regulations. Freshman Eric Hansen, also an avid goose hunter, agrees with to exceed harvest."

Service's decision to reduce the new regulations. "I think the new regulations are good because I don't think everybody should go out with the intention of killing as ing from the shorter seasons many geese as they can. If too the pound anyway."

many are killed, there is al. ways the possibility that they can become endangered."

Like Knox, Hansen agrees that conservation is important. "I think (the new regulations) are a good move,"

he concludes

The 1988 season is not the first time that Canada goose bag limits have been reduced to increase the population. Many times in the past, the limits have been adjusted to accompdate for a decrease in goose production, but a one bird limit is exceptionally strict.

The Canada goose population is determined every year by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Commission by flying over the Spring nesting grounds of the geese in Canada and recording the number of nesting adult geese with young. From these figures, the goose population is estimated, taking into consideration fatalities due to disease and natural predators and the hunting season and bag limits are established to insure a healthy population to produce next year's young.

As long as the season remains shortened and the bag limit reduced, there isn't much anybody can do but hope for a better population of birds in

While goose hunting guides may be hurt badly by this year's strict regulations, and hunters may return from the fields carrying fewer geest, the Maryland Forest, Park and Wildlife Service feels that a reduction in the goose harvest now is better than a ban on goose hunting in future years

Perhaps Senior Matt Keller summed it up best in saving, "Chicken is cheaper by

107 N. CROSS STREE

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Annual Back Door Book Sale Clifton M. Miller Library Washington College

Mon, Nov. 28th-Sun, Dec. 4th Monday - Friday 10am-4pm Saturday 9am-4pm Sunday noon-4pm

All Volumes $1 Monday & Tuesday Prices Drop Through the Week Thousands of Volumes Incredible Buys!

Fine Framing · Select Cifts Artists' Materials

POBOX 402 711 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5292

IFK: speech at WC sparked vision that lives

Fitzgerald Kennedy was assassinated twenty-five years ago this month. And thanks to the talk show circuit, we all know about Kennedy's less-thanfaithful relationship with Jackie, and about the hairbrained hypothesis that links Marilyn Monroe's death to Bobby and Jack Kennedy.

But how many of us know that John Kennedy spoke at Washington College while campaigning for the Presidency in 1960?

I can't imagine a top Presidential candidate stopping at Washington College today Today, want-to-be-Presidents are concerned more with sound bites and television perceptions Soviet Union? than a small town liberal arts college.

only starting to emerge as a major player in elections politics, - and it was doing so responsibly - and so Washington College was able to experience a special moment, an in- ism?

We all know that John formal, informative talk with a States about the problems that effectively be continued? faced America.

Bill Beekman

Senator Kennedy spoke in the gym to about one thousand students, faculty, and Kent County residents about three problems that he said "will probably disturbour next Presi-

· Can a free society and free enterprise keep pace with the economic growth of the

· How can Western Eu-Butin 1960 television was rope and the U.S. best help to solve the ecomonic woes of South America and Asia? Can these problems be solved in a democratic method, or will these countries resort to totalitarian- fault of the 1988 campaign was

 Can disarmament nego- exchange ideas with the Amerifuture President of the United tiations with the Soviet Union can people, and to grow from

Kennedy exchanged his views with the crowd, and, importantly, asked direct questions of the students so they could exchange their views with Senator Kennedy.

According to the Elm, Kennedy ignored his prepared speechin favor of speaking with the group earnestly

Today, America worries U.S. and Russia can destroy in about the same types of problems, and more, such as the budget deficit and drugs and the failure of public education and the homeless and a host of other problems that have mushroomed in the past few years.

But unlike 1960, I think that 1988's candidates lacked the ability to propose realistic solutions to these problems, or the courage to talk to the American people honestly about these problems.

a failure of the candidates to for achieving those goals.

those exchanges. The candidates talked at the people generally about the faults of their oponent - rather than with the people about the next steps that America should take. When Kennedy addressed the Washington College student body in 1960, he asked whether a "democratic society can endure at a time when both the one blast two-thirds of the world's population After Kennedy and some students exchanged ideas, both the Senator and the crowd concluded that a democratic society must endure, especially in those times. Perhaps what we can learn best from this is that candidates and the public should worry less about specifics that get changed and promises that get broken and more But perhaps the largest about establishing a set of goals and a practical, general scheme

The candidates need to converse with the American people rather than - as they did in 1988 - tell them that all your problems will be solved if you vote for me.

History treats Kennedy kindly, more kindly than the combative Congress that blocked much of Kennedy's socially progressive legislation from becoming law.

But Kennedy's legislation eventually did get passed after his death, and became an integral part of today's America. Perhaps that is why Kennedy enjoys a revered status today: he may have been killed before he could make his vision become reality in America, but nevertheless his vision eventually did become reality in the United States. John Fitzgerald Kennedy may have died twenty-five years ago this month, but his vision of a better, freer America stills

For that he deserves to be honored.

Seven Hills Farm welcomes students

by Jennifer Griffin

"We hope that one day the college will want to use our facility for horsemanship as a says Kim Morani, co-owner of the Seven Hills Farm.

The Seven Hills Farm, established four years ago by Kim and Marty Morani, offers horseback riding instruction to beginners as well as to advanced riders

The thirty acre farm, lotated ten minutes from Washington College on Coopers Lane in Worton, Maryland, contains two cross country courses, stadium jumps, hunter fences, dressage arenas, and a new indoor arena. There are also plans for a new outdoor arena in the spring.

USCTA (United States Combined Training Association) such as jumper shows and jor competitons in Dover, Harrisburg, and Washington, D.C. as well as schooling competitions for beginners and com- Seven Hills Farm, call 778-0201 bined training shows.

The farm stables about thirty horses (the number flucincluding six boarders from Hills trains, boards, sells, leases, and breaks horses. A tack shop, including tack repair, is located on the farm. Also, KART or the Kent Assoheld at Seven Hills.

The facility hosts the managers, and instructors at the facility. During summers they often enlist other instruchorse trials and informal events tors for help, and Kathy Finneson, a Washington College stuhope to interrelate the college and the farm even more. To begin instruction at the and request group or private lessons. Private lessons cost twenty-five dollars per hour and tuates during different seasons) group instruction costs fifteen dollars per hour per person. Washington College. Seven These prices are regardless of instructional level or whether the mount belongs to the farm or the rider. Most riders are encouraged to take group lessons. Washington College stuciation for Riding Therapy is dents are invited to visit the farm. Morani offered, "just call

Correction

The Friday November 4. 1988 issue of the Elm incor rectly reported in the article Local artist captures Washington, Ringgolds" that Professors Janson-LaPalme and Goodfelwere working on a biograthy of artist Charles Wilson Peale. The article should have stated that they were annotating Peale's autobiography. The Elm regrets this error.

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:38-6 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD 778-1214

Rt. 213 & 291

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

The wide world of sports

about the sports world this

-Why is it so horrible that Sugar Ray Leonard keeps com-ing back? Everybody is complaining that he is only in it for the money. Even if this is true, what difference does his line of reasoning matter?

The fact is that he can still fight, as shown in a Leonard-Lalonde fight that turned out to be a much better bout than the pre-fight billing. While winning two more title belts, Sugar showed the determination, quickness and punching ability that he has always poshessas

Brett Lankford

-Leonard knows his talents very well, and he will know when it is time to hang up the gloves. There is a definite sense that Sugar Ray Leonard has at least a few good fights left, and he will not be another Larry Holmes and Muhammad Ali, fighters who have stayed past their prime.

Just a few casual thoughts presently asking - is George at the sports world this Foreman for real? He is fat, bald, and slow as a turnbuckle, but he is undefeated since his return to boxing about a year

The experts say that Foremen has fought against a bunch of losers, and that he should retire before he gets hurt. However he wants a shot at Mike Tyson (no one ever said he was high in the thinking department). Still, if he defeats a top contender or two, why not give him a shot?

-No matter what happens, it would still be more interesting than watching Frank Bruno dance around the ring with Tyson a la "Bonecrusher"

-There is just one other note on the subject of George Foreman. Doesn't he look exactly like George "The Animal" Steele of wrestling fame? They may very well be the same person. You never see them in the same place at the same time, do you? Oh, never mind.

-I'm sure all of the Oriole problems will be turned around after the pickups of Dave Millition that the boxing world is gan and Mike Smith. These can happen to a football team, Blast will win the MISL cham-lead the team to a season of at least 65 victories.

-The Washington Bullets will be lucky to win 25 games this year, unless they somehow are able to obtain a center.

They are 1-4 right now, with their only victory over the expansion Charlotte Hornets. Their starting center has taken 10 shots in five games, and their leading rebounder is their second-string small forward. This player, John Williams, is the best player on the team, and he should definitely find his way into the starting lineup

-It is tough for the Bullets to win when they are constantly destroyed on the boards by the opposition. At this time, their only hope is for coach Wes Unseld to come out of retirement and play the pivot

-By the way, did anyone else notice that Danny Manning signed with the Clippers Friday night, just after last week's article came out? The power of the media shines through again. -A quarterback controversy is the worst thing that recent acquisitions will surely no matter how many coaches claim that it is a pleasant prob lem to have. A lot of teams with a great deal of talent are faltering because of this lack of a decision by the coaching staff. San Francisco, the Raiders, Minnesota and the Redskins are all hindered by this problem. These are all teams loaded with talent, and none of them should be hovering around the .500

-The Philadelphia Eagles had this problem before the arrival of Buddy Ryan. In one of his few good moves since taking over, Ryan announced that Randall Cunningham was his starting quarterback.

Ryan stood by his promise, and the Eagles are a team on the rise.

These other coaches must make this decision and be will ing to stick by it in order to solidify the team and allow them to reach their potential

-Yes, the Major Indoor Soccer League has started, and there seems to be hope for a successful season. Being completely unbiased in my opinion, I predict that the Baltimore pionship this year. You heard it here first.

-They always say that it will never be like the good old days. It's the truth. For example, look at the Super Bowl -The other day I heard a complaint that all Super Bowls are being played in either Florida. California or a domed sta. dium. It really does take some thing away from the image of football. The sport is always said to be a rough sport played in bad weather, but turn on the TV for the Super Bowl and you see all of the players running around as if they were on the beach. It would be interesting to see at least one more Super Bowl up north, either in New York or possibly the huge stadium at the University of Michi-

Football is a cold weather sport; therefore, the Super Bowl should be played occasionally in cold weather

Brett Lankford is a so phmore and honestly believes that his column last week in The Elm had an impact on Danny Manning's decision to sign with the Clippers

The NHL at the quarterpole

Does anyone realize that Gelinas, three first round draft is long overdue and are happy the National Hockey League season is nearly one quarter complete? This year has been a very interesting one to watch and it will also provide hockey fans with much to look forward to in the weeks ahead. Here is has transpired in the league's sion newest campaign:

Arian

Ravanbakhsh

People everywhere have Wayne Gretzky as he begins a sion. new era in Los Angeles

Attention was first focused to Wayne on August 9, when the unthinkable happened. Edmonton Oiler owner Peter Pocklington traded the Great Gretzky, along with Mike Krushelnyski and Marty McSorley, to the Kings for Jimmy Carson, Rookie Martin robert

CHESTERTOWN 778 6211

picks and 15 million dollars. While Edmonton Oiler fans tried to overcome their shock, the trade put hockey on the Southern California sports So far, Gretzky has led the Kings to a strong second place position. Now the Kings are able to compete with the Calgary Flames and Gretzky's just a brief overview of what old Oilers in the Smythe Divi-

Now, if only the Kings could get some good goaltending, they could have a legitibeen following the exploits of mate shot at winning the divi-

-In an effort to crack down on the number of stick-related injuries, the league has initiated a new rule. Simply put, the rule now calls for automatic game misconducts when a player is assessed a major highsticking penalty.

Most General Managers believe that this step is one that pennington

that these rules are in place -Despite the fact that this rule change was made, the incidents of on-ice violence are on In the wake of a Toronto Courts sentencing of Minnesota North Star Dino Ciccarelli to jail for an on-ice attack of Maple Leaf Luke Richardson, you would think that the vio

So far, the League has suspended seven different players for violence. Among the convicted are Edmonton great Mark Messier (six games) and Philadelphia's Rick Tocchet (10 games for gouging New York Islanders Dean Chynoweth's eye) Maybe with the strong stance taken by the League will make its point and the level of violence will fall. -This year, New York Islander great Mike Bossy ended year-long speculation by officially announcing his retirement. Bossy was the most important player on the New York teams that won four consecutive Stanley Cups during the early 1980's. Throughout a career spanning 10 seasons, Bossy scored 573 goals and had 553 assists. An eight-time League All-star, he holds the NHL rec ord for most goals by a rookie (53 in 1977-78) and was one of in a single game?

the game's classiest players. The three Lady Byng Trophies attest to that. If anything can be said to be a sure bet, this is it: Mike Bossy will go into the Hall of Fame on the first ballot. -In other Hall of Fame news, recently inducted Guy Lafleur is attempting a comeback with the New York Rang-Lafleur was without the question the most dominant lence would be down. Unfortunatly, the opposite has been player of the 1970's winning two consecutive Hart Trophies (MVP) and three consecutive Ross Trophies (scoring cham-

> During his career with the Montreal, Lafleur led the Canadiens to five Stanley Cups, including four consecutive during the late 1970's. To date, Lafleur has scored four goals as he is trying to win a Stanley Cup for the Rangers, who last on a Cup in 1940.

Meanwhile, the team that I am partial to, the Washington Capitals, have gotten off to their traditional slow start. As long and editor of the Pegasus

as the Redskins are playing football, the Capitals struggle

This year, the Capitals were expected to be a dominant team in the League's strongest division. So far, they have man aged to upset everyone, as they now sit in last place looking up at everyone else. Every autumn, just like watching the leaves change colors, the NHL rumor mill turns out stories about the imminent termina tion of Coach Bryan Murray's reign. I know that this team! capable of winning. Witness last season's dramatic, sudden death goal by Dale Hunte which shattered the Philadelphia Flyers hopes of repeating as Wales Conference Champi ons. Once the Caps play up to their potential, they will compete in the Patrick Division promising every hockey fan non stop excitement until the endd April.

Arian Ravanbakhsh is 6 senior Political Science major

The answer to last week's Trivia Question question: The Oakland raiders and the New York Jets were the two teams engaged in the "Heidi" affair in 1968

Because there was more than one correct answer there was a drawing among entries and congratulations go to Julie Green for winning the drawing, Jason Imber was the other entry the answered correctly.

This week's question: What N.F.L. kicker hold the record for the most field goes

Weights can be a drag on fitness

ands? I am 65 years old. I broke my ankle bones earlier

Dr. Jock

DEARREADERS: Wecan hardly wait to answer this one because there are lots of runners and walkers out there hinking they are doing themolves some extra special measare of good. We think not. No hose weights are more gim-nick than good sense. They

DEAR DR. JOCK: Are It's the actual physical act of troublesome because carrying inflamed areas, it will improve stretches, but one easy one you weights around the waist or running or walking that makes gound the ankles or carried in the difference-how far, how my pockets just as effective as often, how intensely-not the arrying the weights in my weights you carry in your hand or around your ankles.

his month and I am anxious to weights is that they make you start walking for exercise work harder. Fine. If you want Los Angeles, to work harder, add 10 minutes to your activity or step up your speed. It is true that exercising with hand weights does add stress to your upper extremity muscles, but if you want to develop upper body strength. there are much better and more efficient ways to do that than runner with heel spurs. What vent the problem from recurugging little weights around, carrying 2- to 3-pound weights around. If you are serious about developing upper body strength and want to see real results. natter where you carry them, find a good gym and get in-your pocket or in your hand, volved in free weights or strength-building machines

A WARNING ABOUT eally don't make much differ- ANKLE WEIGHTS. Running nte in your exercise program. with ankle weights is especially your ankles may make you change your stride enough to increase the risk of overuse discomfort while nature heals injuries in your leg. Why in- the inflamed area. Surgery to don't have to? One final word about weights. If you use them, and you like them, and you're suffering no ill-effects, by all means continue. The important thing scopy because it's not a joint is the exercise itself, not what you drag along.

DEAR DR. JOCK: I am a can you tell me about treat- ring. mentoptions?—L.L. Rifle, Colo.

spurs can happen to anyone, no matter your sport. The bony spurs themselves are of no consequence. It's the inflammation of the plantar fascia that attaches to the heel bone that causes the pain. Just like other onds with a 1:17.12 swim and the medley Relay team of Jenny Korten (Sr.), Newcomb (Fr.), Samantha Streamer (So.) Kathy Finneson (Sr.) dropped the team record by 2 seconds with 2:07.4 swim placing 4th overall.

The MAC relay format gives a good look at dual meet potential rather than championship meet potential. "Although team points were not kept, we held our own with Dickinson and Scranton for the top flammatory drugs, orthotics wall lean and heel cups can ease your The theory behind the crease the risk of injury if you cut the plantar fascial attachment to the heel bone is rarely necessary. Just removing the heel spur will not solve your problem. And this kind of problem is not helped by arthroproblem

> YOU CAN PREVENT HEEL SPURS. The real question is what you can do to pre-

In many instances, tight, DEAR READERS: Heel inflexible calf muscles increases strain on the plantar fascia and the chances of plantas fascitis. To keep your calf muscles loose and flexible, you need to commit yourself to five minutes or more of calf-stretching every day. There are many good calf spots" Coach Berry pointed out after an unofficial team scoring showed WC at the top followed by Scranton, Dickinson and Ursinus from the 10 team field.

The women are next in action at Salisbury State University on November 29th and then host Marymount University in the home opener on December 6th unaccustomed weight around with rest and time. Anti-in- can do most anywhere is the THEWALLLEAN: Stand arms distance away from a wall, feet flat on the floor, legs slightly apart. Put your palms against the wall, and lean your body forward, keeping one or both legs straight behind you. You should feel a slight pressure in your calf area. Stretch gently, do not bounce. Focus your awareness on your calf area and exhale a few times, using your breath to free up the tight area even more. Regular, daily stretching of calf muscles will reduce your risk of getting heel spurs again

Hockey players recieve honors

Congratulations are in order for Beth Mathews on being selected for the NCAA Regional All-American Field Hockey team and Carole Reece for being selected as NCAA Regional All-American Honorable mention. Mathews and Reece were selected along with Washington field hockey teammates-Linda Anders, Jenny Blenckstone, Erin O'Neal, Karen Reck Julie Schram, Amy Tiehel and Donna White to play in the USA Field Hockey Southeast Tournament this weekend in Rockville, Md.

Swimmers smash records in MAC relays This past weekend the that..."in the 5 year plan to de-

A Shear Design Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

NOVEMBER SPECIALS -Perm, Cut & Style ONLY $30 with Jody -Fingernails- nailtip& overlay regularly $35

this month ONLY $25!

nces this years team may have

Washington College women velopintercollegiateswimming wimmers traveled to Franklin at WC we are right on sched-& Marshall to compete in the ule ... ". The swimmers placed in Middle Atlantic Conference the top five places in every women's event on the way to Judging on the perform- setting several team records.

Freshman Leslie New-%s most successful season to comb shattered the 100 Coach Berry noted breaststroke record by 5 sec-

Suds N Soda

Discount Beverages

6am - 12 midnight 7 days

Rt. 213 & Rt. 297 1 mile north of campus

I.D. Required (drivers license)

GRAND OPENNING! November 19th Eastern Shore Camera Inc.

778-0898

1 hr. Film Processing films, cameras, frames & stuff ....

Our policy is to grant 10% student discount with college ID.

> Cross St. & Maple Ave. 778-5212

Snack Shack & Hiden We sent nintendo

Helium Ballons for all occasions

nachines & Games Open 10am - 10pm Sun - Thurs 10am - 11pm Fri - Sat

Fried Chicken * Subs Made Fresh to Order * Hand Dipped Ice Cream

by Ryder Daniels

Camino Real by Tennessee Williams was originally a one-act written in 1948 called Ten Blocks on the Camino Real". After the Broadway production in 1953, Williams, revised and improved the text. making a sixteen "block" play, divided into three acts. The revised version is the text which will be used for this production.

Camino Real is a play of images and is surrealistic. The action takes place in an unspecified Latin American country. The town is not simply the name of a place, but defines a way of existence. Williams writes in his Foreword to the text. "We all have in our conscious and unconscious minds a great vocabulary of images and I think all human communication is based on these images as are our dreams..." The town is governed by martial law and the military forces which are shaken only by the Forbidden Word, which one of the tudes and qualities with those characters calls "...the most mutations that would occur if dangerous word in any human tongue..." There is both poverty and prosperity within the town, and these are divided between the two different sides of the street, with one side is rich and the other is poor. The characters are highly adding characters and scenes, diverse. There are numerous street beggars and Aristocrats, a gypsy, a dreamer, vendors, a blind woman, Don Quixote, a Loan Shark, guards, Kilroy, and Esmeralda, whose virginity is mysteriously returned with each rising of the moon.

> Camino Real is about people trying to survive, trying to escape, and trying to love Williams wrote of Camino Real "More than any other work I have done, this play seemed to me like the construction of another world, a seperate existence. Of course it is nothing more or less than my conception of the time and world I live in, and it's people are mostly archetypes of certain basic atti-

they had continued along the road to this hypothetical termi-nal point in it." Williams adds in the Foreword that he's being serious when he says"that I had never for one minute supposed that the play would seem obscure and confusing to anyone who was willing to meet it even ible demands of a logician is theRenaissance Dinner. Seat unfair to both parties. The production dates are November 30, December 1 stand 2nd. (Wednesday, Thursday however, at the Drama Depart and Friday nights) The first two ment extension at 269 begin performances will be at 8 p.m. ning Monday, November 21st.

pah-Loompahs, will be made up of citizens from Chestertown.

The play will be charac- Council.

less than halfway... to go to the and the Friday night perform Camino Real with the inflex- ance will be at 9 p.m. following ing is in the main auditiorium and reservations are not required. They will be accepted, ### performance Tour Wonka's factory is in the form of a play and will ously fantastic chocolate fac

by Kate Absher simple. Willy Wonka, the world famous chocolate maker, has secretly wrapped a Golden Ticket under the foil of five of who discovers one of these tickets next to his creamy morsel of Willy Wonka chocolate will be given a tour, guided by Wonka

Calholic Church

SACRED HEART

Sat. Evening Mass

ory: 508 High St.

CCD-Sunday

Daily Mass Rosary Recit

tory. The winners can expect to travel in Wonka's personal pink yacht which travels down his river of chocolate to the tasting room of his everlasting "gobhis candy bars. Any person stoppers" and his three-course meal flavored chewing gum. The first four tickets were found by rich children around the world. The fifth, however, himself, through his mysteri- was found by a poor, almost inday 9 to 9:45

Confessions are heard efore Sunday Mass

starving boy named Charlie Bucket. However, there is no need to get discouraged if you didn't find a ticket. You can buy tickets for three dollars if ou are a student and five dollars if you are an adult. The entrance to this mysterious world of Willy Wonka is the door to William Smith Hall, more specifically, to the Norman James Theatre. The tour

> FOR RENT The Glass House

On the water Quaker Neck Jan 17th to May 16th 8 miles from campus * Furnished

- * 5 bedroom * 2 bath* Laudry
- * Equipped kitchen Deep water pier

Call: Tom at 648-5708 (after 4)

take place on November twentyincluding bubble machinesand fourth and fifth at eight p.m. strob lights, to create the imagiand on the twenty-sixth at two native inventions of Wonka's p.m. For those who miss out, it factory will be repeated on December 16th, 17th and 18th at the same

"Kids are my speciality," smiles Leslie Raimond. Herlow of children is put to profitable use as Raimond and her hus If this all seems confusband Vincent direct and proing, an explanation is in order: The Actors Community Theatre duce thefifty member cast of theupcoming show. Charlieans will present the stage version the Chocolate Factory will be of Roald Dahl's classic Charlie their sixteenth production is and the Chocolate Factory. The entire cast, including the Oomfour years. They have been supported, in part, by grant from the Kent County Arts

On Campus Travel Representative or Organization NEEDED to promote:

SPRING BREAK TRIP TO FLORIDA -earn money-valuable work experience-

~FREE trips~

Call Inter-Campus Program at 1-800-433-7747

Quite Simply, Drunk

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor gh St. of Street Side Entrance ritrown, MD. 21620 of Sacred Heart Church 78-3160 Hours: MF 9am to 2 pm

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

MASS SCHEDULE

8:30am 11:30an

9:30 to 10:30am

Chestertown, MD. 21620 (301) 778-3160

Iglous Education Coordin Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F.

Phone: 1-801-820-743

FOOT OF CAMBION ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 24

ENTERTAINMENT

The mystery of the stars, Stonehenge and the game of checkers

by Valerie Walbert

On Thursday, December 1st. Dr. Laurence Frederick from the University of Virginia will lead a discussion focusing on the intricacies and mysterjes of the little known field of archeoastronomy. Archeoastronomy is a study which deals with the astronomical uses of ancient structures. In his talk, Dr. Frederick will discuss how this study specifically applies to megalithic stone monuments purpose. He will also discuss such as Stonehenge and other how the complex world of ancient monuments located in archeoastronomy relates to the various regions throughout simple game of checkers. England, Scotland, and Europe.

It is known that the alignments that mark the summer solstice, eclipses and lunar movements exist in the structure of Stonehenge and massive monuments like it in the British Isles. Dr. Frederick will focus on these similarities in an pret the long-hidden mysteries of Stonehenge. The purpose and meaning behind the building of Stonehenge has remained a mystery to man for many centuries. With this in mind. Dr. Frederick will also probe the possible origins and methods used in the making of Stone henge by studying the corollations between the building of this monument and structures with the same type of hidden

Dr. Laurence Frederick was a chair member of the University of Virginia's Depart ment of Astronomy and served as an officer in both the American Astronomical Society and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He has made contributions in and has published many articles which are readable and applicable to the specialists and nonspecialists alike. Frederick's visit is made possible by the Public Education Program and is sponsored by the American Astronomical Society, the Washington College Lecture Series, and the Washington College Physics Department. The event is arranged and sponsored by Dr. Glenn Cooper of the Physics

Laurence Frederick will discuss the various aspects of attempt to uncover and inter- different areas of astronomy archeoastronomy in his talk on December 1st at eight p.m.

The lecture will be held on Thursday, December1stat8:00 P.M. in Hynson Lounge. All students are encouraged to attend and explore the many mysteries of the world around us, mysteries which are slowly beginning to be understood with the help of scholars such as Dr. Frederick. Refreshments will be served following the talk and

Campus calendar: arts and entertainment beyond Thanksgiving

begins at eight p.m.

Weekend-11/18, 20, 21 On Friday, Sunday, and Monday the action-adventure movie Robocop will be featured in the Film Series. The film is set in the near future world of dirtiness, gloom and degradation. From this springs Murphy a half-man, half-robot. Definately a movie to see

Sunday-11/20 will present the Washington Langston Hughes. The film

Tuesday-11/21

The O'Neill Literary House will be the site of the continuing Voices and Vi-

College Jazz Band in Gibson Fine Arts Center at four p.m.

Weekend-11/25, 26, 27 For all those who will remain on-campus during Thanksgiving, the Actors Community Theatre will present "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" at eight p.m. on the twenty-fifth and sixth and at two p.m. on the twenty-sev enth. See the related article by Kate Abschr in this week's is-sions Film Series. This week's sue for more information. The Music Department film profiles the life of poet

> The Sophie Kerr Series and the Lecture Series will join talents to present a talk by Michael Friend of Johns Hopkins University speaking on "The Meaning of Courbet's Realism." The talk, which will be held in the Sophie Kerr Room, begins at eight p.m.

Wednesday-11/30, 12/1, 2 The Drama Department presents this semester's main-stage production of Tennessee Williams' Camino Real . The play features a large cast and superb set. It will be held in Tawes Theatre.

> Thursday-12/1 The Lecture Series will present an interesting talk on the wonders of both astronomy and archeaology in a talk given by Dr. Laurence Frederick at eight p.m. in Hynson Lounge. Look for further details in an article in this issue by Valerie Walbert

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat

Happy Hours Mon-Fri Free Hors D'oeuvres

THIS FRIDAY

November 18th Jeffrey the DJ

Coming Next Friday....

The Cutters Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers Tuesday 3 shots for the price of 1

Wednesday $1 Imports

Schnapps

Friday 4:30--6:30 Free Hor D'oeuvres

515 Washington Street 778-1984

Larrabee funds Creative Arts Center

continued from page 1 small in comparison to other by her ability to keep a secret. buildings of its kind.

Alonzo Decker, Larrabee decided to fund the project, but waited a month to reveal the

"I wanted it kept a surprise," she said. Larrabee did indeed surprise President Douglass and Libby Cater, Chairman of the Art Department Susan Tessem, Dean Edward Maxcy, and Chairman of Buildings and Grounds Christian Haver- Brain Atlas

spective benefactor at sponding to amounts of energy Larrabee's home, they were instead greeted by an architec-Mrs. Alonzo Decker, Vice President of Development David Wheelan, and Associate Director of Development Bob Polk.

Tessem, whose prints hang in Larrabee's home, said, "I've always been impressed by show slower waves ready existed; therefore, the pher, herenergy, and really her contribution needed for a "name committment to the College, but building" would be relatively I think I'm equally impressed

"Professionally, I'm After consulting with pleased that we're actually going to have a Creative Arts Center. I'm more pleased personally that it's going to happen because of the generosity of a friend and someone who shares my passion for the Col-

> Larrabee stresses that it is her involvement with the

Expecting to meet a pro- continued from page 1

voltage at the electrode sites. According to Pelchat, certural plan of the Center with a tain alpha rhythms are exbanner across the top proclaim- pected for a subject who is ing it the Constance Stuart "awake and alert but eyes Larrabee Creative Arts Center. closed." One may then com-The party, which also included pare the subjects "map" to that to be participating in ongoing the previously informed Mr. and of the average awake and alert

In the instance of brain disease there is a slowing of the EEG and a shift from alpha rhythms to lower frequencies. Stroke victims, for example, Constance's skill as a photogra- Washington College during her nearly 40 years in Chestertown which "inspired me to become involved with the College.

"I feel that the College is a part of my family, so I'm giving the [Creative Arts Center] my name," Larrabee said.

rabee has worked with and counts as her "family" are Neal Boulton, Houghton Phillips, Clarissa Wilmerding, Carl Pohlhouse, Willie Thompson, Doris Brooks, Robert Gordon, and Katie Brookhart, as well as "high caliber" of students at the AOPi sorority, of which Pelchatprojectsthatitwill

soon be available for senior thesis research. She added that it "takes a long time to learn how to use and it's not particularly userfriendly." The Department is expecting an upgrade in software to allevi-research projects. By the time they are ready to work on thesis, they should be proficient in participate in group projects and demonstrations. Pelchat hopes to use the Brain Atlas in operating the machine.

Students are also expected

Laboratory courses will ate this problem.

Larrabee is an honorary sister The Constance Stuart

Larrabee Creative Arts Center will join a family of other campus buildings and landmarks, among them the Miller Library, Gibson Fine Arts Building, the Decker Center, and the McLain Bell, all named for personal friends of Larrabee Said President Cater: "We whole wide world more appropriate for the naming of the Constance Stuart Larrabee Creative Arts Center. Washington College is proud that one of its own family has by her generosity made this Center possible.

of the machine. Pelchat cited ponent, a double credit course Dr. Spilich as an example. that would allow freshmen to Spilich will use the Brain Atlas eliminate a Humanities and to continue his research next English requirement. Two fac year, although not for drug test- ulty members would be aping on the disease

Atlas "has been good for the would cover the courses that morale of the Psychology De- needed filling. partment. I think we've been slighted in the past. We also committee says we're staying have had a lot of good students at current enrollment," Baer who are enthusiastic. They feel said, "so that would probably better about themselves and indicate that there will be no their major. This is an exciting definite faculty increase.' piece of equipment."

Faculty work

continued from page 1 The teachers have a big work load," Baer agreed, "but that's not entirely our fault. It can basically be attributed to the fact that certain courses and certain professors are more popular than others."

A faculty committee met Among the students Lar- cannot think of anyone in the on Thursday to discuss the work load that burdens many faculty members. A study assessing the faculty members and their respective course loads was reviewed at the meeting. It is expected that this comparative load docu ment will help the faculty ad just itself in order to reach a compromise on the distribution her physiological psychology of course work among profes sors. Currently being re-

In reference to faculty use searched is the freshman compointed to run the program, According to Pelchat, the while part-time professors "The long range planning

Mom's Cookie Jar

I'll make it short and sweet. Lunch next Wednesday will be the last meal before Thanksgiving break. Breakfast on Monday will be the first meal after break.

> Hope you all have a Happy Thanksgiving!

> > Mom

Washington College Film Series

This Week....

Friday, November 18th Sunday, November 20th Saturday, November 21st

Show starts at 7:30 in the Norman James Theater

Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All others $2.00

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 11

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, December 3, 1988

Component still causing conflicts

by Claire Capuzzi

A final copy of the proposal for the Freshman Component will be discussed at the next meeting of the Academic Council. It has been suggested that this sourse, if accepted by the Council, will replace the current freshman requirement, Forms of Literature and Compo-

The original draft of the proposal was composed by a subcommittee on curricular planning, which then issued a report containing the outline of the tourse to the Academic Council.

In mid-November, The Best Paper in the World published an article by Robbie Albers which explains the academic intentions of the course, as well as the reasoning behind it.

Albers writes that the proposal "is aresponse to the feeling that the incoming students have no concept of the origin of our culture and thus no idea how our roots affect our culture today."

Albers also raises the issue of the pressure on the faculty which would result, since the course carries with it an intense workload, including six to eight class hours a week, enriched by extra-curricular activities, all in an attempt to "educate students in the Junior Alison Auber, a member of the Council, does not see the component as an answer to existing problems.

"It's a bad idea because it creates more problems than it solves. The intentions are good, but this particular course fails to make that clear

The current Freshman requirement, Forms of Literature and Composition, is a program intended to strengthen students' writing skills and introduce them to different types of lit-

In the world.....p2

It takes a woman to coach men's crew......p4

Strong basketball season.....p5

Gay advocacy......p7

Animal rights.....p8

INSIDE:

By defeating Moravian on November 22, the Sho'men continued their winning streak at home that extends into its second season feels that, while there is room for improvement. Forms of Literature and Composition, with the combined help of the writing workshop, is a course which helps many students achieve their academic goals. Many upperclassmen who took the course as freshman, as well as those currently enrolled, agree that the course is a helpful and necessary one, since "it does help tremendously to widen the English lecturer Kathy Wagner scope of one's knowledge," according to Council member Dr. Stephen Cades, says that while the first draft of the proposal was "neither voted up nor down," it has since been revised and now contains several "minor modifica-

The final copy of the proposal for the Freshman Component will be voted on this Monday.

Athletics evaluated

by Patricia Karnes

Every five years, the National College Athletic Association (NCAA) requires athletic departments to complete a self-study. Recently, Washing-ton College went through this process, but Geoffrey Miller, Director of Athletics, and President Cater discussed the study and felt that a more detailed study from an outside, objective source was needed to find solutions to some of the College's athletic weaknesses

Miller said, "We didn't ask them to tell us what is wrong with our program, we know what our weaknesses are. We wanted new ideas on solving them."

Since there are no professional businesses that consult athletic facilities, two individuals from Division III schools, with less than two thousand students, were selected. Each had to have coached and taught physical education on the collegiate level. To make the survey as objective as possible, Charles Luce, the Chairman of Physical Education at Connecticut College and Linda Moulton, Director of Athletics at Clark University, were asked to evaluate the College's sports program.

On October 24th and 25th, the two consultants met with President Cater, the Deans, all members of the Athletic Department, the Athletic Advisory Council, the Intramural Council, Faculty Athletic Committee, and the Vice President of Finance.

"This is to make us a stronger department," said Miller. "The consultants were impressed by the staff at Washington College. They found them to be open and honest, willing to provide more information for the study.

The results of the report are to arrive at Washington College next week. It will suggestions and impressions of the College's Physical Education Department, Intercollegiate Athletics, and the Intramural Sports Programs,

Christmas tree maintenance

The Security Department has issued the following statement in regard to rules of maintaining Christmas trees:

The Maryland State Fire Marshall, Rocco J. Gabriele, has announced a statewide policy pertaining to use of live, cut, and artificial Christmas trees for public buildings.

Permitted:

-Living trees in a "balled" condition with roots protected by soil may be permitted, provided that they are maintained in a fresh condition and do not become extremely dry

-Artificial trees which are identified by a manufacturer as being "flame of egress.

retardent" or "flame resistant." -U.L. listed electrical lights and

Not permitted:

-Fresh trees which have been cut. Electrical lights on metal artificial trees, due to potential fire and/or electric shock hazard. Use spotlights for illumination instead.

-Open flames from candles, lanterns, or heating appliances on trees or other combustible decorations.

No Christmas trees of any kind should obstruct exits or in any way be located in corridors, exit ways, or means

EDITORIAL

Roe vs. Wade: count the votes

After fifteen years, Roe vs. Wade stands on somewhat shaky ground, even though sixty-four percent of the respondents in an NBC poll in October stated that they wanted to keep abortion legal.

In the 1973 ruling that made abortion legal, the Supreme Court did not attempt to answer the abortion's basic question: when does human life actually begin? The Justices wrote "When those trained in...medicine, philosophy and theology are unable to arrive at any consensus, the judiciary, at this point in the development of man's knowledge, is not in a position to speculate as to the

As man's knowledge develops, so does the opposition to the ruling. The nature of the abortion issue is such that it almost divides people right down the line. Individuals have to decide where the line is between individual rights and society's duty to protect the powerless.

Justice Harry Blackmun, author of the 1973 ruling, points out that there is a distinct possibility of it will go down the drain. He points out that one can count the votes. Four Justices of the Supreme Court: Chief Justice William Rehnquist, Antonin Scalia, Sandra Day O'Connor and Byron White have, in the past, assailed the Roe vs. Wade decision. The newly appointed justice Anthony Kennedy has a conservative record, but has not indicated his stand on the abortion issue.

Bush campaigned for the presidency on an anti-abortion platform. It is probable that he will appoint conservative judges in the future: judges who will vote against Roe vs. Wade.

Just two days after Bush's victory in the election, the Justice Department filed a brief requesting the Supreme Court to review the Missouri case Webster vs. Reproductive Health Services. This involves a Missouri statute that says life begins at conception, and that no public funds can be used to perform an abortion or to counsel women about this option

However, the Justices may not be willing to take on Roe vs. Wade so soon, first they may begin to approve state regulations that limit abortions. Some states have already proposed regulations to the people, and in the November election, Arkansas, Colorado and Michigan approved propositions that ban state funded abortions. About 1.6 million women exercise the right to have an abortion each year in the United States: 28 women out of a 1,000 between the ages of 15 and 44. This is far higher than in other Western countries. It should not be the place of the government to decide the future of the individual. Women have the right to make decisions that affect their bodies, however abortion should not be maintained as a viable method of birth control. It is something that should be considered seriously. Nearly two out of five patients have had previous abortions: an indication that it may not be taken as seriously as it should be.

The WY Land College Ele

| washington College Line  | I   |
|--|-----|
| Editors  | v   |
| Editor-in-chief  | ^   |
| iews Editor Susan Di Leo   | 9   |
| Ceatures Editor  | C   |
| Posts Editor Carter Boatner  | ı   |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor  | -   |
| Photography Editor David Johnson Graphics Designer Todd Karr   | 1   |
| Graphics Designer Todd Karr  | D   |
| Managers   | 113 |
| Managing Editor Bill Beekman   | d   |
| Advertizing Manager  | a   |
| Circulation Manager James Sobezak  | u   |
| Cartestan Manager and Cartestan Cart |     |

Office Manager

MARY JANE REALIZED SOMETIMES IT LAY IN THE CAFETERIA. THAT THERE WAS A FOOD THAT COULD CHOKE A LIZARD DUALITY THAT EXISTED ON CAMPUS .. WAS SERVED IN A VERY NICE ENVI-A REPOR ROUMENT. ON THE PHMORE WRITING E MINAR WILL BE PREPARED BEFORE WE MAKE A DECISION SOMETIMES IT LAY BETWEEN WHAT WAS SAID AND WHAT WAS DONE T. KARR'88

STILL OTHER TIME IT LAY ON THE SIDEWALK BETWEEN IN PUPPLES ABOUT THREE FEET DEEP,

WHY IS IT THAT THIS SCHOOL CAN SPENT MILLIONS ON AN ACADEMIC RESOURCES CENTER, WHATEVER THAT IS, BUT WON'T FIX THE GODDAMN SIDEWAYS

In the World

United States

Senate Democrats meet on Tuesday to elect the new majority leader. The three leading contenders are George Mitchell of Maine, J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, and Daniel K. Inouve of Hawaii. The new Senate majority leader will help define the image of the Demo cratic Party, as well as control the agenda of the Senate.

Law enforcement officials and drug-treatment experts say that the drug Speed could come to rival Crack in use. The drug, which can be smoked, snorted, injected, or taken in a drink, is being manufactured in an increasing number of illegal laboratories. Speed is less expenbecome a substitute

United Nations The U.S. Government announced on Saturday that it will not issue a visa to P.L.O. chief Yasir Arafat permitting him to address the United Nations in New York. The State Department refused to issue the risa because of Mr. Arafat's association with terrorism. The chiefrepresentative of the Arab League, Clovis F. Maksoud, suggested that the debate might be moved to Geneva, Switzerand to permit Mr. Arafat to address the Assembly. The U.S. decision to deny the visa has met with considerable criticism _____Cynthia Goss met with considerable crit _Julie Greene and Cathy Lease from the European ailies.

Soviet Union

The Soviet Government declared invalid a recent deciof The sion by the Estonian Republic which gave republics the right to reject Soviet laws that infringed upon local autonomy. This is expected to irritate nationalist tensions in the three Baltic republics of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania. Soviet Union is also being faced namement of Reid Hall, next with increasing ethnic unrest sdays and 7:00 to 10:00 PM the Editor-in-chief in (801) in the southern republics of

Armenia, and Azerbayan. The Central Committee is scheduled to meet on Tuesday to consider various amendments to the Soviet Constitution. These amendments would increase the central government's control over the various republics. Algeria

In hopes of opening up its government and reviving the economy, the Algerian President, Chadi Benjedid will attempt to break the monopolistic rule of Algeria's National Liberation Front party. The party has controlled the Algerian government for the past 26 years. Mr. Benjedid's actions were prompted by the civil unrest and strikes that have sive than cocaine, and could plagued Algeria for the last few compiled by Laura Hopper months. This civil unrest he challenged the authority of th Algerian government. South Africa

Two black nationalis were freed by the South Africa Government on humanitaria grounds. The two men, Zephs nia Mothopeng, and Ham Gwala are both in ill health Mr. Mothopeng, who was see tenced in 1979, is the founder the Pan-Africanist Congress Mr. Gwala, who is suffering from an incurable neurologia disorder, was a regional leads of the now banned Congress South African Trade Union and a member of the Africa National Congress.

The Democratic Party dons a new face

five Democrats in the U.S. Senate will have elected a new deteriorated ever since the majority leader, and thus will traparty warfare of '68 and the have made the critical decision disastrous McGovern campage as to what sort of face to put on of 1972. One reason for this the Democratic party. Since a persistent lack of strong

Jeff Vail

1968. Democrats have won only one presidential election, and the number of voters identifying themselves as Republicans has rapidly and steadily increased. Although Democrats still do well at the state and After Tuesday, the fifty- local levels, their image as national party has severe compelling figures to lead the party.

Speaker of the House Jin Wright is the nation's higher ranking Democrat, but a though he is a capable and di tinguished man, his somewhi bizarre personality and bi many idiosyncrasies makehis continued on page

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 2160

CAMPUS VOICES

ISSUE:

A course designed to educate students about Western Civilization from Ancient Greece to the Renaissance was proposed to replace Forms of Literature and Composition. Would this change be effective?

This course is not the answer

There has been talk of late looking at the themes and ideas out the proposed Freshman Year Course in Academic Counil and among the student body in general. Some background the intent of the course may in order Ideally, the course would plement the course. e an introduction to Western vilization and culture from the cients to the Renaissance nclude lecture, seminar discusons and the writing compoent would be stressed. The urse is to be team taught, ith both professors present at ch class meeting.

The Freshman Year

that recur throughout Western development and following through with modern thought appropriate in those areas. A strong co-curricular component would be established to com-

Finally, it would be equivalent to two normal courses, including the existing hinkers. Its format would Forms of Literature and Composition My first concern, being an English major and involved in the writing program here, is that the Freshman would not get the same quality of writing instruction within this course Course is also interested in as in a Forms class. I have had Alison K. Auber professors tell mejust to get the information across and not to worry about spelling, grammar That really worries me.

A school that prides itself on writing across the curriculum should be damn sure of the way in which they are introducing new students.

My second concern is about losing the professors we have to this course. It would take up an inordinate amount of time to plan classes and smoothly blend teaching styles, not to mention the time taken up during summer months to might wane research the material. This course plus the existing courseload would be impossible for the professor to handle. Therefore, the professor is forced to give up his traditionally taught courses in favor of the freshman one. That means he may not be offering that looked interesting. In the same vein, the new professors that would be hired to handle the overflow would not be as comfortable with the atmosphere. The students would be uncomfortable, as well. Overall classroom morale

Honors course you wanted to take or that senior seminar that

I guess those are all the imminent concerns I have with the course. Its becoming a requirement is not an issue because of the proposed three year trial period. Generally, I think the consoutweigh the pros in this situation. It may very well be true that the incoming students don't have an adequate grasp on the origins of Western ulture or of the modern ramifications of such origins, but this course is not the answer.

Alison Auber is a junior majoring in English. She is the English representative on the Student Academic Board.

Mike Johnson Junior Yardley, PA "No. I think at a school that stresses writing and English so much, freshmen who took this course would be lacking the basic writing skills that one really needs to express onesels Kemi Ladeji Freshman Lagos, Nigeria "Yes. I think the course would still be basically the same except that the books would be different.

Goldens Bridge, N.Y. "I think it might be an interesting alternative, though I feel both should be offered. Without the Forms of Literature, what would the less intelligent students take?"

Kent Island, MD "A course on Western Civilization may be a feasible addition to the Forms of Literature and Composition, but I think the Forms class is too valuable as an introductory college course to replace."

Sophomore Baltimore, MD "While the designers of this course have good intentions. I feel they have failed to realize the fact that the subject matter is far too broad to be covered in a one-year course.

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6-30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welc Friday, December 19th The Newtowne Pub Welcomes ....

Pebbles and the Bam -Bam Boys

$5 cover

Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers

Tuesday 3 shots for the price of 1 Wednesday $1 Imports

Thurday Friday 4:30--6:30 Free Schnapps Hor D'oeuvres $1

515 Washington Street 778-1984

FOOT OF CANSIGN ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 24

301-779-36bi

A Shear Design

Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

-Perm, Cut & Style ONLY $30 with Jody -Fingernails- nailtip& overlay regularly $35 this month ONLY $25! 778-0898

Student uses prep school rowing to become assistant coach for men's varsity crew

by Troy Petenbrink

"I love coaching and I hate it too. That's the way it's supposed to be-that's crew , says Katina (Tina) Smith

Smith is presently a junior at Washington College and the coach of the men's varsity crew team. Smith was chosen to replace Jeff Gibbons, who graduated in '88, as the men's

"We were looking for someone with the time and knowledge to replace Jeff as coach," states Donald M. Chatellier, head coach of the men's crew teams

"We had a very difficult time in trying to find a parttime experienced coach. We just can not afford one. Tina had written to me early in the summer and after great thought we asked her to assist in coach-

Smith is not unfamiliar with the sport. She attended a prep school in New England where she rowed for four years

"When I came to Washington College I continued to row into the spring of my freshman year, and became the coxswain for the varsity boat and continued into my sophomore year," she says.

"I know that I'm a good

Bring

to dinner tonight Sat. or Sun. night and buy you Christmas Gram!

male is not even an issue. Most of the rowers are familiar with me as their coxswain," Smith continues

"However, the peer rela-

I love coaching and I hate it too. That's the way it's supposed to be that's crew.

tionship is hard: I see them everyday and I know what they're up to and what they're doing."

"I have not had any complaints about Tina. I feel she is doing a great job and the team is responding well. As far as I'm concerned Tina has gotten as much effort out of the guys as anyone in the past," Chatellier

So far, Smith says that she is "really happy with the guys so far this year. I have tried to show the team that they can do it. They have all shown great improvement.

"As for the spring season I don't know. I don't like to look into the future. I'm really excited though, but we will just take it as it comes."

Smith expressed her con

coach. The fact that I'm a fe- cern that the crew team doesn't receive enough recognition

> "I wish people would recognize them (the crew team). With this small of a school needs. The general feeling of the team is that she is doing the best that she can possibly do, but the school is asking too have the experience the team relate to Tina outside of coach ing," comments Than Hansey sophomore rower.

"I think she knows a lo much and the team is getting but she doesn't have the experi

Pictured here with last year's varsity men's crew team is assistant coach, junior Tina Smith (center). L year's student coach, Jeff Gibbons '88, is pictured at the left end. Smith had the advantage of rowing in m school before coming to Washington College. they're amazing. I would like to shortchanged ence of a professional "

"The school is only pro-see them expand and get an outside coach, one with experi-

"Tina knows a lot about 10:00am nday 9 to 9:45

crew, but coaching sixteen men is tough," says Daniel Feiner, coxswain for the team. "At her age she doesn't longing the inevitable of hiring an experienced coach," he con-"I would definitely prefer a real coach to a student coach. It makes it very difficult on a personal level for the team to guys," he adds.

But, says Chatellier, "Sh has shown a lot of guts and very good judgment as the coad Morale and conditioning amount the guys seems really good.

"She understands the sport and she understands the

THOREDIELE

BUT TRUE

SEMESTER

Calholic Church Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

SACRED HEART 7:00pm

9:30 to 10:30a

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor

y: 508 High St Chestertown, MD. 21620 (301) 778-3160 Igious Education Coordina Sr. Constance Davis. O.S.F. no: 1.801.820.7437

Office: Kent Street Side Entrance of Sacred Heart Church

ST.JOHN'S

You dial. We deliver.

Washington basketball opens season strong

What is being called THE boards with RASON for Washington Colge Basketball has begun quite picking up poressively. The team has 27 of the ready captured one tourna- squads 33 ent crown-The Wisp Classic rebounds. Frostburg, and easily deated a strong Moravian squad. ing in the saday night saw the team's Frostburg est setback to Division I, Dela- Wisp Invita-

Against Delaware the Shoremen Shoremen led much of the way overcame fore being edged 77-71.

The game was a physical challenges fair, with three Shoremen to win the tarted fouling out. Delaware tournapproved second half shooting ment. what did the WC netters in. im Keehan led WC with 20 first game eints. Andy Bauer and Chris the Shore-Brandt both were in double men beat figures with 16 and 11 points Philadelphia's espectively. Keehan and Spring Gar-Bauer also paced the team on the boards with 13 and 10. The 78-67. Keeas dropped the Shoremen han led the agers to 3-1. Before the Delaware game 17 points.

he Shoremen had been ex- C h r i s temely impressive in three J a m k e straight wins. On the home played a for of the Cain Athletic Cen- solid game terthe team trounced Moravian in the low 15-50. One has to go back to post posiwoyears to find a home loss for tion finish m impressive 48 percent from points and against Moravian. The Shoremen won75-50. he field in the victory. Keehan six ution. There was a solid team point performance

five players

Playtional the two tough

In the team with

ed all scorers with an impres- bounds. Bauer had a solid 12 ve 28 points. Andy Bauer also point, seven rebound outing ad a healthy 16 point contri- Scott Jones had a strong 10 the Shoremen. The squad shot ing with 13 TimKeekanscores here on a layup enroute to a team-high 28-point performance against per- 12/7 Basketball overtime was needed for Washington to claim championship. The squad defeated the burg team 72-70.

Bauer and with 22 and 17 points reseven rebound show-with

points and five assists. The Shoremen play a big M.A.C. game

In the "Widener. The next week sees final of the the twelfth annual Wild Goose tournament Classic hit Cain.

Swimmers defeat Salisbury in season opener

The Washington College women's swim team opened host Frost- their season Tuesday evening by easily defeating Salisbury State (2-4) by a score of 162-90.

During the contest Wash-Keehan ington swept 13 of 14 events again paced and so overwhelmingly domithe squad nated that the officials started to run exhibition events in which only the finishes by Salspectively, isbury swimmers would be Chris Jamke counted towards the meet score. had a strong Because of the exhibition events 12 point, Salisbury took 46 of Washington's points.

Because the meet was held Chris in a meter pool, none of the Brandt had a finishing times can be officially good game counted towards Washington team records because they first must be converted to vards which are the lengths that the current team records are set in

Sports calendar

vs.Marymount7pm(H)

vs.Gallaudet 7:30pm(H)

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Christmas Cards 15% off on Children's Books 15% - 50% off many other books NEW Software specials and other computer supplies

Washington College Bookstore 8:30 - 4:30 Monday - Friday 10:00 - 1:00 Saturday

REWARD

Drivers wanted for fast delivery of delicious pizzas to Washington College & Kent & Q.A. Hospital. Evening work only. Many benefits. Apply in person for a financially rewarding experience, at the Chestertown Pizza Hut.

Friday, December 2, 1988 THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM

Campus Calendar: Renaissance, women, William

December 2, 4, 5 Film Series will be showing tension 286 the film, The Unbearable Lightness of Being at seven-thirty on Friday, Sunday and Monday nights. According to Time magazine, the film, based on the 1984 novel by Milan Kundera, is about "life and death, love and responsibility, private morality and power politics."

Friday December 2 The Drama Department presents the last night of the Tennessee Williams play Camino Real . The play begins at nine PM in Tawes Theatre of the Gibson Fine Arts Center. Friday , Saturday December 2, 3

Departments of Washington sion College will join together for the Annual Renaissance Dinner. The dinner, held in Hynson singing, dancing and authentic costumes from the time period.

The Washington College made with Leone Eaton at ex-

The annual Freshman Literary Colloquy will be held Monday evening at eight p.m. in the O'Neill Literary House. The reading features the members of the Freshman creative writing classes taught by Kathy Wagner and Calvin

Forbes

Tuesday December 6 Puerto Rican writer Rosarito Ferre will give a talk at eight PM in the Sophie Kerr Room on "Memories of Sweet Diamond Dust" as part of the Lecture Series. All are welcome, and encouraged to come The Music and Dance to listen to interesting discus-

Wednesday December 7 Washington College's Lounge at seven PM features Sophie Kerr Room will be the site of the nationally recognized, Executive Director of the Na-

office and reservations may be

Monday December 5

discussing "The Fate of the Gay Wednesday evening at six PM and Lesbian Movement" as part in the Coffee-House. of the Lecture Series. Levi's talk comes at a time when much information is needed, particularly because of the ever-present threat of AIDS. The talk will be held at eight PM.

The Dance on Film Se-More information may be obtional Gay and Lesbian Task ries presents the film Seven tained at either department Force, Jeffrey Levi, who will be Brides for Seven Brothers

The cast of Tennessee Williams' play Camino Real prepares for their upcoming mainstage products

Thursday December 8 Department presents the An- Equality? A Discussion of nual Foreign Language Poetry Reading at eight p.m. in the Coffee-House. All are welcome to attend and explore the world of foreign literature.

The opening discussion of the newly-formed Maggie Hor sley Society will be held this evening at seven PM. The talk The Modern Languages titled "Have Women Achieved Women's Issues in 1988," wil be given by Dean Elizabeth Baer. Refreshments will be served following the talk. More information can be found in at article contained in this issue

Restaurant Manager- Chuck Rider Assistant Manager-John Nadolny Maryann Gullett Breakfast Manager-Barbara Mills Delonia Black

Rts. 213 & 291 701 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md.

778-6622

OPEN DAILY 7 A.M.-11 P.M.

Look at our Specials...

Sunday - Whopper $.99 Monday - 2 Burgers $.99 Wednesday - Whopper $.99

with the purchase of a Large French Frys Plus a Medium Soda

Burger King #5306

Gay advocacy explored in Lecture Series

by Valerie Walbert

The Lecture Series for this semester is winding down and one of the last speakers will be the nationally known Jeffrey Levi, with his talk titled, "The Fate of the Gay and Lesbian Movement." Levi is the Executive Di rector of the oldest, nonpartisan gay/lesbian civil rights advocacy organization in the District of Columbia. This organization promotes and protects the civil rights and concerns of gays and lesbians in matters of anti-gay/lesbian violence and AIDS within the gay community. This is achieved through tireless community-organizing efforts, lobbying groups and education. This advocacy organization represents the gay community to Congress, the federal bureaucracy, state and local officials, as well as other interest and advocacy groups with simi-

Jeffrey Levi completed extensive work in promoting knowledge and awareness of AIDS. He made several media and public appearances, the ance on ABC's Nightline where professional conferences on he participated in the "Town AIDS. Watch Meeting on AIDS" in allowed the nation to under- his master's degree in govern-

Levi is a graduate of Obermost notable was his appear- been involved in numerous He was named Director of ganization Governmental and Political Affairs in 1985 and became a member of the gay/lesbian civil Miller Library on Wednesday June of 1987, and as a result, lin College in Ohio and received rights advocacy campaign in December 7 at eight p.m. The 1983. In 1986, he was named stand this disease. He has also ment from Cornell University. Executive Director of this or- sion is free

The lecture will be held in the Sophie Kerr Room of the lecture is open to all and admis-

Horsley Society opens with discussion, celebration

by Michele M. Volansky

The list of Washington College's Lecture Series is numerous: filled with art and poetry, lectures on topics ranging from teen suicide to gay rights to poetry readings and talks by world-famous authors. There has been, however, a missing element in Washington College's lectures. This missing piece has been the role of women not only on the college campus, but also in the whole of society. From this need arises the newly established Maggie Horsley Society.

The Society, named after lege Professor of Sociology . Margaret Horsley, is a lecture series with full audience par- already done, and that's not ticipation and an organization which deals with specific women's issues. It is non-partisan, and it does not take a stand on any of the topics brought up in discussion. One does not even have to be a woman to be included in the activities.

Its co-founders, junior Jennifer Harrison and senior Andrea Kehoe, recognized the need to explore the issue of women in society and the role the modern women is playing in the United States and around the world. Kehoe explains the retired Washington Col- goal as "Raising consciousness on women's issues. Many true. There is more to be done." She adds that the Society hopes to bring up issues which include the concept of equal pay for equal work, and the problem of child care. The Margaret Horsely Society will base its structure on the William James Forum, but with more input and discussion from audience members

One of the first ways the college community will be introduced to the Maggie Horsely Society will come in a talk given by Dean Elizabeth Baer on the eighth of December at seven p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library. Refreshwomen feel that the work is ments will follow the talk, which titled "Have Women Achieved Equality? A Discussion of Women's Issues in 1988" Baer believes that the Society will provide a forum for "women of all generations." She adds that "This will provide an opportunity to explore individual beliefs on the issues. They are all so complex and difficult and there are no right or wrong answers. Students need to establish their own lifestyle.

All students and faculty. both male and female, are urged to attend in order to gain a better understanding of the role women are currently play ing in society and to learn of the active role women of many ages are playing on campus.

You don't need your parents' money to buy a Macintosh.

It's never been difficult for students to convince their parents of the need for a Macintosh® computer at school

Persuading them to write the check, however, is another thing altogether.

Which is why Apple created the Student Loan-to-Own Program. An ingenious loan program that makes buying a Macintosh as easy as using one.

Simply pick up an application at the location listed below, or call 800-831-LOAN. All your parents need to do is fill it out, sign it, and send it. If they qualify, they'll receive a check for you in just a few weeks.

There's no collateral. No need to prove financial hardship. No application fee. Best of all, the loan payments can be spread over

Which gives you and your parents plenty of time to decide just who pays for it all.

Introducing Apple's Student Loan-to-Own Program

Washington College Bookstore - 4:30 Mon through Fri

Animal rights groups make foolish claims

groups are back in force and their foolish and self-defeating claims amaze me. In Austin, Texas last week, a truck with 2,000 turkeys, on their last ride before processing, overturned. A Texan reporter called the freak accident "a break for freedom and a serendipitous re prieve from the executioner's blade." These protectionists, who think with their hearts and not their heads, started a savethe-turkey campaign; fortu-

Laura MacIntyre

nately their is no such sentimentality in the food industry. In Connecticut this month, an animal rights protestor planted a bomb at the U.S. Surgical Corp., a medical research and training institution. The accused dog-lover was protesting medical students' use of surgical staplers on anesthetized dogs. I doubt protectionists would rely on a bandaid to heal abdominal surgery, vet some condemn the process that makes such surgical procedures possible

Recently Time magazine printed an ad for the "Humane hemophilia, AIDS, muscular who has only two feet; two feet of living space, that is. This group campaigns against factory farming, much less animal experimentation, as they want animals left in their natural

These protectionists, and others, state their claims so convincingly that the continuation of medical advancement is being challenged. They believe that it is querying scien tists' insatiable curiosity that leads them to disfigure, starve, mutilate, addict, and inject animals in the hope that some scientific revelations will occur do occur and there is no sane reason why they should be stopped. Research on rodents revealed the vitamins and minerals essential for life. Rhous monkeys allowed man to explore the intellect and develop a rabies vaccine. If it were not for animals, organ transplants, kidney dialysis, bypass surgery, blood transfusions and the use of heart and lung machines would never occur. Much is unknown about atherosclerosis.

Well, scientific revelations

Animal protectionists ardently believe that they must protectionists' arguments do this earth would be dead. The vindicate mankind from its ethnocentric tendency so that the integrity of man will be protectionists' humane movepreserved. They insist on reporting rare cases in highly emotional form. They are con vincing. Granted, some controversy is necessary to insure needed by society so that the

be too easily induced in the ment and lose sight of their real tific knowledge in more mor-

Those animal rights Farming Association" that dystrophy and cancer, and reagainst extreme cases of inhu-will that take? If it were not for manning and the control of the case humans and other animals of not prevail. I think people can protectionists' argument gos against the instincts of human nature, to produce results and succeed, and goes against the main principle of science, which Protectionists seek scien- is to sustain life. Their argo ment will not stand, and nei ally accepted ways. How long ther should their influence.

> continued from page 2 ill suited to lead the Democratic party into the future. Also, his image has been slightly tarnished by opportunists like Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, who makes a career out of accusing the Speaker of all manner of exaggerated perfidies.

Mario Cuomo and Jesse Jackson are recognized as eloquent spokesman for the party, but neither possesses the legislative power to use his support to shape national policy. The seventy-year-old retiring Senate majority leader Robert Byrd of Virginia was effective and powerful, but in this age of the mnipotent TV camera his bluish pompadour, silly-looking outfits, and awkward speaking style made him something less than an inspirational leader. It would seem that this role will therefore fall to the new majority leader. The three candidates are Senators J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana. Daniel Inouve of Hawaii, and George Mitchell of Maine. All three are worthy candidates, but the only one who could provide a compelling and persuasive voice for the Democratic party is Mitchell, 55, a charismatic, intelligent man of charm and humor who served with insight and distinction on the committee investigating the Iran/Contra scandal. Johnston is indeed the kind of Southern moderate which the party needs in prominent positions to try and win back Southern votes in future elections, but he is too colorless and bland to be the Democrats' counterpart to the Republican minority leader Robert Dole. Senator Inouye although still enormously to spected and admired on Capi tol Hill, proved himself inade quate as a prominent part leader during his plodding and inept handling of the Iran Contra investigation.

ell will have been elected majority leader by the time this article sees print. If so, the Democrats will have an articulate, impressive moral and inspirational leader controlling the Senate agenda and shaping the Senate debate for many years to come.

Jeff Vail is a sophomore.

Hopefully George Mitch-

A MESSAGE TO ALL STUDENTS WITH ENTHUSIASM, SPIRIT, AND A WILLINGNESS

TO GET INVOLVED: The Development Office has come to realize the value of having a permanent, organized group of students who can be relied upon to serve the college both here on campus and among our alumni and friends beyond Chestertown. Many other colleges and universtities have long used similar student organizations to assist them with their programs, from alumni relations to town/gown relations. It is time for Washington College to put its best foot forward and utilize the talents and energy of some of its most enthusiastic students. With this in mind, the Development Office has decided to establish a Student Development Committee. This committee will be dedicated to serving Washington College and its community in a variety of ways. Working in all areas, from assisting the Development Office at campus events to representing W.C. beyond Chestertown, the Student Development Committee will act to preserve the reputation and ensure the well-being of the College. Membership is granted to students in good standing of Washington College; energetic men and men who are willing to give of themselves, their time, energy, and enthusiasm to improve life at W.C having an assembledge such as the Student Development Committee are numerous. For the College, it means a core group of concerned and informed activists for many years to come. For the individual, it means increased involvement in the life of Washington College and an invaluable opportunity to meet and work with some of our most successfull and important alumni/alumizational meeting on Tuesday, December 6th 7:00-8:00 PM in the Sophie Kerr room of the Miller Library.

Any interested students are invited to come to an organ

R ....

The Audio-Visual Department of Washington College is looking for freshman interested in working with A/V equipment. Knowledge of VCRs TVs, 16 mm projectors and slide projectors is helpful Training will be available.

Contact Jay Meranchik at extension 384, or see him in person at the Computing Center.

This man forgot to buy a Christmas Gram!

DON'T LET THIS HAPPEN TO YOU!

You have 3 more nights to bring $1 to the cafeteria -Sunday is your LAST day to purchase a 20 word x-mas message to appear in the

Dec.9th Elm. You can also enclose your message in and envelope with $1, adressed to Elm x-mas Grams and slip it under 211 Reid Hall. But hurryyour time is running out!

"It is also overwhelmingly, unapologetically erotic."

- ORION income

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 12 Chestertown, Maryland 21620 Friday, December 9, 1988

Tanks provoke wariness

by Susan Di Leo

The safety of the propane tank yard located directly in front of the Cardinal Dorms has long been an issue of dispute. The tank yard, however, complies with local and national mning laws

According to Judge Thomas Sisk, the propane tanks are dangerous because they are scattered, instead of lined up and they are located in a conrested area. "It's dangerous to have a dorm near a propane tank yard-I'm surprised that's

At the time that the present location of the Cardinal Dorms was under consideration, Fire Marshall Richard Powell says that the College was made fully aware of the tank yard's existence and its implications.

Gene Hessey, the Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, corroborates Powell's statement. The Cardinal Dorms, he says, complied with zoning regulations, and there were no suggestions of undue hazard" because of the tanks, so the permit was ac-

Sisk says that the tanks could easily explode if, for instance, a truck backed into a tank and punctured it

Carl Stenger, owner of the propane tank yard, says this isn't so. In order to have combustion, three circumstancesfuel, oxygen, and ignitionmust exist in a confined area. The propane tanks have fuel

Furthermore, oxygen would have to be injected into the tanks with a greater pres-Sure than that contained within the tanks, which is 75 pounds.

Hessey was advised that the potential for ignition octurs with the loading of tank trucks with equipment," and this is regularly inspected.

Whether the propane tanks are properly maintained has long been an issue of con-

Town and gown merged when Karen Smith and Steve Mumford performed at last week's Renaissance Christmas Dinner, which was sponsored by the Music and Dance Department.

lawsuits [with Stenger] to clean [the tank yard] up," he said.

Powell declined to comment on whether the tanks are well-maintained, though he said that it "would be a lot better if they were not there.

"From a layman's perspective, [the tank yard] doesn't represent good maintenance," said Hessey "We will be sure to the best of our ability that that yard is as safe as it can be," said Horsey. He added that anyone who witnesses unusual events occuring with the tanks should contact town officials.

Stenger himself "know[s] of no controversy" involving the

The tank yard was constructed in 1961, prior to any emitted from the tanks, "the troversy, says Mayor Elmer zoning ordinances in Chester-Horsey. "We've had several town. Consequently, the tank yard was "grandfathered in" when zoning codes went into

> The tank yard also complies with national governmental regulations which requires 50 feet to separate the tanks from other buildings. Since the tanks are legal, Horsey said, "we can only enforce the regulations."

"Were Stenger to apply for another location [for the tankyard] within the town limits, current zoning wouldn't allow it," Hessey stated. Pow-

that small leaks from the tanks would not pose a major threat Stenger to the community. contends that if gas vapors

Trustees appointed

by Tracey Connell

The Administration has announced two new appointments to the Washington College Board of Trustees. David McLaughlin and John J. Roberts will officially join the Board as members at their next McLaughlin, President Emeritus of Dartmouth College, was also recently appointed Chairman of the Board of the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies at Wye Plantation He received an Honorary Doctor of Laws Degree from Washington last Spring.

McLaughlin has strong background in business. holds an M.B.A. as a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Dartmouth University and its Amos Tuck School of Business

In addition, McLaughlin was the President of Champion Papers packaging company and a chairman of the Toro Company. He is a member of the Board of Directors of Chase Manhattan Bank, Westinghouse Electric Corp., a member of the National Chamber of Commerce, the Chief Executive Organization, and the Council on Foreign Relations.

Formerly a New York insurance executive, John J. Roberts is also a new addition to the Washington Colege Board

Roberts is a graduate of natural flow of air between the Princeton University. He serves tanks and the dorms wouldn't as chief executive officer of allow any possible vapor to American International Underwriters, the chairman of Ameri-Dean of Student Affairs can International Underwrit-Maureen McIntire concluded, ers Overseas, executive vice-"Everyone would be more com- president and director of the fortable if those tanks weren't American International Group continued on page 12

INSIDE:

| a 1 m              | 18 au. |
|--------------------|--------|
| Secular Christmas? | p      |
| National Guardsmen | pt     |
| Eddie Murray trade | р6     |

ell corroborated his statement. Horsey and Stenger agree Campus calendar.....p10 reach the dorms."

Fool for Love review......p11

Limitation on celebrations?

grave becomes truer every year: this year the judiciary takes a stand on Christmas and Hannukah decorations. Responding to a suit brought up by the American Civil Liberties Union and some private citizens, the Third Circuit Court of Appeals ended one of the holiday tradi-tions in Pittsburgh. The Nativity scene was banned from the courthouse, and a menorah displayed in front of the City-County building.

When the Supreme Court reviews this case, it will be forced to reexamine one of its most opaque rulings. In a case from Rhode Island in 1984, the Justices supported the constitutionality of a town-supported creche in a display including reindeer, Santa's house, and candy striped poles. They said that overall the display had a secular. Since then, this ruling has been called the reindeer rule, the issue being how much secular disguising is needed to slip a community sponsored Nativity scene past the First Amendment. Judges elsewhere have ruled a many different ways.

Three federal appellate panels decided that créches not contained in a larger display of secular items are not allowable at city halls. Another federal court ruled that a créche may stand by itself on land set aside as a public forum. In November, a judge in Chicago decided that no more than three religious symbols may be exhibited at a time at the Daley Center Plaza, and these for no more than fourteen days. In some towns, small plots of public properties have been sold to private groups in order to create religious displays constitutionally.

It seems that an issue is being given constitutional significance that does not require it. Christmas and Hannukah decorations are innocent symbols of the beliefs of certain cultures. Since America is a melting pot of numerous cultures, it seems that sharing one's culture is an important part of American life, and American tradition. Religious celebrations are intrinsic parts of any culture, and since decorations and symbols have a place in religion, they should be allowed to be displayed.

Decorations tastefully done are meant to share the spirit of the holiday represented. No Christian or Jewish group intends decorations to be a personal affront to persons who hold other beliefs, and they certainly do not intend to take away the religious freedom guaranteed to Americans in the First Amendment: instead they wish to celebrate their beliefs, and share them with other people.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                      |  |  |  |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|--|--|--|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrison |  |  |  |
| News Editor                   |                      |  |  |  |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum      |  |  |  |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatner       |  |  |  |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor |                      |  |  |  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson        |  |  |  |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Karr            |  |  |  |
| Managers                      |                      |  |  |  |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekman         |  |  |  |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-Williams  |  |  |  |
| Circulation Manager           |                      |  |  |  |
| Assistant Circulation Manager |                      |  |  |  |
| Office ManagerJulie Gr        | eene and Cathy Lease |  |  |  |

MARY JANE'S SECRET COULD SANTA BE AN ANAGRAM FOR SATANS CHRISTMAS PROJECT!

THERE WERE UNANSWERED QUESTIONS IN MARY JANE'S MIND, AND SO ONE NIGHT,

THAT COULD EXPLANTHE OR PERHAPS HE WAS FROM BEYOND TIME+

MARY JANE THOUGH SHE WOULD NEVER FIND THE ANSWE

> ALL SHE KNEW WK THAT THE SANTA AT THE J. C. PENNY WAS A REAL PER-VERT.

Letters to the Editor

Why wish for a weak Presidencu?

I must take exception to the letter published by Jeffrey Vail entitled "Bush's Bitter Victory." Point one: Mr. Vail has lowered himself to the standards he accuses the Bush campaign of using; i.e. "... Bush's Sleazy Machiavellian cronies," and "... whatever offensive goals he may have hidden away in his tiny mind." Come on Mr. Vail, such mortifyingly jejune statements merely detract from your quixotic argument. Point two: It was Michael Dukakis who said that a fish rots from the head down etc. and thus began the mudslinging. Finally I find it extremely unsettling that you, as an American citizen, would wish that the President-elect would find it difficult to govern.

Such a pusillanimous argument should be relegated to the trash, and I would ask Mr. Vail why does he wish for a weak Presidency?

Duncan Sterling IV

Anyone interested in applying for the position of News Editor of The Elm should contact Jennifer Harrison (ext. 321) before the end of the semester, and submit a letter stating qualifications and reasons for interest. This is a paying job with many benefits.

More

To The Editor: In the last two weeks I have read both Mr. Vail's and Miss Mangum's letters in this column with interest. In the face of full page advertising, it is refreshing to see substantive letters in the Elm. In the midst of this debate, it is probably accurate to say that political mud-slinging has befallen even W.C. students in their celebration and disappointments over this most recent presidential While youthful campaign. idealism has been "fertilized" in the Republican (Conservative) sense, I hope it has not been "trampled" in the Democratic sense To say that this campaign was a political "national disgrace" would hardly be origi nal; two former Presidents (Ford and Carter) have beaten me to this criticism. If we take our elder statesmen to be wise.

we must find some useful poin in what they say. The conse mudslinging tutely examined the election that both candidates total avoided the real issues thatfa America. One candidate, M Bush, avoided debating if issues like a medieval plaga In short, they, the candidate were no different than so may demagogues, the like of whit our liberal arts education wi a cursory examination of da sics, attempts to instructus avoid. Mr. Vail's comparison was not very far off mark; Bus McCarthy, Hitler, Pisistrate and Cleon all are chips off of the same block. Remember one the books Mr. Quayle me tial to his career? It was N colo Machiavelli's: The Print Only this week Mr. Quayle w seen taking advise from anoth elder statesman, Mr. Nixon.

Were we, as America (even beer slinging Young) publicans), all misinforms "hood-wrinkled" by the pill

continued on page fo

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:364

AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD 778-1214

Rt. 213 & 201

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP. 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

ISSUE:

Do you belive the conflict between the Heat Miser and the Snow Miser affected your childhood?

I thought my grandfather was the Snow Miser

had a profound effect on my childhood. This Heat Miser-Snow Miser conflict was just a part of my lesson from the show. Hearned that Santa Claus has two really stupid elves who are completely incompetent. learned that a reindeer can be made to look like a dog by sticking brown socks over its ears and antlers. I thought my pet poodle was a reindeer for two weeks after the show, and was eventually bitten after checking my dog's ear for a couple of Presley did the best version of Still, the Heat Miser-Snow Miser conflict is the most enjoy-

"Rlue Christmas'

Year Without A Santa Claus argument over the weather rocketing toward my person, always did confuse me, however. Just who controlled the middle part of the United States? Did Snow Miser and Heat Miser have to negotiate a contract over the territory? Who gotthe best of the deal? I wanted to know the answers, especially since I was from Maryland. Here in Chestertown, it seems like Heat Miser won in a big way. He must have bribed Snow Miser in some fashion.

This conflict taught me that it is correct for siblings to minutes. I realized that Elvis fight. I was afraid that my sister and I were an isolated case. I also realized that mothers do have a lot of power over but I am sure the idea has crossed her mind on occasion The most important lesson of all was the suggestion that a very concerned about Santa compromise is often a good way to end an argument, regardless of how right you are with your thoughts on the matter. Unfortunately, I have since learned that most people are not at all willing to compromise in many situations. I guess they never saw The Year Without A Santa Claus. Snow Miser was always my favorite of the brothers. He was easily the coolest of the two (pardon the pun). I was happy

Brett Lankford

when the man in the red suit was sick. He did a wonderful job of insulting Heat Miser, whom I hated as soon as he attempted to kill Vixen and the two elves on their way to America. He also was able to spin around and go "woo-boo-booboo-boo-boo" during the middle of his song. Most of all, Cold Miser looked very much like my grandfather. This connection between Snow Miser and my grandfa- more, and would be great at to see him so attached to the ther confused me for much of directing Saturday morning their children. My mother has Claus family, and he seemed my childhood. I was in awe of cartoons.

my famous relative. He knew Mother Nature! I was also very impressed that my grandmother was able to win over his heart. My grandfather never understood my deep admiration for him when I was a child. He thought I was deeply moved by his height and intelligence. In reality, I just wanted him to turn my hat into a snowball. I have since grown to appreciate him for what he is - my grandfather. Still, it would be neat if he could make it snow in Chestertown.

Brett Lankford is a sopho-

Josef Hamilton Baltimore, MD Freshman All I drink is water."

Andy Mills Annandale, VA Sophomore

"Certainly, In the winter I wear "Absolutely. There's nothing "I met both and they own the shoes, in the summer I don't. more profoundly joyful than dorm thermostat." trying to remember all the words to the 'I'm Mister Heat-Miser' jingle at 3:15 in the morning (except possibly doing your logic homework).

Zens Athens, Greece Freshman Grad.

Andrew Donaldson Minneapolis, MN Freshman

"Yes. I like Janis Joplin, Billy Holiday. The wonderful thing about being a writer is you exercise total editorial con-

Jen Mowll Rehobeth Beach, Delaware Freshman

"Yes, I think he's hot."

Mother Nature turned out to be a false savior

around my house on Christmas I can remember showing up at my grandmother's house on Christmas morning and thinking how great the frost on the ground was! What I would have done for a picture-perfect white Christmas...but that Heat Miser always had a meddlesome hand in the matter. How I hated him and his little cohorts who sang, "I'm Mr. Green Christmas, I'm Mr. Sun. I'm Heat Blister, I'm Mr. Hundred and One. They call me Heat Miser, whatever I his own territory touch starts to melt in my dutch!" I just wanted him to on Christmas Eve, so that we tould go carolling in the snow.

Laura McGuire

White Christmas-could be my hero. But he was as stubborn as his hot-headed step-brother. As I recall, he wouldn't allow for one nice spring day in the North Pole even in exchange for a Christmas snowstorm in a southern town. Though I tried to imagine the Snow Miser as my champion, I just couldn't because he was so greedy about singing "White Christmas."

Who was there to solve give us one good snowfall—even this conflict between two bickering step-brothers? In "The Year Without a Santa Claus," If only the Sow Miser- only Mrs. Santa seemed to know ser, that made all of my Christyou know, Mr. Ten Below, Mr. to whom to turn. She went mases green and relatively the big mama. Only a mother could solve this conflict, a mother with powers greater than those of her tow tiresome sons. Dispatching of the matter quickly, with her command (in a proper British accent that would rival the Queen's!), Mother Nature was my heroine. If only she would do the same for me, for my town! I waited and waited, finding solace listening to Bing Crosby

I finally gave up hope, thinking Mother Nature to be a false savior. My science classes taught me that it was the climate, not some silly Heat Mi-right to the top-to Mother warm. Snow would melt as Nature herself. That's right, to soon as it touched the ground until at least mid-January because no matter how cold the air was, the ground was still too warm. Mother Nature and her children were figments of some animator's demented imagination, and a white Christmas inches of fresh snow on the was never meant to be.

> started to flurry. We ran around the neighborhood late at night and disturbed people's sleep in order to sing Christmas carols in the snow. Sure, our voices were way off tune, but no one really cared. We were finally going to have a white Christmas. Mother Nature had come through in the end!

My faith was restored. the Elm.

Sure, it was just a cold front that froze the ground a little early-but that's a boring explanation. It's certainly more interesting to think that Mother Nature had a hand in it. Sure, it's a little childish, but who can resist being childish with a few ground? I can't Acouple of snowball fights And then-you guessed courtesy of Mother Nature can it-one Christmas Eve it do wonders for even the staunchest of cynics. And about those tow fighting brats, the Heat Miser and the Snow Miser...well, I'm glad that their mother can always get the upper hand in their arguments.

> Laura McGuire is a freshman and a photographer for

PERSPECTIVE

In the World

UNITED STATES

Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev arrived Tuesday at Kennedy International Airport He will meet with both President Reagan and President-Elect Bush to discuss plans for a possible summit sometime next year. In his statement to the U.N. General Assembly , Gorbachev is expected to appeal for "new momentum " in dealing with pressing global

Jim Bakker, defrocked T.V. evangelist, and former PTL executive vice president Richard W. Dortch have been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of mail fraud, wire fraud and conspiracy Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul G Kirk Jr. has announced he will not seek a second term and plans to return to full time law practice. Five men are already being considered for the posi tion: Richard Wiener, Ronald H. Brown, James R. Jones , Michael Barnes, and James Stanton

Atlantis continued its space flight after launching a spy satellite. The shuttle's mission has been cloaked in mystery and even the day of its return is unknown. But space observers believe the shuttle deployed a Lacrosse satellite, which uses radar to see through clouds, to spy on the Soviet Union

U.S. mediated peace talks adjourned abruptly in Brazzaville as the South African delegation left for home for consultations on a peace protocol covering Cuba's withdrawal from Angola and independence for South African ruled Nambia.

The Energy Department expects to decide this week when to restart the troubled nuclear reactor complex at Savannah River in South Carolina. The reactors, the sole U.S. producers of tritium for nuclear cal parties and their candidates? Yes, we were, and true to politics, both candidates engaged in misinformation to varying degrees. Still, lest we forget admirable principles, deception is undesirable in civilized society. Moreover, such deception is less than compatible with the "kinder, gentler nation" both candidates extoll."

continued from page 2

Another question I would like to ask is: Where did President Reagan stand in all of this?" Apparently, nowhere! You do remember Ronald Reagan, don't you? The narcoleptic who doesn't "pick on cripples," who thinks "trees cause...pollution,"and who, not weapons require much work to improve safety conditions

Secretary of State George Shultz denied violating any treaties when he barred PLO leader Arafat from entering the U.S. to speak at U.N. Headquarters

SOVIET UNION

A new study indicates that the Soviets are unlikely to launch a sudden military attack on Europe despite Western fears. The study showed that the Soviets do not have enough well trained forces to Four Soviet hi-jackers were flown back to Moscow from Israel in a rare cooperative ef-

mount such a strike

trade arms and a Bible to Iran for American hostages. Yes, that's right, Mr. Reader's Digest, the President-elect's superior and alter ego. Mr. Reagan was little seen in this campaign (perhaps he was Was Mr. Reagan sleening) responsible for the character of the campaign? In my view, the President is the leader of his party and, moreover, the superior of his Vice-president. Yes, Mr. Reagan was responsible, just as a Captain is responsible for the safety and conduct of his

So, why didn't Mr. Reagan take a more active role in conbusload of school children in meet with the Soviet-backed northern Caucasus. traded the children for a plane has halted its Afghan pull-out and $2 million dollars and flew citing increased rebel activity. to Tel Aviv. Israel agreed to return the hijackers after candidate, Carlos Andres Perez won the presidential election by a wide margin.

Moscow agreed not to execute VENEZUELA

AFGHANISTAN An Afghan rebel claimed guerillas had won a victory by holding direct high-level talks with Soviets over the week-end in Taif, Saudi Arabia, Moscow had refused to negotiate before

Reagan should have been add-fort. The four men seized a because the rebels would not They Afghan government. Moscow

PARISTAN

Pakistan's Bhutto installed her cabinet Sunday, keeping the defense and finance Venezuela's center left portfolios for herself and naming a foreign minister who served in the same post under the late President Zia. The appointments follow the prime minister's orders to free political prisoners convicted under martial law and commute all death sentences

compiled by Jacquie Collins campaign, starting with his own sort of presence can we, as a Whereas President nation, expect in the face of oncoming political belligerence from a vindictive, predomiing a respectable counter-point to his party's campaign, instead, nantly Democratic, legislature? the Bush campaign resembled Sadly, Mr. Bush faces a disaflittle more than a whining, fected nation, that demonarrogant brat in a crowded strated no mandate but rather department store, under the picked the better of two unpalcare of an non-interfering atable candidates and then tied mother. George Washington's that chosen candidate's hands presence at the drafting of the with a legislature from the other U.S. Constitution 200 years ago political party. It is sad that we shows quite a different example all couldn't have given a vote of of leadership. Washington was non-confidence to both candichosen expressly because his dates. Barry Goldwater said it reputation and stature alone best, though in a different context: "Why no victory?" Just were capable of mediating political hostilities. Morality is exactly what, then, are the Young Republicans celebrat-If Mr. Bush has been Mr. ing?

W.P. Jones, '88

ship. In this case, Mr. Reagan was derelict toward his "ship of state." trolling the nastiness of the so brilliantly, attempted to

Reagan's political protege, what shown by example.

Suds N Soda

Discount Beverages

6am - 12 midnight 7 days

Rt. 213 & Rt. 297 1 mile north of campus

I.D. Required (drivers license)

Snack Shack & Dideo

Open 10am - 10pm Sun - Thurs 10am - 11pm Fri - Sat

We sent nintendo nachines & Cames

Fried Chicken * Subs Made Fresh to Order * Hand Dipped Ice Cream

Behind Barber Shop . 505 Washington College . Chestertown

-Perm, Cut & Style ONLY $30 with Jody -Fingernails- nailtip& overlay regularly $35 this month ONLY $25! 778-0898

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

Nat'l Guardsmen surpass 'weekend warrior' label

by David Snyder

In many respects, sopho-more Sean Anderson and senor Dave Stewart are typical Washington College students. They study, attend classes, eat lunch in the cafeteria, and write term papers. For entertainment on the weekends, Anderson likes to fly helicopters over the treetops at 100 miles per hour. while Stewart relaxes by setting booby traps and heading ambushes

Typical weekend for the average college student? Hardly, but as members of the Maryland National Guard Stewart and Anderson are not exactly typical students.

For one weekend out of every month and two weeks a year, Anderson and Stewart are trained in everything from reconnaissance of enemy territory to first aid to firing practice While being in the National Guard also involves community service and a few parades on occasion, both men testify that there is much more than that

At twenty years of age, Stewart is the youngest commissioned officer in Maryland, having served in the Guard for two and a half years. A Second to a section of the Guard that serves both as a reconnaissance and a light infantry unit, and be is the platoon leader of the 2nd-115 Infantry "light" division. After joining the National Guard right out of high school, be decided that he wanted to be mofficer, so he traveled to Fort Benning, Georgia to train with the regular army units staboned there. He then took the burteen week officer training course which is required to be come an officer

"The course started off with 180 people and finished with 93. That's about a 53% attrition rate," says Stewart, who describes the training as very stressful, the object being to

"weed out" those who are not ceeded to Air Force basic train- in it. As a military unit, for ping in quite a bit more often two hours of sleep a night," he reports, and as for the food, he jokes, "you're allowed to eat all you can... in three minutes...

with a teaspoon." Anderson, a second semes cal and mechanical skills in his 50% of the entire nation's army. work arming fighter planes crew chief for the 086 helicop- duty, could mobilize and be at ter in a branch of the 158th the front in one week.

ing, where he learned electroni- instance, the Guard makes up

In the event of war, the Currently, he serves as the Guard, once called up to active than that to assure themselves that everything is running smoothly, time for which they don't get paid.

"I have a guy in my platoon that can make $36 an hour on Sundays," says Stewart, "but he chooses to work for the Guard making $3 an hour, if he's lucky

Stewart, a political science major, hopes to become a special agent in the FBI, and a position in the National Guard will help him reach that goal. Anderson, majoring in business management, hopes also to remain with the Guard in whatever he chooses to do.

"We feel we want to help the country stay free," says Anderson. "We don't want to have to fight, but if a war starts, we're there.

"It gives me a feeling of belonging, and I'm proud to wear the uniform," agrees Stewart. "Some call us 'weekend warriors', but we're there to help.

While both men like serving, they do find one major conflict between their lives as Washington College students and their lives in the National Guard.

"Drill always seems to fall on a weekend when there's a good party at school," says Anderson

ST.JOHN'S

Sunday Mass 10:00am CCD-Sunday 9 to 9:45a

ter Sophomore, has served in the Guard for three years. He got interested in the National Guard while still in high school Tdecided I wanted to pay ieutenant, Stewart is attached for college myself, so I began to look at the Guard.'

By joining, he received a scholarship offered by the National Guard, and then decided that he wanted to work with the aviation section of the Guard. "I've always wanted to fly," he says. Anderson proself sometimes flies the helicopter, his primary responsibility is to maintain the ships repairs and keep it airworthy "My unit is basically a reconnaissance unit," he says, used for relaying information on the enemy's position to "friendly" forces.

Both Anderson and Stewart acknowledge the fact that many people misunderstand the purpose of the National Guard and the people who serve ized in the event of war, but also for civil defense, riot control, search and rescue operations, and aid in natural disas-

While enlistment only calls for one weekend a month, both men find themselves stop-

ary Recited Daily 8:15on Sat Evening Mass

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANSION ST. CHECKERTOWN AND A

301-770-3800

3

8:30am 11:30am 9:30 to 10:30s ions are heard 6:15 Saturday Evening

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor Office: Kent Street Side Entrance of Sacred Heart Church Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pm

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

MASS SCHEDULE

ctory: 508 High St. Chestertown, MD. 21620 (301) 778-3160 Iglous Education Coordina Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F.

Phone: 1-801-820-7437

SACRED HEART

Sunday Mass

Christmas Sale

Christmas Cards

15% off on Children's Books 15% - 50% off many other books

NEW Software specials

and other computer supplies

Washington College Bookstore 8:30 - 4:30 Monday - Friday 10:00 - 1:00 Saturday

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists' Materials

POBox 402 711 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 2,1620 301-778-5202

Eddie Murray: on to bigger and far better things

ray to the Los Angeles Dodgers has been looked at from many different viewpoints. Regardless of the perspective, if you are an Oriole fan, it is a ridiculous trade. The Orioles sent away a seven-time all-star for two pitchers and a shortstop.

Brett Lankford

The Orioles traded their home run leader for Ken Howell, a pitcher with a history of arm troubles and chronic wildness. They traded away last year's Most Valuable Oriole for Juan Bell, a player who has already developed an attitude problem at age 20. One of the greatest players in Oriole history was sent to the World Champions for Michael Holton, another curveball pitcher who has already announced that he

This is a real trade? What exactly was the reasoning for this giveaway of one of the steadiest contributors in the major leagues? Were the Origiving? Most people suggest that this was a case of addition by subtraction, and that Murray's unhappiness in Baltimore was hurting the team. Eddie Murray could not possibly be held responsible for the pathetic performance in 1988. Last year he batted .284 with 28 home runs and 84 runs batted in. These statistics led the Orioles, but few people were happy with his output. It would be absurd for Murray to be satisfied with a team that wins 54 games and is getting worse.

It was sad to watch Murray's relationship with the city of Baltimore go downhill. For almost ten years, chants of "ED-DIE ED-DIE" were heard throughout Memorial Stadium. He was Baltimore's favorite Oriole, and the glory years peaked in 1983 with the World Championship. Murray helped to clinch the World Series with two home runs in the final game would be unhappy if he did not Baltimore and Eddie Murray were on top of the world

Things went downhill quickly from there. Murray was injured for the first time in 1986 and Jim Traber overpowered the league in his place. Sud-to please the fans. Oriole owner Edward Bennett Williams began to publicly criticize Eddie's perform- every game for the next two Murray. Still, the Orioles could ance in the field and his physi- years. This trade has finally affair ended suddenly. Murray asked to be traded, and would be subject to a chorus of boos at Orioles wanted to trade Eddie

The trade of Eddie Mur- oles taken over by the season of denly, Murray could do nothing cal conditioning, and the love insured his freedom from a no win situation.

It was obvious that the Continued on page 7

In swimming action at the Casey Swim Center last Tuesday, Washington College easily defeate Marymount College of Virginia, rolling on to a 170-70 victory to improve their record to 2-0. Tomorrow the squad will make wakes against Widener in what is expected to be a close competition

You don't need your parents' money to buy a Macintosh.

It's never been difficult for students to convince their parents of the need for a Macintosh® computer at school.

Persuading them to write the check, however, is another thing altogether.

Which is why Apple created the Student Loan-to-Own Program. An ingenious loan program that makes buying a Macintosh as easy as using one

Simply pick up an application at the location listed below, or call 800-831-LOAN. All your parents need to do is fill it out, sign it, and send it. If they qualify, they'll receive a check for you in just a few weeks. There's no collateral. No need to prove financial hardship. No application fee.

Best of all, the loan payments can be spread over as many as 10 years.

Which gives you and your parents plenty of time to decide just who pays for it all.

Introducing Apple's Student Loan-to-Own Program

Washington College Bookstore (basement of Hodson Hall) 8:30 - 4:30 Mon through Fri

rademarks of Apple Computer, In

Sho'men netters trounce Gallaudet, prepare for Wild Goose Classic

won two games this week induding a big road win over s now 5-1 with a perfect 1-0 prord in the M.A.C.

The Washington College Sho'men were able to overcome hasketball team has continued a poor performance and do just who has adapted to his substiis winning ways. The team enough to win the game. The squad forced 16 turnovers and rebounds after coming in with had 10 steals in a 52-51 victory. M.C. rival Widener. The team Andy Bauer netted 13 points trouble. and had five boards in the game.

Against the Pioneers, the and had 4 steals to add to the strolled to victory. The team game with strong performances men were able to overcome victory. George Small is a player slowed the balanced attack from the whole squad. tute role, and had some key some of the other big men in which has carried them all season and coasted to a 90-64 win. Tom Anvil had an out- the annual Wild Goose Classic

Tim Keehan poured in 11 points against Gallaudet, the netters

Now, the Shoremen have standing performance. Tim this weekend. The team also Keehan and Andy Bauer also has a few big games this week At home on Wednesday played strong offensively. The with Division I U.M.B.C. next bench was a vital part to this Saturday.

Helpful exercisise hints from Dr. Jock

TION

free weights, Nautilus, even heavy grocery bags should inhale BEFORE you lift, indexhale AS you lift. That inmeases abdominal and chest have marginal blood pressure That's the reason many of us Anytime you lift weights problems, this can be very risky.

WONDERFUL, NOT WEIRD

a very good health habit. Most water as you like. A couple of ressure and that can raise your people drink too little water, other diseases that can be ad-

EXHALE FOR EXER- blood pressure. In people who especially when exercising, versely affected by too much get headaches and feel crummy during a hard workout. As long DRINKING WATER IS as your kidneys are normal and you don't have severe heart Drinking a lot of water is failure, you can drink as much

Most people will benefit water include adrenal gland from drinking six to eight dysfunction and cirrhosis of the glasses of water a day. One liver. An early sign of diabetes good way to know you're propis excessive thirst and erly hydrated before working urination. If you have none of out is to drink water until you these problems, continue to have to urinate. Do ... and then large amounts of liguids. Too go exercise, drinking more much food will do that; not too water along the way if you're working hard.

Washington hockey players received honors; compete in California

by Don Steele

elebrating our Thanksgiving biliday at home, five Washingan College field hockey players were in California particisating in the United States field Hockey Association's nament. National Tournament.

Linda Anders, Beth Mathews, Erin O'Neal, Carol layers chosen for this tremenbus honor

"The tournament really allowed us to improve our skills. Play- ders. ing on that high a level was a great experience" was Amy

The trip also allowed the five to enjoy some leisure time in California. Visiting Rece and Amy Tiehel were the Disneyland and the beaches are two essentials on any California trip and the ladies certainly

The trip allowed the five did not miss them. "We had a While most of us were to improve their hockey skills. lot of fun away from the tournament," commented Linda An-

> This honor says one thing about the Washington College field hockey program; the efforts of the team and coaches has been noticed by the Field Hockey Association and things are on the up and up for field hockey at Washington College.

Clark to be inducted into Lacrosse Hall of Fame

Former Washington College midfielder Charles B. Clark will be inducted into the Lacrosse Hall of Fame on Saturday, Feb-

Clark was a dominant center midfielder at Washington College from 1930-1934. Instrumental in starting a lacrosse program at Washington College, Clarke was a two-time second team All-American and an All-Maryland selection. Clark returned to Washington College in 1948 and served as head lacrosse coach for nine years. Twenty-two years later, he became the head coach at Salisbury State College. Clark currently resides in Ellicott City, MD.

Murray's future, may 'the chant' be heard in L.A.

continued from page 6

lave at least obtained one troven player.

Juan Bell is a brilliant felder, but has not shown he in hit major league pitching. Healso plays the shortstop, the only position which has been alid for years. Ken Howell is a short reliever with chronic arm problems. He only throws a should have learned that short the ballclub. I was saddened that talks constantly. relievers with a history of when the fans and the media medical problems do not work - began to fault Murray for all Don Aase proved this last year, the team's problems. The Bal-Michael Holton was a solid timore press and the Oriole fans performer last year. Still, a want a team full of Rick team cannot rebuild behind Dempseys, players who slide solid middle relief.

opinion, since Eddie Murray minute. I would rather have a was my boyhood idol. I grew up superstar who goes about his fistball, and that has slowed admiring Eddie Murray, often business in a reserved manner around the tarpauling during I may be biased in my rainouts and do an interview a

This Orioles paid little for Eddie, and trade is a symbolic ending to in the end, they received even the gradually deteriorating less relationship between Murray

Brett Lankford is a faithand Baltimore. Murray's ca- ful contributor to the Elm. and reer with the Orioles has come longs for the days of the "EDfull circle. In the beginning, the DIE" chant.

her the years. The Orioles leading the "ED-DIE" chant at than a player lacking in talent GetWet. Free.

Just buy a Pizza at the Coffee House, and we'll give you a couple of drinks. Free. Your choice of either Evian T

Natural Spring Water or soda.

COFFEE HOUSE

SPECIAL FOR STUDENTS $6.00 for a 30 minute session

778-4144

609 MICH STREET

CHESTERTOWN, MD

1988 Christmas messages: the greatest contribution

1 disco ball, real mail, an "A", a napkin comment board for my room, a decent dining card photo, a raincoat for the Lamda party, Mrs. Dee's cheery disposition and a case of The Box the Reast A WC Student

To The Rich: Merry Christmas! HEY CREW FREAKS! GET PSYCHED FOR TOMORROW NIGHT AND SPRING!!

Whose got bigger cheeks?

2 months, 2 weeks and how long?

To Mall Chicks.

MERRY X-MAS

Have a very merry Christmas with your families and a happy New Year and remember..."If you can't shop at the big malls, go to Kent Whit, Plaza." Love, Micheal J.

To my Favorite "honey bunch" I know you'll love the X-mas gift, just a couple more days to Keep on schnockin through the holiday season...Mooooooo....Have an udderly great Christmas. "Y'all are great people."

"I'm dreaming of a great party."

See you at the Club-Kevin, Fred, Jin, and Suzanne. Merry Christmas -AD Caterers

To the Schnack Pack-With the Holiday Season approaching, it's essential to "maintain the Image" even if it's slightly clanted

M.B., A.D., M.S.-shtop schnackin! but "maintain the image", fellow spaz Laleh, BBQ Colleen B., rules!, J.P. "It's all right!" Love, "slanted"

To "gorgeous"-You're so shy, but "not really" Happy X-mas The Old Lady

How's it HANGING? You're such a DEER! Have a BALL of a Christmas!

Janet, Kerri, April & Michele-Have a great Christmas & a Happy Happy New Year. Lots of Love-Dawn

Reminder: My 21 st birthday is Dec. 30th. Please send money, cards, gifts, etc. Thanks-Dawn

Kristy Bissett and Stacy we still love you even though we don't come to visit anymore. Lovethe Lower eight man in Cecil.

Denna, Nel & Erica-Merry Christmas & Happy New Year & of course Happy B-day to me.-Dawn

(P.S.-isn'tit weird to have your favorite skating partner-D. name in the paper & it's not about something bad you have done?)

What a way to stand up to those FLYERS for your roomie...they'll never mess with us again! Have a great X-mas in W-ville and BEWARE of the GRINCH! Jill R

Merry Christmas to the boys of Kent House 2nd Floor South and the only female Resident, JFW .- Steve

I haven't talked to you in years happy Christmas.

Nathan

B .- So when are you going to To magranate?-E.

It's all fun and games until Beth It's all fun and games until C body slams a car.

It's all fun & games until E.H.W. has a single or kisses the concrete.

Nathan-Where's the triple you promised? Please, don't opt out again!!

Your

Thanks for all cigarettes, popcorn & late night t.v. Have a great Christmas!

Chris-Hurry back! I miss you!!! Merry Christmas-Ilove

you, Denise

Thanks for last night, sorry Dallas about the sheets. It was better than the 14 year old.

Chad-I didn't find you better than the 14 year old .- DL and List wanted to wish you a. I love flying airplanes, tenrooms and you. I'm so embarrassed. I think I have to go now ...

drop the red fish for my po- Camino ... Thanks for the experience-Ken kisses a dozen boys in one comester

Friday, December 9, 1988

Puddie Here's the gram! The private parts are covered by the bathing suit. Merry Christmas. be good!

your Tweetie

To that "cute freshman"

Christmas is a great time for making peace. I'd like to make mine by taking you out for a beer sometime. Merry Christmas!!

Love-E's roommate

Galveston-

!Tejas! Looking forward to the rideback-We'll get you a walk man for the trip. Have a great Christmas!

Perry-Don't worry only3 more months til Larry Bird is back...maybe. Emily,

Roses are Red Violets are Blue Most Poems Rhyme But This One Doesn't Have a Merry Christmas! Love, Chad

SGA CHRISTMAS PARTY

Featuring .... Bobby & The Believers

In the Cafeteria

..The Rage Special Appearence by.... 12-1am

In the C-House

Price: $7 per couple $4 per person Special Rate-9pm-10pm $3 per person

"Come Early and Dance Late!"

SEMI FORMAL

On Campus Travel Representative or Organization NEEDED to promote:

SPRING BREAK TRIP TO FLORIDA! ~earn money~valuable work experience~ ~FREE trips~

> Call Inter-Campus Program at 1-800-433-7747

Fin Fur FeatherInn

Rock Hall . Md. 639-7454

Come & Enjoy a Holiday Meal with Us!

We Specialize in Fresh Seafood!

Friday & Saturday Nites LIVE PIANO BY Mickey Dulin

e written word since Sophomore Writing Seminar

n.S .- Your performance was hot! How about an encore?

The Gang-(you know who you are) Merry Christmas!! your Dear Fred Connolly, ADD junkie-Denise

Jillabillamoo and Kasey, too-Merry Christmas to the girls expectations for the future who deserve a medal for having built from yesterday w live with me. Thanks for built from now. being there! Love, Colleen Nitza Pizda, Merry Christmas, pal. You're the coolest dorkbrain suchami [know!

Scooter

Merry, Merry Christmas, pal. I live you.-Colleen

IP.-May tomorrow hold your lappy unknown future, and by and love hide in the Shadow(s) of the night. Merry Y-mas lhear sun rises in the winter aven har! Gurkin. rethe best. I love you guys!-Buxpin

Mall chicks and Leho. Merry Christmas! A bottle and red bow will be fine! Love you The poor one

gnihtyna!!!!!!!!-EVETS

WWWWWHIT

Today, we share words and beginnings. hopes and songs,

Tomorrow impressions and soft senses. a tapestry of feelingsweaved from memories, weaved from dreams.

Love always, Stephanie Don't clutch! Don't freak out!...you know the rest. You're a great roommate! Have a wonderful Christmas!

Merry Christmas, Cate! You're the best Big Sister ever! With Love, Julianne

Love-"D"

Love, Chris

Dår ser ni. Jag tånker på er

Although I'm not here in person I am here in thought. I love you very much. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

WANTED

ANNAID-I evoluoy erom naht Dearest LM(1L)M: it may not last forever, but I will remember you for eternity...Is that "ignorant"?

Becky, stop banging! Love, your

Mom and Dad-I love your pickle. Merry X-mas! Pickle are you reading this?-Jeff

No complexes, friend. Thanks for the good times, I'll miss you.-Christie

Poul and Geoff-lock your doors and Beware-Cristy and Moira

MERRY, MERRY CHRIST-MAS. I love you. Love, Beano

Merry Christmas to the "Our Street" Gang: Snuffles, Bert, Ernie, Oscar, Grover & the Count-Love, Big Bird

Chickenbut! Mature, lovable, understanding, GOOFY, what more could I want?!! Love you,

To the hottest blonde at WC-I would die for you Petra! Love,

Please give me your body Erin. It's amazing. Love, Matt

Matt K The funny thing is-we feel the same way about you.

Derick S-Let's score some "P"I_Matt

I hope you have a wonderful break-I know you'll miss me!

To my spacey poetry man-get psyched for Stratton! I can't wait for a snowball fight! I Love You-R

Your Secret Admirer

DLS, From one New Yorker to gether next year! another, Merry Christmas!-

Vickie Vahos Roses are red, Jokes are funny, You'll always be, My honey-bunny.

D.E .- I love you more and more every day. Merry Christmas!-

It's all fun and games until Jen gets drunk after Dad Vails.

To my favorite freshmen, I'm glad that you live on our hall even if no one else likes you! Merry Christmas!-The nice girl across the hall

To Maggie: The answer to Life is on The Fractals Edge Rak

Geneva Illinois Rabbits: I would cuddle with you every day. Even if it meant having hare in my mouth. Love, Gimbo

Jennie S .- Good Luck next year & never stop following your dreams. Because you are so special, they are bound to come true. I'll miss you-Your Roomie

To A Radical Republican, Be careful climbing latters (especially with Reid) Love Me

Thanks for being such the mother hen. -From your perpetually perplexed, constantly confused and systematically stressed chicks.

"Slodge"?

Happy 21st Birthday! You may still have exams to worry about on your Birthday, but once they are over you can drive away. Love, Your Middle Sister

QA2-Merry Christmas!!!!!!!

To Rob Grey-Have a very merry-"merry Christmas."-Candi...Cotton Candi J .- I've secretly been admiring you from afar-have a great Xmas and maybe we'll get to-Love, J. To my true Mom

You're the L.B.Q. but good thing you're not a sensitive person.

Reid Hall-Thanks & Congratulations for the Great Party!

Vicco-Whatever became of

The Weight-room guys: I may be fat, but you're ugly, and I can diet! Merry X-mas!-

A penny for your thoughts, a nickle for your ... -L.P.

Have a great Christmas and a Happy New Year. Relax, and have a great break.-Laleh

Merry Christmas Chad! Thanks for a terrific 5 months! Love-Em

MoJ-Merry Christmas Big Sis! Thanks for being the best friend ever. I love 'ya!-Emmy

Yo Ski Bunnies- we'll have fun in Vermont. May the New Year bring us happiness...Look out Monser-

Just remember: FRIENDS ARE FOREVER!

Merry Christmas to the senior AXO's-Lynn, Ann, Cyndy, Kelly, Kelly, Lisa, Amy, Tracey, Cate, Rina, & Cathy. Enjoy it! Love, Jesse

Austin Carpet Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620

Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

REWARD

Drivers wanted for fast delivery of delicious pizzas to Washington College & Kent & Q.A. Hospital. Evening work only. Many benefits. Apply in person for a financially rewarding experience, at the Chestertown Pizza Hut.

Campus Calendar: Events as the semester closes

December 9, 11, 12

The Film Series concludes its fall showings with director Bill Forsyth's film (Gregory's Girl, Local Hero ) Housekeepcent, totally cinematic bin. film...well-nigh perfect."

> Saturday December 10 The Washington College on Cross Street in Chestertown, open to the public. The featured work is Daniel Pinkham's Christmas Cantata for chorus, Wednesday December 14 brass quintet and organ

Monday December 12

a dramatic reading and discussion on Michele Volansky's playin-progress, Window Seat. The reading will be held at 4:30 in the Literary House and the ing. The movie is described as discussion will be moderated "profoundly moving...a magnifi- by drama professor Jason Ru-

> Tuesday December 13 The Church Hill Theatre

will be the site of a performance Community Chorus performs by the world-famous Alexanits annual Christmas Concert der String Quartet. This con-Saturday, December 10 at 8 PM cert will be the first time the at Emmanuel Episcopal Church general public will be able to see them perform. Further MD. The concert is free and information, including tickets, may be obtained at 778-0235.

The last official party of the semester will be sponsored The Washington College by the SGA with their annual Writer's Theatre, a branch of Christmas Party. The party the Writer's Union will present will be held in the Coffee-House @1988 by Chas. Foster, of

F00

7

9 200

a fanatic supporter

fredens centier

BURIAL MOUND

recent UNEXPLAINED EPHENOMENA

STYDENTS SITTING CIRCLES CAPES.

> NOREDISLE BUT TRUE!

C-Town Liquor & Deli

FEATURING HOMEMADE HOT SOUPS 511 WASHINTON

AVE.

CHESTERTOWN, MD

21620

778-2988

that's exactly

net's new singing ca

The Handel Choir of Baltimore performs Messiah with four solosists and full orchestra on Saturda beginning at 9:30 and features Bobby and the Believers and a late-night performance by the Saturday December 17 PM and tickets are ten dollars Handel's Messiah will be piece, including students. Mer performed by the Handel Choir information on this event is at of Baltimore in Tawes at four tained in an article in this issu

Come & Celebrate the Holidays with Us! Fine Cocktails & Light Fair proper ID required

337 1/2 High Street

(301) 778-6779

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 Free Hors D'oeuvil

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

Friday Night Entertainment

Friday, December 9th ~ Pebbles & the Bam-Bam Boys $5 cover

Friday, December 16th ~ Richard Taylor & the Rayers $3 per person, $5 a couple

Weekly Specials Starting at 9pm

Monday $3 Pitchers

Wednesday Tuesday $1 Imports 3 shots for the price of 1

Thurday Schnapps $1

Friday 4:30-6:30 F Hor D'oeuvres

515 Washington Street 778-1984

David B. Esson

THE SEMESTER!

Sandy D. Esson

Fool for Love showcases talents of Shephard

by Wendy A. Snow Not only can't you miss it, ou don't want to miss it. Its size, strength, and weight symbolize strong commanding images and help to explain what and have been a complex and confusing text. "It" is the large cement wall which stretches from one dge of the stage to the other on the set to unify the text of Sam Shepard's Fool for Love, curently running at Baltimore's

Center Stage ection takes place inside a ramped, sleazy motel room, the airector William Foeller and set designer Christopher Barreca ecided to put the inside of the motel room on what appears to be the outside of the motel. This obviously outdoor setting of a large white cinderblock wall and floor which combined dirt and sand at first strikes the audience as odd, as does the decrepit metal frame bed and ancient, but far from antique night-stand However, this possible confusion because of the misplaced room works well with the text as it helps to symbolize the confusion which obviously exists in the minds Although all of the play's and lives of each of the four characters. Perhaps the most confusing portion of the set is the damaged and worn Buick which sits on top of the cement been plucked right out of a junkyard and every other piece of nostalgic junk which surrounded it was stuck to it. This works beautifully with the play as a whole

As the lights come up, the audience finds that the car belongs to the Old Man. He is listening to country music on the radio as he watches the "kids" in the room: Although Phyllis Lyons' interpretation of Mae gets her confused and frustrated message across to the audience effectively, her acting skills seem to be the weakest in the cast. Throughout the first ten minutes of the play, I felt as if each wall. The car looks like it had of her actions were as neatly lacks the reaction to the character of Eddie (Peter Crombie) that is necessary to feel the complex connections between the two characters and it appears as though Crombie picks up the slack. Crombie's overall performance is far above average with a convincing performance of a man in love, or lust as the case may be, with his halfsister. Eddie takes command of the stage and there is no stopping this character. There is, however, a close runner-up. William Hardy as the Old Man gives a magnificent performance. Although as a character the Old Man made many mistakes in his lifetime, Hardy made none. His performance sent me through the entire string of emotions. I loved him and hated him. But mostly, I pitied him, for he was the cause is the superb performance of Martin by George Bamford with his Brilcreamed hair, zip-front navy blue jacket and blue work pants from Sears. This paints the perfect image of the quiet, shy, gullible and, if I may suggest, nerdish father figure whom Mae needs as an anchor in her confusing and unstable life. Bamford more than serves his purpose as a major character with only a few lines.

of his own downfall.

As I mentioned earlier, I fully agree with the costume design of Del W. Resberg on her selection for Martin, as well as memorized as her lines. Lyons Eddie's faded denim jacket and torn jeans are perfectly complimented by his western hat, boots and lasso. The Old Man's suit looks like he had been wearing it for years, along with his torn shoes and tattered hat. He is carefully matched to suit his Buick junk-yard home

Mae is fine in her white tank top and faded light blue western skirt for the beginning of the play, and the wrinkled red drape cocktail dress for her date with Martin is ideal. The only problem I have is with the costume transition which takes place onstage. Because it is necessary for Mae to make a quick change, Lyons exposes herself to the audience in her underwear, which actually looks like a grandmother's. don't think Mae would have worn white cotton briefs. She appeared to be more of a lace bikini type. However, I under-Last but certainly not least stand that the actress might be more comfortable in conservative cotton briefs, so I am willing to let that pass. The lighting and sound > create the effect of passing cars outside of the sleazy motel. My only problem with the set is that there are four doors in the cinderblock wall. This is acceptable were it not for the fact that all four of the doors lead into a room which is supposed to be cramped. For each character to have his or her own door would be putting constraints on the direction. I agree that for the designs work well together to

Messiah brings Christmas to WC

by Michele M. Volansky

The Christmas season is ot the Christmas season until me hears the familiar movements contained in Handel's Messiah. This year, the true ick-off to the holiday season vill be held on December 17 at our PM in Tawes Theatre. There, the Handel Choir of laltimore will perform Handel's famous work in its

The Handel Choir of Balre, founded in 1934, is an dependent choir which perms large works by Handel nd other composers. They erform regularly in Baltimore sible. nder the direction of T. Herbert Dimmock. Members of this performance of the choir include soprano Dorothy Cardello, tenor James Longacre, alto Mary Ruzica and bass Rubert Wallace. Dimmock and his choir came to Chestertown a number of years ago through the efforts of Dr. Virginia Collier, a physician in town. The first year, the money needed to be raised. However, it the past few years, the Kent County Arts Council and the Queen Anne's County Arts Council have provided the much-needed financial backing in order to make the show pos-

Dr. Garry Clarke, chair- Bookshop, both downtown.

man of WC's music department notes that the Handel Choir "enjoys coming to Chestertown year after year." The public, too, appreciates the effort, as Clarke adds that people have travelled from Easton and Oxford to see and hear the per-

Students are reminded that they do need to buy a tendollar ticket to the performance, as it is not included in the activity. All are urged to attend and join in the Christmas festivi-Further information may be obtained at 778-6276 or at the Sly Horse and Corsica

THE RIVER INN

Water Front Dinig Fire Side Lounge 778-3227

Friday- All-U-Can Eat Steamed Shrimp Buffet $9.95

Saturday-Land & Sea Buffet $13.95

Saturday Night Entertainment Tom Sebok

8-12pm

Celebrate the Joy of the Season with Us! Marina 778-1133 Bed & Breakfast 778-1988

Queen Anne's Bowling Centre Exam Pressure Roll-Off

> 10am To 4pm December 15, 16, 19 or 20th

Redeem This Coupon: 3 Games of Bowling Rental Shoes Slice of Pizza & Small Soda

> $5.97 one coupon per person

NEWS

Board appointments

continued from page l Inc., and vice president and director of C.V. Starr and Co.,

Roberts currently acts as director of Adams Express Company, a Baltimore investmentfirm. He is also a member of the Business Council for International Understanding, The Trade Policy Research Center, and the Geneva Association

In the area of education, Roberts has served on the Mason Early Education Foundation and the Juilliard School of New York.

President Douglass Cater is pleased about the new appointments

"I believe the Board has been richly enhanced by the additions. Each has received national and international prominence as a creative executive. Both care deeply about higher education in general and Washington College in particu-

Dr. Taylor, the faculty representative to the Board, particularly forced to use the declined to comment.

The issue of safety concerning the propane tanks has become controversial since the building of the Cardinal Dorms. See page 1.

continued from page 11 image of the wall as a motel to than effective succeed, there needed to be more doors, but I felt as though four was pushing it. It seems far stage right door, and to have

All and all I found this production to be quite a success. The unique combination of great acting and the perfect mis-en-scene make sense out of behind his works.

Iournalism contest

All Washington College students are invited to submit writings for the 1987-88 Journalism Awards competition. Submisssions must be articles, features, and/or photographs which were written/taken in the Fall, 1987 and Spring, 1988 terms only. The deadline for submission is this Monday. Submission guidelines:

1) Students may submit 3 samples of their work in any one or more of the following categories: News Articles, Features Articles, Sports Articles, Arts & Entertainment Articles and Reviews, Opinion and Editorial pieces, and Photojourna- of your work(s) should appear

2) Submissions need to have been published in one of the College's newspapers, either The Elm or The Collegian, or any of the other independent news publications.

a potentially confusing text. If three would have been more you have, in the past, been afraid to attend, or even read, a Sam Shepherd play due to the complexity, this production is a good way to be introduced to the real clarity and meaning

3) If possible, a copy or photocopy of the article as published in the newspaper should be submitted. Copies of back issues of both publications should be available at those respective offices. If you cannot obtain a copy of the issue in which your article or photo appeared, you may submit the original, but it must be submit ted typed on a 81/2 x 11 piece of paper, double spaced.

4) In the case of photo submissions, an original print should be submitted

5) The date of publication on each submission, as well as your name, class, and phone number.

6) Submissions should be submitted to Kathy Wagner, O'Neill Literary House (in her mailbox there) by Noon, December 12, 1988

Winners will be announced in the spring semester at an Awards ceremony at the Literary House. The judge for the contest will be a distinguished journalist not affiliated directly with the College.

Mom's Cookie Jar

The holiday season is upon us. To herald in this joyous time of the year, the W.C.D.S. has scheduled the annual Student's Holiday Buffet for Wednesday, December 14th, in the Main Dining Room. The menu will feature: Roasted Steamship Round of Beef, Sliced Ham, Steamed Snow Crab Clusters, Baked Potato Bar, Steamed Broccol & Cauliflower Medley, and the popular Cookie Box. Nonboarding students and quests attending this dinner will be charged $6.75

Thursday, December 15th, from 11:30P.M. to 12:30A.M., the W.C.D.S. will once again sponsor the "Midnight Breakfast". Mark the date and time on your calendar and plan to attend. While I'm on the subject, let me take this opportunity to wish you all the best of luck with your exams

To give you a break from studying during exam week, the S.G.A and the W.C.D.S. will again provide coffee and donuts in the Coffee House, from 11:00P.M. to 12:00 midnight, beginning Friday, December 16th.

Christmas is the season for giving and the W.C.D.S would greatly appreciate it if any students who have taken any plates, bowls, mugs, glasses, trays or silverware from the Dining Hall, please return them. Most students fail to realize that the replacement cost of these items is an expense which ultimately increases board fees.

On Thursday, December 15th, a box will be set up by Miss Dee's for students to return any Dining Hall property. Your co-operation and support in returning any of these items will be greatly appreciated.

Until Week

PEEBLES CHRISTMAS SALE

Save 20% ON OUR ENTIRE STOCK OF REGULAR PRICED ETIENN AIGER & MERCHANDISE

Choose holiday gifts from our great selection of ~LEATHER HANDBAGS ~WALLETS ~SMALL LEATHER GOODS ~SWEATERS ~DRESS & CASUAL SHOES

~BELTS ~SHIRTS ~COATS & JACKETS

Treat yourself or someone you love to the look and feel of quality Etienne Alger fashlons. Now at Christmas Sale Savings.

> Holiday Hours: Mon-Sat 9-9:30 pm Sun 11-7pm

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

lume 60, Number 13

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, January 27, 1989

dents Chas Foster and Jen Korten help to display work of exhibit ent ideas, but nothing defiists Joyce and Elizebeth Scott. The exhibit is titled "Stitched nite was resolved. tries" and will run from January twenty-sixth until late Febuary.

SGA applauded for donation

by Ed Schroeder

Before Washington College let out for winter recess. a generous gesture was made by the students of Washington College. The Student Government Association (SGA) donated a surplus of money to help fund the care of the ailing Tammara Alexandre, daughter of June Alexandre, one of the campus housekeepers

Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, first learned about the four year old's tracheal disorder (a disorder which still has not been confirmed by the two medical groups consulted), $20,000 was needed to cover their bills up to date, placing the family in an alarming financial situ-

Hessey then contacted SGA President, Perry Finney. They discussed differ-

"Hessey said he was going to try and organize something," Finney recalled, "So I tried to think up

Soon after, Finney conferred with treasurer Tom Jackson about the financial position of the Student Government. The budget was in balance, and there was a surplus of $2,300. This was almost the last senate meeting of the year had been held.

Immediately, notification was sent out to the senators calling them to an emergency

On November the thirteenth at seven o'clock, the senate met and discussed the possibilities of aiding the Alexandres. President Finney explained Tammara Alexandre's illness and the difficult financial situation of her family. Finney then proposed that a sum of money be donated to the Alexandre family

Liam Kennedy asked the amount in question, and upon hearing of the SGA surplus he motioned that it all be given to her. The motion was seconded shortly afterward and approval something that the SGA could by the senate was unanimous

You have to understand that we (the SGA) could have gone out and bought beer and a really good band," Finney admitted, "The Senators decided to give away their money for a worthwhile cause."

Although Finney realizes perfect, except for the fact that that the amount that they have given is not all that much, he hopes that it will aid the family

Monetary donations did not stop with the senate's decision. The SGA sponsored two Christmas Parties before finals: Bobby and The Believers performed in the Cafeteria and The Rage appearing in the Coffee House, also contributed funds

In the future the SGA would like to continue to help with voluntary causes. The want be one a volunteer student organization, like with the Big Brothers, Rescue Squad and others involved with community work

"It's always good for public relations with the town, Finney said,"We are a part of their community and we should try and contribute where and when we can."

Miller Library receives funding for computer automation project

by Tracey Connell Washington College was ently awarded funding by Surdna and Charles E. peper Foundations. Grant ey totals over $100,000.00 will be used to computer mate the Miller Library alog system, integrating secomputer networks with ary resources.

Last year the college re-"td "a substantial amount ands from private donors", ording to William Johnston tos, Librarian and a coordiof the program. Despite generous donations, ogton College had comed only two thirds to three ths of a projected 00,000.00 to $400,000.00

The college then submitgrant proposals to various One local organiza-DelMarVa Pen, turned giving", said Tubbs. This week though the Administration announced that We are delighted with the remaining funds had been possibilities. awarded. The Surdna and Charles E. Culpeper Foundations minals similar to the curgranted $100,00.00 and $50,00.00 rently employed Macintosh very excited," said Tubbs. He predicts that while much work on the system will be completed ministration. within six months, "that's getting rid of the easy part. Once you get the money it takes quite awhile."

After completion students and faculty will have twenty-four hour access to Library catalogs from any computer in the college network. Accessing will be more efficient and will be done more DelMarVa Pen, turned proven that computerized sys-the proposal because it tems help students. I think it will Vice President for Finance.

was "outside of the slope of their make a major contribution to education, giving better service to students and faculty.

At least thirteen tercatalog system will be installed. These and at least "Everyone on the staff is four ports for off-campus dial in inquiries will be active by 1991, according to the Ad-

"Race Karr", pictured above, and the other incorrigibles entertained a crowd at the Coffee House last Saturday night. This Wash. College Band has played at a number of WC functions to date

Master Plan makes progress

by Andrew Donaldson Washington College's Master Plan is proceeding satisfactoriy. The Eugene B. Casey Academic Resource Center, scheduled for completion in December, 1989, is Tubbs stated, "It has been not for the excellent weather," according to Gene Hessey, Plan main entrance are completed, ter. In addition lighting was the basement is constructed, the first floor slab is about to be poured. W. B. Venable and source of student complaint. Company, in charge of construction, sees an opportunity to catch ehind schedule and would up on lost time. The Academic "be much farther behind if Resource Center's completion will have a great impact on the be in place in the next two

A new north entrance was

Foundation walls and the built behind the Fine Arts Ceninstalled for the parking lot behind the building, a major

Other lighting was installed in the William Smith parking lot over vacation, and the rest of the lighting should

continued on page 12

EDITORIAL

America's future with George Bush

Now that George Bush is sworn in and the "-elect" is snipped from his title, it is time to look at what benefits and deficits he brings to the American people. The transition from the direction of Ronald Reagan's conservatism to George Bush's moderation occurs in the last year of this decade. Much of the effects of the progression of the century from one decade to the next will be ascribed to the Bush Administration, along with the change he

Since Ronald Reagan left the nation with the biggest deficit ever, the economy is a big problem for Bush. With Richard Darman as budget director, the Administration is committed to Bush's no-new-taxes promise, and Darman will tackle the problem with the President's "flexible freeze" under which higher spending in one area will be offset by reductions elsewhere. Darman may encourage Bush to employ some type of consumption tax, such as an increase in the gasoline levy, or higher taxes on cigarettes and alcohol. The Administration aims to avoid higher taxes in other areas by setting up a deal with the Democrais: if the Democrats allow domestic-program cuts Bush will agree to a decrease in military spending. Per haps this will be a start in the fight against the great evil

On Monday, Bush reaffirmed his anti-abortion beliefs when activists marched for life in Washington. He said "I think the Supreme Court decision in Roe v. Wade was wrong and should be overturned. I think America needs a human life amendment.... I promise the president hears you now and stands with you in a cause that must be won." And on the same day, Dan Quayle met with fifteen leaders of the anti-abortion movement and assured them of his support. The executive branch is not alone in their discussion of abortion; the Supreme Court agreed two weeks ago to hear Webster v. Board of Health Services, a case which involves a Missouri statute asserting that human life begins at conception. After having a conservative president who has had eight years to appoint conservative judges to serve on the high court, it appears that the 1973 ruling that legalized abortion may be overturned. For a man who now sees abortion as "an American tragedy," this would be a positive step

However, Bush is not totally trusted by the right to life activists. The President once opposed the reversal of Roe v. Wade, he changed his position only when he joined Reagan in the 1980 campaign. Bush has also angered antiabortionists by his stance that abortion should remain legal in cases of rape and incest, and where the mother's life is endangered. It is interesting that Bush nominated

continued on page 4

Washington College Elm

|                                 | ditors                          |
|---------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| Editor-in-chief                 | Jennifer M. Harriso             |
| News Editor                     | Tracey Conne                    |
| Features Editor                 | Anne Lindenbaum                 |
| Sports Editor                   | Carter Boatne                   |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor . | Michele M. Volansk              |
| Photography Editor              | David Johnson                   |
| Graphics Designer               | Todd Kar                        |
| Ma                              |                                 |
| Managing Editor                 | Bill Beekma                     |
| Advertising Manager             | Erin Hodge-William              |
| Circulation Manager             | James Sobeza                    |
| Assistant Circulation Manager   | Cynthia Gos                     |
| Office Manager                  | Julie Greene and Cathy Leas     |
| Course transmitter immunition   | minimum of colle and curry bear |

HOWEVER, THIS NESTS WHAT IS IT? WHERE DOES IT COME FROM NORMALLY TRAN-QUIL AIR HAS BEEN WHAT PURPOSE WILL WITH YOUR HOST, DISTURBED RECEN-SERVE! MARY JANE. TLY BY A SLOWLY RISING BUILDING BNIGHT LADIES & GENTLE IMPRESSIVELY TITLED. MEN, WE TRAVEL TO THE WILD BACKWOODS OF CHESTERTOWN, AHABITAT SUITED PERFECTLY FOR A SMALL NEST OF THE SPECIES INDIGENOU TO THE U.S., THE WILL SCIENCE EVER AMERICAN COLLEGE STUDENTS HAVE THE ANSWERS! HCADEMIC. FACT: OUT OF 200 ST to last services MARY JAME! ASKEP, NO ONE KNEW THE A.R.C'S PURPOS RESO URCES ENTER! FACT: THE MODEL IS PLAY FOCCATA + FUGUE IN MINOR FOR PROPER ROOM IN THE LIBER

Letters to the Editor

Isolation and wasting space

To the Editor: As a student who has completed both an undergraduate and graduate degree at Washington College, I would like to state that my education here has both enhanced my ability to write and also opened the door to many opportunities that before I could only dream about. The quality of teaching is extraordinary with many professors of both national and international reputation. This has had the dual effect of giving to the students at Washington College the wealth of knowledge these people possess and allowing the college to attract educators of the same high caliber for years to come However, it would be a crime to disregard a major fault I feel is detrimental to this institution. The students of Washington College have sought to steer a course that is highly isolationist of the community. Oh sure, we offer movies and lectures that are open to the public, but our school publication very rarely covers stories that make us a part of the communities health and vitality. Are we not a college town? As such, might the students be better served if the Elm reached out and reported community news as well? I am not talking about reporting Kent County High School baskethall scores. I am talking about issues that pertain directly to the students of Wash ington College and their dealings with the community.

Hypothetically, some stories might concern the quality of health care received at Kent and Queen Anneals Hospital (how the hospital ranks in the state as a health care provider), what kinds of jobs does the community provide to the student (for instance would it be lot have to do with the law wise for a student to work at the Dixon Valve CO.), or even the treatment of sewage of Chestertown and its impact on the Chesapeake Bay., The list tinue for pages. What I am trying to convey is Washington College possesses many fine writers who wish to pursue careers in the area of journalism. For whatever reason, the school newspanor has chosen the easier course of glossing over community news that is both necessary and important to the students of Washington College to instead run articles that in essence fill space. With ability comes responsibility. Let this year be the one in which Washington College firmly entrenches itself as a major voice to its surround ing community

Daniel W. Gerstenfield Graduate Student

Let us park on the lawn

To the Editor:

Considering the fact that Washington College is accepting more students every year, it is uncomprehensible to me that, at the same time, the number of legal parking spaces is rapidly decreasing. I am speaking of the Reid parking lot specifically last semester-when there were no lines on the lot-no one parking in Reid was ticketed. However, students returned this semester to find that, not only had the parking lot been re-lined, but it was also being heavily ticketed. Understandably, security ticketed cars parked in fire lanes, etc. But not understandably, no parking is being allowed on the lawn in front of Reid-where it was legal to park last semester.

What does lining the parking

At least four resid halls use Reid as their prin parking lot-QA, Carel Kent, Reid. How do they ex all of these cars to fit in of options for stories could conspaces that are left? The swer from WC higher-ups park in Gibson or New Do Right! Will it take some getting mugged or worsels the administration realizes the walk back to the dom not only annoying but un and dangerous-especial night. There is no good res why we are not allowed to tinue parking on the l Well-WC administration you have a good reason? Idi

Nell "Why can't I park the lawn" Shingle think so

Wasting space part two

To the Editor:

Mr. Duncan Sterling has once again voiced his ion against those who disa with the Republican Party has once again demonstr that he is incapable of ans ing the most simple tha placed against Reagan or I by a student of Washin College. Instead, Mr. Sta IV has once again wasteds in the Elm to respond not constructive manner by viciously attack those indi als who question the inte of our elected officials four years of college, Mr. ling IV should know he defend a position. Eithe does not care to put in the or Mr. Sterling IV gets perverse joy by demoral others . I vehemently by ing the individual and m Daniel W. Gersten Graduate Stub

ISSUE:

What benefits will the Bush Administration bring to the United States?

Bush may be a more traditional, involved president

It may still be too early to what changes George Bush his new administration will ke; however, it appears that will be more conservative was once thought. Albough Bush used to lean toards moderation, it seems as hough his having spent the st eight years as Ronald wagan's vice president has Hed his ideology to the right. fact, he chose several hardned conservatives, such as Free President Dan Quayle, hief of Staff John Sununu, storney General Richard hornburgh, and Drug Czar William Bennett, as members this cabinet, because he can't ford to lose the support of the tinuance of Reagan's conservatism, there will be differences between the two administra- diplomacy because he knows tions. The major difference that military aid packages won't between Bush's work and that of the previous president will mostly be caused by a change of attitude. First of all, Bush is a little more tame than Reagan. He has a much clearer perspective and a better view of the world. Bush is more levelheaded, and he will be more likely to see the shades of grey that escaped Reagan's white vs. black viewpoints. Bush's attitude to working with Congress also seems to be rather conciliatory, whereas Reagan was often confrontational. For example, even

Yet, aside from his con- though he may favor it, Bush may give up on pushing for Contra aid and instead seek pass in Congress. Since Bush is a former member of Congress (he served in the House of Representatives), he should understand how things work better than Reagan did and will be better able to work out com-

> Bush promises a nation with more social programs. He seems to be more sympathetic towards minorities, senior citizens, and working mothers. Although he may not have the funds, he plans to increase the government's role in trying to behind by economic recovery. For instance, by appointing Jack Kemp as Director of Housing and Urban Development, Bush hopes to give companies incentive to move factories to inner cities and to give tax breaks to inner city housing developers; thus creating lowincome housing. Bush also seems to be capable of being a intends to discourage this country's wide acceptance of president. materialism and greed.

Judy Summers

Bush aims to cut growth in defense spending and to

Bush also seems to genuinely want to seek a democratic solution in Nicaragua. His choice for Secretary of State, James Baker, has a reputation for being somewhat of a pragmatist. Perhaps he will be more willing to compromise in order to accomplish things than were either Alexander Haig or George Shultz.

To a large extent, Reagan was a figure head for his advisors; Bush, on the other hand, more traditional, more involved

Judy Summers is a freshdecrease the amount of money man from Manassas, Virginia help people that have been left that is wasted in the Pentagon. planning to major in English.

ight-wingers

Freshman Baltimore, Maryland eorge Bush will be a great resident. He not only will ntinue the programs started Reagan, but will also conintrate on areas such as edu-

Jeff Cessna Senior Lewistown, Maryland It'll be a kinder gentler nation.

Amy R. Caddle Freshman Keyport, New Jersey In the areas of civil rights, human rights and defense, the to be four years of hell.

Marcus Suppo Sophomore SI, New York from Reagan is what our county country is in trouble. It's going needs, not a liberal quack like Dukakis who would support giving tax dollars to those who do not deserve them.

Veryan Beacham Junior Atlanta, Georgia I feel that Bush's succession We have some place to put our

by Maggie Carr

It depends on your point of view

When asked to write an whicle on what benefits the bish administration will bring the United States, I was bred to take a good look at my n political viewpoints and terests. Realizing that I am yneighbor's fish, I viewed the pect with much trepidation at decided to take this opporhity to actually become somehat informed. If you are as ueless as I was, you will probaby appreciate this article. If are not, maybe you'll learn one new thing. This is that I found:

As I'm sure we all know, he budget is a big issue. Many tion so long as the economic climate of this country is appropriate. Unfortunately, politics being what they are, I found it impossible to find out specifically what is meant by "appro-

John Owen

Another big issue is drugs: Nancy made that quite clear. President Bush has created a whole new cabinet position for a person who will probably be known as "the drug czar" according to Time Magazine.

ings where drugs are concerned. of view. While he hasn't set any "Star Wars" as Reagan was and Just before Christmas he called definite parameters for aid we can probably expect to see a Bush and said "I don't want a job, but if you want someone to go after drugs, I'll do it for you. Evidently he has an extremely strong character and is expected to be highly effective if he is

If this seemingly impossible goal can be achieved it will necessarily put a damper on crime in general, much of which is related to the acquisition, use and dependency on drugs.

Bush seems to be very interested in the fate of children as well as the homeless. This includes his support of the remment officials believe Bush has nominated a man anti-abortion movement. Conversely, Bush and Conversely, Bush as nominated a man anti-abortion movement.

We will be dealt with effect named Bill Bennet who is sup-with the Bush administration of the Bush administ programs, he has indicated that cut in funding for that legacy. they will be primarily dependent on volunteer effort and people are essentially waiting contributions.

Since people are naturally afraid of and resistant to change, it will come as a relief to many that Bush, more than likely, will provide some continuity after Reagan. This is especially true concerning inter-Soviets. Bush is supposed to negotiate S.T.A.R.T. (strategic arms reduction talks) which involve, not just control, but a 50% reduction. That should

Right now the American

to see exactly what benefits the Bush administration will bring to them. As of yet, almost everything seems relatively am-biguous. Bush is under very little pressure right now because there are no immediate crisis. As a result, he is very slow to start his administranational relations with the tion and is reluctant to take any immediate major steps. Maybe this in itself is a benefit. This also depends on your point

John Owen is a senior

In the World

President Bush's nominee for Secretary of Health and Human Services, Dr. Louis Sullivan, told members of Congress that he does not favor the repealing of the 1972 Supreme Court decision allowing abortion. This puts Dr. Sullivan at odds with the President who assured a group of Pro-Life protestors that he is in favor of bond. a reversal of Roe v. Wade.

The Supreme Court declared a Virginia affirmative action plan unconstitutional. The Court said that racial quotas must only be used in special cases, and that the constitution limits state and local govern-

The shooting of a black motorcyclist by a Hispanic police officer that touched off rioting in Miami last week, is now the target of a Justice Department criminal investigation. Officer William Lozano was charged with two counts of manslaughter, and was released after posting $10,000

Soviet Union

An earthquake struck the Soviet Republic of Tadzhikistan Monday. The earthquake, 1990. which measured 5.4 on the Richter scale, destroyed several villages near the Afgan border. ments' power to adopt affirma- Atleast 1,000 people are pre- Figueras, Spain. The surrealist talks between the two nations sumed dead.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Viktor Karpov revealed on Monday that a Soviet offer to withdraw tactical nuclear missiles from Eastern Europe will only cover a small number of weapons.

In East Berlin, East German Leader Erich Honecker announced that the all Soviet tank divisions would be leaving his country and East Germany would be cutting its armed forces by 10,000 men and military budget by ten percent by

> Spain Salvador Dali died in Monday He had been in deteriorating health for several years, and suffered from heart.

trouble. He will be buried in the inner courtyard of his museum in Figueras on Wednesday. India

Prime Minister Ghandi is likely to delay national elections as long as possible follow ing the overwhelming defeat of his Congress Party candidates in a local assembly election in the Indian state of Tamil Nadu.

Iraq In a gesture of peace, Iraq freed 131 Iranian prisoners of war. The gesture was part of an cers club, and the armory attempt to stimulate the peace wrote and illustrated books.

Besides paintings, Dali

painter, who was 84, died on Iraq is expected to release an other 124 prisoners on Tues day

Argentina

At least twenty four people, both civilian and mili tary personnel were killed when Argentine Soldiers regained control of most of an infantry base that had been held by civi alian commandos briefly. The commandos attacked the base early Monday morning. Most of officers and troops had been allowed off the base for the weekend. By early evening the remaining commandos were isolated in the chapel, an offi

compiled by Laura Hopper

People loved him for his talent, wisdom, and sense of humor. Many of his paintings have sold for millions of dollars Two museums, in St. Petersburg and his home town

Figueras, are devoted to his

Salvador Dali: the persistence of memoru

Salvador Dali, the leader of the surrealist movement, died he pleased, including scorn the this past Monday morning from cardiac arrest and pneumonia. He suffered from numerous health problems and was in a wheelchair since the fall of 1984 Dali shut himself off from the rest of the world ever since 1982 when his wife, Gala, died Salvador Dali was not only known for his famous paintings, but also for his bizarre antics. He once gave a lecture in a diving suit but almost suffocated because he forgot the air pump. The critics felt he was more interested in money and Dali responded: "Dali sleep best after receiving tremendous quantity of checks." With artistic talent around the age of money, he said he could do what

The critics weren't the only ones to give him problems. He had been suspended and expelled from the San Fernando Academy of Fine Arts in Madrid. In 1934 his colleagues banned him from the surrealist movement. Even his wife barred Dali from her house in the 1970's because of his arrogance. He constantly bragged about being the best artist of the century and many found his style offensive. At one time he competed with Picasso for the title of the World's Most Important Artist Dali began displaying his ozone depletion, pollution, over-

This is the most population, and toxic waste

ambition attempt ever to influence a presidential good earth

policy. According to conservationist leaders, failure to act on the recommendations will re-crowded, poisoned shell of a once disposal.

ten Dali had the shility to tan into the unconscious and let us see it in his works. During the mid 1920's to the early 1940's he hit his peak. His paintings contained images including grasshoppers, telephones, melting torsos, ants, and bread. One of his best surrealist canvases was "The Persistance of Mem-" which contained melting watches. When he was forty five years old he started painting religious masterpieces such as "The Last Supper," which is on display at the National Gallary of Art in Washington D.C. At this point in his career his critics felt he had given up his best tool- his lack of serious poems, and essays, made stage designs for plays and ballets, produced commercial advertisements, designed jewelry and wrote an autobiography. He worked with Walt Disney on the film, "Mysteria."

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

OLD WHARFINN

ON THE CHESTER BIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

continued from page two Dr. Louis Sullivan for the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Sullivan has said that he doesn't want the Roev. Wade decision reversed, and at one point last month, Sullivan almost lost the Cabinet nomination when he told an interviewer he personally favored a woman's right to an abortion He later insisted he would support Bush's position despite his own beliefs

Abortion played a big role in last year's campaign, and despite Sullivan's opposition and Bush's inconstant view, the Bush years may come to be known as a time when choice was taken away from the American people.

The health of the environment will also play a big part in Bush's presidency. Most of the nation's major conservation groups joined forces in submitting a 1,200 page "Blueprint for the Environment". This document recommends the implementation of over seven hundred opositions that will cost 5.4 billion dollars, these include issues like global warming, beautiful planet."

America expects many things from this one man, and we can continue to hope that he will do many things to improve this nation. For now we can look for kindness, no tax hike, and hope Bush really becomes sult in "a Bush legacy of a the education president.

Fine Framing · Select Cifts Artists' Materials

> POBox 402 711 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-5202

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

Sororities extend an invitation

by Tracey Connell

il conduct its annual Tea on students, "in a social situation bruary first at 9:00 in Hynson that is geared toward them. ounge. All college freshman, They will be exposed to sisters ransfer and academically eli- in a positive way", said Smith. pole female students are inited to participate.

According to Denise mith, member of Alpha Ominon Pi Sorority and President Student Affairs Office. the Panhellenic Council, the hish process. Students are hey may become more intisately acquainted with Washgrorities, Alpha Chi Omega, Joha Omicron Pi, and Zeta Tau

During the course of the emselves to prospective what it's like

The Panhellenic Council perform skits, and mingle with

At this time individuals may sign the Rush List. There is a $1.00 fee. The list will also be available for a short time at

For those who decide to a signifies a beginning to the participate, the Rush period will consist of a series of parties mited to attend in order that that will culminate in formal, invitation only, parties and "Bid Night", where rushees may ngton College's three national receive a bid from a sorority who wishes her to pledge

Smith stated, "I would love for anyone interested in a sorority and even those who are ming sororities will introduce not sure to just come and see

Welcome back from The Elm! Congratulations to Tracey Connell who replaced Susan Di Leo as The Elm's

Visiting professors: diversity creates a more well-rounded education

by Patricia Karnes This academic year Washgton College has had a vast ay of faculty appointed to othing at Washington Col-M. New faces in Psychology, th, English, Business, Hisy, Drama, and Spanish have mded into the campus combinson-Guy were appointed siting Professors. Professor omingdale expects to receive Ph.D. this May, while Dr.

Robinson-Guy received her Wolff-Young. Both received ginia Polytechnic Institute in sity of Delaware.

group of professors this aca- the college, Dr. Gail Kaplan and the University of Oxford, Somdemicyear. Dr. David Cohen is Kenneth Wantling. Dr. Kaplan erville College in 1988. Dr. a Visiting Professor of English received her Ph.D. at SUNY at Striner received his Ph.D. from Forbes, Dr. Cohen received his taught at the U.S. Naval Acad-In Psychology, John Ph.D. at SUNY at Buffalo in emy. Professor Wantling rebomingdale and Elizabeth 1988. Professor Forbes is Director of the Literary House for the academic year. Appointed as Lecturers in English were Shirley Peterson and Beverly

Ph.D. in psychology from Vir- their PhD's from the Univer- Amt, Dr. Richard Striner, and has as new members Mr. Ben

The Mathmatics Depart-English also has a new ment invited two professors to ceived his masters form the University of Kentucky and a degree as an Education Spe-Higher Education.

In History, Dr. Emilie Mr. Walter Carrington were appointed Assistant Professors. Dr. Amtreceived her Ph.D. from well as Professor Calvin Stony Brook in 1979. She also the University of Maryland in 1982. Mr. Carrington received his LLB from Harvard Law School in 1955, has been an ambassador to the Republic of Sergal and was commissioner cialist in Administration in of the Massachusettes Commission Against Discrimination.

Chestertown Movie Theater

presents

Dirty Rotten Scoundrels

The Business Department Fuller and Dr. Robert Shelburne, who were appointed to the Business Management and Economics, respectively. Mr. Fuller received his MBA in 1984 from Loyola College, whereas Dr. Shelbourne received his Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina in

Mr. Jason Rubin and Ms. Nancy Schertler are new faculty members of the Drama department. Mr. Rubin is working on his doctrine at New York University. Ms. Schertler is a professional lighting designer, who has worked at the Lincoln Center in New York, as well as many other theaters.

Dr. Joyce Carlson-Leavitt joins the Foreign Language professors this year. She has a Ph.D. in Spanish Literature, which she obtained at the University of New Mexico.

Each visiting professor has an impressive display of credentials which can only broaden the diversity of the college's faculty. This diversity creates a more well-rounded education, which seems to be one of the College's main con-

Hours: Fri-Sat 7&9pm Mon.-Thurs. 7:45 pm 778-1575 NSTRUMENTALISTS UDITIO COLLEGE PARK, MARYLAND BALTIMORE, MARYLAND Sur Kings Dominion for your patience during rush! 20% off all calendars New supply of spiral notebooks due any day February 4th is absolutely the last day to return books! Washington College Bookstore

Mon-Fri. 8:30-4:30

Sat. 10-1:00

Welcome back, and thanks

ENTREPRENEURS Own & operate your own business this summer & earn over $5,000. Asphalt sealing franchise for college students, call Collegiate

Sealers, Inc. for info & application 1-800-

"Big Brother" Johnston serves as role model, friend to "little brother" Matthew

Matthew is a friendly, enthusiastic boy of twelve who expresses an interest in learning to ice skate, despite the horror story he relates of a girl who lost her front teeth in a skating calamity

Tonight, after eating dinner and "wasting quarters" on the video games in the Coffee House, Matthew and his big brother,' sophomore Fred Johnston, will probably return to Johnston's room and fool with the Macintosh for awhile be fore Matthew has to go home.

Matthew and Johnston aren't brothers by birth, however. Last year, Johnston attended a meeting of the Campus Christian Fellowship, where interested students learned about the Big Brothers and Big Sisters program of the Upper Eastern Shore

The process to become a "Big" is fairly intensive, involving a written application with references and, Johnston says, a "very in-depth but informal" interview and driving record checks are conducted, and a representative assesses the applicant's living environment

Maase, Field Representative for Kent and Queen Anne's Counties, the process takes a fair amount of time, in order to establish the applicant's stability and suitability for the quests a one year commitment are products of single-parent

Sophomore Fred Johnston decided to become a Big Brother after attending the initial meeting for Big Brothers/Big Sisters last year. Here, he relaxes with "little brother" Matthew in the Coffee House. from the "Bigs" for the sake of homes, as in Matthew's case, or Johnston Topics of dinner conver-applicant is accepted, and that a child is waiting for a big side of the home brother or sister, their respective interests are matched up, and a meeting is arranged. If the match is approved

Additionally, fingerprint by both parties, and the child's parents, then the friendship proceeds

In the case of Matthew According to Karen in computers and radio, as well as an affinity for the group INXS, led to their match last September. For their first outing, the two made an excursion to Johnston's home in Balti-

Many of the children The organization re- who participate in the program continuity in the relationship. of other circumstances which Assuming that the indicate a need for the child to sation include Matthew's school have a positive influence out- and friends

> The children are referred to Big Brothers and Big Sisters by schools, social services, and even parents. Participation in the organization is contingent upon the consent of both the child and his parent.

The Big does not play and Johnston, mutual interests, the role of parent or playmate; rather, he or she serves as a role model, "an adult the child can be friends with," apart from his parents' circle of friends, says Maase

In Johnston's estimation, his role "bounces between role model and friend.

"The Big can be someone who widens a child's world through activities," Maase says. "Every big brother and big sister relationship revolves around the child."

The activities needn't be grand or expensive; Matthew and Johnston get together roughly once a week for dinner at the Dining Hall, since "it can be tricky" getting together on weekends when both have homework to complete, says

"Usually, I take [Fred's says Matthew. Recently, the two saw campus production of Tenne see Williams' "Camino Real" "We might do some shorte road trips to Annapolis! Johnston says.

They plan to continu their friendship next year who Johnston studies abroad. "We just make use of air mail," say, Johnston

************

Anyone interested in be coming a Big Brother or Bi Sister should write to:

Big Brothers and Big Sisters of the Upper Eastern Shore, Inc. PO Box 232 Easton, MD 21601 or call Karen Maase at 822-7059.

Coffee House Announces New Spring Hours, etc.

The Coffee House announces new weekend hours for the Spring semester. On Saturday and Sunday throughout the semester the Coffee House will be opening at 8:00 P.M. Also new this semester, the non-alcoholic nights are Sunday and Tuesday. Pizza delivery will continue with a new commitment to serve between the hours of 9:00 P.M. and 11:00 P.M. daily. Remember our special offer of two free sodas with any pizza order. Pizza to go will be available during all shifts.

A full line-up of entertainment and activities is planned for the Coffee House this semester, including dances featuring WC's own band The Incorrigibles, 49 Reasons, Bill Breslin in concert, and of the indomitable Tom Larsen Blues Band. Watch for these and other exciting events in '89. Along with our special events lineup, plan of enjoying our regular schedule of movies and sporting events. See ya in the C-House!

You dial.

Like to Argue?

Then the W.C. Debate Club would like to see you at the next meeting. Anyone can participate. So come and see what it is all about. All are Welcome!

> Tuesday, January 31st 7:30 Basement of West Hall

We will be discussing up and coming debate on Welfare.

Dear Mr. President Bush:

We're not ready to be points of light

Welcome to the White notches. House, Mr. Bush. You have a tough job ahead of you.

You are a Republican and I am a Democrat, but that doesn't have to be a bad thing.

Will Beekman

If you can provide a few things for me, we may just be able to get along fine: give my kids a good education, don't start any wars or make too many weap ons, don't borrow away my future, and don't be too hard-

down to business I figure that the next four years are going to be rather tough for Americans. At least, I hope that they are tough. That means we are making progress The next few years may determine which way America goes in the twenty-first century, up or down. My vote is up.

It seems to me that we've spent a number of years shoveling some problems under the national rug. Individually, we Americans have been too concerned with ourselves and with making a buck. As a nation. we've been too concerned with being NUMBER ONE, and as a

Dear Mr. President Bush: result we have slipped a few

You probably know what our biggest problems are: drugs, homelessness, the deficit, AIDS. poverty. You have some ideas, and I have some ideas. Together, maybe we can make a difference

Your 1000 points of light rhetoric sounds nice, but frankly I do not think it is enough. The eighties have made some Americans very selfish, and others very apathetic. And for some of us, the eighties have made us very poor. Most us aren't ready to be a point of Personally, I've spent the With that settled, let's get last four years paying off a college education that my parents could not afford. I've used all my energy working and studying, with none left for volunteering. I want to help, but ...

But I don't like excuses, so instead I have a few suggestions. They will involve a little money and a little volunteerism and a big change in the attitude of many Americans. I would like to see a new and powerful volunteer America arise over the next few years to combat some of our problems at home. The volunteers could work like the National Guard, only instead of training for war they would train for peace

Volunteers could give a certain number of hours a year to various organizations in exchange for tuition grants and housing subsidies and food stamps. We could help ourselves to improve as a nation

Imagine this: Johnny Volunteer serves two weekends a month and four weeks a year at the local drug education center helping teenaged addicts to recover, and in exchange gets part of his college tuition paid. Mary Volunteer helps to provide food and shelter and find housing for the homeless, and in return gets child support payments for her one year old

Volunteer America may not exactly be volunteerism, but it isn't charity either. Instead. we help those who help others.

And perhaps it will spread. People will learn to help other people, and some will continue doing so for the rest of their

I've never liked a welfare system where we give gobs of money to people for nothing in return. But likewise, I do not think that deprived people should continue to be deprived. And perhaps, in exchange for helping others, they can be

Well, Mr. Bush, I guess that is all I have to say today. I a shot. And who knows? If you still want my kids to receive a good education, and I still don't want any wars or too many weapons. And another thing: Good luck, Mr. Bush. As a Democrat, I may be a harsh critic over the next four years. But I'll give you legitimately try to move the nation - the whole nation forward in the next few years, I may even vote for you in 1992

> Sincerely, William Beekman

Dear Mr. Vice-President Quayle: Dump government waste: abolish the vice-presidency

Dear Mr. Vice President on target.

Hello, Mr. Quayle. The as it is for Mr. Bush.

In your defense, I think hat the press is unduly harsh art their criticisms are right bad situations in America seems

From your lack of willingness to serve in Viet Nam, your Dews for you isn't nearly as good commitment and judgment the tumultuous sixties. seem lacking. You are a war hawk with clipped wings. From your inactivity durbyou at times. But for the most ing the sixties, your will to better non-existent. You were a fringe make you a better vice-presistudent at DePauw University, the hotbed of social rest during Clearly, you do not even possess the ideals and convictions that redirected our nation. Or if you do, you lack the courage to make them real.

And from your performance during the campaign, your intelligence seems to be absent.

Former President Ronald Reagan lacks intellectual vigor, but at least he is a reasonably intelligent man. You seem to lack both intellectual vigor and intellectual ability.

Your best ability, I guess, is to speak in meaningless platitudes. "The sun will shine brighter in America...." Well, Mr. Quayle, if you become President I fear that the clouds will get. start rolling in. Quickly.

All of this suggests that you are not prepapred to take over the presidency should Mr. Bush die. And that is absolutely true. You are not prepared.

Perhaps in the next few years you can grow into the role. But for now you may be the greatest threat to national security. I pray for the health of President Bush

Nevertheless, you are the vice-president. And so I will give you some suggestions to help Let's see now, what are the duties of the vice-president? (Long pause) Well, unless you count attending funerals, I guess the only job you have is to wait for President Bush to die so you can take over. And clearly none of us want that. You wouldn't know what to do after you and the rest of America - said

Quayle? One of FDR's vice-presi#### dents, Nance Garner, once said Will Beekman

that the vice-presidency was "not worth a bucket of warm spit." Garner was right on tar-

The vice-presidency is superfluous.

one hundred thousand dollars to have a person sit and wait for the President to die. And they give him a jet.

And he waits

ouse. And he waits. And they give him four offices in Washington D.C. And he waits. And so on

With all of the budget problems that America has had

I think that we could cut a chunk of waste from the federal budget simply by abolishing the vicepresidency.

After all, the vice-presidency was only created by the framers as an afterthought. If we abolish it with another afterthought like yourself, Mr. Quayle, the vice-presidency will have come full circle

So what do you think, Mr.

If you force us to abolish the vice-presidency you will once and for all prove your critics wrong.

You will demonstrate courage and conviction that you did not have in the sixties and seventies and eighties. You will leave a lasting mark on American history. You will rid us of government waste.

And, finally, Mr. Quayle, Americans pay more than if you make us abolish the vicepresidency while you are in office, you will allow Americans to let out a collective sigh of

Well, that's my advice to And they give him a big you, Mr. Quayle. Abolish the vice-presidency. Why don't you sit and think about it for a while. You don't have anything else to

> Sincerely, William Beekman

Andy Baur goes up for 'two' amid Ursinus defenders

The important messages of Super Bowl XXIII as well as the ability to run. Joe

the ability to wir

Montana may have the natural ability of these quarterbacks,

but he possesses the most important characteristic of all - was over, but he was able to handle the adversity and lead his team to the championship.

He ran a perfect two-minute drill in the middle of the greatest pressure imaginable, and is undefeated in his Super Bowl history. Joe Montana's ability to handle pressure and win should lead him into the Hall of Fame as one the great clutch

lowed the public to name the

NFL "team of the 80's". The San Francisco 49'ers follow in the footsteps of the Green Bay

Packers of the 1960's and the Pittsburgh Steelers of the 1970's. It seems that the public feels the need to name a team of the decade, and San Francisco won three Super Bowls in the decade, all behind the arm of

Joe Montana. Coach Bill Walsh has been able to keep winning despite changes in personnel

ful with both running and pass-

Walsh has been success-

As usual, the game was ogged down with two weeks of and style of the decade

This Super Bowl also al-

players in history

This year Montana heard

Football League would be wise to award automatic Super Bowl passes to both the Cincinnati Bengals and the San Francisco 49ers in the near future. Very few Super Bowls in this decade have been entertaining, except the comments that his career for the fans of the team ahead by thirty points. Every meeting between the Bengals and the 49ers has turned into a memorable game. They have met in two close and exciting Super Bowls, one game featuring an incredible goal line stand by the Niner defense and the other displaying a miracle touchdown drive led by Joe Montana. A regular season game in 1987 almost cost Bengal coach Sam Wyche his joh after his team failed to run out clock and lost on a last sectouchdown pass from Montana to Rice. This year's Bowl accomplished a great deal for the NFL, but also certainly fits the bill. They have overlooked the return of a major problem in football.

Brett Lankford

This was the year that Joe Montana earned his right to be named with other great quarterbacks in the history of the league. There are other quar terbacks in the game today who get more publicity and are better in one specific part of their game. Dan Marino has the quickest release in the game with deadly accuracy. Randall Cunningham's scrambling has been compared with Fran Tark- hype. The "Ickey Shuffle" beenton in his heyday. John came the most famous dance spent too much time discussing by Don Steele team has dug itself into a hole and now it must work its way out of it. Although the team is a very impressive 11-4 they have a mediocre 2-2 record in the Middle Atlantic Conference. The team now must win the rest of its Middle Atlantic Conference games to secure a playoff birth. Tuesday the team ended a two year home court winning streak in a 67-66 loss to Ursinus. The team let the game slip out of its hands after being up by 10 late in the game.

step since "The Hustle". Jerry Rice's swollen ankle received more press coverage than the inauguration. As expected, the halftime extravaganza proved to be a wonderful cure for insomnia. Once again, the media forgot about the actual game while attempting to present its importance. Hopefully the excitement generated in this Super Bowl will remind the fans that the game is what really

Unfortunately, the excitement of the game and the pregame hype combined to put the revival of an upsetting issue on the backburner. Stanley Wilson, backup running back on the Cincinnati Bengals, was suspended on the day of the game due to a drug relapse. This was the fourth suspension for Wilson, who has only been in the league since 1983. John Taylor, the wide receiver for the 49'ers who caught the winning touchdown pass, served a one-month suspension earlier in the season as a result of drug abuse. This turn of events could have been used by the media to show the magnitude of the drug problem in the NFL, as well as the harm some drugs can cause Stanley Wilson had dreamed of playing in the Super Bowl throughout his life, yet threw away his dream because of a drug problem. John Taylor was ing teams over the years. The able to battle back from his drug coach and the players deserve problem and fulfill the dream to be named the mythical "team > catching a last-second touchdown pass in the Super Bowl. It seems that the media of every young football player - win streak ends, team in must-win situation The team's 29% second and Brody also paced the team on the boards, clearing the glass 10 and nine times respectively Last Tuesday January 17, the team suffered another heart breaking loss

After leading much of the way to perennial rival Johns Hopkins they were pipped in overtime 84-86. Keehan had 23 points and Auvil had 14 to lead the team. Auvil had ten boards. Jamke, Bauer and Keehan each had eight rebounds. The Blue Jays had a hot hand in the second half shooting 58 percent.

Friday, January 27, 1989

In their games over the break the team looked impressive and at one point attained a #4 national ranking. The team snuck by Catholic University 79-76 and blew out Gettysburg 103-82.

The team now has its work cut out for it. It is in a must win situation. The team plays at home tomorrow against Haverford and Monday against St.

The Sho'men basketball half shooting performance led to its downfall. Ursinus took the final lead with two seconds left and then Tim Keehan's last gasp half court shot was off the Basketball home court

Keehan was the offensive pacesetter in the game with 17 points. Charles Duckett had an impressive 11 points off the bench. Steve Brody and George Small provided a lift in the first half. Tom Auvil had 11 boards to pace the team. The team however failed to get hot in the second half, and this poor shoot ing in the clutch allowed Ursinus to steal the win.

Last Saturday the team travelled up to Swarthmore and picked up an important road M.A.C. win.

The squad beat Swarthmore 76-71. Bauer was the leading scorer with an impressive 25 point outing. Brody came off the bench and exploded for 16 points. Bauer on defense Matt Wilson attempts to hold off a Ursinus scorer.

trivial matters and let a real managed to miss the main story opportunity for a meaningful after the game was overstory slip through their hands. Brett Lankford resides on While searching for some exclusive and important angle the writer's floor and continues before the Super Bowl, the press to launch a saults on the press

Swimmers smash records; Kasey qualifies for NCAA's

by Kathy Brewster Over winter break the Washington College swim team mntested in a dual meet against Blizabethtown and Susquehanna. This was an and intra-confrence meet and Washington wasdefeated in both in-stances. Jenny Korten(2), Carroll Kasey(2), Samantha Streamer(2), Leslie Newcomb(3), Karen Brady and Katherine Finneson.

On Wednesday the team dove into a meet against York

The Sho'women triumphed with a 149.5 - 108.5 score upsetting visiting York College and smashing eight school records during the meet.

which have fallen like sticks in the wind, freshman swimmer Kasey Carroll has accomplished a tremendous feat by her own

Carroll has earned the honor of competing in the NCAA Division III swimming championships in Notre Dame, Indiana, being the first person to do

Aside from the records Washington. Carroll achieved freestyle, but also the 1000, 500 the honor swimming against Elizabethtown. She recorded a time of 18:01 in the 1650 yard freestyle, defeating the previous time by 21 seconds. Carroll is the first woman in the history of Washington College to qualify for the NCAA tourna-

Her accomplishments are so in the history of the team at not only held in the 1650 yard tory of the college."

and 200 yard butterfly in which she broke pre-existing records.

Coach Dennis Berry has been delighted at Carroll's achievements and motivation. As for the rest of the team he is very enthusiastic about their future and performance. He also stated that this squad had been "the best team in the his-

A few hints for shedding those post-party pounds

This is the time of year many folks come down with post-party blues. We ate too much, we ate too fast, we exercised too little...and now, we feel fat and soggy and resolved to make some healthy changes in our 1989 lifestyle.

If you're in the middle of a new year's resolution to diet away those 20 extra pounds immediately! - DR. JOCK has some advice for you:

BEGIN WITH AN HON-EST EVALUATION. Getnaked and stand in front of a mirror What do you have to lose? Be onest with yourself. And kind Don't look in the mirror and expect to see a 110-pound star-let staring back. Or a Hollywood muscleman. Accept (and appreciate) your body, as is, and then imagine how it might look, slittle tighter, a little trimmer. With that realistic goal clearly in mind, you can begin a process of weight loss and regular exercise that will leave you ighter and lovelier - not mmediately!-but eventually. apainless pound or two a week or the next few months would te just great, wouldn't it?

MICKS. Most people who lose weight gain it back. And one of the main reasons they gain it back is because they were on goofy, gimmicky diets in the first place, diets that begin in despair and end in deprivation, with no real or significant life style change in between. And besides that, some of these highly promoted weight loss schemes cost hundreds of dollars a month! Give up the gimmicks. Go for an honest

ARE YOU READY TO MAKE CHANGES? This year, doit differently. Don't get suckered into one of those phony quick-loss schemes that set you up to fail. Let 1989 be The Year of the Sensible Eating Plan, the year you actually stop eating all those fried, fatty foods and switch to more broiled and baked chickens and fishes; the year you learn to love healthy pastas and potatoes without the rich sauces; the year you take no more than two bites of any high-calorie dessert; the year you drink six to eight glasses of water a day; etc. You can do it.

FORGET THE GIM- Andyou already know how. The too. Can you lose weight with- milkshakes, headed for the fat only question is:are you ready to make changes in your life? Are you ready to feel healthier. and look better, and stop lugging around 20 pounds of unnecessary fat? If you are, read

LET EXERCISE BE YOUR FRIEND. If you want to lose weight and keep it off, you should be exercising, at least three to four times a week, at least 30 minutes per session. Do what you like -walking, swimming, cycling, aerobic classes - but do something. Why? Because you'll see re-sults faster while feeling healthier then you've ever felt before Exercise also helps you deal with the anxiety that sometimes comes on when begin to eat differently Another way you can lower that stress is not to think of what you're going on as a diet. Think of it as the start of Regular workouts will get your body and mind in better shape than you can imagine. Ask Oprah Winfrey. The whole country applauded when she you revealed her new size 10 figure but did you happen to catch the fact that she is running/walking six miles a day now? And plans to take part in the next Chicago Marathon? Indeed, exercise was a major (underpublicized) component of shameful to have little boys herfantastic weight loss. Yours, growing up on french fries and it's much, much harder.

ENJOY ASKING FOR HELP. If you're not sure how to make changes in your lifestyle, but you know you want to seek out some nutritionist. Or buddy up with a close friend who also has 10 pounds to lose. Join an organized group of overeaters Subscribe to a popular health magazine with constant reminders of what to eat and how to work out. There is no one solution that works for everyone but you can find what works for you if you try. A big help may be, finally, accepting who you are at the weight that you're at, and living life to the

BEING THIN IS NOT THE SAME AS BEING HAPPY. Constant dieting can be dangerous to your health. especially your mental health While DR. JOCK hopes some of this advice and encouragement helps you get started on losing the weight you want to lose, we also see something of an obsession with thinness in this country...and it's not very payable to Newspaperbooks. healthy

It's sad to see little girls drinking diet colas because they're afraid of being fat. It's out exercising? Perhaps. But farm in later life. You don't have to be thin to be happy. In this country, we put too much emphasis on being slim and not enough emphasis on being fit. Few people are blessed with perfect figures but all of us can benefit from time spent working to develop and maintain our strength and flexibility. Indeed, this new year, you may simply want to resolve to do something positive for your FITNESS and let you FAT-NESS take care of itself. It will.

Dr. Jock welcomes your questions and comments about exercise, fitness, nutrition mental conditioning, etc. Write to DR. JOCK, c/o Tribune Media Services, 64 E. Concord St. Orlando, Fla. 32801

THE ALL-NEW GUIDE TOWALKING FOR FITNESS Health and fitness are within reach...the secret? WALKING! Dr. Jock lets you in on all the latest "Walking for Fitness news. To obtain this new edition, send $2.50 to "Dr. Jock -Walking," in care of the ELM. P.O. Box 4426, Orlando, Fla. 32802-4426. Make checks

Sports extra

Washington College Lacrosse coach Terry Corcoran has been honored by being awarded the job of coaching the United States National team which will compete in the World Games of

Women's field hockey coach Diane Guinan has been named to the NCAA Field Hockey Rules Committee. Washington College athletic director Geoff Miller shares similar honors being named to the NCAA Lacrosse Rules

Miller stated that this is a tremendous honor because it gives the College greater expoture and also as in his case, "...Gives me a chance to influence the future of the game:"

You dial. We deliver.

Attention: Freshmen, Sophomores and Juniors-Job Oppurtunity

-Ever dreamed for making large sums of money? -Ever dreamed of working for a News Paper, but you weren't really interested in writing articles? -Ever feel that "yeah, stacking books earns you some money, but there must be a more excitnig job out there?" -Ever think that your creative skill were going unnoticed?

Well, the Elm is looking for someone to help with Advertising. It is the perfect oppurtunity to earn lots of money, while actually learning something!

Call Erin for more information778-3534

Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians shoot rubberbands at the stars in debut album

by Todd Karr As far as music goes, the eighties has been a decade through which has marched a seemingly unending procession of bland mega-bands, one-hit bands, and musical fads. Styles, influences, taste, and technol-

that has a light, unrestrained sound to it, as well as more than a touch of influence from the Grateful Dead (Their guitarist, Kenny Withrow, is a professed Dead Head). It is a style that serves as a skeleton, one which Edie Brickell fleshes ogy has changed with such out in her intensely character-

Their lyrics have a spontaneous quality to them, one which adds a number of different dimensions to their music."

rapidity that it is now very dif- istic alto with lyrics and me ficult to distinguish between what is truly good and what is trash. Yet every once in a while, a band comes along that reawakens my faith in music. Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians is such a band

Hailing from Dallas, Texas, the New Bohemians have arrived on the music scene with a musical style that is attractive in its unobtrusiveness. In their new album, Shooting Rubberbands at the Stars, the New Bohemians present their songs in a musically spartan way: there is just enough sound from the keyboards, guitar, and bass to suggest chords. It is a rhythmically subtle style lodic lines that are imbued with an impressive spontaneity. And that brings up a subject well-worth mentioning in conjunction with Shooting Rubberbands at the Stars, that of lyrical style. Their lyrics have a sponataneous quality to them, one which adds a number of different dimensions to their music. Brickell has a habit of turning verse lines into refrains, while breaking up other lines in rhythms that tend towards the unexpected, as if she were spinning the songs off the top of her head, "Now" and "Air of December" are both good examples of this odd rythmic accenting pattern.

As far as the songs themselves are concerned, the New Bohemians have a rather unique collection of material. All of their music is rather spiritual in focus, in that it is oriented towards states of existence, rather than creating the kinds of empty worlds that occur in the music of so many other contemporary bands. Sometimes the focus is on Self: "I'm not aware of too many things/I know what I know if you know what I mean" ("What I Am") and "Somewhere there's somebody who looks just like you do/ acts like you too-feels the same way" ("The Wheel"). Other times the focus is on the awareness which exists between two individuals: "I swear I remember it that way/I swear I rememberit/Where are you now?" ("Air of December") and "You're much more than this-a spiritual bliss/No matter who I'm with I miss you" ("Now"). Whatever the song, the New Bohemians are carefully aware of the various states of perception, no matter the surface cause, be it memory or lyrical convetion. Shooting Rubberbands at the Stars is a musically satisfying album, and I look forward to hearing more of the "truly good" music from Edie Brickell and the New Bohemians in the fu-

Guitarist William Kanengiser will bring to the Washington College community his own style of music as part of the Concert Series:

Kanengiser performance provides award-winning entertainment

Concert Series will open its spring season with guitarist William Kanengiser on Monday, January thirtieth at 8 PM in the Gibson Fine Arts Center.

Mr. Kanengiser is the first prize winner for the 1987 Concert Artists Guild International New York Competition, the 1981 Toronto International Guitar Competition winner and the highest prize winner of the 1983 Radio-France International Guitar Competition. He has performed in various concert halls across the United States, in addition to performances in Mexico, Spain, France, Belguim, and the Netherlands.

Kanengiser is a graduate of the University of Southern California, where he was named Outstanding Graduate of the School of Music, upon his reception of both a Bachelor's and a Master's degree. He is currently on the staff of USC and his work can be heard on the Columbia Pictures release as Ralph Maccio's coach and performance double. He is noted as one of America's finest young classical guitarist, with the reason, in part, being his from Handel to Mozart. unique repertoire. His program

The Washington College Crossroads, in which he served includes the work of the Span ish masters, twentieth-centur, compostions and his own cres tions. In addition, he include in his program pieces rangit

Campus Calendar

The Washington College Film Series presents Personal Services, directed by Terry Jones of Monty Python fame. Like the Python series, the film has been called "a slapstick, slightly naughty party." The film stars Julie Walters as a businesswoman entering the

Monday Jan. 30

The Concert Series begins invited to attend.

Weekend Jan. 27, 29, 30 a spring semester of music entertainment with the awar winning guitarist William Kanengiser. Mr. Kanengi will be performing in the bson Fine Arts Center at 81 Arelated article appears on thi

Wednesday Feb. 1

The Pan Hellenic Tea lucrative world of prostitution. kick off this year's sorority ru season from 9-11 PM in Hynsi Lounge. All those females intel ested in the sorority systemar

"Stitched Stories" with the Scotts: exploring the Afro-American tradition

by Michele M. Volansky

American culture has and discussion, on the influences from our European ancestors. Yet, a sizeable portion of the traditions which exist in the United States have come from societies other than those in Europe, most notably from Africa. With this in mind, the Washington College Committee on Afro-American Culture evolved to explore these other influences and to celebrate them in the same manner which the European cultures have enjoyed for decades. The Committee has developed a series of lectures, films and exhibits titled. Beyond Europe: The Influence of Afro-American Heritage on American Culture."

One of the first introductions the Washington College community will have to the works and plans prepared by the Committee will be the opening lecture and art exhibit of and Joyce J. Scott on January twenty-sixth. These two unique artists, a mother and daughter team from Baltimore joining for this particular show, will dis-

titled, "Stitched Stories."

Elizabeth T. Scott began been based, in terms of study quilting, for which she has gained national recognition, at the age of nine. This first quilt was completed after fifty years, gaining the title, Fifty Year Quilt. Works contained in this exhibit include quilts Covered Wagon, Joyce's Quilt and Stamp and Flags and her wall hangings Sick Eye, Infected Eye, Fish. and Knots. Her work has been displayed at the Smithsonian Institution, (at the Folk Life University, Shelby State College, Florida A and M, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Studio Museum in Harlem and the Pratt Manhattan Center Gallery, Scott's works heln to preserve not only the ancient tradition of quilting, but allow for insight in to the contributions blacks have made in the culture and tradition of the United States.

Elizabeth Scott's daughthe works by Elizabeth T. Scott ter, Joyce, is a successful artist Caldwell Tradition: in her own right. She works in what she describes as "a mixed Artists" on Thursday, January media, visual and performance." Her visual art includes sculptures, fabrics and beadplay their works in an exhibit work, including necklaces, which play a key role in the "Stitched Stories" exhibit. Her performance work includes her writing collaboration with ac tress Kay Lawal. Together, they call themselves the "Thunder Thigh Revue" and have gained much acclaim for their first work, "The Women of Substance," which deals with food, fat and the refrigerator. Much of the issues thewriting team deals with relate to women.

Her work has appeared in the Baltimore Museum of Festival in 1983) Johns Hopkins Art, the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Boston Museum of Fine Art, the Virginia Museum of Fine Art and, most recently, in the "Art is a Verb" exhibit at the Maryland Institute College of Art. Among others, her works, Fantasy Necklace, Necklace, Motherhood 2000, Caldwell-Scott Quilt and Double Helix will be shown in the "Stitched Stories" exhibit.

Joyce Scott will also present a lecture titled, "The Scott-Generations of Afro-American twenty-sixth at 7 PM in the Sophie Kerr Room. A public reception for the artists and the opening of the exhibit will Joyce J. Scott works on her unique creations to be shown in the Stitched Stories exhibit running from January 26-February 26. follow in the Gibson Fine Arts hibit will run through Febru-Center at 8:30 PM.. The ex- ary twenty sixth.

Afro-American History Month Events

The following is a list of at 7:30 PM in Hynson Lounge. dents Gina Braden and Thea the events scheduled by the Committee on Afro-American Culture for the series "Beyond Europe: The Influence of Afro- Music Department titled "Uni-American Heritage on American Culture" running from January 26-March 29, 1989. The Series is funded through grants from the Kent County Arts Council, the Maryland Gibson Fine Arts Center. Council on the Humanities, the Washington College Lecture Committee, the Sophie Kerr Committee, the Film Society, the Art Exhibits Committee, the Music Department, the History Department, the SGA and the offices of the President and Jean of the College

Wednesday Feb. 8 William James Forum Lecture: "Africana Philosophy Today" given by Lucius Outlaw

Wednesday Feb. 15 Lecture presented by the versal Characteristics of Afro-American Music" by Dominique Rene de Lerma in Norman erary House. James Theatre at 7:30 PM with a reception to follow in the

Tues.-Thurs. Feb. 21-23 Film titled "A World Apart" to be shown on Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:30 PM in at 7:30 PM in Norman James Norman James Theatre and on Theatre and will be followed by Thursday at 4 PM. The Lecture a reception in Hynson Lounge. Committee will present a discussion of the film on Thursday at 7:30 PM. Admission for the film is $2. $1 for students

Monday Feb. 27 Washington College stu-

Bournazian will present a multi-media exploration of women in music titled "Rhapsody in Black: Afro-American Musicians from 1900 to the Present" at 4:30 PM in the Lit-

Tuesday Feb. 28

A symposium with members of the faculty titled "Beyond Europe: the Influence of Afro-American Heritage on American Culture" will be held

Wednesday March 29

Joyce Scott will present a piece titled "Genetic Engineering, Genetic Interference" at 8 PM in Gibson Fine Arts Center Admission is $3, $2 for students.

A Shear Design

Tuesday-Saturday

Convenient Parking

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md: 21620

Janie Thompson

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport

1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

HELPIII

The ELM is looking for a cartoonist. The position will give both money and prestige to its holder. Submit samples to Jennifer Harrison, Michele Volansky or to the ELM via student mail.

Coffee House's hours are reduced nights are scheduled fo

by Patricia Karnes

The Coffee House, because a proposed budget for the fiscal year was denied, has had to cut backs, the Coffee House wil back its hours of business. Lack of student use of the facility is a major determining factor. Labor and maintenance costs of the Coffee House have far exceeded the allowable level.

ers, such as WC's own "The New hours are 8:00 p.m. - 1:00 Incorrigibles", "49 Reasons", A.M. on the weekends, instead Bill Breslin, The Tom Larson of 1:00 P.M. - 1:00 A.M. on Blues Band and many more, Saturday and 3:00 P.M. -11:00 are booked for the semester P.M. on Sunday. Pizza service will only be available from 9:00 P.M. -11:00 P.M.. Non-alcohol tage of the upcoming events.

continued from page one

Cardinal Dorms, which will over the vacation

thetic improvement to the campus." weeks, except for outside the

The Constance Stewart take longer. Repairs to the Larabee Creative Arts Center, ter was formerly a water stor- next, a mall with trees and weather allow. "With all Caroline dormitory and its which will include a small gal- age plant. bathrooms were also completed lery, a drawing and painting classroom, and basement facili Washington College replaced telephone poles and ceramics, is scheduled for completion in January, 1990. Diabove ground wires with underground wiring, which Clint Baer, the Director of Special it will be ready for use Spring from Hodson to Washington the walkways etc., are to be

day and Tuesday nights

Jeff DeMoss, Director of the Coffeehouse, strikes a pose. Coffeehouse hours have recently changed due to budget cutbacks and decline in student support.

The Dunning Hall renoties for printing, sculpture, and vations are scheduled to be ter, the parking lot, and Wilfinished June 30, and over the liam Smith. summer a pedestrian walkway rector Baer confidently predicts constructed, which will extend Projects, calls "the major es- semester next year. This cen- Avenue. The summer after repaired as soon as time and birth of Alexandre Bishop.

groomed lawns will be created during relandscaping between the Academic Resources Cen-

Existing eyesores, holes in electrical work that's been the grounds have been kep surprisingly well," comm Joe Cathers, Assistant Su visor of Building and Grou

Congratulations to I Bishop and his family on

Mom's Cookie Jar

Welcome back from the holidays. Hopefully everone enjoyed themselves among family and friends

Now it's time to get back into the swing of things and buckle down once again. For some of us this is the last mile, but for the rest its only just begun. At any rate, I hope that you will have a good semester

To kick ofrf the new year we will be having a steamship buffet on February 1, 1989. The menu will consit of the following: roasted steamship round of beef, omelet bar, baked potato bar, steamed mandarin vegetables, hot rolls and irresistable strawberries in chocolate.

Until next week Mam

Personal Services

... Inspired by the life of Cynthia Payne, Englands's most notorious madam, Personal Services is an amusing and fascinating portrayal of the odder, kinkier side of English Life. This rude comedy mocks the exquisite manners of England's upperclass gentlemen as they go about their naughty pursuits . . .

Norman James Theater, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, January 27 + Sunday, January 29 Monday, January 30

> Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All others $2.00

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

lume 60, Number 14

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 3, 1989

ashington College security guard gives tickets to students who have violated parking regulations. ing on campus is a rising issue with those who feel that the regulations are being unfairly Federal Register including:

Chief of Police voices concerns

by Tracey Connell Chestertown Chief of Po-

Stetson raised various coninvolving the Washing College campus and stuts in an interview this past

The issues involved proper of the crosswalk which Route 213 and ervation of Maryland's alcoonsumption laws. Stetson commented briefly on stutabuse of illegal narcotics. According to Washington ege Chief of Security, Jerry rick, Stetson requested an view with an Elm reporter he end of Fall Semester. se of time restrictions he delayed in making a statetuntilthis week. Although sortment of Chestertown dent complaints prompted request, the Chief of Police

tive was to remind students of their responsibilities as citizens Some students think that

Washington College is a country unto itself, exempt from other laws, but it's not. It is part of the State of Maryland and we expect people to obey Maryland's laws. I also want to emphasize that the students are citizens of Chestertown, with all of those rights and privileges, but with those rights and privileges they have to take responsibility

One main issue for Stetson was the crosswalk. While conceding that this year shows a considerable improvement, he is still concerned about students who apparently either don't look before crossing or expect cars to stop at unreasonable distances with inadequate notice. He stressed that his main objec- recommended that individuals pause and wait until they have a clear area and all oncoming automobiles are slowing to a

> Stetson referred to Mary land statutes which outline the duties of a pedestrian. "A pedestrian may not suddenly leave a curb or other place of safety and walk or run into the path of a vehicle which is so close that it is impossible for the driver to yield.

Maryland vehicle laws also state that individuals are required to look for oncoming cars before crossing and that, even though a pedestrian has right of way on a crosswalk, it cannot be taken as an absolute Both parties involved, those crossing and individuals approaching in automobiles, are

continued on page 16

EPA fines college $150,000 for PCB transformer violations

by Ryder Daniels

Using the Freedom of Information Act and sources at the Environmental Protection Agency, it was discovered on Wednesday, February 1 that the EPA has filed a complaint of $150,000 against Washington College in response to the surprise inspection of June 6, 1988 that revealed violations of the Federal laws on PCB transformers. The complaint was received by the President's Office January 11, and according to Gene Hessey, Director of Finance, information to the community would be delayed indefinitely.

In a law suit issued January 5, the EPA cites Washington College for failing to comply with PCB transformer regulations published in the July 1985 failure to post warning signs at transformer entrances, failure to keep quarterly logs monitoring potential PCB leakage, and failure to notify authorities, especially local fire fighting forces, of potential danger.

The College had 20 days to file an answer to the suit, however the special attorneys hired by the school in this case Venable, Baetjer & Howard of Baltimore have already requested an extension to better consider the school's options.

PCB -TRANSFORMER

that the EPA has levied its fine.

formers are in the basements of Gibson, Cain, Caroline/Queen

continued on page 15

filed by February 21.

The College can ask for a settlement hearing where the penalties can be negotiated or they can argue the case before a federal law judge who will rule on the case and access penalties where applicable, including mandatory compliance with the law and a monetary fine. In many cases, the fine is reduced if the offender complies and cooperates with the EPA including offering seminars and workshops to educate the community about PCB and other issues. Washington College is now in full compliance with the EPA regulations and having removed the pole transformers already, plans to spend the additional $300,000 necessary to have all six of the remaining PCB transformers replaced by May of 1990. Gene Hessey does not expect the full fine of $150,000, but both the attorneys for the school and officials at the EPA indicate that the EPA is being "very tough" on these issues. The EPA adds that there "is always some sort of monetary fine.

PCB is a fire retarding additive used in the cooling oil of older transformers there are three main dangers involved with the leakage of fluids containing PCB: First, it can contaminate the environment and make its way into the food chain. Second, ingesting it directly or eating food contaminated with PCB can cause liver damage and cancer. Third, if there was a serious fire in which a PCB transformer ruptured, PCB at high temperatures becomes a lethal dioxin that directly threatens fire fighters as well as residents. The six remaining trans-

PCB and responsibility

In a letter to President Cater last year, the Environmental Protection Agency wrote "Laboratory samples taken at your facility indicate high concentrations of PCB. These high concentrations are of primary concern and require immediate action ..

The EPA followed this on January 5, 1989 by filing a complaint of $150,000 against Washington College. Interestingly, this sum is $50,000 more than Barry Chambers of the EPA predicted in October. He said, "The fines can be big, anywhere from ten to one hundred thousand dollars." The fine of $150,000 indicates that the PCB problem at Washington College is more serious than they Administrators such as Clint Baer and Gene Hessey have a great responsibility to the students, faculty and staff who are part of Washington College. They also have a responsibility to the community as a whole. Part of this responsibility includes meeting laws passed by the EPA concerning PCB. Laws were established in 1979, 1985 and as late as 1987 obligating the College to inform the EPA and the local fire marshal of the presence of PCB transformers, and requiring that they be removed by October of 1990. Unfortunately for the College, these laws were not obeyed, and the EPA payed a random, surprise visit on June 6, 1988 that revealed their violations. Washington College was not cited for polluting the environment, but for administrative infractions. According to Clint Baer, "we simply didn't know about the laws,"[The Elm, 9/23] And because of this ignorance, the school is fined $150,000, a sum that certainly could be used in a better way. Ignorance is hardly an acceptable

In addition, they have an obligation to inform the public. Certainly PCB is a spot on the record of this growing institution, but neglecting their obligation to tell the community is wrong. According to Gene Hessey, information to the public about the problem would be delayed indefinitely. Without the Freedom of Information Act, the EPA's findings would still be a secret, and even those who live with PCB in their basements would not know

And then there is the question of danger. All problems and dangers of PCB are not yet known, but the Center for Disease Control considers it to be dangerous if ingested at 100 parts per million. Fifty to five hundred ppm is considered PCB contaminated, and over 500 ppm is considered to be PCB. Washington College's level of PCB is 700,000 to 800,000 ppm. We are not dealing with a poison diluted in oil, this substance is 70 to 80 percent poison.

If the PCB were sealed in the transformers, and could not get out, only a serious fire could make this substance a danger to people in the building. Unfortunately, the PCB is leaking, in an undetermined amount in Queen Anne and Caroline basement and minimally in the other transformers. This raises the question of where the leakage is going, and why isn't it stopped.? The EPA doesn't know if the PCB has contaminated the environment because of this leakage, but the chances of this are high

Now the College is doing every possible thing to keep the transformers from becoming an imminent danger, and in compliance with the EPA, the transformers will be removed by 1990. However, the fact that this substance is housed in some of our dormitories, the building we dine in, our library and Gibson Fine Arts makes this an issue for the students. Ultimately we are the ones who will be affected if this substance becomes a threat, and the College has a responsibility to keep us informed, no matter how terrible the information is. The knowledge that the PCB is there, no matter how safe the EPA and the College assures us that we are, is still a difficult thing to accept.

W.C Play tryouts

The Actors Community Theater and the Washington College music and drama department are sponsoring a 1961 Pulitzer Prize winning play, entitled "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," Auditions will be held in Tawes Theater, in the Gibson Fine Arts Center. Audition dates are February 6 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and February from 7;30 to 9:00 p.m. Call backs will be held on February 8 and 9 at 6:30 p.m.

Those auditioning should come prepared to sing a short number, wither from the show, or a song of your choice. Scores for two songs from the show are on reserve in Miller Library. A script and a tape of the music for the show are also on reserve. Please bring music for the accompanist, unless you are singing one for the show songs Show dates are April 20 21, and 22. For further infor mation contact Vince or Lesli Raimond at 778-1100 or 778 1834, or Jasin Rubin (ext. 268 or Kathy Mills (ext. 358).

Freshman Poetry Reading on February 7 at 8:00 PM in the O'Neill Literary House.

Come to the

Helpline The Washington College

Helpline is looking for more volunteers to work on the hotline this semester. The identities of all volunteers and callers is confidential. Listeners are available Thursday through Monday from 9 p.m. to 12 a.m. The number for the hotline is 778-0206. For more information, contact Chris Schanno through student mail

COUNSELING STAFF at Washington College

Hutchison Bruce Mon., Tue., Wed. at Noon Phd. Walter Roemer Mon. 5-8:00 p.m.

By appointment Ext. 289 or 261

editors look for submissions

Broadsides

The Washington Coll Broadsides Poetry Seriesiss accepting submissions for spring semester 1989 sen Broadsides is a single publication of poetry or shi

For more information to submit a piece of work, tact Stephanie Hess, Circ Croot, or Kevin Holland student mail or place subo sions in the Literary Ho mailbox. Broadsides are sponson by the Washington Colle Writers' Union.

Julie Greene and Cathy L

Washington College Elm

| 3  | Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harris |
|----|-------------------------------|--------------------|
|    |                               |                    |
| ), |                               |                    |
| 4  |                               |                    |
| e. |                               |                    |
|    |                               |                    |
| 3- | Graphics Designer             | Todd No            |
| 3) |                               |                    |
|    | Managing Editor               | Bill Beeks         |
|    |                               |                    |
| -  | Circulation Manager           | James Sobes        |
| 1  | Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia G          |
|    |                               |                    |

How can the administration improve the racial imbalance at Washington College?

Changing W.C. itself would not raise minority student enrollment.

THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM

I grew up in and around haps 120 white girls in a class imore City. Every day, untilday I graduated from high ol, I took the public city es to and from school. And ryday, I was a minority. My school, the not-so-famous female Western High ol, had about two thousand dents. I'd estimate the rapercentages were 65% k.30% white, and 5% asian. as a vast minority. That sn't mean that I didn't enjoy

I keep stating that I must about being a minority in order to express how much of a shock h school-in fact, I wasn't Washington College was for me. ly aware that incredible Suddenly, all of my classmates al tensions lie between were white. Quite honestly, I'd ks and whites. The girls in never seen so many white people classes were friends, acin the same place at the same intances, and classmates, time-with the exception per-I guess I'd never really haps of a shopping mall or a ight about 2/3 of the class baseball game, come to think of ing darker skin. I graduated one of perabout it of 402. I must not have ever "culture shock" of being a really thought about it. After part of the overwhelming ma all, to someone who has spent jority here, I breathed a sigh of her entire life in a racially inte-grated city, "black" and "white" relief that the tedious Black are just words. They carry the same weight in my mind as words like "blond" and "bru-

History Month that arrived with every February was gone. I mean, in high school, we never had a White History Month, and I always thought it was a little offensive that they (school not have really ever thought officials) felt the need to separate what I felt was American History (specifically the outstanding efforts of Dr. M. L. King) into History Which Was Black and History Which Was

This outrageous phenomenon has, however, come to W. C., only now they're calling it Afro-American History Month. it, but like I said, I never thought We're being offered a full schedule including lectures, a film, an art exhibit, even (hold onto your hats) a Sophie Kerr Lecture. Is this going to be an annual thing, a valid attempt to broaden our horizons, prove to the world that W.C. is not racially discriminate, and perhaps attract more minority students? Or is it all just for this year, just to prove to Mr. Forbes that W.C. covers all aspects of the liberal-arts education, including Afro-American History?

Cindi Goss

So, how could the adminiready offer both merit- and need-based scholarships to minority students, so that idea is out. The atmosphere here is what one would expect from a small college town, so no major changes in W.C. itself would create a noticeable difference in minority student enrollment.

Perhaps it has something to do with the audience of potential applicants to W.C. Just a few days ago, a minority transfer student said to me, "I'd never even heard of Washington College before I transferred." If you want to know how to improve the racial imbalance at W.C., ask the minority students.

stration improve the racial Cindi Gossisa Sophomore imbalance at W.C.? They alphanning to major in German. Cindi Gossis a Sophomore

Gil Orser Freshman San Francisco, CA finitely recruit from other

Amy Scott Freshman Baltimore, MD

I think it would benefit the I think they can improve the The administration has to betts of the globe, so as to bring Washington College Commu-new perspectives. Washington College Commu-nity to have a racially balanced administration and student body. White students as well as fer the college or even the prominority students would benefit from a balanced campus community. Since our society is racially mixed, I see no reason for our campus not to be.

Larry Gewer Junior

racial imbalance situation by come more racially balanced. offering grants to underprivileged minorities who could ofgram some benefit or could obtain some benefit from the program. These people need the help to exploit their talents.

Charles Mellen Freshman New Jersey

Don Steele Sophomore Easton-on-the-Hill, England

Definitely offer better financial aid packages to different people and look past Baltimore for students

by Maggie Carr

Add to already existing scholarships

There is only so much at an administration can do change the ethnic distribuon a college campus. Obvisly, in a free society like our n, each person has the right choose what college or unitity he or she would like to ler; the Administration cansimply import minority dents, but must find ways to ttact, and capture the intert of, more of those students. fact, the Administration is ing just that, and almost erything else possible to prove the racial imbalance Washington College, but no atter what steps are taken take time. Considering that Kent County was the last area to desegregate in the United States, it is not surprising that there are so few minority students at the College. It is not a problem peculiar to Washington College alone; many other private, liberal arts colleges in Maryland and surrounding states are in the same position.

Thomas Logan

With increasing per-members of those groups, attracting more applicants from such backgrounds. It is a vicious cycle, and while the percentages are low, the rate of increase of those percentages will be proportionally low. However, the Administration is using several methods to speed up the process. For example, the Admissions Office uses college search services— most people fill out questionnaires in high school pertaining to college preferences-to locate members of minority groups interested in a college become more appealing to Admissions, the College has received over three hundred responses thus far, from members of minority groups in Maryland and Delaware.

There are also scholarships available for qualified Aside from creating members of racial minority new scholarships, or expandgroups based on academic performance and personal achievement, ranging from $1000 to full tuition. Seeking additional funding in order to raise the number of scholarships warded is one possible way to help improve any imbalance. Scholarships are awarded re-nority groups, the College will Coveney, Vice President of administration also offers a Non-Traditional Student program for Women and Ethnic Minorities, and non-traditional students are not required to take entrance tests, which may be culturally biased.

> ing existing ones. there is little else that the Administration can do to improve the racial imbalance at Washington College. The improvement will be grad-ual and should not be expected overnight.

Thomas Logan is a sophogardless of financial need, and more planning to major in phiwhat steps are taken, the latest step in the latest

PERSPECTIVE

In the World

UNITED STATES

The State Department has accused the Soviet Union of pursuing a "scorched earth" policy in Afghanistan as its troops withdraw to meet a

February 15 deadline. Former presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter are serving as co-chairmen on a commission that is attempting to establish a national health care system which would ensure access to medical care and be financed by employers and individuals with incomes 50% above the poverty level.

sources said Kenneth W. Starr, a conservative federal appeals court judge, has emerged as the leading candidate for solicitor

The Pentagon blocked more than 11, 500 from joining the armed forces last year because they tested positive for drug or alcohol abuse. Joel Steinberg, accused of child abuse and the murder of his 6 year-old child, was found guilty of first degree manslaughter.

Oliver North's trial began with the jury selection process Monday January 30.

SOVIET UNION An official Soviet delega-Bush administration tion has agreed to increase aid to the Kabul government.

Mikhail Gorbachev will visit Great Britain and Cuba in early April and West Germany in June. These trips were postponed with the Armenian earthquake disaster

WEST GERMANY Demonstrators in West Nazi SS officer gained 11 seats in a local legislature LEBANON

Lebanese Shiite Moslem factions signed a peace treaty to end nine months of fighting that has killed over 500 people. The pact says Syrian forces should control security in South Lebanon and Moslem areas of Beirut. A car bomb killed 2 people and wounded 17 in a Christian area in the capital's eastern

CANADA Prime Minster Mulroney Berlin are protesting an elec- has reshuffled his cabinet, in- compiled by Jacque Collins

tion in which an extreme right- cluding new energy, defer wing party headed by a former and environment ministers an effort to deal with finance

> A Canadian military pla crashed in heavy fog n Wainwright, Alaska killi eight soldiers and wound ten who were traveling to all Canada military exercise.

YUGOSLAVIA A Yugoslavian milib leader warned that the am forces might play a more ac role in putting a stop to class between Serbian and Cross

Dear Duke-- Please ignore your advisors

Governor Michael Dukakis State House Boston, Massachusetts

Dear Governer Dukakis:

There is a rumor going about that you are thinking of running for president again in

Wendy Kloiber

1992. Alot of people have interpreted your decision not to run for governor of Massachusetts again as an indication that you want the freedom of time to prepare for another more important race. Some people say

all the parts that a second though, would anyone else? campaign would take into account earlier all the pressures and tactics of your opponent. You are a seasoned candidate now and should, according to your advisors, be ready for the sucker punch this time

There is only one thing I have to say to all of this. From one Democrat to another, please do what you should have done months ago, and ignore your advisors. In other words, for the sake of us all, don't run again. Don't take this the wrong way. I have great admiration for you and your many accomplishments. I voted for you in the November election and if by some odd chance you were the Democratic candidate again in that now that you've gone 1992, I'd probably vote for you Bush, not to mention his vice-time you would have experience behind you, it is also true that you lost. The shadow of that loss will, as it always does in politics, haunt you for the rest of your career. You should have won this election. You had everything going your way, Bush's involvement in Reagan's skills, a eager party to help you, through the machine and know again. The real question is president, for four years. Education through

While it is true that this istakes, excellent debating and best of all, Dan Quayle. Somehow though, things got messed up and your lead in the polls dwindled until your vic tory could only come about through a miraculous change of heart in the American voting public. It didn't happen and now we have to deal with George ## discussion and debate Attention all students! the meeting. The subject for he said, "I [may] disapprove of

Stuart Neiman, the Freshman February 7th is The Direction Class President and three time National Forensics Champion. is establishing The Speaker's Corner at Washington College. What, you may ask, is the Speaker's Corner? The Speaker's Corner is a forum for public speaking and debate.

The Speaker's Corner will begin on Tuesday, February 7th. The format will be a biweekly discussion night. One evening on the first and third Tuesday of every month students and faculty will meet in Hynson Lounge to discuss topics from a general subject area. The discussion will be ignited and guided by several five minute speeches given by students who sign up in advance. These speakers may discuss any issue within that week's subbe posted a week in advance of of America in the 1990s. All students are encouraged to participate. Faculty participation will be limited to postspeech questioning and discussion. In this forum, students and faculty are to be considered as equals and respected as equals. The goal is freedom of expression and the free exchange of ideas. This forum will challenge all who participate and will leave everyone a little wiser. I challenge each and every student to come to this forum at least once. guarantee that you will be allowed to speak and you will be heard. Voltaire put it best when what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say

Monte Bourjailly

The Forensics Club provides a valuable service to the students of Washington College. Education through discussion and debate is the primary goal of this club. The club is also valuable because it is developed by students for students. The philosophy of the Speaker's Corner is that everybody has an opinion about something. These people should have the right to speak out in a setting other than the classroom. These people should be given an audience that is involved. Exercise your right to speak your mind. Take part in a club that challenges you to challenge yourself. Join the Speaker's Corner!

This was the first national for today' policies. 1992 pro election I ever voted in and I really felt the time had come for a Democratic presidency. I had beautiful visions of what it would be like to be out from under the conservative wing of the Republicans. On election night, actually to be truthful weeks before that. I saw my dreams slowly crumbling into dust. I guess it just wasn't the time. Maybe it is for the better. since the next four years are liable to be filled with the disastrous results of Reagan's 'live presidency.

cratic victory, unless you cide to run again. So please

Dukakis, take the advice the Gary Hart and Jesse Jacks ignored and don't put your or us through another grueli and unsuccessful election ye Learn the one thing Wal Mondale did successfully forfi Democratic Party, disappear think we will all be happier you do, at least in regards to

BIRTHDAY BALL GUIDE

Saturday, February 18, 1989

Step back in time as Washington crosses the Delaware River

by Troy Petenbrink

It'shere again-George thington's Birthday, old to warm these winter president Stuart Nieman.

oths in celebration.

1:00 A.M. in the Cain Athletic Center on Saturday, February "This year's ball will put the campus into the swing of "gethas hit 157 yrs. and it's things," says Freshman class attract a wider range of stu- of the Delaware."

Break out the gowns, la-will be held from 9:00 P.M. - to be a blast down with the best in music. the Alumni House. The Freshman class hopes the

Tickets are on sale now

Information on ticket ers will be rocking the house sales will be available through you have walked through a time more contemporary sounds will will be "Washington's Crossing drink, a few of Washington's dies and rent those tuxedos, and will be $20.00 student make the center attraction of them dancing to the sounds of The 1989 Birthday Ball men—this year's ball is going couples and $100.00 for pa- this year's event, along with a James Brown fantastic light show.

And so you will not think portal or feel some one has The theme of the Ball slipped something in your men got their rivers confused and crossed the Chester, don't A few of the boats will be surprised if you see a few of

BIRTHDAY BALL 1989

Can't find a date? Here's how:

Once upon a time, there was this dating service.

by Will Beekman and Anne Lindenbaum

were two students at a small liberal arts college on the Eastern Shore who wanted very much to attend the black-tie formal held in the college gym-

Johnny and Sally (names changed to protect the dateless) were good friends, but they were not sure if they wanted to be "better" friends. Johnny wanted to ask Sally to the Ball, but he was afraid Sally would get the wrong impression "I want to ask Sally to the Ball but I'm afraid she'll get the wrong impression," he confided to his friends, Marty and Bob. Sally also wanted to ask Johnny to the Ball but, alas,

Sally was also afraid "I want to ask Johnny to the Ball, but I'm afraid to," Sally told her friends, Midge and

So Johnny did not ask Sally, and Sally did not ask Johnny. They tried to find other dates, but, darn it, everybody else already had a date to the Ball. Johnny and Sally were the only ones not going

"What will I do, Midge and Jane?" Sally asked despondently "Gee Sally, we don't know We already have dates."

Sally was depressed. She couldn't sleep at all. One night while she was watching Group Family Medical Divorce Court, she saw The Ad:

"Are you lonely? Do you stay up late at night worrying that you'll never find Mr. Right? Can't find the right man for that special Ball? Well, your troubles are OVER! At Together Dating Service, we scientifically blood type, and nose length. Once upon a time there your video tape session. You won't be sorry! Sally sat up and stared gleefully at the TV. "I'll call right now!" she from the Together Dating Serv-room said. She picked up the phone and made an appointment for her video tape session.

Hi! I'M MARY JANE, AND I'M

A SLIM, YOUNG, ATTRACTIVE

AND CARING. I'M LOOKING FOR A MAN WHO'S READY TO MAKE IT IN THE WORLD.

GIRL WHO IS SENSITIVE

the phone to make his video tape session appointment. Sally each had their first dates

"This could be my lucky Just call 555-NOSE today for day!" he said as he raced over to Biff as he slammed his thirty-

A week later, Johnny and

"Gee, I hope my date Biff's a real babe," Sally said as she Johnny?"

second can into his forehead Sally obliged and brought him a thirty-third can. Meanwhile, in Johnny's

"Hi Rhonda, I'm Johnny."

HI! I'M BERT AND I'M A YOUNG SENSITIVE HANDSOME BACHELOR WHO CAN OFFER A SENSITIVE AND CARING WOMAN A SENSITIVE RE-LATION SHIP. DID I MENTIO THAT I'M ON MY WAY TO BECOMING A LAWYER? mmm

mmm

Luckily, Johnny also happened to be watching Group Family Medical Divorce Court rack pull up.

that night. "Are you lonely? Do you stay up late at night worrying that you'll never find Miss Right? Can't find the right woman for that special Ball? Well, your troubles are over! At Together Dating Service, we scientifically match couples by zodiac sign, blood type, and nose length. Just call 555-NOSE today for your video tape session. You won't be sorry!"

watched the bright red truck with the mag wheels and gun joked Gee, I hope my date

Rhonda's a real babe," Johnny said as he watched the bright blue truck with mag wheels and gun rack pull up. "Hi Biff, I'm Sally!"

"Muuuuuuuhhhhh," replied Biff. Sally offered Biff a bever-

"Beer," he grunted.

Sally brought Biff a beer. And another beer. And another. Atthat, Johnny satup and Soon Biff was slamming cans

"No I'm the real thing," he

"Well, like I'm looking for Johnny, have you like seen

It's going to be a long night, thought Johnny, as he tried to explain to Rhonda that he was, in fact, Johnny

Two hours later, Sally was out of beer, and Johnny was just plain bored. "I'm out of beer," said

Sally. "Uuuuuuuhhhhhhhh," replied Biff. "See ya." Biff staggered to his red

The End

agains his head. truck which happened to "Muuuuuuuhhhhh," said parked next to Rhonda's bl

> Johnny desperate pointed out the window. "Ha there's a truck just like you

Rhonda!" Rhonda was ecstation "Eyoooooh my god!" cri "Like hi, are you like Rhonda. "Like maybe that ny?"

Johnny's truck!"

Johnny just rolled

Rhonda ran outside It was destined to hi pen. Rhonda and Biff's eyes It was love at first sight. Rhon drove Biff home, as Biff h locked his keys inside his trul Johnny sighed as watched the blue truck to away from the curb. Sally sighed, too

"What will I do," cri Johnny, as he closed his don "What will I do," wai Sally, as she closed her doo Both Sally and John went to sleep, sad and alon The next day, Sally Johnny saw each other is new light. They traded th Together Dating Service :

ries and laughed heartily "Biff wasn't right for anyway," said Sally "Neither was Rhon added Johnny. Suddenly Johnny a Sally had a wild idea. "Let's go the Ball gether," they simultaneous blurted Again, Sally and John ughed heartily. Sally and Johhny agr to go to the Ball TOGETHE They had a great time w Midge and Jane and Martya Bob, and everyone lived has pily ever after.

NEED A TUX?

WHY NOT STOP IN AND GIVE A LOOK AT OUR LARGE SELECTION OF TUX RENTALS

Bramble's Traditional Clothing

For Men and Women

Downtown Chestertown 778-6090

Be the belle of the ball with sparkle, shine

by Judy Summers

With the Birthday Ball apidly approaching, it is a good tea to start thinking about how should dress for the occa-

Although almost anyhing goes these days, fashions change and keeping up to dividuals

Women's styles seem to actuate more than men's do. do opinions concerning them salesperson at Royal Formal nd Bridal at the Salisbury Mall id that women are definitely earing dresses shorter, that at or above the knee

She also noted that high/ whemlines, where the skirt sbout six inches higher in the nt, are in fashion. Hoops nd full skirts are never out. resses are flashier and they tightly

Annapolis Formal, which located at 95 and Bay Ridge ad, indicated that beads and uins are in demand. All igths of dresses, short and length, as well as floor, are entable

Ms. Jeanne Davis of sulah P. Jump Dress Shop on ak Row agreed that big skirts t in vogue this year, along th frills and the Romantic ik. Soft materials are prefer-

Colorwise, any shade of en, winter white, and black bbig. One can always wear a atk skirt with a nice blouse dmake it very dressy by using nous accessories. Jersey pedresses that gather around waist and fan out are also A clerk at The Butterfly sh on High Street agreed th Ms. Davis. A shimmering ise or a fancy sweater with lack skirt or even silk pants old be acceptable.

Short or long lace skirts th a satin or lace camisole are worth considering. Cock- gestions. Colors and frills are more traditional formal wear. High Street has a section specializing in vintage clothing, which according to employee are wearing. the late 1800s to the late 1960s Clothing is available from ad early 70s. According to the proprietor, styles go around like anything else; they always come back again.

On shoulder, halter, and strapless dresses are popular sellers, as are sequins, beads velvets and tafetta. For the last couple of years everybody has shied away from polyester because they've wanted more natural materials, like satins and tafetta. New dresses made with these materials are hard to find without spending a lot of money, but vintage clothes have natural material for less money.

As well, these dresses, along with the tails, tuxes, and various other accessories available, are collectibles and may be resold

The most popular of men's fashions, according to Mr. Rich Bramble of Rich Bramble's Traditional Clothing on High Street, is just a basic black tuxedo, although grays are popular too According to Annapolis Formal, Christian Dior tuxes are ordered most often. Notch lapels are desirable, noted a spokesman for Royal Formal Both single and double breasted jackets are popular; in fact, double breasted jackets. according to the spokesman, have made quite a comeback. He also suggested tone on tone fabrics, which have subtle stripes because of two different weaves in the fabric. Mr. Bramble went on to offer some other fashion sug- from which to choose.

tail party and dance wear are a outfor shirts; plain white shirts plausible alternative to the with either wing or regular collars are preferable. Tails Scottie's Shoe Store on can be very stylish. Vests and neckties are not nearly as popular as the essential cumberbunds and bowties. These are Ms. Anna Scott, many people available in most any color to ing to Ms. Scott, plain pumps in solid colors are best. They may be flats and may have somewhat of a pointed toe if desired. To complete any outfit with class, shoes may be dyed to preciation for colored stone match the dress and handbag. Men's shoes are best in a plain the most popuar colors. Sus- as well as the tuxes. penders are optional.

Birthday Ball, one also has a always elegant. variety of accessory alternatives match the ladies' dress, athough black dressy style, confirmed red and burgundy seem to be Mr. Bramble, and can be rented

Most shop owners con-Aside from the basic apsider rhinestones to be "in" in parels one must consider in terms of jewelry. Then again, really are no guidelines any order to be fashionable at the as Ms. Davis put it, pearls are Forney's Jeweler's on Cross feel comfortable in is fine.

with the ever popular basics bangle bracelets, gold chains, gold ball earrings, and diamonds and pearls of any sort, there seems to be a better apjewelry such as rubies, sapphires, and blue topaz. Silver is popular too, he added, but not something one should wear

Ms. Davis offered an alternative suggestion for those type look around the neck. Adding a scarf around the neck or wrist can also be attractive

at a formal

Other accessories, such as sashes, are always good and can be made to go with the Romantic look. Employees at The Butterfly Bush also suggested dressy belts, assorted evening bags, and textured Workers at Annapolis Formal said that hats are back for both men and women.

According to the owner of the vintage clothing section of Scottie's Shoe Store, cocktail hats with formal war are elegant, but may be considered a little too daring for some. In fact, Ms. Davis indicated that they may not be appropriate for Gloves, as well, have made a comeback. Long gloves seem to be more popular than short and are commonly worn with strapless or halter gowns. They look great and they really finish the attire, remarked Ms.

A salesperson at Royal Formal and Bridal summed up this year's formal fashion trends best when she stated that there

Anything that you think Mr. Elroy Boyer of you look good in and that you

Celebrate Washington's Crossing of the Delaware

BIRTHDAY BALL

Bobby and the Believers

Saturday, February 18,1989

Nine o'clock Cain Athletic Center

Tickets Available at Student Affairs Office

$20.00 a couple and $10.00 a person Join us at the Coffee House Afterwards

Modern Amenities and Old Fashion Charm

301-778-5557

2 MILES SOUTH OF CHESTERTOWN ON ROUTE 213 CALL FOR BROCHURE & RESERVATION

BIRTHDAY BALL 1989

Restaurant Guide

A Question of Cuisine: Make Birthday Ball

by Anne Lindenbaum

While Chestertown may be a small, quiet town, one should not underestimate its possibilities. One thing Chestertown, along with the rest of the Eastern shore, does not lack is fine restaurants Whether your style is formal and lavish, intimate and quiet or inexpensive and relaxed, there is something here for you.

> The Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon St., Chestertown 778-0188

The small size of the Ironstone Cafe offers subtle elegance and intimacy. Although the menu varies nightly, it is able to satisfy anyone's taste, whether it be for beef, chicken, or seafood. Prices for entrees range from $11.00 to $20.00. As this restaurant tends to be crowded on Birthday Ball night, it is wise to make reservations immediately.

The Old Wharf Inn Cannon St., Chestertown 778-3566

mering view of the water while evening for its guests.

dining - and not having to drive Being able to enjoy a shim- offers an informal and relaxed

a long distance to see it- is a true gift. Located on the Chester River, the Old Wharf Inn

The menu runs the gamut from fried chicken to veal parmesan to your choice of seafood. Prices range from $6.95 to $20.00. Petite portions are available, as well, for those with more delicate appetites. Reservations are not a quired unless you are going in large group.

The Imperial Hotel 208 High St., Chestertown 778-5000

In a setting of refine dining and elegance, the Imp rial Hotel offers unique dishe such as Norwegian salmon wi oyster sauce and filet migno stuffed with crabmeat, ranging in price from $23.00 to $26.00 Because of the restaurant's lo prestige, reservations are

> Rolph's Wharf Rt. 1, Chestertown 778-3227

Similar in character as price to the Old Wharf, Rolph Wharf offers a relaxing atmo phere by the Chester River, Rolph's Wharf Road. A variety of entrees, in

> Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

> Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

CHAMPAGNE BRIDAL EXPO

Sunday, February 12, 1p.m.-4p.m. Bridal Fashion Show - Exhibitors Champagne - Hor d'oeuveres $10 per person WIN A 3 DAY, 2 NIGHT HONEYMOON! For tickets or exhibitor information please call,

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIP FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave Chestertown, Md. 21620 Janie Thompson 788-0898

Corsages & Boutonnieres for the Birthday Ball!

Roses, Sweetheart Roses, Mixed Spring Carnations, Orchids.

Order Early

Prices starting at $2.95 fresh and silk

15% off to students with this ad and 10

"A trip to Elburn's is worht it for their low prices and high quality."

778-2200

BIRTHDAY BALL 1989

Night memorable with waterfront dining

specials add to the menu as well. As with the Old Wharf, you should make reservations

There are also many beautiful restaurants outside the Chestertown area that are popular on Birthday Ball night.

The Kitty Knight House Rt. 213 (south), Georgetown 648-5305

This historically signifi cant restaurant is set on the Sassafras River about twentyfive minutes from Chestertown. Colonial in decor, the Kitty Knight House offers seafood, veal and steak entrees, ranging in price from $10.50 to $26.00 For a visually impressive evening, it is worth the drive. Res ervations are necessary.

> The Granary Rt. 213 (south), Georgetown 648-5566

Like the Kitty Knight

cluding steak, seafood, and House, The Granary also sits pasta, are available. Nightly on the Sassafras River Huge glass windows enhance the view of the river, making it especially beautiful. The restauwhen arriving with a large rant specializes in Eastern shore seafood, but includes yeal. prime rib, and other non-seafood items on the menu. The price range is about the same as that of the Kitty Knight House. Reservations should be made early, especially for large

> Great Oak Landing Handy Point Road, Melitota 778-2100

Heading north on Rt. 213 Great Oak Landing is located at the end of Handy Point Road on the water. The informal, yet comfortable restaurant offers everything from hamburgers to

The restaurant is open every night until 9 P.M., and only requires reservations if you are arriving in a party of nine or more people.

The Narrows off Rt. 50, south of the Kent Narrows Bridge

While drinking fine wines may be an integral part of a romantic evening, please take care not to drink and drive.

827-8113

Located on the water, The Narrows is ideal for a romantic evening. Offering entrees like cornish hen, pork tenderloin in oyster sauce, beef, and fresh fish, prices range from $8.75 to

Schaefer's Canal House Chesapeake City 885-2200

Set on the historic C&D $18.00. Reservations are sug- Canal, Schaefer's Canal

Housefirst opened for business in 1908 as a general store which stood on the wharf near the Chesapeake City locks. The restaurant offers such entrees as prime rib, duck, shrimp almondine, and flounder stuffed with crab imperial. Prices range from $15.00 to $26.00. Reser vations are necessary. Simply follow Rt. 213 north, cross the Chesapeake City bridge, and watch for signs to the right leading to the restaurant. The forty-minute drive is worth it.

> The Bayard House 11 Bohemia Ave., S. Chesapeake City 885-5040

The other side of the C&D Canal boasts the historic district of Chesapeake City. Here, The Bayard House offers unique entrees such as braised pheasant with plums, lobster thermidore, and veal oscar. Prices range from, $16.95 to$23.95. Follow Rt. 213 north, and watch for signs on the left for the historic district of South Chesapeake City just before the bridge. Reservations are necessary

Come

Celebrate the Birthday Ball

with us

at the New

River Inn Restaurant on the Chester River

Custom Made Gowns

Wendy Snow 778-6879

Inexpensive

Fin Fur Feather Inn

424 Bayside Ave. Rock Hall, Md. 639-7454

Valentine's Day Special!

Specializing in Fresh Seafood!

Come and visit us before the Birthday Ball!

THE RIVER INN

ROLPH'S WHARF

Waterfront Dining . Fireside Lounge Saturday Night Entertainment

> River Inn Restaurant 778-3227

Country Inn

778-198A

Friday: 'All You Can Eat' Steamed Shrimp

Night $9.95

Saturday: 778-1133 Land & Sea Buffet

Marina

$13.95

Reservations accepted now Live Entertainment

Men's lacrose coach Terry Corcoran, "The team here could not have achieved all of its sucesses without the assistant coaches, and the players giving 110%"

Corcoran named to coach US World team in '90

by Joe Van Name Terry Corcoran, the head coach of Washington Colleges Men's Lacrosse Team, was recently selected as the head coach of the 1990 U.S.A. World

The World Team is made up of the best players in the U.S. whether in college or

The 1990 games are to be should prove to be quite an event. The participants are to be the U.S.A. team, Australia, Canada, England, and a Native American Team. The tryouts for the team are to be held this summer at Loyola College in Baltimore There are to be between 130-140 players trying out for the 24-26 snots on the team. The

Since the game is to be played under international rules there will be no substitution horn. As Coach Corcoran says "versatility is the key to playing under international

The game moves faster than the college game. It is very similar to the type of games played under the experimental rules in last falls lacrosse tournament held here at W.C

Coach Corcoran will be sisted by Harly Marshall the Head Coach of Maryland Lacrosse Club, along with Mike Waldvogle the Head Coach at Yale University.

The team will have to work hard to try and keep up their record of only one loss in the history of the tournament. attributes the Coach Corcoran Coach Corcoran is also excited will be looking for are excellent about the possibility that the physical shape along with the team will be playing exhibition ability to play more then one games in Japan and China.

As Coach Corcoran says. being named coach of the U.S.A. World team is "a reflection on the lacrosse program at Washington College." He is also very grateful to his assistant coaches, the alumni, the school, and the student body the have made all of the success here possible He characterized the program here as a total team effort, not based on the individual but everyone for the team.

"The team here could not have achieved all of its sucessos without the assistant coaches, and the players giving 110% this is how Coach Corcoran described the reason for his selection as Head Coach. His selection is also good for the name of Washington College and reflects on the enormous support given to the teams throughout

Jamke & fellow hoopsters get back on track

The Sho'men basketball team has bounced back and now After a tough home loss last is now on a three game win with an impressive 19 point win.

Swarthmore Haverford and St. Mary's by an average of 35 stands set for the stretch run. points and looked impressive. Against Swarthmore week the team battled back and Chris Jamke paced the team 10 points respectively in the Keehan had another good showthe 95-66 win. Tom Anvil and Chris Brandt chipped in 11 and for the Sho'men because it ing in chalking up 17 points in improved the teams M.A.C. record to 3-2.

> On Saturday the Shoremen lit up the scoreboard with Anvil also had seven 116 points. The 116 points was

The team beat nine rebound showing. Tim boards. The win was important the highest total of the season and it doubled Haverford's 58 noints Jamke again was the offensive pacesetter with 22 points, Keehan and Andy Bauer filled up the nets from the outside with 18 and 17 points respectively. Tom Anvil scored in double figures with 10 points. Jamke was also the leader on the boards, "bulling" his way to seven rebounds.

Proposition 42 is a lousy proposition

1988 was a difficult year NCAA is not expecting an over- cussion concerns the idea that for college athletics and many individual programs. The "death penalty" rose to prominence in the NCAA. punishing many major univer sities. Oklahoma and Oklahoma State were targeted for

Brett Lankford

football violations, while the University of Kansas lost the chance to defend their basket ball championship after being banned from post-season play. The use of steroids was discovered to be a major problem in many different college sports. The Big East was forced to institute a one-game suspension as a result of constant fighting in conference games. The NCAA were hoping 1989 would avoid controversy in college athletics. Unfortunately, these hopes have been dashed early in the year. College basketball is in the middle of a major debate over a new rule, Proposition 42

This new rule is part of a newfound commitment to academic achievement among colgrades, but they are hoping to force the athletes to realize the importance of studies. Proposition 48 was the first rule geared in this direction, stating that students with either a low grade point aver age or a poor SAT score must sit out until the grades are improved. Proposition 42 is supposed to coexist with Prop. 48, taking it one step further. This new rule suggests that the students failing to meet the previous requirements should not be allowed scholarships to attend the schools, thus ending their academic career along with their athletic career

Proposition 42 has caused a major conflict of opinion. John Thompson, coach of Georgetown, walked off the court in one game to boycott the rule. Other coaches, such as John Chaney of Temple and Dale Brown of Louisiana State, have also been outspoken in their complaints about the rule.

Other colleges, including those in the Atlantic Coast Conference, have voted in favor of lege basketball players. The Proposition 42. The major diswhelming improvement in the SAT's are biased against blacks, thus restricting their chances of both an education and a career in sports. Cries of racism have been heard from certain people in the NCAA, including Thompson and Chaney. It is very admirable of the NCAA to make an effort to support academics. Proposition 48 has been a wonderful start to the growing commitment to academics. Many basketball players have taken the year off from the sport to improve their academic standing. Any rule that encourages a student/athlete to concentrate on their books is working. Proposition 48 is not too severe in its rules, since it encourages the student to work academically while still permitting them to play basketball under certain condi-

While Proposition 48 is fair in both intent and punishment, Proposition 42 is too severe on the college basketball player. This rule shows that the NCAA has become confused about its goal for the student in their opinion on the impor- English.

tance of educating those players who are academically inferior. While these propositions are supposed to reinforce the importance of academics to the athletes, they contradict themselves by taking this all-importanteducation away from them. Basketball is the only way many of these students can attend college, since many of them come from financially poor

Proposition 42 cancels out the good intentions of Proposition 48 by taking the education away from the student they are trying to help academically. At the same time, college basketball brings in revenue to the colleges and universities, thus allowing them to improve their academic facilities as well as their athletic facilities. Unless it is modified,

Proposition 42 will do more harm than good to college basketball, the education of the student/athlete, and the college or university itself.

Brett Lankford is a soathlete. They are inconsistent phmore who plans to major in St. Mary's visited the Cain court on Monday and were dealt

Although the Seahawks staved within 10 points most of the game they were no match for the Sho'men who pulled away in the last three minutes. The starting five of the Sho'men scored all but two of the teams 79 points. Bauer had a game high 21 points and 10 rebounds. He also paced the team's torrid free throw shooting going eight for eight.

In the St. Mary's game the team missed only four of 25 shots from the charity stripe. Anvil and Keehan had good games combining for 31 points. Chris Brandt had a very significant role with 13 points and a staggering 11 assists. Brandt also buried a 30 foot jumper to end the first half.

Chris Jamke continued his solid play with 12 points. In the three game win streak Jamke has been on fire averaging 17.5 points.

The eam now heads into its stretch run 14-4 and in second place n the M.A.C.

Ferber and student staff tend to aches and pains

With the high quality of the Washington College athletic well-trained medical staff to care for the athletes. That's what head athletic trainer John Ferber and his staff of student for the past 19 weeks of the '88-'89 school year.

Ferber graduated from Western Maryland College in 1985 with a degree in Physical Education specializing in Exercise Psychology. While at Western Maryland, Ferber was a two sport athlete playing both soccer and baseball. From there he went on to the University of Indiana for a graduate program in athletic training. At Indiana, Ferber gained experience by serving as the head baseball trainer and the assistant foothall trainer

After graduating in August of 1987, Ferber went on to

drens' Hospital Sports Medicine Clinic. While at a convention of the student trainers are pretion, a friend suggested that he teams, there comes a need for a apply for an opening at Wash- the program, "gives them the ington College and the rest is practical experience that the history

With all the different trainers have been providing impossible for one man to do the job alone. So last fall, Ferber began a student trainer program with just two students. By the end of the semester that number had risen to five and now it is up to eight. The student trainers, depending on their skill level work on athletes for pre-practice and pregame taping, getting water and ice out on to the fields, injury treatment, whirlpool treatment, and physical rehabilitamed majors and Ferber says medical schools look for.

The eight student trainers are juniors John Billingslea, Steve Attias, Sharon Orser, and Cheryl Schleen, sophomores Samantha Streamer, Jim Lim, work in Baltimore at the Chiland Steve Ardinger and fresh-Cain Gymnasium.

Ferber says he plans to teams and athletes it would be begin having instructional meetings on Thursday nights beginning sometime in March. Instruction in anatomy, nutrition, and injury care and prevention will be taught by Ferber along with Dr. Fred Lohr, the schools orthopaedic physician. Ferber says he is still willing to take new students if they are truly interested in injury care and prevention. Student trainers are present at all home sporting events and occasionally accompany teams on road trips

Praise for the training program is high and seriously interested persons should see John Ferber in the training room located in the basement of

Trainer John Ferber leads a staff of student trainees

WC's swimmin' women earn winning record

by Carter Boatner

Last Wednesday evening the Women's Swim Team pulled off the most recent of what has been many crushing victories, bringing their season record to

Sports trivia

This week's question: What two single events did Jim Thorpe not win in the 1912 Stockholm Olympics(He took the gold in the Decathlon)?

The correct answer to this question will win a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. Fill out on a piece of paper, your name and answer.

Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Trivia Question answer envelope (behind the bar). The correct answer will be in next week's ELM

the Washington swimmers as they roiled onto an easy 119-76 win, but the final score was not an accurate indicator of the way in which the entire meet car-

Captain Elizabeth Rexon explained that, "It was close at the half, maybe we were up by eight points, then we pulled ried on

Rexon explained that the Western Maryland fell to petition because there were some injuries plaguing the team and some swimmers had to compete in some events that they were not used to swimming in, "Some people swam things they normally don't, but we had good times(regardless of that) Last Friday at the Casey an impressive 69-44 win over swim Center the team scored Notre Dame, breaking eight team struggled early in the com- school records in the process.

With the past two wins, the state title. the team records it's first winning record ever and looks with anticipation towards the State Championships which will be held on Sunday. Over the past three years the team has progressively worked it's way up the final standings, finishing 4th in 1986, 3rd in 1987 and

On Sunday they are looking optimistically towards a first-place showing to capture

2nd last season

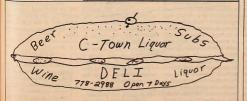

The team will face the toughest test of the season next Wednesday in a tri-meet against Bryn-Mawr and Swarthmore Colleges

If interested in writing for the ELM sports page, please contact Carter Boatner c/o the ELM

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN MD 21620

One Day Service Available

Pip's Liquors

Hours: Monday thru Thursday- 9:00-8:00 Friday thru Saturday- 9:00-9:00

> Located at the Kent Plaza Phone: 778-0123

Scott art display enhanced through song

by Kate Absher

peginning her talk for the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series, Joyce Scott sings to her audience. Her voice is reminiscent of the soulful dirges sung by slaves plodding home from the fields in the antebellum South The history present in her work or of the resistant hymns belted Luther King Jr. in the 1960's. There is a remarkable history

Joyce Scott's quilts, paintings, and sculptures and those works of her mother, Elizabeth Scott, which include quilts, pillows and wall hangings at first seem to span only the history of Scott tends to stray away from the United States. In "Stamps and Flags," a quilt by Elizabeth Scott, the impassioned doctrines and rebellious escapades associated with longings for independence fly in and out of her blocks of material. The star emanating from the center of "Covered Wagon," also by Elizabeth Scott, signifies the ultimate goal of American pioneers in progressing westward. Like this, the quilt embedies the constant progression of both of However, these issues do not the successful artists. They represent the culmination of studies not only in history but magnetic people, skeletons, and in geneology as well

Theme of American history to the history of her family in her quilt, "Caldwell-Scott Quilt." In the center of the quilt is her family tree composed of black and white faces all drooling down upon the image of Scott's mother handing her a floures-cent needle. In this action, the generational ties Joyce Scott feels concerning both her work and her entire existence are readily apparent However, Joyce Scott's "voice" ranges many octaves.

does not impede her awareness out by the followers of Martin of the present and the future She is concerned with the politics of the 1980's and makes in her voice as well as a history this a recurring melody in her artwork. One example of this theme is "Holocaust Necklace" which entails a black figure screaming while the world ruptures around him. When working with political issues, quilting and instead creates with tiny beads, as in "Holo-caust Necklace." In other In other works, Joyce uses fabric, se quins, and fiber (which looks something like dyed paper towels) to make sharp state ments about South Africa nuclear war, and other timely issues. By using these materials, she brings a certain tangi bility to the mind boggling problems the world faces today. dominate her art: they are always a background to the overall brightness of color that Joyce Scott narrows the pervades her designs. The most shocking of her political work shown is "Motherhood 2000," which contemplates the horrors a nuclear war will create when the time comes for women to have children

Also noticeable in Joyce

Artists Joyce and Elizabeth Scott celebrate their heritage through art in "Stitched Stories."

present in "Motherhood 2000." In "Dressing Up" Joyce Scott romanticizes the "primping" of women, or in "Fantasy Necklace" the green and gold strands and Elizabeth Scott's art is the seem to beckon every woman to the slave, the foreboding future ter.

sense of womanhood, which is ask her fairy godmother to send of mankind, and the woman her to the hall who struggles through it all play All the themes of the back up to the song of Joyce artist's work culminate in a. and Elizabeth Scott that can be moving duet of mother and "heard" until February twentydaughter. The tragic history of sixth in Gibson Fine Arts Cen-

Liberation theology, Africana philosophy joined in Outlaw talk

by Stephanie Hess

The spring semester of Washington College's William James Forum opens another semester of discussion and insight this Wednesday, February eighth in Hynson Lounge. The featured speaker, Professor Lucius Outlaw of Haverford College, will talk on the timely topic of "Africana Philosophy Today." A native of Mississippi,

Dr. Outlaw is recognized as one of the most distinguished Black philosophers today. Prior to teaching at Haverford, he taught at Morgan State University and at Fisk University. A Danforth Associate, he was a Distinguished Service Profes- and Marxism and Black libera-sor at Spelman College in At- tion. His article, "Les Afroof Black Studies at Boston College. His personal academic achievements include graduat ing Phi Beta Kappa from Fisk University and he holds a doctorate from Boston College. Professor Outlaw's areas of interest and expertise cover a wide range of issues in both African Philosophy and African-American Philosophy. A large number of philosophical journals have published his articles, which cover such topics as social theory, Black history, affirmative action, Afro-American political thought, language and consciousness lanta and an Interim Director Americains et L'Afrique" was published in the French journal Politique Africaine

It is through the efforts of Professor Peter Tapke, himself a graduate of Haverford College, that Dr. Outlaw is speaking for the William James Fo rum. Tapke, aware that a talk on Africana Philosophy would work well in conjunction with the Liberation Theology class currently being offered here, firstbecame acquainted with and took interest in the work of Dr. Outlaw through the Haverford alumni publication. At the inauguration of Haverford's new president. Tapke had the good fortune to be seated next to Professor Outlaw. Their disWashington College.

Though the talk is of speenrolled in the Liberation The- eighth in Hynson loungeology class, it also ties in with Admission to the talk is free the College's celebration of and all are encouraged to at Black History Month. As we tend. live in a time of constant change, there is the need to explore the various causes and effects of such changes. The new understanding of the role of the Afro-American culture is one that pertains to the world today. As a result of such explorations. all can gain a new perspective on the Black experience through such a talk. Furthermore, Tapke describes Professor cussion lead to Tapke's invita- Outlaw as a man "well versed tion, and Outlaw's subsequent in Black thought, both in Ameracceptance, to give a talk at ica and Africa, and the ways in which the two tie together.

The talk will begin at 7:30 interest to the student PM on Wednesday February

HELP!!!!!!

The ELM is looking for a cartoonist. The position is both paid and prestigious. Those interested contact Jennifer Harrison, Michele Volansky, or the ELM via Student Mail.

Postman novel, movie converted to opera

by Chris Premo

Cora decide to go through with tersonly worsen when Kennedy On Saturday January 28, their plans and the first act shows up at the Tavern with many students and faculty comes to a close with Frank, Cora's previous confession and members of Washington Col- after knocking Papadakis un-

'The task of converting this novel to an opera is immense, yet I feel Paulus has done an extremely respectable job."

lege were given the opportunity to see the modern American opera The Postman Always Rings Twice , performed by The Washington Opera at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington D.C. The opera was composed by Stephen Paulus with the libretto by Colin Graham, The plot-line was derived from the popular novel of the same name, authored by Washington College graduate James M. Cain. Tickets were provided free of charge by Mrs. Eugene B. Casey also a graduate of Washington College. Mrs. Casey, as noted in the stagebill, was also responsible for underwriting production costs for the opera. interestingly enough, to connect the role of Washington College to the evening's performance, Cain's father was at one time president of Washingon College, and our athletic center bears his name.

The opera, set in Califorhia during the Great Depression, generally follows the story line of the novel. Frank Chambers is an unemployed scounerel who takes a job at the ter seeing Cora, the wife of Nick Papadakis, the Greek owner of he Tavern. Frank and Cora lave an affair and the two evenbually entertain plans for mur-tering the Greek. Frank and conscious with a wrench, pushing the Greek and his car off the road into a ravine. Frank himself falls into the ravine by accident and Cora runs into the road seeking help.

The second act opens with Frank in the hospital being visited by the district attorney, Sackett. Frank, after learning that the Greek had a ten-thou sand dollar life insurance policy, is tricked by Sackett into signing a statement claiming that Cora was responsible for the murder. Cora, who is represented by a sleazy attorney named Katz, upon hearing of ing Cora. Frank's disloyalty confesses that she and Frank collaborated in executing the murder. Cora mistakenly believes that she is relating her confession to a policeman when in fact she is considered it to be somewhat delivering it to a man named Kennedy, who is merely a sidekick for the attorney Katz. To the dismay of Sackett, Katz is able to convince the insurance company to pay off the policy and Frank and Cora suddenly find themselves back at Twin

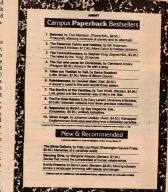

At the Tayern, the relationship between Frank and Cora is no longer the same. They both feel as though they have been betrayed and that they no McLellan is the Post's chief another. The love they thought cult to please. His review is they had no longer exists. Matentitled 'The Postman Delivattempts to blackmail the two of them. Frank is able to overpower Kennedy and sends him back into the darkness minus the confession. Cora tells Frank that she is pregnant and then. in a fit of extreme pain, asks to be rushed to the hospital. On the way to the hospital, Frank accidentally wrecks the car and Cora is killed. Ironically, Frank is charged with her murder and left to tell his story to the execu-

The task of converting this novel to an opera is immense, vet I feel Paulus has done an extremely respectable job. The solo sung by Papadakis (played admirably by Donald Kaasch ) in the first act, addresses Cora as his "little white dove " and is perhaps the most beautiful song in the entire opera. Likewise, the second act is highlighted by a comic duet between thetwo partner- lawyers Sackett and Katz. I found the performance of all the characters to be extremely well balanced with no one character stealing the show. Nickolas Karousatos was convincing in his role as Frank Chambers and Pamela South did an excellent job in portray-

Reactions to the opera among those students who went to see it were mixed. Many, while entertained by the opera second-rate. Others felt the opera would have been far more beautiful had it been written in a language other than English. Finally, there were those who contended that the story line did not lend itself well to operatic interpretation. In contrast to these views, I would like to conclude by quoting a small portion of Joseph McLellan's review of the opera as it appeared in The Washington Post. can trust one music critic and generally diffiers' and at the end, issues the ily comic, but it is undeniably following warning to those who 20th-century music. . . Those may entertain thoughts of travelling to D.C. to see the opera. cally sealed against modern "People who do not like operas after the time of Madame Butterfly should be warned: Postlyrical, emotive and momentar- 23, 1989 pp. c1,4)

whose minds are not hermetimusic may agree that Postman is the best thing the Washington Opera has done so far this man is intensely dramatic, season."(Washington Post, Jan

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport

1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

or $75.00 unlimited until March 15 to a year 'round, beautiful tank

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious, Our sun rana Sunsystem guarantees you a gloroway radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to tan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting now way to tan. A single visit will convince you.

The Beauty Lounge

Phone: 778-2635

come today ...

Call us

Midtown Mall Chestertown, MD 21620
NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE
Complete Hair Care * Manicures * Sculptur

Asphalt sealing franchise for college students, call Collegiate Sealers, Inc. for info & application 1-800-

ENTREPRENEURS

Own & operate your own business this summer & earn over

$5,000

Campus Calendar: events for the upcoming week

Weekend Feb. 3, 5, 6

The Film Series will show the movie The Moderns at 7:30 in Norman James Theatre on Friday, Sunday and Monday quired nights. The film offers a slightly "off" picture of the Paris of Hemingway. The film features Keith Carradine and John Lone in a dispute over the value of art. The Moderns was directed by Alan Rudolph

The SGA will present its first event of the spring semester with a dance in the Coffee-House from 9-1 PM. All are invited to attend and ID is re-

Saturday Feb. 4

The Coffee-House presents the entertainment of Billy Breslin on Saturday nightfrom 9-1 PM.

Friday Feb. 3

Monday Feb. 6

The Monday Series will present the talk, "Saving the Greyhound Bus Terminal: An Unorthodox Historic Preservation Challenge in Washington D.C." with Visiting Assistant Professor of History Richard Striner. The talk will be held at 4:30 PM, with tea served at 4:00 PM in the Literary House.

Also on Monday night will be 'The Louis Goldstein Great Roast" at St. John's College,

State Comptroller and the Chairman of Washington College's Board of Visitors and Governors. Look for a review of the event in next week's ELM.

Tuesday Feb. 7

Members of the Freshman Creative Writing classes, taught by Kathy Wagner and Calvin Forbes, will present their work in a poetry and prose Annapolis. The event serves as reading at 8PM in the O'Neill appears on page twelve.

a fund-raiser and roast for the Literary House. All are encouraged to attend.

Wednesday Feb. 8

Speaker Lucius Outlaw, a Professor of Philosophy at Haverford College, will explore "Africana Philosophy Today" in atalk at 7:30 in Hynson Lounge. The talk is part of the William James Forum, currently celebrating twenty-five years of discussions. A related article

PRICE SLICED ON PAN PIZZA! 301-778-3566

What's better than a fresh, hot Pan Pizza from your home town Pizza Hut® restaurant? One that saves you money! Come on over, bring the coupon below and let us make one just for you-with dough we make fresh every day, tangy sauce, pure mozzarella cheese and your choice of delicious toppings. Pizza lovers never had it so good!

$2.00 off any large Pan Pizza, or $1.00 off any medium Pan Pizza. Hurry! This special offer expires soon. One coupon per party er visit at participating Pizza Hut® restaurants

OLD WHARF INN

ON THE CHESTER RIVES

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

Emily's

Latest Hair Designs European Gun Coloring Facial Waxing, Ear Piercing STYLES Skin Care, Nail Tips with Silk Wrap

Tanning Bed

Matrix

Redken 778 - 2686 Rt. 213 Chestertown, MD

Paul Mitchell

In Time for the Birthday Ball and Valentine's Day

Buy 2 ... Get a 3rd Free

February is a great time of the year for KODALUX color enlargements. It's the month to give enlargements of those special holiday shots to friends and family. With this in mind, we are offering a KODALUX Color Enlarge ment Special, Buy 2...Get a 3rd Free Dates: February 6 through March 1, 1989 Products: Enlargements available from color negatives, slides or prints Color Enlargement Sizes: 5"x7" up to

Eastern Shore Camera

Cross and Maple Chestertown

EPA FINE

continued from page one Anne, Hodson, Kent and the Miller Library. The two kinds of brand name cooling oils that are used separately in the six remaining transformers; Askarel and Pyranol are of particular concern to the EPA. PCB contamination of oil in a transformer is measured in partsper-million. The Center for Disease Control considers it are ingested at over 100 ppm. Both brand name coolants, Askarel and Pyranol, used in the six transformers on the Washington College campus contain 70-80% PCB or 700,000 to 800,000 ppm contamination. greatest concern are the ones in Caroline/Queen Anne and Gibson. Hessey says that the transformer in Caroline/Queen Anne is scheduled for immedidangerous if small quantities atepriority replacement as soon as the "back orders on new transformers can be filled". The overall volume of PCB spills in the Caroline/Queen Anne basement is undetermined, but it is considered the worst on cam-> assure members of the community that there is no present danger to residents. The vol

ing five transformers is also un- ment, the EPA does not know, known, but considered "mini-

Officials at the EPA were not aware that the basements in many buildings that have PCB transformers take on water during a heavy rain that later drains out through floor Whether or not the

but the chances are "pretty good". They will continue to monitor the area.

The Elm is again using the Freedom of Information Act to petition all the records and as much specific data as possible from the EPA regarding take four to six weeks

Parking Regulations enforced

By Ed Schroeder

While much attention is being given to the Master Plan's construction of new buildings and the refurbish ing of those already standing, an infamous issue at Washington College has been overlooked. The dilemma involves parking problems on campus. In particular, it involves the lot Reid, Queen Anne, Caroline and Minta Martin share.

Students of these dormitories were alarmed this se mester after finding the lot had been re-lined and barriers put up prohibiting parking on the grass. More complaining arose once warnings and tickets were issued. Individuals committing offenses to the Parking Regulations, an outline of rules given out at the beginning of each semester, were asked to move to an alternate lot or else they would receive a fine

"The problem last semes ter," Jerry Roderick, Head of Security recalled, "was because there were no markings, making enforcement of regulations impossible. This so. mester, now that it's sectioned out, we can go back to our original policies." Construction has been a hampering force this school attacks. Not one assault has year; it is also the main reason that the parking lot was not properly organized for the fall semester. Because the need to move trucks and maintenance vehicles in and out of this area was important, remarking the lot became less of a priority

The lot was often overcrowded, proving not only hazardous for college work crews, but also a hinderance for the fire and rescue vehicles required last semester during the 'Caroline-Queen Anne fires'.

"We received a number of complaints from the fire department," Roderick com-mented. "Hopefully, this semester we won't run into difficulties." Throughout Washington College's history, parking has been a matter that has staff and students taking sides. While staff argues for safety's sake, many students argue for convenience.

Those who work off-campus jobs often arrive back late at night. Many dislike walking from alternate parking spots (located between the Fine Arts Building and the Casey Swim Center) at late hours because of the threat of

been reported so far and Security hopes that none will be,

"We're not saying that students should let down their guard," Roderick stated. "We're just recommending they don't expose themselves and that they travel in groups."

The security department is highly sympathetic with many of the cases that they receive, but often they find that students are at fault. Warnings are issued to offenders, so tickets do not come as a supr-

For the number of cars on campus, according to Roderick, there is adequate space for parking. Although the Master Plan may call for eventual building of additional parking to convenience the Reid Hall area no new changes will be made immediately.

"There is only so much we can do," Roderick closed. "The student body has to understand that we have a job to do, and that's upholding regulations. Continual offenders are the ones who seem to be doing the most complaining. Once they learn that they don't have much of an argument, Washington College will be relieved of it's parking dilemma."

Ride Service will help to stop drunk driving

by Patricia Karnes

Washington College and the campus sources for getting alcitizens of Chestertown drink, cohol; thus the importance of many become unable to drive or walk home. When this happens, the WC Pick-up Hotline wants to help. On Wednesday and Thursday nights, from 11:30 p.m. to 1:00 a.m., this organization will pick up anyone, from Newts or the Tavern, who is too drunk to drive or walk home. The phone number thus this service becomes a to call is 778-5494.

If that person drove, the drink hotline has enough people for someone to take the car back to the individual's home. The emphasis is to help prevent those who become intoxicated from hurting themselves or

Debby Cohn said that, "this service poses no inconven-ience to us. We are volunteers who want to do this. If an individual participates in this service, no names are written down and no culture van is used to pick them up. We use our own vehicles

Drinking on campus is being tolerated less, so the stu-

When the student body of dent body has turned to off the WC hotline becomes invaluable to those who prefer to drink off campus.

A second reason why the hotline is an important part of the campus, is that police charge people who are leaving Newts or the Vern with driving while intoxicated more frequently; valuable asset to those who

This service was offered last semester, but only two calls were made to the hotline. The community needs to realize that the service is there to be used.

No student should be embarrassed to call for assistance. The hotline was created for the benefit of the students and community.

If anyone has questions about the program, or if anyone would like to volunteer his or her time, contact Debby Cohn by campus mail. Volunteers can work every week, or just once a month. Anyone who wants to participate is appreci-

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 Free Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

Monday shooter nite $2.00

Tuesday pitcher nite

Wednesday shot & draft

Thursday Ladies Nite

Fri 2/3 D.J. Jeff Reed - no cover Sat 2/4 Steve Taylor - no cover

Fri 2/10 Side Street - $3 cover Sat 2/11 Rick Ruse - no cover

> 515 Washington Street 778-1984

Chief Stetson comments on student conduct

continued from page one responsible for the safety of the other

Chief Stetson also seemed concerned with alcohol con- stressed that Washington Colsumption and its related issues.

He stated, "on college camthat they can drink no matter how old they are. This is in direct violation of state law. You must be twenty one to drink."

He added that, while the average underage partygoer is in little danger of being "busted" if a party is visited by Police, "someone will be held respon- dents."

Drunk driving and fighting have always been a problem, according to Stetson, with alcohol acting as a catalyst.

"I'm not trying to single out Washington College as unique, but I do think we should he aware. The Chief's final concern involved use of illegal narcotics. He mentioned that a numher of arrests have been made in the past few years. Under-and he added, "I'm not going to say that there aren't agents on campus right now." Throughout lege students, on campus and off, are valuable members of puses students seem to think the Chestertown community. Every student is considered a citizen of the town. He stated that his request for an interview was not an avenue for issuing threats or warnings.

"I didn't call because I'm alarmed. I simply thought it would be the best way to discuss these issues with the stu-

Phi Sigma Tau offers membership

Membership in Washington College's philosophy honor in the upper third of his or her society, the Maryland Delta class and should have comchapter of Phi Sigma Tau, is cover agents are often involved available to students who have philosophy or religion in which the local chapter. Application

Sharon Hurt, a Washington College employee, and Jim Jenkins, a student, serve the community by volunteering their time on the Chesepeake Rescue Squad.

lege or university.

Each applicant should be in the upper third of his or her criteria pay a $12 application available for an additional $10. fee and are then eligible to pleted at least three courses in participate in the activities of least two A's and one B). completed three full semesters a minimum grade point aver- forms are available from Proof study at any accredited col- age of 3.67 was attained (at fessor David Newell, chapter advisor and philosophy department chairman, in Smith 12. Students who meet these An honor society key is also

Mom's Cookie Jar

Hope all of you enjoyed soup night last Wednesday. We would love to hear your feedback on the evening, Ballots will be with the numbers person starting at lunch.

For all of you who are anxiously awaiting aur next special event, you will be glad to know its coming soon. As soon as Feb.7th we will be having a CHICKEN WING BUFFET and Feb. 15th a CHICKEN WING EATING CONTEST . The contest is sponsored by Tyson's Chicken, J/P Brokerage Co., and Washington College Dining Service. Again, prizes will be up for grabs.

Remember to bring in your favorite picture of yourself or events around campus to put on the bulletin boards in the dining area.

Nutrional Note:

Physical fitness through proper diet promotes good health, and can help to prevent the everyday colds and flus as well.

Until Neve .....мом.

WC Film

Present

THE MODERNS

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, February 3 * Sunday, February 5 Monday, February 6

> Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All others $2.00

WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Washington College Elm

Volume 60, Number 15

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 10. 1989

Master Plan undermines student cable rights

y Cindy Croot

Students who received ervice from Simmons Cable TV and their connections cut hortly after returning to school his semester.

Clint Baer, Director of fanning and Special Projects, plained that "cables were moved when installing the ectric distribution and comunications lines which enaled removing unsightly teleone poles and wires from the mpus to aesthetically imrove the campus.

upgrade the school's 5 KVA stem to a 25 KVA system, to wide more power for the mpus." The eventual goal is have all lines underground educational benefit. resently some electric, teleone, and computer lines are ried) and to run a "fiber optic eckbone" of sorts, which will elp protect lines from dame, stated Baer.

When telephone lines re buried, CATV lines were moved. Mr. Baer pointed out, ere is still some discussion to whether or not the comany had permission to use the ge owns it's own electrical stem 2 In contrast Gene ssey, Senior Vice President Management and Finance, ited that the company had tility right-of-ways" which wed it to use the poles. "The cable company was rmed well in advance of the bon by the school's sub-conors, the Tri-M corporation, it that the cable company elected to inform subscribsaid Baer. Mr. Hessey ed "personnel changes" which dered the college's commulation through Tri-M ineffecboth to the community and cable company. Hessey ite sure just what had hap-

Mr. Hessey characterized eresulting situation as "most unfortunate," whereas Mr. Baer pointed out the arguments opposing cable on campus, such as "Should the college open it's marketplace to private ven-dors?," and, "In regard to educational purposes, should CATV be supported in dormitories? questions,"stated Baer,"still remain to be an-

Hessey's stand was quite different, stating that it is "up to the student to make his own individual choices." He also mentioned that the college's CATV franchise had been awarded to Simmons by W.C., and that part of the agreement entailed free service to neighboring public schools for their

Baer released a memo to all R.A.'s of Kent, Middle, East,

"It is college policy not to support CATV in dormitories Simmons Cable Company will not be allowed to trench and place underground cable, thereby jeopardizing communications line and utilities. In addition, our educational policy at the college does not support cable in dormitories Please note that no cable is available in any renovated dorm. Your dorms were 'grandfathered' in terms of access."

When asked why there was still a cable hook-up servicing a room in Queen Anne's (a fluke which escaped the CATV shut-down) Baer remarked, we'll have to do something

Hessey maintains that the school does not object to cable on campus (in fact another stipulation in the original agree ment with Simmons was that there would be a free hookup in Hodson Hall) and that the cable company is free to service the campus (even in renovated dorms) provided that the lines

continued on page 12

Louis L. Goldstein was honored at a roast on Monday night, February 6th, at St. John's College in Annapolis. A complete success, it was well attended by his peers, including Mark Russell, the Governor of Maryland, and President and Mrs. Cater.

Fire and gas leaks West, Caroline, and Queen Anne dorms on February 3, spark controversy

by Ed Schroeder

At 3:01 A.M. last Sunday, February 5th, the Chestertown Fire Department responded to a fire that blazed in the East Hall first floor bathroom.

Security guard Jake Williams and an unidentified student noticed the smoke and reported the fire

When fire officials arrived, smoke had risen to the third floor of the hall. Evacuation procedures were instituted immediately by the fire department, however, residents of East were reportedly hesitant

"This hasn't been the first time that this has happened," claimed Fire Chief Bruce Neil "In the other fires that the school has had we asked students to evacuate for their own safety, but we got cussed out. They didn't want to get out of bed."

"There was five thousand dollars in damages," Neil commented about the East Hall fire. "And it could have been a lot less serious if we had more cooperation with the students."

The other fires to which Neil referred occurred during the months of November and December in the Queen Anne and Caroline dormitories. None of the three to four fires that were reported were acci-

According to Niel, all of them were classified as arson The latest of these in East Hall is no exception, as it is currently under investigation as "suspicious"

No official statement has come from the Fire Marshall as yet concerning the unknown cause of the blaze which origi-

continued on page 12

Phi Sigma Kappa no longer recognised fraternity

by Tracey Connell

Violations of social probationary terms reached a culmination point this week as the Administration announced that it will no longer recognize the Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity Though the Sigs are expected to retain housing privileges until the end of this semester, even that may change in the event of an unfavorable ruling from the State Fire Marshall on the East Hall fire of this past

The Sigs were placed on social probation on December 15th of 1988. According to Dean McIntire, of Student Affairs, they committed "a series of violations of stewardship", stewardship being a term coined by President Cater to emphasize responsibilities for the maintenance of buildings and regulation of members in the Dean Maxcy cited one incident in particular that pre ceded social probation. Reportedly the fraternity neglected to "clean up their Chapter Room after a social function. It was inspected almost fourty-eight hours following the event and the room was still in a disgraceful condition."

Chapter Rooms are provided to all fraternities and sororities regardless of whether or not the organization has on campus housing. According to a recent "Statement of Mutual Responsibility between Washington College and its Social Fraternities and Sororities". which was signed by all chapter presidents, including John Bodnar, Sig President, greeks shall "handle any cleaning and maintenance beyond the normal upkeep."

continued on page 5

THEY TOOK TWO MONTHS TO

INSTALL CABLE IN HIS HO

WHICH IS NO BASIS FOR A

US MAKE A SORT OF PSEUM

JUDICIOUS DECISION

ADVLT DECISION. WE'RE

Removal of cable TV CABLE denies freedom of

Although for all intents and purposes, cable television is not an important or necessary service to the students of Washington College, it is a service formerly enjoyed by many students. The important liberty that is denied by removing cable from the dormitories is the freedom of choice. Since one never knows if one denial of a liberty will lead to others, these denials should be eliminated before we find out.

When some students pack up to come to college, it would be unthinkable to leave home without some form of a television. Other students are not interested in having such a distraction in their rooms, and hope that their roommate will feel the same way. At the ages of eighteen, nineteen, twenty and older, students have minds capable of making decisions - after all college is supposed to prepare people for life. Those who cannot make decisions about what extent they may allow entertainment to be a part of their lives will have their own eye opening and learning experience when they receive their grades. It is certainly an insult when the College attempts to make such decisions for us. Cable is just another form of entertainment (no longer) available to the students of Washington College. Its cost is substantially less than the purchase of a VCR, and the purchaser receives more than movies. In a town with limited entertainment opportunities, cable can be a valuable asset.

Clint Baer writes "...our educational policy at the College does not support cable in dormitories." Of course no one expects this support. We also do not expect the College to support student enjoyment of ordinary television. However, students who have reception of free television in their dermitories will continue to watch it when and how much they choose. And students who wish to purchase cable, just as any student who wishes to have a telephone installed in his or her room, should be allowed to make that decision for him or herself. After all, we left our parents at home when we came to Washington College

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                      |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrise  |
| Nome Editor                   | Iracey Conne         |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbau       |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatn         |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansl   |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnso         |
| Photography Editor            | Todd Ka              |
| Graphics Designer             |                      |
| Managers                      | nu n. l.             |
| Managing Editor               | BILL Beekm           |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William   |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobcz          |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Go           |
| Office ManagerJulie           | Greene and Cathy Ler |
|                               |                      |

The Washington Callege Bin is the official student newspa-per of Washington Callege. It is published every Fixing during the scademic year with the exception of vacations and exam weeks. Editorials are the responsibility of the Editoria-inchist with the assistance of The Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opposite the example of the Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opposite of the Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opposite of the Elm's Editorial Board and the opposite of their authors and are not necessarily the views held by the Editorial Board. All letters to the editor are read with interest, but due to space limitation, the editors cannot always publish every letter received and some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as some must be shortened. Those that are printed are published as received, without editing for spelling, punctuation or gramam. Let-ters should be signed, except in rare cases where the anthorized their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their year and major. Faculty and staff members should include their positions and departments. Limit letter to 600 words or less and include day and evening phose numbers in the event deposited in the marked box at the editorial office, or mailed (or Linix washington College, Chesterbown, Maryland 2020. Letters be come the property of The Elm upon receipt and must be received us some controlled of the property of the staff of publishington in this week!

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the basement of Reid Hall, next to the Reid Hall lounge. Business hours are 700 to 9:00 PM on Tuesdays and 7:00 to 1:00 PM Wednesdays. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in

GRIPPED BY THE FEAR THAT ONE AND INFORMATIVE VENUES WOULD BE LOST FOREVER, JAKE AND MARY JANE MET TO DISCUSS THE DECISION TO REMOVE CAR

"IN A PLACE WHERE AND BESIDES THEY SAID THE FORM OF ONLY THE INDIVIDUAL WHO MADE THE TWO MOVIES AND A DECISION DOESN'T LIKE THE CUTTING OFF CABLE A SURE WAY OF 15

INDUCING MENTAL STAGNANCY SAID JAKE.

CAPARLE OF IT "WHO EAVS THAT CABLE WITHIN THE HOST OF CHANNELS THAT CABLE THAT ARE DEDICATED TO NEWS AND INFOR-

continued from page 4 arcades and lots of pool tables.

Rutgers had a good lacrosse team and fair football, basketball, and crew teams, sports being a primary concern of a state university. And don't forget about the annual Bugs Bunny Film Festival, a good enough reason alone to go there. But despite all these "big school" attractions it turns out that Friday nights there can be just as boring as they are here. And when you add in the impersonal attitude the school has, (I didn't know my advisor's name, and never met him or her), with the totally overbearing massiveness of the place, not to mention the fact that all of this is taking place in New Jersey, big schools can become downright depressing places where individuals can become lost in the cogwheels of a "University" education of student apathy. At Rutgers, hardly a weekend went by without some sort of organized student protest or rally, whether it was to voice opposition to C.I.A. recruiting on campus, gather support for the homeless, or even to pressure the school administration during a workers strike. Here, the deans of the school worry very little that any decision they make might be opposed by the student body. If you want to keep your cable television, or have some input on the "master plan" which threatens to turn this fine institution into a "big school", or at least keep the Cardinal Dorms from becoming a toxic waste site the student body must begin to act before it's too late. Just because this is a small school doesn't mean that for or that you can't make a difington College doesn't seem to ference anyway. This is you lack, and that is it's abundance school, not the administration And by the way, why th hell don't we get Washington birthday off?

There is one thing Wash-

continued from page thre made the formal decision tost students from having cable the future. Therefore, anger students should complain to Board, It wouldn't hurt town a letter to President Cateraba this, either. Another un aspect of this problem is the students in Talbot, Cecil, a Dorchester still have cable.

I sincerely hope somethi is done about restoring cabl students who want it, and st If enough students outraged the college's infringement their rights raise hell about the I believe that the Board Trustees, or whoever takes there is nothing worth fighting ultimate blame for this, on not help but respond

On Saturday February 18, at 3:30, directly following the Washington Birthday Convocation, a film of political satirist Mark Russell roasting the Chairman of the Board of Visitors and Governors, Louis Goldstein.

ISSUE:

Does the College have the right to prevent students from receiving cable?

Denying students cable infringes upon their rights

At the start of this semes- tion of an underground electriter, I was very annoyed to discover that someone in the Washington College administration decided that students would no longer be allowed to enjoy cable TV on campus. What I first heard from an employee of Simmons Cable was that Clint Baer had suddenly called them one day and had told them to stop giving students cable. I talked to Clint Baer, and he enumerated his three reasons for ending cable

According to Robert Plumwhole controversy started when cal conduit system. Mr. Plummer said that the cable company would have been happy to lay their lines in this system and make things easier for everyone, but that they were not notified in time. Mr. Baer Simmons Cable to lay their cables, but Simmons did not respond. Whatever. This is Mr. Baer's first reason for the Reason number two: After this mix-up, Simmons offered to come in and install their mer of Simmons Cable, this own cable system, paying for it themselves and not altering the

he would not allow this because this is a private college and he thinks that this would be improper. He said that he was generally displeased with Simmons Cable's attitude and professional practices

Reason number three: Mr. told me that the college invited Plummer said that the specific reason Mr. Baer gave him for ending cable services to the college was that "students pay a lot of money to go here and shouldn't be wasting their time watching TV". Mr. Baer indicated to me that this was indeed an accurate characterization of the college's position This, to me, is the most upset-

Jeff Vail

happen to watch mainly C-SPAN, PBS and the MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour, but that should not even be relevant. No matter what I choose to watch, it is an obviously unfair and outrageous infringement upon my rights to decide that I should not watch TV because the somebody in the administration decided that it will distract me from my studies. If it is now the college's self-de-me from the insidious corrupt ing influence of This Week with David Brinkley, then why do the powers-that-be not righteously divest me of my stereo as well? After all, we pay money to go to college, not to listen to

So, basically, I wasted money getting cable installed in my room at the beginning of the year, and I wasted money on a TV because I can hardly get anything on it anymore. According to Clint Baer, the College's Board of Trustees

continued on page two Jeff Vail is a sophomore who frequently contributes to the school began the installa- landscape. Mr. Baer said that ting part of all this nonsense. I clared responsibility to protect the The Elm

dents right."

ST. MICHAEL'S, MD SOPHOMORE

Students should be allowed to ave cable. We are paying for igh quality education and we hould be allowed at least ade quate living conditions.

SEAN T. ANDERSEN CHESTERTOWN, MD SOPHOMORE

"I don't think that college should restrict students' life styles."

HEIDI HAUSMANN PENNSBURG, PA FRESHMAN "I think it should be the stu- "Nope

TIM ALBINSON WASHINGTON, D.C. SOPHOMORE

JENNIEER CASEY CHESAPEAKE CITY, MD

SOPHOMORE "I don't think the college has any right to prohibit the students from getting cable. It's their American God-given right."

by Tom Cushing

Students are "citizens of Chestertown, with all of those rights...privileges..."

A student, upon moving to his dorm, chooses that special spot where the blackad-white TV that his parents mated from home will fit. Ince he is settled in, he turns it and begins to flip through he channels, but only finds tatic. Upon discovering one ni-clear channel, he fidgets th the antenna for a while, nd after deciding the only way get volume with a picture is stand there and hold the tenna while watching, he tides to turn it off and wait hil the next day, when perthe weather would be more ducive to getting reception.

he following day, it is sunny,

he finds he can in fact get azy reception of the three hajor networks, but having had bugh antenna holding for the

of the year, he decides to

Mary Lee Berry

The company offers him a reasonable price which can include a subscription to a movie channel, and assure the student of clearer reception

This scenario is perhaps a common one around campus: students, eager to have an occasional source of news and diversion, opt to purchase cable TV for a variety of reasons. Does the College have the right to take this privilege away from students? What are the administration's reasons for wanting to revoke this priviledge? If their concern is of an academic and disciplinary nature, I wonder how the students got here in the first place if they can't successfully handle school the local cable company. work as well as diversions, such as television? Secondly, I would apartments like regular townsask them to consider that while TV is not quite as essential a communications resource as the telephone, it is certainly a vital source of news and information to a small community that is rather isolated from the "outside world."

The local cable TV company offers a service to the entire area. Why should we, as students of Washington College be prevented from buying into entire dorms. this service that other members of the community are allowed? As a matter of fact, in last week's Elm, Chief Stetson specifically reminded students to be aware that they are "citizens of Chestertown, with all of those rights...privileges,...and responsibilities." And what about all the students that live off campus? Does this mean that since they possess regular efforts that took place over people, they should be able to have a cable hook-up, and we can not? If the College's concern is of a stictly academic origin, their restriction of cable services to students on academic probation could be justified, though hardly enforceable, unless the school could garner control over the individual lines coming into the rooms, rather than severing the cables to

But finally, I think the most important issue of concern to the students, is their right to be informed of administrative decisions that affect them. The students who had already subscribed to and paid in advance for this semester's cable TV should have been informed in advance of the Christmas break. If the College is attempting to slowly wean the campus of cable by not making it available in dorms built or renovated after 1984, as has been officially stated, then the sudden removal of all cable lines into many of the dorms on campus is inconsistent and by far premature of the College's stated plan.

Cable TV is an important resource for the enrichment of not only regular television reception, but also of the student's overall educational and aesthetic experience of the larger world in which we operate. It should not be denied to responsible, paying citizens of the serviced area, even though we are students first.

Mary Lee Berry is a junior College's planned beautification majoring in English.

In the World

House Speaker James Wright scheduled the vote on the proposed pay raise for Tuesday. The bill, which is not ected to pass, would give estomembers of Congress, es, and some Administram officials

Rehnquist suggested to Congress that they could reduce the load on the court system by placing restrictions on the types of lawsuits that may be

In a statement issued by Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis, the Governor blamed post-election letdown eral Rodriguez is the father-in-for his wife's alcohol problem. law of Stroessner's youngest Mrs. Dukakis was admitted to hol treatment program in a Rhode Island Hospital.

Following a coup on Fri-day, deposed President Alfredo Stroesaner flew to exile in Brazil. Stroessner, who ruled Paraguay for 34 years, was succeeded by General Andres Rodriguez. The new foreign minister, Luis Maria Argana, said that Rodriguez will call elections within 90 days. This statement met with some disbelief since President Stroessner also held regular elections, rigging the results, and Gen-

Delegates from the Polish Government, the Church, and the opposition opened talks in Warsaw. The Polish Interior Minister offered to legalize the banned union Solidarity if the union would agree to political and economic changes. The leader of the union, Lech Walesa, told the government that the Polish people wanted an end to stagnation in the economy and a dismantling of the Communist Monopoly.

Soviet Union In a statement released China, the two countries called withdrawal from Cambodia, an end to military aid, and free elections for that country. The Soviet Foreign Minister, Shevardnadze, who visited China last week, helped to draft the statement. Mr. Shevardnadze is currently in Pakistan meeting with Pakistani officials in an attempt to end the conflict in Afganistan. He said that although Moscow would continue to support the Kabul

Government, it would not send Soviet troops back into the Following violence over jointly by the Soviet Union and the weekend in the West Bank and Southern Lebanon, the for supervision of Vietnam's Israeli Government has formally requested that the US Government break off its dialogue with the PLO. The request came after Israel accused the PLO of sending gunmen from Lebanon to attack the northern Israeli border. Five Arabs were killed.

Patrick Aylwin has been chosen by the Christian Demo cratic Party as their candidate for the upcoming presidential election. Mr. Aylwin, who is a former senator, is expected to win the election. If he does, he will succeed Augusto Pinochet in 1990

compiled by Laura Hopper

Observations from both ends of the college spectrum

by Stephen Lorenz

This is an extremely small school. As a transfer student from Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, I have had the rare opportunity to see both ends of the college spectrum. If you are one of those people who thinks that a bigge school must be better than this hicktown college, you may change your mind by the end of this article actual physical size. Rutgers University is made up of five separate campuses which basically surround New Brunswick the "Hub City" of New Jersey, right off exit 9A on the turnpike. The school even has it's the 27 thousand member stu- the gym sized classroom.

dent body from campus to campus. That's right, I said 27 thousand students. And I can guarantee that a good portion of them would be crammed on the same bus as you when you have to get across town for your next class

If you think that your Biology course held in Norman James is a huge class, try to imagine taking an English course with over four hundred First let's just talk about of your fellow students in the same section. This size of class can only make life easy on you. The professor, or the teaching assistant more likely, is hardly about to take attendance and he's not about to ask you a question or wake you up when very own bus system to shuttle your about forty rows back in isn't long before you realize you're just another student ID number like everybody else.

"What about papers and exams?" you may ask. Well, I've written about as many papers in one semester here as I did in two years at Rutgers and I'm an English major. In those giant lecture classes, a midterm and final exam, both multiple choice was usually about it. Do not be misled, this system leads to paper scribbling and cramming of insanity inducing intensity. How they feed all those people is still beyond me. Students here may grumble and whine when they have to wait in line two minutes to get into dinner, but think about having It to wait half an hour just to get down to the where the food is. I ing in a slum. ate in a dining hall that was roughly the size of Kent Plaza with about eight thousand other students and if you think the food here is slightly bland then imagine the immense starch vats at a State University. To e honest, they did have passable meals and the occasional food fight was an interesting diversion

But how they housed all those people is not beyond me, they simply didn't. Only Freshmen were guaranteed a room in one of the dozens of six or more real partying would start. storied dorms. The rest would have to try to get a dorm room in the infamous "Lottery" or find a crowded place among the overpriced apartments, usually only a step away from liv-

The one other choice you had was to join a fraternity. To be honest, the frats here are that not all that impressive when compared to thirty or so houses on Fraternity Row. Especially memorable was the Lambda House, a coed fratsorority kind of thing. Monday was Mixed Drinks Night which usually carried over into Tequila Tuesdays and things would pick up a little on Thursdays for Golf Night in preparation for the weekends when the

I don't want to make it sound like it was all that bad. That size of a school will always attract a few good professors and the student centers had big continued on page 2

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 FREE Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcom.

Monday shooter nite

$2.00

Tuesday pitcher nite $3.50

Wednesday shot & draft $1.50

Thursday Ladies

Fri 2/10 Side Street - $3 cover Sat 2/11 Rick Ruse - no cover

515 Washington Street

Pip's Liquors

Hours: Monday thru Thursday- 9:00-8:00 Friday thru Saturday- 9:00-9:00

> Located at the Kent Plaza Phone: 778-0123

"apparent lack of willingness to identify whoever did the dam-relocate, despite the fact that Student Affairs cannot guarantee on campus housing. Bodnar stated, " they said that they were not aware of what legalities are involved. They will handle that if it happens."

Those students who are not relocated in campus facilities may be left on their own at a great financial loss. In addition all members may be fined.

main unrecognized until next

October, when they may exercise their right to petition that the fraternity be reactivated.

At that time the administration will review their petition and may or may not reinstate that this had to happen. It's not like we didn't see it coming, but it's a real shame, especially for seniors, who are no longer part of a fraternity, and for pledges, who never got the chance to

Said Bodnar, "It's a shame

Phi Sigma Kappa will re-

All members must then

Maxcy commented that regulations." Maxcy cited an age.

his is the mildest of graffiti which was written in the soot in the first or bathroom of East Hall. The Administration and the Fire Marshall wre unimpressed

Sigs violate social probation vandalizing has occurred a number of times, both preceding social probation and the recent decision to revoke recor-nition of the fraternity. "We cannot pin it down to any one issue. Stewardship has been a concern for a number of years.

It should be an objective of all of us, students and Administration, to maintain and improve the facilities here. On the issue of Stewardship, East Hall repthesituation seemed to reach a breaking point as fire broke out in the Sig's first floor bathroom and they were reportedly accused of violating probation by holding a rush party with alco-

The fire is currently un-hol present.

This past weekend though resents an ongoing problem.

Another incident cited was last semester's "flood" in East Hall. It is still unclear as to whether or not the Sigs are directly blamed. The Administration has pointed to a damaged toilet which may have been "ripped out of the wall" thereby causing the flood. Meanwhile members of the fraternity, among them Bodnar, claim that the water main which controls pressure for all Hill Dorms was turned all the way up to about twelve when it was supposed to be on about six"

The valve is not contained in East Hall; it is in another of the Hill Dorms. In addition, no reparations were made to students of East Hall for damages, while earlier, students of Queene Anne and Caroline received college funds to repair damages from flooding there.

"Statement of Mutual Responsibility" it says that, "The fraternity will be held liable and responsible for violations of fire

statistics

President for Admissions, called

"consistent with previous years." The transfers include students from Georgetown,

Boston College, William and

by Andrew Donaldson

der investigation by the State Fire Marshall and has been termed "suspicious". According to Student Affairs, if the cause is not construed as accidental or blame is not placed on any specific individual, then the Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity will hold ultimate responsibil-In the aforementioned know what it was like. Tuesday was the last day of Bodnar's term as President. No one was elected to fill the po-

Mary, and Penn State, among others. Most of the new stu-Transfer dents are originally from Maryland, with sizable contingents from Washington, D. C., and Pennsylvania, while there are Out of 41 applicants to two new foreign students, one Washington College Spring from South Africa and another semester, 28 were accepted and from China. Of the twentydecided to attend, a number which Kevin Coveney, Vice eight, 19 are female, including all three new to college, and 9

HEALTH CENTER COMMITTED TO SERVICE

y Tracey Connell The Washington College

lealth Service has reaffirmed ts commitment to providing quality health service to stu-Rente

Last week the Health Center handled over 351 flu plated visits. January thirtith was the busiest day, when inty five individuals came to hefacility. Fortunately the flu mer reached epidemic propor-

Staff at the center are also of the student body. They will tions provide referral to various support groups including Alco holics Anonymous, Alanon, and Alateen, Narcotics Anonymous Resident Assistants and repre and others.

Beth Roemer, of the Health Service, will conduct a variety of workshops in the upcoming months. Part of the "Personal Growth Series" Roemer will present a workshop entitled "Am I Blue" to concendenression

The Alcohol Education ncerned with mental health Series will consist of two sec-

The first will run Februa ary 15th, 21st, and 23rd. Only sentatives of fraternities and sororities may attend.

The second series will be held in March on the 21st, 28th, and 30th and will be open to the student body

Additional dates, titles trate on different aspects of and presenters will be announced

Complete Hair Care

are male

10 Visits for $40.00

to a year 'round, beautiful tank

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious, radiant tan that you can keep all year long. A tan you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to tan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting now way to tan. A single visit will convince you.

The Beauty Lounge Phone: 778-2635

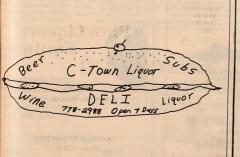

Callus

Cheatertown MD 21620

Cheatertown MD 21620

NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE

Complete Hell Cales Wangeres Sculptus

Having trouble choosing a major or career? The Career Development Center can help

by Anne Lindenbaum

The prospect of the real world looming ahead strikes fear into the hearts of many seniors preparing to leave school and home for the first

The challenge of finding that first serious job, as well, can sometimes seem overwhelming

At the Career Development Center, Director Linda Cades and career development counselor Vicki Sawyer take that challenge to heart by assisting many students in the search for jobs and graduate

"We try to assist students in any way we can in determining, and then implementing, whatever their long term goals are after they graduate from college," says Cades

"This includes everything from trying to do whatever selfassessment work is necessary to deciding what it is they'd like to do, and giving assistance in getting the experience to try out careers, either through internships, summer or part-time jobs, or volunteering," she says.

For the student - not necessarily a senior - who is at a loss as far as career plans go, the process of self-assessment can be an important one

Available on an individual basis with the counselors, the Life/Work Planning Workshop (four two-hour sessions). or a computer with a specialized data base, the process involves four basic components.

The first step involves a "Who am I?" session, followed by an assessment of the student's skills

Once all that is pulled together, the next step is "trying

Attention students. teachers.

· Have you ever participated in an Outward Bound Program? - Have you ever partici pated in the Peace Corps? - Do you remember the Woodstock Festival of '69?

If so, you could be in an upcoming Elm article.

Please respond via student mail to Jennifer Harrison or Anne Lindenbaum, All your help will be greatly appreciated.

to get an idea of what kinds of Center also holds workshops ety from babysitting to yardedge of themselves. They are then given information about occupations they might be inter- and lectures for resume writested in based on this knowl- ing, interviewing, and job the downtown stores search techniques.

One little known feature is also available for summer of the Center is the opportunity jobs and internships

Sharon Hurt, a Washington College employee, and Jim Jenkins, a student, serve the community particular occupations," says to videotape practice inter-Sawyer

"Hopefully this heads them in a direction that from there they can go and start using that information to do some more research, which we continue to help them with, butthen that segment becomes job search, as opposed to self-assessment and defining what it is you really want to do," Saw-

This process can be helpful not only to juniors and seniors in search of a career, but to freshmen and sophomores in search of a major

The Career Development

"If a student wants to practice, we'll set up a video camera, and then we interview them, and they have an opportunity to look at themselves; and that is really helpful. . . . It helps people see when they walk in the door what their demeanor is, how they sit. . . the students who have done it have really enjoyed it," explains Sawyer. Those looking for part-time work on campus or in the community may want to consult the 'jobs board' at the Career Development Center.

These jobs range in vari-

Cades sends a notice to seniors every two weeks containing information about recruiters coming to campus, lectures, workshops, and any jobs that she hears about.

work to salespeople needed in

A permanent 'jobs board'

"We get a lot of mail from employers letting us know that they are looking for this or that, and anything that I know about that applies to seniors will go in those notices," says Cades. Much of the information the Career Development Center houses is received through newspapers, magazines, and newsletters, and is updated frequently so that information does not become 'stale.'

professional associations that provide us with information The College Placement Council, for example, is an organiza. tion of practitioners doing exactly what we're doing, and one of the services they provide for the membership is a lot of information," says Cades.

"For example if we want information about job search techniques, they have a program on that, and can send us what we need," she adds.

So even if you feel overwhelmed, don't panic. Although some students may be capable of conducting a thorough job search while finishing their coursework, others may only feel comfortable determining what it is they want, and simply beginning the job search, as opposed to completing it.

"The first job is to get the diploma," says Cades. "I would hate to see somebody get so involved in the job search proc ess and devote so much time to it that they ruin the rest of their senior year. Ultimately, their grades and the rest of the year will matter in terms of gettings

The Career Development Center houses a wealth of information, including permanent and part-time job opportunities, internships, study-abroad opportunities, graduate schools and much more. And even the material is not immediately available, the Center's many contacts should make it acces

"We're here to help," says

"We can't always have a specific job for everybody, but we will do our best to help people make contacts and to put them in touch with organizations that they are interested in.

by volunteering their time on the Chesepeake Rescue Squad.

ON THE CHESTER RIVER

CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

TYLES

Austin Carpet 778-4656 Rt .213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Latest Hair Designs European Gun Coloring Facial Waxing, Ear Piercing, Skin Care, Nail Tips with Silk Wrap

Matrix

TANNING BED

Redken

Paul Mitchell

778-2686 Rt. 213 Chestertown, Md. President Cater Requests
Your Company for a Formal Dinner Proceeding
Washington's Birthday Ball.

An Elegant Buffet

Dinner will be held Hynson

Lounge at 7:30

on the Evening of the Ball

Dinner is FREE

for all Boarders.

Make your reservations with Student Affairs or the Alumni House.

DON'T DRINK & DRIVE!

FREE Limo Service is Available. Call ex. 462 for information

Basketball closes in on best season ever

by Don Steele The basketball team is on a role going into the stretch

Going into Wednesday's game against Haverford the Sho'men had won five straight. Now with three games left including showdowns against team is set to make this season one of the most successful in

W.C. history Against York College the performance to win 76-64. Chris Brandt led the team with 21 points. Tim Keehan had a solid 16 point performance. The team shot a very impressive 87% from the charity stripe made the difference in the final minutes. Tom Auvil had a steady 11 point, 10 rebound outing in the low the M.A.C. championship.

post performance. The win put the squad at 16-4 in the season. Against Western Maryland Keehan and Brandt switched positions as leading scorers. Keehan lit up the scoreboard with 25 points while Brandt followed with a flamboyant 22 points. The low post Johns Hopkins and Ursinus the tandem of Auvil and Chris Jamke scored 14 and 10 points respectively. Auvil and Jamke also silenced the Western Mary land crowd by rejecting a dunk. team overcame a poor shooting Again the free throw line proved to be the wrong place to send the team. The Shoremen shot 85% from the line.

The team plays Ursinus the line. That performance from tomorrow and has home dates against Widener and Hopkins. Next Friday's home game against Hopkins should decide

Swimmers win state championships

by Kathy Brewster Last Sunday the Washington College Swim Team "closed the gap" winning the Maryland State Championship.

the top by a total team effort providing many exceptional each swims. The top champions of freshman, in the 100 breast and Coach Berry also stated that some excellent swims by by 25 points over St. Mary's.

Samantha Streamer who placed 2nd in the 200 and 50 free, and Karen Brady placing 2nd in the 500 and 200 also helped bring the team up to 1st place. Beth The team was pulled to Jarret and Stephanie Milton

the meet were Jen Korten with "This win has been very meana repeat state win in the 50 ingful for our seniors because it backstroke, Leslie Newcomb, completes a progression they started as freshman in taking Kasey Carroll winning the 800 4th place at the championships. and 400 IM, 200 butterfly and They have progressively improved to win 1st this year."WC won the State Championship

Coach Berry also stated.

photo by Tom Cushing squad will post the winningest record in the history of the program.

Senior Steve Brody, #24 goes up against a York defender as fellow Sho'men sophomore Charles Duckett #12 looks on. The Sho'men defeated York 76-64 and move onto play their final three games of the regular season against Ursinus, Widener and Johns Hopkins. By defeating their remaining opponents, this year's contributed nineteen points Last year St. Mary's beat them by 300 points.

> The team had set several goals for themselves at the beginning of the season. Among them was to reach their true swimming potential, gain a winning season, win the state meet and make the top ten in the MAC Division. The team aims to achieve goals the remaining

Team captain Elizabeth The squad came away from the Rexon has played an important role this season for the team. can ask for nothing better than man, to keep things in perspecmeets on Wedenesday against Swarthmore and Bryn Mawr.

The swim team had dual competition 1-1, having defeated Bryn Mawr 98-24, and Coach Berry says that a "coach losing to Swarthmore 72-50. Highlight of the evening a team captain and Elizabeth helps everyone, especially fresh-was Casey Carroll winning the 500 and 200 meter freestyle, and also the 200 meter butter

In their next competition the squad faces Goucher Col lege Wednesday evening.

The Washington College Film Series Presents

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 p.m.

Friday, February 10 * Sunday, February 12 Monday, February 13

Students, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All Others $2.00

Read, Gewer compete in national tournament

by Jim Lim

Amid the chilling, sub zero emperatures of Minneapolis, Vinnesota Washington College ophomore Scott Read and inior Larry Gewer heated up hetennis courts at the prestig-Rolex National Small Colege Championships.

The weekend tournament. felded the top Division Il and layers in the country.

Only eight players qualifed for the singles draw and 6-2 in the consolation draw. Red earned a spot along with the history of the national tour- Division II, Vesta Punkka of

Read drew the second seed, Jean Lagiorie from Abraset 6-2, Read came back in the second set and fought back to a ior college player 7-5. in MAIA and Junior College Read bounced back by whipping Division Il star, Tom and Gewer met the #1 ranked Racism taints sportswriters and commentators

Tennessee-Martin.

Following his singles competition, Read teamed up ham Baldwin, giving him a run with Washington's top seeded for his money. Losing the first player Larry Gewer in the doubles competition.

The Read-Gewer team 5-5 deadlock before finally suc-qualified for the tournament be cumbing to the #1 ranked jungaining a #1 pre-season ranking, earning one of four spots in the doubles draw.

In the opening round Read Burwell of Cal-Riverside, 6-4, junior college team in the nation, losing in consecutive 6-3 In his final match, Read sets. Althoughin a losing cause, bedistinction of being the first was defeated in consecutive 6-4 both Washington players dem-Birision III representative in sets by the #2 ranked player in onstrated exciting team tennis

Washington College sophomore Scott Read made history last weekend being the first Division III representative at the Rolex National Small College Championships playground tales. This to me shows hard work and natural ability on both sides. Intuition and intelligence are also fairly similar but it belittles the black

Thomas are two of games pre- classical dance. mier point guards today. Both are more assist men then scorers. Stockton "finds the open man" and has a "great knowledge" of the game. Thomas though, makes "things happen" and "has great court sense." These are two comments that again describe the same player question: In the 1912 Stock but the racial undertones give the impression that one is more

Those generalizations are commentators make are.

People talk about racial equality but it is going to be name and answer and please hard to make anything happen drop it off in the Coffee House. until sports writers and commentators listen to how they

and the blacks credit for their intelligence and forget the generalizations that surround the different races in sports.

Don Steele is a sopho-John Stockton and Isaih more planning to major in

Sports trivia

This week's question: Who is credited towards inventing the modern game of Basket-

The answer to last week's holm Olympics Jim Thorpe did not win the individual events natural and the other is more in the long jump and the high

> The correct answer to this question will win a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. Fill out on a piece of paper, your

*In the event that more than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing

NEED A TUX?

LAST DAY TO ORDER YOUR TUX IS MONDAY. FEBRUARY 13, SO HURRY!

Bramble's Tradition Clothing

For Men and Women

Downtown Chestertown 778-6090

gracism with their generaliions. These generalizations hittle both the white and black filtes. These comments also dimore to the stereotypes that ound athletes iniall Cunningham were the starting quarterbacks in is year's Pro-Bowl. Both Mess similar qualities in that y stramble and innovate the quarterback position. difference in their game is the public sees them. ison is the "intelligent quar-

Don Steele

sthen that it struck me that esecommentators are spread-

Whilewatching the Super terback" and knows "how to by four professional teams, swlafriend of mine made the avoid trouble." Cunningham Murphy is praised for his work mment "Do you notice how on the other hand is described mmentators describe black as a "natural athlete" and an belittle his natural ability. This athlete layers as 'great natural ath-"innovator."

credit for his intelligence nor will they give Esiason credit for his athletic ability. These same racist generalizations are prevalent throughout the game. White players are never given credit for athletic ability, or instinct nor are black players given credit for intelligence, or

These comments also pop Boomer Esiason and up in baseball, basketball, and other sports. Dale Murphy and Dave Winfield are two great baseball players that play with similar styles but are compared quite differently. Murphy is praised for his power, his arm and defensive skills, so is Win-ethic and other talents that is wrong because he is a treits and white players are the same talents but was one of the most highly These comments describe mendous natural athlete who they won't give Cunningham recruited high school tootball players in the country. Also Murphy is praised for his work with charity and church and his good values, while the "Winfield Foundation" is rarely mentioned when people talk

> Basketball also has racial comments surrounding the sport. While players natural talent is forgotten and they are often described as "hard workers," a "throwback to the old wrong just as the ones that days of basketball" and of course is "intelligent." Black players are praised for their "intuition." "natural ability," and "innova-tions to the sport." Whites are often remembered for their field. Winfield though is agreat hours of shooting in the empty describe players. Give the natural athlete who was drafted gym stories and blacks for their whites credit for their ability to determine the winner.

about Dave Winfield.

Roast honors Goldstein's fifty year service

by Michele M. Volansky

Washington College's Campaign for Excellence and the Louis L. Goldstein Chair in Public Policy were both given tremendous financial support and large moral boosting on Monday night in a threehundred dollar per person event titled, "The Louis L Goldstein Great Roast." The event, organized in part by the Development Office of Washington College, (who, along with the members of the Fred "Dutch" Dumschott Society acted as hosts to the event) served as the means for providing the political public information regarding the high academic standards Washington College offers and to roast Maryland's, and the United States', longest serving elected official, Louis L. Goldstein, a man who was toasted as know ing "more about the state of Maryland than any other living individual " by Governor William Donald Schaefer Goldstein, a life-time resident of Calvert County, was ion, with such political luminaries present as Governor William Donald Schaefer serving as the Honorary Master of Ceremonies, George Wills (of Wills and Associates) and John Moag (of Patton, Boggs and Blow) serving as co-chairmen and Bruce Bereano, lobbyist, serving as chairman of the Benefactor Committee. evenings entertainment was aptly provided for by popular political satirist Mark Russell who used the evening not only to hand out humor on Gold stein, but also to "welcome" President George Bush into Goldstein's remarkable career began in 1935, when he graduated from Washington College with a Bachelor of Science degree. From there, he attended the University of Maryland, where, in 1938, he earned a Juris Doctor Degree. In the same year, he was voted into the House of Delegates, representing Calvert County. In 1942, Goldstein entered the Marine Corps, where his service included sitting on General Douglass MacArthur's War Washington College wherever and Walter Carrington. Crimes Commission. Upon the he goes completion of his military duty, he was voted, in 1946, to the stein will forever remain a State Senate from Calvert permanent fixture at Washington College in part because of County. His term in the Senate the Louis L. Goldstein Chair in included service as senate majority leader (1951-55) and Public Policy. Established in as senate president. (1955-58) 1984 through funding from a During this time, (1957) Goldthree hundred thousand dollar endowment given by the Hodstein was voted to the Board of Visitors and Governors of son Trust of the Beneficial Washington College, where he Corporation, along with funds received at a testimonial dinhas served since that time, being elected its President in ner featuring Henry Kissinger and contributions made by 1980. He was elected in 1958 to Goldstein himself. The Chair's the position of State Comptroller of Maryland, a position which he has held for an ungoal is to bring political leaders to the Washington College campus to teach courses and precedented eight terms. Deguide students towards public spite such an extensive and elite policy. Since its inception in political career, Goldstein can 1984, the Chair has brought be viewed still as "a graduate of such figures as Richard Bolling, Washington College," a title of which he most proud. He is quoted as stating, "I am very proud to be associated with

Washington College, as a graduate and chairman of its Board of Visitors and Governors."

Douglass Cater, Washington College's President of seven years, observed at the roast that

Washington College." Gover-

President and Mrs. Cater join honoree Louis Goldstein, President of the Board of Visitors and Governors at Washington College and State Comptroller, at Monday night's roast for Goldstein.

One of the most entertain-

The name of Louis Gold- ing facets of the roast was the performance given by Mark Russell, Russell, familiar to viewers of public television and known for his newspaper column, delighted the audience with his quips on Chestertown, calling it "the dullest place on earth" and on Vice-President Dan Quayle: "We'd all have to light a candle at St. Matthew's Cathedral if he became President." Russell served as a re minder that those in public office need to sit back and relax somewhat in order to make their job bearable. However, judging from Louis Goldstein's career he deserved to sit back and rest years ago. The honor presente to him was most deserved in light of the years of dedication Gale McGee, LaDonna Harris

Political satirist Mark Russell entertained the audience Monday with his quips on Louis Goldstein and other political figures.

Freshman talent shines

ting together the Freshman (the only non-poet) Vaness Reading on Tuesday night was Post, Josef Hamilton and Cind the fact that, according to professor Calvin Forbes, "there was Goldstein is, "a great lover of such an abundance of talent."

Judging from thenumber of interested faculty, students nor Schaefer made a similar and friends at the O'Neill Litremark, in "He really sells erary House, (almost thirty in attendance) news of the talent in the freshman class is widespread. Readers included, in order of their reading: Andy Donaldson, Stephanie Hess,

The only difficulty in put- Kate Absher, Jenifer Grindle

Thethemes and feeling behind works of theauthor were diverse, yet all displaye the potential that these fresh man have. The College cor munity congratulates the pa ticipants of the Freshm Reading and encourages the to continue writing. After in three years, someone have to win the Sophie Kerr

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

Ye Olde Towne Barber & Stylists

contracted and and access to the contract of the first own which

Couple joined in Sophie Kerr Reading

by Sabrina Kenny Two days after Valentine's

Day, on Thursday February 16th, the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series continues to capture the romantic mode by bringing a couple, Jack Stevens and his wife, Julia Wendell from Sparks, Maryland to read from

Mr. Stevens, having received his B.A. at Arizona State University, his M.A. from John Hopkins University, and his M.F.A. from University of Iowa currently serves as a lecturer at Goucher and Loyola Colleges Ms. Wendell, who received her B.A. from Cornell, her M.A. from Boston University and her M.F.A. from the University of Iowa, has been an instructor at University of Iowa and Arizona State University. Tothe Galileo Press in Baltimore.

novel, Triangulation, will not be available in print until January 1990, he has written numerous poems that have appeared in a number of literary reviews. Further honors include awards from Maryland State Arts Council Individual Artist's Fellowship for Fiction, Glendon Swarthout Award, and the

Although Jack Steven's

tional Society of Arts and Let-

Julia Wendell's poems have appeared or are forthcoming in magazines such as American Poetry Review, Quarterly West, Antioch Review, Chowder Review, Missouri Review, recently released book of poand Crazyhorse. In addition to having a love for writing, Ms. Wendell has also studied piano,in part due to intensive study at Cornell Cincinnati Conservatory. Norman Dubie has also compared her poetry to

Memorial Award for the Na- "music [that]...is alwaysconfessing something...Storms of light and storms of darkness traverse one another...the air cleans, all colors are rinsedwe are not unchanged, and yet amazingly we are allowed to feel like ourselves again." Her etry titled, An Otherwise Perfect History goes back to the Valentine's Day motif, is dedicated to her husband

The couplel will appear together in the Sophie Kerr Room at 8:00 p.m.

Members of the freshman class take part in the Freshman Reading

ampus calendar: events for Feb. 10-16

Weekend Feb. 10, 12,

The Film Series presents gether, they are the editors of one of the funniest movies of the year - A Fish Called Wanda. The film, starring John Cleese as a "very proper barrister", Jamie Lee Curtis as " a crafty American" with hilarious support given by Kevin Kline in his most unique role yet. This is a film you can't afford to miss

Monday Feb. 14

The Monday Tea and Talk Series will offer the insights of Professor Robert Fallaw speaking on the "Early American Indians of the Eastern Shore." All are urged to attend both the tea, at four PM and the talk following at four-thirty in the O'Neill Literary House, to gain a glimpse of the history which surrounds us.

Tuesday Feb. 14

The "Voices and Visions' Film Series will explore the life and writings of poet Emily Reading Room of the O'Neil Department will present the Literary House.

Also on Tuesday will be a teagiven in honor of Valentine's Day and of the visiting students from the Soviet Union. The tea is being offered by the Dean of the College and the Dean of Students from four to five PM in Hynson Lounge.

Wednesday Feb. 15

As part of the celebrations surrounding Afro-American tained in an article on this page.

Dickinson at eight PM in the History Month, the Music talk "Universal Characteristics of Afro-American Music." The talk will be given by Dominique DeLerma at seven-thirty in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library.

Thursday Feb. 16

The poetry and prose of Jack and Julia Wendell will be read by the authors themselves in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library at Eight PM. More information may be ob-

Special Thanks-

are in order to the Development Office and the members of the celebrated. "Dutch" Dumschott Society for their generous hospitality and assistance at the Louis L. Goldstein Roast. Let the ELM know if we can repay the favor!

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave Chestertown, Md. 21620 Janie Thompson 788-0898

HELP!!!!

The ELM is still looking for a cartoonist. Get published! Earn money! Submit your samples to Jennifer Harrison, Michele Volansky or to the ELM via student mail.

SUMMER JOBS ENTREPRENEURS Own & operate your own business

this summer & earn over $5,000 Asphalt sealing franchise for college students, call Collegiate Sealers, Inc. for info & application 1-800-

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

Cable rights

continued from page one campus (even in renovated dorms) provided that the lines are carefully buried underground, and that haphazard and unsightly wiring would cease, replaced with the least obtrusive hookup possible, in order to maintain the aesthetic integrity of the dorms.

His comments centered on the fact that Simmons was told that they could bury their lines along with the college's in January, but were never notified about when to do so. The fault by Patricia Karnes for that, maintains Hessey, lies in contradictory and faulty communication on the part of both Tri-M and Simmons. The Simmons Cable Company was not available for comment at the time of this printing.

Fire Department on campus over weekend

continued from page one nated from an icebox set up for beer taps. An investigation was projected to begin this Thursday, February 9th.
Although it has been speculated that it was not one of the members of the dorm, possibly a visiting student from around campus or a person from the Chestertown community set the blaze, said Niel.

Jerry Roderick, Chief of Washington College Security, no definite statement.

commented that, "Anyone who knows anything should contact myself or the fire marshall with the information. Confidentiality will be kept, no names shall be taken down.

A gas leak from oil tanks located behind cardinal dorms was also reported late last week. The Chestertown Fire Department answered this call, admitting "that there may have been a small leak", but giving

Miller Library offers van service

Seniors have begun re searching for their senior obli-With this process comes a lot of time in the library trying to find information on chosen topics. When Miller Library does not have the magazines needed by students, they can be easily obtained through the Maryland Network or other sources by filling in pink periodical request forms. Books can be requested in the same way, but a yellow book request form needs to be completed. Sometimes the library is unable to fill requests and students need to realize the various reasons why and in addition be aware of services offered that may help to compensate Periodical request forms enable the staff of the library services department to order periodicals that Miller Library does not purchase. These articles are gathered by a system called "inter-library loan". Through this cooperative, many Maryland schools combine their resources to better assist students. The service does not cost anything. If by chance a Maryland library does not carry the periodical needed, requests can be obtained from a library out of state. This particular service usually involves a fee; it is usually up to twenty-five cents a page. Books can be ordered out of state also, but their fees

Requests are usually filled each week. "On the average, 15-20 requests are returned to the library for processing; although there may be 40 or more some weeks and other weeks, none at all." said Chris Fischer, a senior who works in the reader services department of the library. Due to copyright compliance laws, some requests can not be honored

As Lois Kuhn, a library specialist, explained, 'We are only allowed five articles from one magazine title within the current five year period.

For many seniors, this may be devastating, but not hopeless. The college understands the necessity of these articles to students' research.

so a culture van has been arranged to take anyone needing research materials to the Li brary of Congress or the University of Delaware, where these articles can be obtained for a small fee to cover photo-

The van will be in service February 11 to the Library of Congress, February 18 to the University of Delaware, March 4 to the Library of Congress and March 25 to the Library of Congress. All of these dates are on Saturdays. The van will depart at 9:00 A.M. Behind William Smith.

Transportation to and from these libraries is free, but because the van only holds up to 14 people, reservations are

If anyone would like a copy of the dates and times that the culture van will be making its trips to the University of Delaware or the Library of Congress, or if you have any questions, contact Jeff Chaffin in the library or Diane Larrimore in Student Affairs.

> Come Celebrate the

> > with us

at the

New

River Inn

on the

Chester River

Friday:

'All You Can Eat

Steamed Shrimp

Night

Restaurant

Birthday Ball

Mom's Cookie Jar

It is documented that the average American adult gains 1 pound per year. That does not sound like much until you figure that it adds up to a 30 pound gain by age 55. There are exciting and enjoyable approaches in order to maintain the weight gain. Just think activity. If you engage in some kind of activity you burn up calories faster than if you are inactive. Climb stairs instead of usuing the elevator. Eat lightly in the evening when you are least likely to be active, or take a stroll after dinner. A 30 minute walk of about a mile each day will use up 75 to 120 calories. Thats enough to prevent that yearly

THE WASHINGTON BALL BUFFET WILL BE HELD SATURDAY FEBRUARY 18,1989 from 7:30 P.M. to 8:30 P.M.. Attendance by reser vation only. Board students free, guests $11.25. Make reservations through alumini house ext. 462. Dress is formal. THe menu will feature Prim Rib, Scalloped oysters, Long grain rice with red and green peppers. Hope to see you there.

Until Next week

THE RIVER INN

ROLPH'S WHARF

Waterfront Dining . Fireside Lounge Saturday Night Entertainment

Country Inn 778-1988

River Inn Restaurant 778-3227 Rooms Now Available

$9.95 Saturday: 778-1133 Land & Sea Buffe $13.95

Only Five Miles From College on Route 213 Reservations accepted now Live Entertainment

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

olume 60, Number 16-

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 17, 1989

SGA Treasurer faces allegations

by Tracey Connell The Washington College dent Government Associanannounced the as yet unofal resignation of Treasurer, Tom Jackson, at a meeting ly this week. Perry Finney, APresident, cited an alleged at "we are by no means a georajury in this instance."

al authorities are currently ducting an investigation. vid Newell, the SGA advipossible evidence toward alleged misappropriation on to surface last month mGene Hessey, Senior Vice sident for Management and ince, received a telephone from Chesapeake Bank and ust. The SGA had bounced eral checks. Hessey immeately notified President Finand suggested that he colthnancial records for review.

Finney made several at-mpts to obtain the documention. Upon receiving it, he m had not carried out his every day." ties in a very efficient way reshouldn't have been overwn accounts," said Newell. Suspicions were based on $16,970.00 figure from the ginning of the semester, me of which was committed forewe got it," Newell stated. sident Finney confirmed his ment. In addition Finney ed the last Treasurer's Ret, in which Jackson said that SGA account held an excess $12,000.00. The SGA has at time only about $4,000.00 the bank Newell remembered that atively small and even when ot to about $800.00 it wasn't thing that it is now."

Rob Albers, Vice President the SGA, Finney and Profes-Newell set up a meeting th Jackson to discuss the mation "one or two weeks Jackson did not attend. that time the group consulted sey and other members of campus. * Administration esident and Deputy to the writing.

and ultimately consulted the Board Executive Committee, which has the power to act for the Board of Visitors and Governors and is headed by the Honorable Louis Goldstein. They decided to hand matters sappropriation of funds in his over to local authorities. Finney ort to the Senate, stressing was very careful in his treatment of the issue at the SGA meeting this week. "There are several alleged violations of duty on behalf of our Treas-According to Professor J. urer, who once was our Treasurer. Because of this I have asked him to step down. He has not yet at this point; perhaps he will do that later. What happened was he allegedly misappropriated money and he has apparently neglected his duties as Treasurer. Because of these apparent violations he is no longer serving in the capacity....of Treasurer in that he no longer write checks on the SGA account ... The Estimation of damage at this point to the SGA Treasury is not been taken into consideration bes alerted to evidence that cause bills keep arriving in Finney then opened the ere were unpaid bills and floor to questions. When asked if the allegations may amount to a mistake in judgment Perry conceded that."From what I an tell there was blatant malfeasance of duty to warrant this," but that it very well could be a misjudgment.

The Senate passed a motion that he and Vice President Albers jointly assume the responsibilities of Treasurer and later they gave Finney a vote of confidence in the manner in which he conducted his office. agreeing that they wish him to continue. Finney had stated first the discrepancy "seemed that if did not receive the vote he intended to resign.

Currently the matter is under investigation and great care has been exercised by everyone involved. Finney stated at the meeting that all Senators should realize their delicate position and should be careful not help to create a judgmental atmosphere on Soviet students visited campus this week to get a taste of American college life. Washington College greeted the Soviets in a formal gethering, but also informaly in such places as the Dining Hall, for dinner, and the Coffeehouse, where they enjoyed a game of pool

Students may win cable battle

Representatives from

Simmons Cable TV and the Washington College Administration met Wednesday of this past week amidst a flurry of confusion and complaints. Though they discussed possible reactivation of cut cable lines and installation of cable in the new and renovated dorms, no definite agreement emerged.

At the beginning of this semester many students were shocked to find their cable service suddenly discontinued as above ground lines were buried in order to "beautify the

Subscribing individuals received no prior notice from the cable company or the college and they soon learned that According to Hessey, he decording to Hessey, he decording to Hessey, he decording to Hessey, Senior Wise for comment at the time of this their money from either source.

Gene Hessey, Senior Vice Gene Hessey, Senior Vice cable in dormitories."

Finance, and Clint Baer, Director of Planning and Special Projects, made conflicting statements as to the causes and implications of the issue. Hessey cited "personnel changes" while Baer implied direct intention on the part of the administration saying, "cables were removed when installing the electric distribution and communication lines."

Hessey obviously suported cable as an educational tool. Last week's Elm reported, "He also mentioned that the College's CATV franchise had been awarded to Simmons by WC and that part of the agreement entailed free service to neighboring public schools."

Meanwhile Clint Baer wrote in a memo, " our educational policy does not support

Hessey and Baer met with Simmons representative Robert Plumber. According to discussion has been handled concerning the reactivation of cut lines to East West, Middle, Kent, Queen Anne and Caroline dormitories. We also discussed pre-wiring on Reid Minta Martin and the Cardinal dorms. There's nothing definite on that yet though. Baer declined to comment on or confirm Plumber's statement. Vice President Hessey stressed that the college thought only to "entertain a proposal from Simmons. We are examining the alternatives. We will be taking a deeper look into the issue."

No date was projected for finalization of the plans.

Sigs fuming over eviction

The brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa who are residents of East Hall were ordered to remove themselves and their belongings from the dormitory by this weekend. Unfortunately this decision will cause many negative repercussions.

Nearing the mid-semester mark, the eviction is a tremen-dous inconvenience which will manifest itself in the academic performance of members of a fraternity, who are, first of all, students. And forced to find new housing in a short period of time, and move their belongings, these students are also sidetracking their academic pursuits. And most disturbing about the incident is that the Administration has not shown any concern for East Hall residents as students.

Another concern in this matter is the procedure with which this eviction has been carried out. To begin with no written explanation or guidelines was received from the administration in regards to future residence in East Hall or elsewhere. In this regard I feel that the Administration failed to pursue the proper channels in its actions. Is it possible the Administration was trying to keep us in the dark?

There has been made available no written report on how the fire was actually started, and there has been no effective investigation carried out to identify the guilty party. The residents of East Hall have been considered guilty until proven

First of all it has been said by the State Fire Marshall and others who were on the scene, that the fire started inside a cold box (a cooler that is made solely of metal and plastic) which to my knowledge contains no spontaneously-combustable prod-

So most likely it was arson. The first problem with this assessment is that no one, no matter what their state of mind, would set fire to their own residency. If in fact the fire did start inside the cold-box, then why was it carelessly discarded out the window and left unattended, rather than being more closely examined as evidence

Secondly the school argues that the residents have been evicted to "ensure their safety" from another incident, reaso ing that the perpetrator may be lurking with pyromaniacal tendencies. This arguement is invalid. If the school is in fact concerned about an incident such as fire, then how come the smoke-detectors were inoperable, What's the point of having life rafts if they are not properly inflated? If the smoke-detec-tors had been operational it is certain that the extent of the fire damage would not have been so great.

Literally once the smoke cleared it was hinted, yet not directly stated to the residents that we would be forced to find alternative housing for the remainder of the semester, either on or off-campus. Once word was handed down to the resident that we would be evicted, we had only six days until Sunday 4 pm in which to find housing. Even if in fact an arsonist had set the fire, what is to say he won't strike elsewhere (knock on wood). This has placed a considerable burden on the residents of East Hall: who are forced to find housing through realtors on our own time, with no assistance from the school

Carter H. Boatner

| Editors                       |                      |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| News Editor                   | Tracey Connell       |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum      |
| Sports Editor                 |                      |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansky  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson        |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Karr            |
| Managers                      |                      |
| W                             | DIII Darleman        |

Advertising Manager
Circulation Manager
Assistant Circulation Manager Erin Hodge-Willia es Sobezal Office Manager Julie Greene and Cathy Lease

TEDOS OS SYOUR LAST CHANGE

I'M REALLY SORRY, SIR. IT MUST HAVE BEEN THE SCALLON MORE WORRYING INTOXICATED DATE WILL INTOXICATED DATE WILL PURE IN FRONT OF DOUG AND LIBBY, A SCENE FROM WHICH OYSTERS. YOU'LL NEVER RECO TO BOW OUT OF THE BIRTH YOUR SOUAL POISE DAY BALL BEFORE THE HOR-1:0 ON BO YOU HOW BOYOU WALK IN THAT THINGS THINK ABOUT IT & YOU CAN KICK BACK, RELAN DRINK A FEW, AND PASS OUT, JUST LIKE

Letters to the Editor Remove all

distractions

With all this talk of the rights of students to cable television, I think it is about time someone spoke up in support of the actions of Clint Baer, Director of Long Range Planning at Washington College. He should be praised for the measure he took, as it is about time some one realized the numerous non academic distractions at Washington College. As a matter of fact, I have a few additional suggestions to Mr. Baer and those who took part in this decision, which would reduce the number of these distractions for students on campus

First, cable television is not the only form of video entertainment which takes up precious time_the three networks alone can be quite a distraction. I would recommend that the college either ban all television sets in dorm rooms or invest in a T.V. transmission scrambler which could be used to knock out these distractions before they hit our T.V. antennas The latter recommendation would also solve a second distraction, those offensive stereos, radios, and other forms of musical entertainment. Removing all of these audio and visual entertainment systems would provide much more needed time for study.

I wonder if Mr. Baer has noticed how much time students spend sitting in the dining hall after they finish their meals when they could be pursuing academics? I would propose that the dining hall remove all desserts and enforce a 20 minute turn-over for seats during Without question, the arcade and student center should be removed, as well as all the records, posters, and cards from the bookstore. Does anyone notice how much time students spend browsing in the Damned Independent". But l bookstore or playing pool when books? In addition, let's take a serious look at the necessity of other distractions such as the fitness center, the swim center, varsity sports, intermural sports, students vehicles, park benches, the film series, magazines in the library, campus publications, student clubs, and other non-academic endeavors. Only when all of these

they could be pouring over wasteful distractions are removed will I be able to sleep peacefully at night. Once again, would like to thank Mr. Baer for removing one of these sober, non-alcoholic, and harmless forms of entertainment and to consider removing the rest. We should all appreciate the fact that we have people at W.C. who will protect us from making quasi-adult decisions and practicing any degree of selfdiscipline and time management before we get out into the real world where these types of decisions will never face us. Warmest regards,

Tony Caligiuri, Junior Steven Bruchey, Sophomore John Olson, Senior Chris Hansen, Sophomore

Peace in the

Middle East

Mr. Daniel C. Kurtzer, a Middle East specialist on the policy planning staff of the State Department, will speak on "The Status of the Middle East Peace Process" on Thursday, February 23, at 7:00 p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room of Miller Library. A career diplomat, Mr. Kurtzer has served as political officer in Cairo and Tel Aviv. He became Deputy Director of Egyptian Affairs in August

Mr. Kurtzer's visit to campus is sponsored by the Inter-national Relations Club. A reception will follow the talk. here as anywhere else.

continued from page 4

am a G.D.I. with the advantage of having seen the close ties that greek life can build. I would love for people to have the bonds the experience, that my father had. But your own beloved greek system is being destroyed by all of this petty bullshit. It your fraternity or sorority means that much to you, then don't destroy yourselves by perpetuating hate among each other. Isn't it time to bury the hatchet? I know I would sleep

continued from page three

measures against law-breakers. If you are not going to break the law, why should you worn about undercover agents keep ing an eye on you? And if you are going to break the law, then getting caught is a risk you assume when you make that decision. These agents are not in any way a violation of constitutional rights. They are simply observers, pretending to be something they aren't. Frankly, if they help in any way to prevent the sort of alcohol related problems that cropped up at the Bid Night party last week end, for example, I am right behind them.

I have no objection is people having a good time, and I certainly understand how these substances can enhance that. But I hardly think thats good time is worth the count less number of lives that hart been lost, and problems that have been caused, by drugs and alcohol. That is why society restricts their use. If you dis agree, then you are within you rights to attempt to change the law. Until that law is changed however, you have a responsi bility to obey it. This College's not an island exempt from cer tain laws of the land, and the appropriate agencies have as much right to enforce the laws

ISSUE: Is there an alcohol / drug problem on campus? If so does it warrant the use of undercover agents at Washington College?

W.C. has problems like the rest of society

in, I suppose I need a twoart answer. The first part of the question needs a bit of defi-What qualifies as a problem"? Let's look at some fthe negative aspects of alcool on this campus. People get dnink, They get in fights. They mmitacts of vandalism. They we sex with people they norsally wouldn't have sex with, d neglect the precautions hey usually take. They get so dounk that they fear for their health, and in some cases for heir life, and other people end no having to give up their evening to babysit for a twentyomost of these same problems

leohol problem

w I would call this a drug/alcohol related deaths in this country, I would go as far as to say that our whole society is currently grappling with a very serious and deadly drug/alcohol problem. I could rattle off the many ways in which we pay for our good time, but it would be a simple repeat of everything we heard about in our fifth grade alcohol awareness program. We all know that drugs and alcohol can become very serious problems if used irresponsibly.

Which leads very nicely into part two of the question, which is actually the more inwear-old "adult". Drugs can lead teresting and important part.

You say, "Okay, irresponsible people become a problem when they use such substances. tain restrictions on our own

With the incidence of drug/ But I have been drinking and using drugs for years, and have never caused anyone a problem. Why can't I do what I want if I am not hurting anyone?" Indeed, perhaps it is not fair to have undercover agents tampering with what has been a problem-free way of life for so many people. Indeed the majority of people who illegally use drugs and alcohol on this campus do so responsibly, at least most of the time. This is the big objection that I would think would be raised. Yet there is a very good reason why society must have a way to enforce the rules that it has set on it-

As social creatures, we find it necessary to impose cerKen Winkler behavior for our own protection. That is why we come up with such prudent laws as, "it's not nice to murder people", etc. But we are not talking about murder here. Aren't there different degrees of breaking the law? Killing someone is a bit more serious than driving your car at fifty-eight m.p.h.. Many people would group marijuana use and drinking at age nineteen along with the latter; it is a minor infraction that should be overlooked. For many people it is. I know I personally did not wait until I was twenty-one to have my first drink, and I have

did anything wrong

The catch is that if an officer had hassled me for being drunk at nineteen, I would not have felt he was doing something wrong either. In the same way, he is not doing anything wrong if he gives you a ticket for driving at fifty-eight milesper-hour. As a part of this society, we must agree to obey its laws, whether we agree with the laws themselves or not. If you make a conscious decision to break the law, you take the risk of being caught. That is your decision. But society needs to have the ability to take

continued on page two Ken Winkler is a senior

JR Francomard Freshman Baltimore, Maryland No I do not believe there is a drug problem on WC campus.

Greg Oliver Freshman Columbia, Maryland Yeah, there's a definite drug problem with some people but an undercover agent is not

Freshman York, Pennsylvania I do not think the problem is bad enough to use undercover agents unless there is a huge see the problem never had a serious problem majoring in philosophy.

Stephen Lorenz Junior Alexandria, Virginia

any crack gangs here. Outside should get beat up. of the inner city, narcs are the drug dealing on campus. I don't traitors and spies in a hysterical U.S. government't "War on Drugs", really a war on its own

Michael Winslow Sophomore Alexandria, Virginia Long Island, New York
You aren't going to find Yes, but any undercover people

by Maggie Carr

Undercover cops would undermine the Honor Code

The other day I said to byself, "Wouldn't it be interesting to see a graph tracing he highs (no pun intended) and hws of marijuana and alcohol use over the past two decades # Washington College?" The answer to this question is a resounding "Yes!"

It done the research required it such a graph and, to tell the truth, not many people would ist couldn't escape the vision of a 1968 WC: students baskg in the early autumn sun, lowning a few beers while a weet herbal scent hung, ripe and delicious, in the air. The question, however, is whether or not a drug/alcohol problem exists at WC right now I would like to preface my argument by presenting the fact that I am for the legalization of marijuana and appreciate this Unfortunately, I haven't opportunity to be candid.

Alison K. Auber

> College students will always at least experiment with drugs and alcohol. If they have not tried it already, they'll almost certainly have the opportunity when they arrive at college. I agree that children should be shielded from such practices. After a certain age, however, the decision becomes hat of the individual. It be- dents have been known to fall comes part of the added respon- from grace now and then. sibility on his or her shoulders

Ideally, everyone would be so happy they wouldn't want drugs or alcohol to give them a truly altered state of consciousness. The sad truth is that no one is happy 100% of the time. These substances offer a diversion-an avenue through which one can let off steam after a grueling week of classes and

Besides, not everyone indulges in these horrible vices. Some people may refuse one or the other, or both. More power to them. They're not geeks. I'd like to gently remind everyone, though, that even the best stuIf you object to marijuana on the grounds that it's illegal, I've got news for you. Accord-ing to the law, it's illegal. According to popular sovereignty, it's not. Ganja will be around regardless of whether or not the District condones it.

Whatever the present state of affairs, undercover agents are hardly the way to handle it. I've already stated that the choice belongs to the individual. The students who may have made the wrong deci sion need help, not to be crushed under the weight of authoritar-

Undercover cops succeed esch suprinted with warmannennum annum annum only in undermining the Honor Code at Washington College. At orientation, trust of one's fellow student is strongly emphasized and is continued to be impressed throughout. Undercover police contrarily lead us to suspect our fellow student. perhaps even leave others off party invitations and, in extreme cases, completely out of certain social circles Maybe the real question here is how the paranoia bred by the alleged undercover agents is affecting the student.

Alison K. Auber is a junior majoring in English.

In the World

President Bush may be sidering a military strike on a Libyan plant that is planning to manufacture chemical weapons. He said chemical weap roduction is not only unacceptable but "a threat."

ure that the Soviets appear to be completing their withdrawal from Afghanistan. Bush also stated that he opposes the Federal Reserve Bureau's tightening credit to fight inflation Oliver North's lawyers proposed accord to limit the use of classified data. The Iran-Contra judge excused the jury and set a hearing to produce a compromise between the attorney general and the independent counsel.

Secretary of State James Baker said he had received a mmitment from West German Chancellor Kohl to resolve the debate over modernizing short-range nuclear missles in Europe, hopefully at the NATO summit in June. The Energy Department 'pied West Bank, wounded two defend him adequately under a said it has no plans to halt sales I sraeli teenagers during dem- paign for parliament of tritium to private customers, despite an approaching short-age of the radioactive gas, used in production of nuclear weapslem students marched in Pakistani cities to protest Salman Rushdie's Satanic erses which fundamentall blasphemes Islam. Earlier this week in Isambad, demonstrators were fired on, killing 5 people and wounding 80.

An explosion in the occu-onstrations in the Gaza Strip. SOUTH AFRICA

Anglican ArchBishop Tutu appealed to international leaders to pressure South Africa to resolve the situation of about 300 black detainees who have been on a hunger strike for over three weeks.

Security forces have been ordered to maintain full alert during elections this week. 13 candidates and 300 political activists have already been killed in the month long cam-

AFGHANISTAN

The issue of power-sh ing remains unresolved as Red Army makes it's final fr wells and departs HUNGARY

The Communist Par may be defeated in the may be deteated in the attions held under the new mu party system endorsed by Central Committee last & day. The change would be gn ual but provide a "better s guard against " abuse of pos

compiled by Jacque Collins

aid they would be unable to How valuable is a clean record, anyway?

What more could George Bush want in his Secretary of Defense than a four term Republican senator who served for six years as Chairman of the Armed Services Committee? A clean private record, maybe? President Bush seems to be running into the same problem his predecessor did. This is, that his nominee for the number two cabinet position, somewhat reminiscent of one of Court Justice, has a question-

Wendy Kloiber

these days, John Tower may have a skeleton hidden in his political closet. Tower's confirmation hearing has been indefinitely delayed following rumors of excessive drinking and womanizing. This will most likely not be a serious enough issue to stop Tower's confirmation, but it is slowing it down Reagan's nominees for Supreme considerably. Even if Tower is confirmed, there will always be able background. Like an ever that shadow hanging over his strain being too much for his sort of way I still believe that increasing number of politicians head. It will be like the one over family. This will be particu- Gary Hart wasn't involved with that doesn't know the meaning of the word unsubstantiated.

So what should John Tower do? Basically he has two options open to him at this point. Which one he takes depends heavily on the answer to one question: Are the rumors true? If so, Tower better back down now before his name and life, seems to me that if Tower has history is dragged through the, papers any more than it already has been. He can always make the standard excuse about the But then again, in my naive

Dan Quayle's head. The one larly effective after the unfortunate entrance of Kitty Dukakis into an alcohol rehabilitation center

On the other hand, Tower can stand firm and prepare to fight his critics. This may seem the noble thing to do but, as Gary Hart proved, not always the most successful thing. It served for four terms as senator without trouble, then chances are the rumors are just rumors.

the pictures, but I like to be timistic about politics and that means accepting Ja Tower as Secretary of Defer then so be it. The FBI will ha their fun turning over en stone in Tower's past a chances are they won't fi anything that bites. Towers be confirmed and will contin sitting in on the cabinet me ings. (Pretty sure of yours aren't you President Bus Gary Hart can double di

W.C. Greeks are rapidly deteriorating

greek life can be very good for think I would be one of them. aspects of the greek life over my four years here. Tonight, I saw a very familiar one. A close friend, who is greek, came into my room after trying to break up a fight at the Bid Night party. asked him how the fight started, and he told me, and it didn't really matter. I'm sure I could find a million different versions of the same story. None of it matters. It does not matter who hit who first, or why, or who won, or anything like that What is important is that people were trying to hurt other people for the sole reason that they decided to join some other fraternity. That is wrong. It always has been wrong, and it has given a black eye to the greek system

I admire the greek organizations. I love the unity that people who join have. Many of my closest friends are greek and I have been there for many of the most special times the organizations have to offer. Candlelights and parties, meetings and reunions-it is a beau-

I am not greek. When it people. Not only that, but you came time for me to make that always will be friends, because decision. I felt that while the you have made a permanent and formal bond I have made Bay, Ken Winkler some people. I somehow didn't so many friends here that I will be fall out of touch with in May, As an outsider I have seen many because we do not have this "glue" holding us together. I say this first so that you may know that I am in no way antigreek. On the contrary, it is because I have come to love and admire the greek system so much that I am writing, because it makes me sad to see what is currently happening to It is unfortunate that this positive and adhesive unity necessarily brings a very destructive separation along with it. If you are a KA, then you are not a Sig-you are inherently an anti-Sig. If you are a Zeta, you are separated from the Alpha-Chi's. This is not inherently a bad thing, except that this friendly rivalry has turned to an unfriendly animosity. This is where the stupidity comes in. I would have no objection if I felt these fights, such as the one tonight, were simple, healthy expressions of interfraternity competition, rather like a game of flag football. But it's not like that. People go to hospitals, and people get hurt. tiful thing to know that you are The germ of these fights is not brothers or sisters with so many competition; it is hatred. That is the root of the greek problem, and it is not exclusively in one fraternity or sorority. It permeates the entire greek sys tem, and shows up in a multitude of ways, the most deplorable of which is people setting out to physically hurt one another, in some cases very seriously. How long will it be before some irreparable damage is done? I'm sure everyone feels they had a good reason for getting in a fight. Either someone said something, or someone did something, or someone looked at someone funny. But there are no good reasons. It doesn't have to be that way

Case in point: thirty-three ears ago my Dad went to school here. He pledged Greek, and eventually became President of Phi Sigma Kappa. He made some friendships that he still holds as his closest today. Recently, he organized a some what spur-of-the-moment reunion, and everyone, literally everyone, from his fraternity dropped what they were doing and came to our house in Baltimore from California, Puerto Rico, Florida, and all over the place. They sang, they drank, and had the most moving dis- longer stand to even hearsh play of friendship and love that "the multitude of things thi I have ever seen. Noone wanted on, and as an outsider, I'm of his fraternity. He has the min If only Washington same loyalty and pride in his fraternity that the frats have Amazingly enough, when I asked him how many fights there were in his four years here, he looked surprised, and replied that there were none, and wondered why I was asking such a stupid question. Not one single fight. His fraternity had no less pride, and no less of a feeling of organization unity than any frat on campus now, and there was not one fight. in four years. That should tell us something. I wish I could count the number of fights that have gone on here that were based solely on greek association, just in my four years. I know my father will be very hurt when he finds out his old frat is no more. Indeed the whole greek system is collapsing. It seems that these days when you pledge, you make forty lifetime friends and a hundred and twenty mortal enemies. Can't this bickering stop? Aren't we tired enough of this yet? Where is this Interfraternity Council, and what are they doing about this? don't even know most of the people involved, and can no

lege could become a fraten of fraternities. In 1956, in fraternity competition was ried on on the sports field, competition for the loving and in events like the Song and the Skit Night. They " friendly and good-natur competitions. It could be f way again. If you examine it's really not that complex you don't want to fight, th don't fight. If everyone weth this little rule, our probl would be solved. If some says something that you di like, so what? So what if as from one frat thinks you're asshole because you're from different frat, and decides tell you so? Who would you? is the real asshole? If you do want to fight, don't fight. An you do want to fight, the co selling service is in the best ment of Bill Smith. You have serious problem that you show take care of before you ho someone.

I hope people can grad ate from here with greek for as long as this school standing. And that wish coming from a so-called

continued on page

Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity ordered to vacate East Hall

by Ed Schroeder

Washington College Security and the State Fire Marshall began their investigation into the East Hall fire last Thursday, February 9th. Although questioning has begun there are no concrete leads as yet con-terning the origins of the fire that damaged the first floor bathroom. Because of this and other related events the memhers of this house are ordered to remove themselves by this weekend.

Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity has been on social probation since the beginning of the semester and have since violated this, according to Student Affairs. Their charter was not revoked, but they will not be recognized on the campus until disciplinary actions are carried

"As Dean of Students it is my job to ensure the safety of students.

Dean McIntire pointed out, "And if that means the closing down of East Hall, then so be it."

Already work crews have begun to repair damages. It is hoped that East Hall will be ready to live in by the end of the semester. Reportedly it comes as no surprise that the 'Sigs' are being removed from their house. In the Master Plan it is expected for the Foreign Exchange Students to move there next year.

Drew Elburn, a member of Phi Sigma Kappa, commented, "I think the Admini- and stuff," one such student stration had the idea that they remarked would break up the fraternity, but this has brought us all close together. It's going to be much stronger than it was." Phi Sigma Kappa is suspended until October 1,1989. At that time, should some members of the fraternity wish to continue the tradition, the Washington College Board will consider a proposal.

By this Sunday they will be expected to have their belongings moved out of East Hall The college has reportedly promised to help these individuals find housing, either on campus or off, depending on their situations

Ken Haltom, also of the Sig fraternity, stated that Student Affairs is inconsistent in its promises. "On Monday, Dean Maxcy told me that six lounges would be made available to us. On Tuesday he said, 'We'll see what we can do.' Student Affairs then offered us $16,000.00 to use for off campus housing."

Dean MacIntire made it a nt that since no one is to be held accountable for the dam age that occurred at East Hall. all the residents must be removed so that vandalism can be cut down

Some students are skeptical on how closing down the hall will alleviate the damage. "That's just going to get people even more mad and they're going to want to break windows

Skepticism also was raised by Sigs who argue that not only will no one benefit from the administration's actions but some will even be hurt academi-

Haltom pointed out that, "While the situation..is serious and warrants action, the administration's reaction can only prove to be most detrimental to those in the midst of their academic pursuits."

WRITE NEWS for the WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM

if you are interested then contact TRACEY CONNELL or JENNIFER HARRISON through campus mail or at the Elm office

w colle

SGA Treasurer, Tom Jackson, has not yet officially resigned from office for his alleged mishandling of Student Government funds. His actions are not for students to judge. Apparantly local authorities will handle that

The President and Visitors and Governors of Washington College Cordially Invite You to Join in WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY CELEBRATIONS on February Eighteenth, Nineteen Hundred Eighty-Nine

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY CONVOCATION Honorees: The Right Honorable Shirley Vivien Teresa Brittain Williams Co-founder and President of Great Britain's Social Democratic Party

> Richard Elliott Neustadt Author of Presidential Power: The Politics of Leadership 2:00 p.m. Daniel Z. Gibson Fine Arts Center

THE ANNUAL WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY BALL Featuring Bobby and the Believers 9:00 p.m. Cain Athletic Center Subscription, $40.00 per couple

778-2800 (ext. 462) Black Tie

Each year the generosity of Birthday Ball Patrons provides valuable assistance to the Washington College scholarship fund.

PATRON $100.00 SUSTAINING PATRON $150.00 (includes Birthday Ball subscription)

Patrons will be the honored guests of the President at an elegant buffet dinner in Chez Hodson at 7:30 on the evening of the Ball.

Those who choose not to be Patrons are invited to make dinner reservations by sending $15 per person to Washington College/Chez Hodson in care of the Alutoni Flouse

117 S. Cross 778-3483

Mon - Sat

'Need that photo framed? 'Need jewelry for the ball?

Gallery 5 carries: Paintings & Prints of Washington College Local Scenes & Wildlife Art work from over 90 local Artists Sculpture, Selected Crafts Jewelry & Custom Framing

Keehan passes 1,000 point career mark, team on verge of playoff berth

by Don Steele 1989 basketball season rests on figures it was eight three point tonight's game against Johns Hopkins. A win and the team is assured some sort of playoff game, a loss and the season is

Wednesday's big 81-58 win over Widener meant that this season would come to this

Tim Keehan could not have come up with a better time to break the 1,000 point barrier so far. He nailed five of seven three point bombs in the game. The low post due of Tom Anvil and Chris Jamke poured in 14 points in the win

The squad had a tremendous setback on Saturday with a 72-71 loss in overtime to the team must respond Ursinus. Although the team a M.A.C. playoff berth layed a competive game and Tonight is the night. The all the starters scored in double goals by the Bears that killed the team. Keehan led the team with 16 points. Anvil and Chris Brandt both had 14 points. Andy Bauer and Jamke rounded out the scoring with 13 and 12 points respectively.

Against Haverford the team posted an impressive 90-69 win. The guard tandem of Brandt and Keehan poured in 22 and 18 points to pace the for a career. His 21 points left squad. Contributing strongly him with a career total of 1.005 was Anvil's 15 point and eight rebound performance from the low post position.

> The week left the team at 6-3 in the M.A.C. So tonight at 7:30 it is the make or break game. The pressure is on and the team must respond to gain n Keehan, #20 goes up against Widener. Keehan surpassed the 1,000 career-point mark to the saint Widener. The win puts the team within one victory of a M.A.C. placif berth.

Swimmers defeat Lebanon Valley, close in on M.A.C. championships

by Kathy Brewster

ington College Swim Team improved their record with a Samantha Streamer in the 500 convincing 51-15 win over Lebanon Valley with the girls performance. also broken First place winners were Beth Jarrett in the 200 IM, Vicky down the existent 50 free rec-

Vahos, 100 backstroke, Kirsten Last Saturday the Wash- Kjelberg in the 100 butterfly, Kathy Finneson in the 200 free, and finally team Captain Elizabeth Rexon taking the 100.

Coach Berry was pleased winners two school records were

Samantha Streamer took

ord and Kasey Carrol broke the former 200 IM record. On Wednesday night the swimmers defeated Goucher record to 9-3. Coach Berry stated, "This meet is to look back on and Aside from the many show the progression of our growth over four years. Tonight shows a reversal of our skill since we've started the program. We've gotten better."

In the past Goucher has beaten WC for two years. Then last year Washington won by fifteen. This year's win points College by a substantial point shows a steady progression for difference to increase their the team and its individuals.

Now that the dual meet season is over the team is readying themselves mentally and physically for the "big meets." Swimming preparations for the MAC championships started yesterday with changes made in the girls training

The championships dif greatly from dual meets inth in dual meets one only swit three events while in big mee one qualifies in the morning and swims for the champio ship that evening.

The team hopes that the changes will better their rat ing of twelve from last years place them in the top is Championships begin on Pa

TANNING BED

Redken

Paul Mitchell

Matrix

Ri. 213 Chestertown, Md

Fine Cocktails & Light Fare

Relax In Our Fireplace Lounge Before & After the Ball

Friday - Free Oyster Bar at Happy Hour Entertainment by Dear John - Folk, Country, Rock

Proper ID Required

337 High St.

1000 Open Mon-Sat 4pm

778-6779

JABBAR STILL AMONG KAREEM OF THE CROP

Many of the NBA greats have been placed in different situations this year. Larry Bird has been injured for a major portion of the season. Magic Johnson has been forced to deal with a rash of injuries as well as a Laker team unable to win on the road. Moses Malone is no longer the dominant player on his team, having to share the hall with such talented players as Dominique Wilkins, Reggie Theus and Doc Rivers. Still.

Brett Lankford

the biggest drop-off has taken place in the person of the NBA's all-time leading scorer, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Over the past few years.

Kareem's playing time has steadily decreased, along with his scoring, rebounding and field goal percentage. He is no longer the key figure in the Laker offense, now just a hit in the league. player on a team led by younger players like Magic Johnson, James Worthward Byron Scott. The sky hooks that were once nally hanging up his sneakers, and he is now in the middle of his "farewell tour" of arenas around the country. Still, some of his skeptics are suggesting that his retirement is long over-

Kareem's doubters are claiming that it is sad to watch this once-great player struggle up and down the court for an entire season. He ho longer stays under to rebound on free throws, instead walking upcourt to conserve his energy The Lakers often have to play four on five offensively while Jabaar waits in the defensive end of the court

The Mustard Seed Bookshop & Music Store Music, Classics

Greeting Cards
314 Park Row, Chestertown Across from the Post Office 778-6707

Mychal Thompson plays mercials and giving money to most of the minutes at center and is far quicker and stronger than Kareem. Many people are suggesting than Abdul-Jabbar is now more of a liability to the Lakers than he is an asset

This discussion of Kareem's dwindling talents has become a major issue of this NBA season.

The Laker coach and players have spent a great deal of time offering support to the big man in the middle. Coach Pat Riley contests that he is still a clutch player, as shown in last year's Championship Series. Jabbar buried two clutch free throws in Game Six to help lead the Lakers to Game Seven and question: Dr. James A. Naisthe title. Magic Johnson claims that even when Kareem does not contribute statistically, he provides emotional support. They also argue that despite the fact that his talents are not where they used to be, he is still better than many other players Julius Erving went on a similar "farewell tour" recently, but there were few concerns about his declining talents.

Admittedly, Dr. J continued to rim. At age 41 Kareem is fra average over ten points a game, the mark Kareem currently occupies. There is, however, one major difference between these two great players

In the past Coucher

505 Washington Ave

Chestertown, Md. 21620

perfect role model for millions ner. Please, only one entry per of kids, doing anti-drug com- person. beaton WC for two v.

black colleges in trouble. Abdul-Jahhar has been the far more controversial of the two players. He changed his name from Lew Alcindor after devoting himself to the Muslim religion His book Giant Stens affirmed the prominence of racism in the National Basketball Association. He has never been a media darling, often viewed as a very reserved individual. The contrasting personality could be the reason for the debate over Kareem's final year.

Sports trivia

The answer to last week's mith invented the game of baskethall in 1891

This week's question: What was baseball originally called when first played in England?

The correct answer to this question will win a free cheese pizza from the Coffee House. Fill out on a piece of paper, your name and answer

Drop it off in the Coffee House in the Privia Question at rect answer will be in next week's ELM.

*If more than one person answers correctly there will be a drawing among the correct Julius Ering Was the nanswers to determine the win-

Convenient Parking

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS

FACIALS - PETTICURES

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek

P.O. Box 527

Chestertown, MD 21020 OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

ord and Kessy C

Janie Thompson 788-0898

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has earned the right to retire in peace. He has not always been the most personable individual, and he never felt the need to hide from controversy. Kareem has been one of the greatest players in the history of pro basketball, and is deserving of accolades, not insults. In his final year he should receive support from the media and the Brett Lankford resides on players of the NBA. He de-the writers floor and please may

It seems to me that after All-Star team, and the most twenty years in pro basketball, touching moment of the game was his hook shot with fifteen seconds remaining. God willed that shot to go in, and who can possibly argue with the Lord?

Kareem Abdul-Jabbarhas helped to raise the game to its present popularity. In return, the goggled wonder should be treated with nothing but absolute respect.

served to be a member of the God will he never be evicted.

#12 Chaffes Duckett shoots for twid in The Widerer game

NEED A JOB? 19 TILL FRESHMAN AND SOPHMORES ARE NEEDED TO WORK A.V. EQUIPMENT Contact JAY MERANCHIK

EXT. 348 OR 468

Complete Hair Care

10 Visits for $40.00

.to a year 'round, beautiful tan

Our SunTana SunSystem guarantees you a glorious con Juni same Sunsystem guarantees you a glorious, radient tan that you can keep all year long. At an you achieve with soft, comfortable and SAFE U.V.A. light and without all the burning, peeling and flaking you get in natural sunlight. Our SunSystem is GUARANTEED to tan anyone who tans in the sun...while you relax in cool comfort.

We'd like to tell you more about this exciting now way to tan. A single visit will convince you.

The Beauty Lounge Call us

Phone: 778-2635

come Midtown Mail
Chestertown, MD 21620
NEXUS PRODUCTS AVAILABLE
mplets Hair Cale * Manicuree * Soulptur today ...

Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Occ. Marina 778-5007

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites 30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting

Poet Wendell delivers successful talk, book

by Michele Balze

An Otherwise Perfect History, a book of poetry by local poet, Julia Wendell, has recently been published by Greenfield Review Press. Wendell and her husband, Jack Stephens, a fiction writer, gave a successful yesterday

Wendell has a B.A. in English Literature from Cornell University, an M.A. in English and American Literature from Boston University and an M.F.A. from the University of Iowa. Wendell's poetry has been published in many reviews including The American Poetry Review, The Antioch Review, Crazyhorse, Maryland Poetry Review, Prairie Schooner and The Missouri Review Involved in publishing as well as writing poetry, Wendell is the founding editor of The Galileo Press Ltd.. This Baltimorebased press's list of publications includes The Four Wheel Drive Quartet, a fiction work by Bob Day, head of Creative Writing Washington College, currently on leave of absence.

Wendell and Stephens live reading at Washington College in Sparks, Maryland, which gives title to the last poem in her book. Evoking the flavor of Sparks, Wendell writes "I heard Snow Geese moving south and thought of summer/of every thing I could not have." This oom also echoes the line from which the title of the book comes; "I look into your eyes, Love, and see a brother/and my hardly perfect history incarnates itself, leaps up hotly; consuming itself." The theme of equating extra-familial love with incestuous love appears throughout the volume; particularly in the poem "Husband, As

If a Brother", in which Wendell writes, "Some moments/you are too familiar./...As if each touch-even yours-could carry with it/a history of shame-he/ who should not have touched,

The book's title An Otherwise Perfect History evokes the poems in the volume, yet remains ambiguous in the context of the separate sections. The book is divided into four sections the first two of which deal with some kind of memory. Sections one and three, Familial, Passed and Assumed and Familial Present deal with the poet's family relationships. The first Section concentrates on the family memories, "the otherwise perfect history" that leads to Familial Present and the last section, Individually The second section, called A Two-spoked Wheel: Lyrics to a Deaf Composer, is a series of biographical poems about Bedrich Smetna, a Bohemian nationalist composer who lost his hearing from syphilis and died in the Prague Asylum. Although these poems are not about the poet's life, as the rest of the poems in the volume seem to be, the poet, or the poetic consciousness, becomes one with the characters in the drama of these poems. Essentially, Wendellinserts herself into the poem. Wendell's voice blends with other voices and makes their history her history. In "Night Flight," Wencreates an ars poetica, which describes the narrative move in A Two-spoked Wheel. Observing a woman at a bus stop across the street, Wendell creates an imagined history for her which takes over the original dramatic situation. It is this woman's history which is the "otherwise perfect history" re ferred to in the book's title, yet this history can also be Wendell's for she enters the woman's mind, and speaks her thoughts and memories. The only history we have for this woman is the history Wendell gives her. At once the poem refers to itself and denies itself stating"...Butthis is not a story of words, but of a woman" yet ending with the author figure beginning to write. Wendell's poems are dow". Wendell begins with two seemingly unrelated scenes, one literary and the other an intimate family scene. Suddenly in the third stanza, she both brings herself and the person she is addressing the poem to braided threads of imagery and situation. In "Cat at the Win-

Williams, Neustadt bring politics and passion to Washington's Birthday Convocation

by Michele M. Volansky

Amidst the hubbub and festivities of Saturday's Birthday Ball comes the true celebration of George Washington's Birthday. The Birthday Convocation, beginning at two PM in Tawes Theatre, serves as a reminder of the British heritage the United States often forgets when exploring the role George Washington played in creating the new nation. Furthermore, as President Douglass Cater adds, "This year, George Washington's Birthday Celebration represents a new dimension for Washington College." Indeed, the activities planned are both challenging and exciting

The Right Honorable Shirley Williams, founder of Great Britain's Social Democratic Party, will deliver the keynote address and receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree. By her side, will be her husband, political scientist Richard Neustadt. Neustadt, who will speak briefly, will also receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree

Williams' political career is one which seconds onlythat of current Prime Minister of Great Britain, Margaret the Labour Party (as described by Professor Robert Fallaw), Williams was elected in that better than we understand party to the House of Commons ourselves." Magill, who, like in 1964. Her career with the Fallaw, came into contact with

Labour Party included such governmental positions as abinet Secretary of State for Prices and Consumer Protection (1974) and Secretary of State for Education and Science and Paymaster-General in 1976. Following this, there became a need in British government for a party which didn't swing as sharply to either side of the two existing parties, the Labour and the Tory. Williams, along with her "Gang of Four" entered the political picture to establish the Social Democratic

In 1981, only eight months after the inception of this party, Williams was elected as the first Social Democrat Member of Parliament in a by-election. She held the seat for Crosby, Merseyside until 1983. She was elected the Party's first President in 1982 and was re-elected to the same position in 1984. Williams was a research fellow at the Harvard University policy Studies Institute from 1979 until 1985 and is currently the Interim Director of the Institute of Politics and Harvard's Kennedy School of Government in addition to serving as Public Service Professor of Electoral Politics, also at Harvard. Fur-Thatcher. Originally serving thermore, Williams has pro-the "motherly figure" role in vided in sights into the U.S. that vided insights into the U.S. that suggests that she, as Sherry Magill states, "understands us

Williams in 1983 through the Wye Faculty Seminar, (where Williams has spoken on a number of occasions) further adds that she was most impressed by her intense passion for the issue of the role the U.S. plays as an "inspirer of ideals." It has been stated that the U.S. is naive about exactly what the world needs and does not follow up on the ideals it puts forth to the rest of the world. Williams has come to terms with this, and in her talks, which are rumored to be extraordinary. discusses them with a passion not often found here in the U.S.

Williams husband, Richard Neustadt, is a leading figure in his own right. He served as Associate Dean of Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government from 1965 until 1975 and is currently Harvard's Lucius N. Littauer Professor of Public Administration, Neustadt also served as special consultant to the U.S. Senate's Subcommittee on national policy machinery and national staffing and operations and also as a consultant to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson. He is the author of Alliance Politics and The Swine Flu Affair and the recently (1980) revised Presidential Power

Perhaps President Douglass Cater realizes the significance of the visit by Wilams and Neustadt more than anyone as he sums up the plans for Convocation: "We are reach-

The Right Honorable Shirley Williams , along with husband Richs

Neustadt will deliver the keynote address at Saturday's Convocaliti ing hands across the Atlantic to Cater's words celebrate th work the two have given th one of England's most able and world of politics. He strong eloquent politicians. Shirley Williams has achieved recogniencourages students to atten tion second only to Prime Minthe Forum in Hynson Loung during which the Washington ister Thatcher as a leader who is also a woman. She is also College Fight Song, as design by satirist Mark Russell, ( recognized widely in the halls ferring to Russell's suggestin of academe. Last year, she at the roast for Louis Goldstell married the distinguished political scientist Richard Neua week ago Monday) will b introduced. Students are urg stadt of Harvard. His book on to attend, if not to observe the Presidential Power has been U.S. from an outsiders point judged a seminal work in the view, but to celebrate in att study of government. We are demic fashion the birthday twice blessed that they can both Washington College's name be honored at our Convocation sake George Washington, b and afterward participate in the whom we are forever indebted informal Presidential Forum."

Sexual identity in Shakespeare's sonnets

by Angela Henneman

The Washington College Lecture Series makes its 1989 debut on Wednesday, February 22 with the highly respected William Shakespeare as its topic. Returning to Washington College for a repeat performance, Dr. Stephen Lacey, professor of English at Cornell College in Mt. Vernon, Iowa, will speak to his audience on Sex and Sexual Identity in Shakespeare's Sonnets." Having obtained a Bachelor of Arts a student of the late, world- that Stephen Lacey be invited on the undertones contained degree in Spanish and History from Cornell College and both an M.A. and a PhD. from the University of New York at Buffalo, Mr. Lacey has mastered his expertise in the study of Shakespeare not only by his impressive (and extensive) education, but also through his work on Shakespearian Sonnets at the Huntington Library in Southern California as well as in England. Stephen Lacey renowned Shakespeare Scholar, C.L. Barber.

With quite a few literature classes having recently studied the Shakespearian Sonnets, Dr. Nancy Tatum, head of Washington College's English Department, strongly encourages student attendance to a lecture that she feels "will offer invaluable insight on the

Professor of Music, Dr. has also had the honor of being Garry Clarke, who suggested to speak as part of the Washington College Lecture Series, adds that "[Dr.] Lacey is a very interesting speaker because he has vibrant and exciting ideas about literature." Professor Clarke contributes a portion of Lacey's unique style and interpretation to his in depth study of Freud. "This kind of thinking becomes part of the criticism he develops." The topic of Shakespeare's sonnets is also within them.

While "Sex and Sexual Identity in Shakespeare's Sonnets" is not affiliated with the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series, the evening of Shakespeare is presented by Stephen Lacey will be held in the Sophie Kerr Room at 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday, February 22. It is at this time that the Washington College Lecture Series will sponsor an insight to Shakespearian Sontimely due to the recent studies nets like no other.

Surviving apartheid subject of film, discussion

A World Apart is a movie hat focuses on one woman's struggle against apartheid and. at the same time, illustrates the extraordinary power of spartheid. The setting is Johantesburg, South Africa in 1963 and tells the story of a wife and nother who is arrested and siled, a father who has fled and hestruggle against the system Newsweek states that, "Cinenatographer Chris Menges Local Hero, The Killing Fields) aptures Johannesburg life in wift, telling details that hit

The movie will be shown Juesday, February 21, Wednesby 22 and Thursday 23. A scussion focusing on the probms of apartheid as portrayed n A World Apart will be held In Thursday 23 at 7:30 p.m. in the Alumni House

dose to home

The lecture will be an open discussion encouraging the vestions and viewpoints of the udience. Participating speakers will be Dr. Ed Weissman,

Peter Mahler and Duncan Sterling, each offering a varying viewpoint. Dr. Weissman will discuss the political and constitutional aspects of South Africa as a Union/Republic and Constance Larrabee will offer personal accounts from her own life in South Africa. Peter daughter who is left to fight Mahler will offer opinions from the perspective of a native South David Ansen, of African who is opposed to apartheid. He will also discuss the existing problems from a South African viewpoint and the difficulties in finding solutions to the problems

Duncan Sterling, who studied in South Africa, will discuss legislation such as the 1947 Group Areas Act, segregation of railroads, buses and beaches, The African National Congress (ANC) and the United Democratic Fund (UDF)

The purpose of the discussion is to make the fact known that within the Washington College Community, there are a number of people who have a personal or expertise experience in various fields of South Afri-

Constance Stuart Larrabee, can affairs. One goal is to en- on Tuesday the 21 at 7:30, ture Committee in the Alumni rich the Community from Wednesday 22 at 7:30 and House at 7:30, immediately within as well as from outside. Thursday 23 at 4:00 p.m., with following the February 23rd

Saturday Feb. 18 Besides the Birthday Ball and the Post-Ball Party in the C-house, Washington's birthday will be celebrated through Convocation in Hynson Lounge. continued from page 10 into the poem and weaves the when she associates braided threads of the two other scenes rope and memory, writing: together with her memory of the "you" in the poem. Like a camera lens twisted into focus.

and the poem coheres An Otherwise Perfect His- give. tory as a whole functions like "Cat at the Window." Wendell weaves the threads of the four sections together through rope's imagery and the role memory and music play in the poems.

the scenes in the poem register

The movie will be shown a discussion lead by the Lec- showing. Campus Calendar

Weekend Feb.17, 19, 20 Also, from 4:30 to 6:30 PM a The Film Series will show tape with Mark Russell roast-Sammy and Rosie this week- ing Louie Goldstein will be

Monday Feb. 20

The Monday Series presents Jeff Chaffin discussing "T.E. Lawrence and the Arab Revolt" Tea is at 4PM in the Lit House with the talk at 4:30.

seems to refer to this braiding

I found it in the basement, Thick with dust, its heavy, seemingly endless coilsa rone without function or

Smoke braids itself downwind to me stand at the door, the bitter end in my palm. The Scarlatti you played/ missed. In "A Rope's Length," Wendell continues threading its way.

Tuesday Feb. 21 The Committee on Afro-American Culture presents the film about South Africa, A World Apart. Further information appears above Wednesday Feb. 22

Stephen Lacey will explore Shakespeare's Sonnets in the Sophie Kerr Room at eight

Embracing the complexity of memory she reveals in her poetry, Wendell writes "I won't accept the photographs/or any other easy memory of you. Indeed, Wendell accepts no easy memory in this book of imperfect histories. Instead of a flat photograph, Wendell creates a tightly and intricately woven tapestry of memory and song and one that should not be

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DARLY 4:30-4 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

> 778-1214 Bt. 213 & 201

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3568

A Film of Political Satirist Mark Russell Roasting The Chairmanof the Board of Visitors And Governors, Louis Goldstein will be shown in the Coffee House On Saturday, February 18th from 4:30pm until 6:30pm.

Gas tanks possible threat to cardinal dorms

by Ed Schroeder

The gas tank leak that was reported last week by Jeff Newell was an accident, but one that the local fire department has learned to expect and anticipate

Although, Carl Stenger, the manufacturer of these propane tanks, claims that leaks pose no immediate threat to the campus, there has been a

Last semester, Stenger said, "the natural flow of air between the tanks and the dorms wouldn't allow any possible vapor to reach the dorms." Recently however, people are concerned that this is not the reported encompassed 400 ft. and was controlled by the local not been sealed off, damage would have been devastating. Not only were Cardinal dorms pus where they pose a threat to threatened, but the nearby a number of people. Quad-dorms, Art House, Somerset, Worcester, and Wicom-ico would have felt the affects. "It was pretty serious," Bruce Neil, the Chestertown Fire Chief, remarked on the report, "They had to evacuate the area cause if one of the tanks goes off, it ain't pretty." Each of the gas tanks have valves on the top that frequently rising concern for student open in the summer time. This and other accidental occurrences with the tanks is said to

> According to Niel they happen, "every now and then" "Just as long as the gas doesn't become liquefied," he pointed out,"Then damage can be avoided." The Student Government The leak that Jeff Newell Association (SGA), the Wash- College and citizens of Chesterington College Administration, and concerned members of the volunteer fire officials. Had it Chestertown community are working together to get the Cardinal Dorms. Time will tell tanks removed from the cam-

Newell remarked that it took firefighters "quite awhile to locate the leak and they sent the three youngest members of the squad. The Maryland State Police had flairs set up to block traffic a the scene of a gas leak."

Nevertheless when asked if he was anxious to be living so close to the tanks in Cardinal Dorms, he said, "Actually not This is the worst that it's ever been, but I feel pretty safe."

"It's encouraging to see town and school working together to overcome this dilemma," said Dean Maxcy, "As a Dean of Students, it's hard to take a position; but as a citizen, it would be nice to have them removed."

The safety of Washington town may depend on the removal of the propane tanks that Carl Stenger set up near the as to whether or not they will be removed.

Jeff Newell shows how tough he can be as he poses with utensils hand in the Dining Hall. Jeff alerted the Chestertown Fire Department of gas leaks from tanks located behind the Cardinal Dorms two week

Mrm's Cookie Jar

Hope everyone enjoyed The ChickenWing Buffet as well as The Chinese New Year's Buffet last week. The turn out was really superb. Thanks a lot to all who made both Buffets a success.

Hope that everyone will have a great time at the Ball Saturday evening That's all until next week ...

Take care ...

"AN APOCALYPTIC COMEDY OF SEXUAL MANNERS... SMART. TUMULTUOUS. AND VIVIDLY ACTED

A SEARING COMEDY FROM THE MAKERS OF "MY BEAUTIFUL LAUNDRETTE."

Cinecom

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number A /7

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, February 24, 1989

SGA completes Constitutional revisions

revised

ffect, thereby satisfying one of committee's members resident Finney's major camign promises. Senators nmended and approved the otument at their first meeting is semester, on January 30. The Student Academic Board February 8. The new constitution is stended to alleviate many inonsistencies apparent in the ild document. Arian Rayanakhsh, SGA Parliamentarian nd effective Co-Chairman of he revising, pointed out that the old constitution was "open interpretation, for example, when it came to questions of ower." He added that "this war President Finney decided t was time to alleviate these kinds of problems for future administrations.

The ad hoc committee worked throughout last semeser, meeting every week, to mplete their revision. Perry

SGA David Stuart, Scott Jones, and nstitution is now officially in John Upton were

Tom Jackson, who recently resigned as Treasurer after allegedly misappropriating S.G.A. funds, also served as a member. One of the changes in the document is hoped to mmended and approved it prevent similiar problems from occurring. Article Eight, Section Five reads, "In order for Senate checks to be issued, they require both the signatures of the President and of the Treasurer." Formerly only one sigheadhoc committee which did nature was required, that of the Treasurer

> Rayanhakheh cited many other major changes. For example, the former constitution allocated one senator to halls with under 50 residents, two senators to dormitories with 50 to 79 residents, three for dormitories with 80 to 109, and four senators for dormitories with over 110, with off campus stucontinued on page eight

The annual Washington College Birthday Ball was held this past weekend on Saturday, February 1 It was an enjoyable evening for everyone, including those pictured above. Convocation was another of the official highlights added to the weekend, bringing students, Administration, Faculty and Alumni

New Religious Studies Minor introduced

by Sharon Bonner

A new Religious Studies Minor was recently introduced to the Washington College curriculum. Recent requests from students clearly presented the need for the Administration to provide such a minor.

Professor David Newell. Professor and Chair of the Department of Philosophy and Religion, and Director of the Graduate Program, explained that this minor could enable one to get a job as the Director also take the course on Ethics. of Christian education at a large church, for example, or one could attend Seminary or Graduate School in religion. If a person worked at a large company during the week, for instance, and desired to be a Christian Educational Director or Youth Director on the weekends, having the minor in Religious Studies would be useful. Professor Newell commented, "It opens doors for you. There is some difference in just simply collecting courses together versus having it say on your transcript that you actually were a minor . It brings with it the idea of an organized program study."

The Religious Studies Minor requires six courses, other three are courses specified by the department. The Foundations of Morality, or three required courses consist either History of Ancient Meof: Philosophy 213, and 214 dieval or History of Modern (Fall and Spring sequence in Comparative Religions) and the student must take either Philosophy of Religion 206, or Contemporary Religious Thought papers

221. The three electives involve any special topics course in religion, for example, the Liberation Theology Seminar, or Sociology 222 (Religion in the United States). One could

Philosophy as courses to complete the Religious Studies Minor, but only if the student emphasizes religious themes in

One does not have to major in philosophy to have a minor in religious studies. No more than two courses (having substantial religious content) from different departments or from continued on page eight

Administration addresses PCB isssue

by Tracey Connell

The Washington College Administration recounted its side of the PCB story in a statement issued earlier this month. Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, spoke for the College by listing the series of events prior to and following January 11, when Washington College was officially notified that the Environmental Protection Agency had filed a complaint and fine totaling $150,000.00.

On June 6, 1988 an in-Department for the Environment, working on behalf of the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, visited the campus and informed the College of the locations of six PCB contaminated transformers. The inspector listed procedures, which, she said, the College was required to follow. These included notification of the local fire company about the locations of contaminated transformers, placement of warning signs, removal of combustible material, quarterly inspections and a written maintenance log spector from the Maryland of these inspections. According continued on page eight Im Sobczak, Chicken Wing King, won the Dining Hall's Chicken Wing three of them electives, and the Eating Contest. He won the illustrious title and $75.00 with Don Steele coming in a close second, winning $50.00.

EDITORIAL

Censorship may be fatal for Rushdie

"The Satanic Verses is certainly irreverent .... But that is its point. It casts no slur at all on religion. It comments wittily, instead, on the backsliding and the all too human material that religion has to work with," writes Michael Wood in his review on Salman Rushdie's novel in The New Republic. He concludes by pointing out that "Only edgy or beleaguered or tyrannical people take irreverence as insult."

Unfortunately, it seems that too many "edgy or belea-guered or tyrannical people" live in Iran. And this is causing problems, not only for Mr. Rushdie, but for international

On Monday, twelve European nations, including Great Britain, agreed to recall their top diplomats from Teheran, suspend all high-level official visits to Iran, and consider restricting the movements of Iranian diplomats in their own capitals. Sir Geoffrey Howe, British Foreign Secretary called the Ayatollah's death edict "an affront to international stan-dards of behavior" and added that after serious attempts to establish a normal relationship with Iran, he sees no point in maintaining any contact at present. Secretary of State James Baker remarked "If Iran wants to become a full member of the international community, this type of behavior won't lead there

And despite the fact that several American bookstore chains have removed the novel from their shelves in order to protect their employees and customers, the Ayatollah is not impressing anyone. Apparently, Muslim protests against The Satanic Verses began before Khomeini issued a death threat against the author; he may be employing the threat in order to regain personal dominance in Iran, not to protect the Islamic faith as he claims. And although it was reported that an apology from Mr. Rushdie would repair the situation, Khomeini rejected the author's statement of regret. Khomeini says that "the imperialist mass media were falsely alleging that if the author repented, his execution order would be lifted." The Ayatollah denied this, indicating that even if Rushdie repents and becomes a pious Muslim, the duty of all Muslims would still be to execute the author.

By challenging three of the most valuable tenets in the Western world, the Ayatollah insults the political beliefs of the United States as vigorously as he claims Rushdie defames Islamic precepts. Freedom of expression, freedom of religion and the right to be tried fairly by a jury of peers (rather than being hunted down by hungry reward seekers), form the foun-dation of U.S. civil rights. And these are not rights we can let

Of course the Western governments won't issue a death warrant for the Ayatollah in order to rid the world of his threats. Instead, they will employ civilized diplomatic action to protect our political beliefs. And (hopefully) no one will give into this terrorism that is the ultimate in censorship

Washington College Elm

| Editors                               |                         |
|---------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Editor-in-chief                       | Jonnifor M. Hamis       |
|                                       |                         |
| Features Editor                       | A Li-d                  |
| Sports Editor                         | Control D               |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor         | Michele M Valant        |
| Photography Editor                    | David Ishaar            |
| Graphics Designer                     | Todd Vo                 |
| Managers                              |                         |
| Managing Editor                       | Bill Poolem             |
| Advertising Manager                   | Frin Hodge William      |
| Circulation Manager                   | James Calan             |
| Assistant Circulation Manager         | C                       |
| Office ManagerJul                     | io Cassas and Cashar I  |
| , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , | te Greene and Cathy Lea |

and editorial office is located in the basement of Reid Hall, see hours are 7:00 to 9:00 PM on Tuesdays and 7:00 to 11:00 or of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in

IN THE HEAT OF ALL THE CONTRO-VERSIES THAT HAVE PLAGUED THIS CAMPUS IN THE LAST FEW WEEKS (PCBIS, MISAPPROBPRIATED FUNDS, THE FUROR OVER CABLE, THE UNFOR-TUNATE DISBANDING OF A VITAL

SO TAKE A SNIFF OF THE AIR AND LET THE CYNICISM MEUT THINGS CAN ONLY GET BETTER

Letters to the Editor

Cater upholds Sig expulsion

To the Editor:

Sunday afternoon, I met with members of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity and reviewed my determination to uphold their expulsion from East Hall, Earlier last week I had met with the President of the Fraternity and its elected Representative. Neither had appealed the decision issued by the Office of Student Affairs. Instead it was suggested that I meet with all the members to review the situation as I had done on an earlier occasion.

My judgement, after careful review, is that recent episodes in East Hall fundamentally damaged the Compact signed between me and the fraternity heads last December. This Compact had been prepared after extensive negotiations. It recognized that fraternities and sororities would hold group responsibility for the rooms and facilities allocated to them. Our basic understandings would be meaningless if these episodes were to be ignored.

At our meeting, members of the fraternity indicated they had been able to locate alternative housing. I regret the disruption to studies this may have caused. But I warned strongly that further vandalism directed at East Hall or elsewhere would be met with swift punishment. I believe most students support our firm intention to maintain civility on campus.

A final word: it is still possible that Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity can reestablish its presence on campus during the year ahead. I recommended to its members that they consult national organization to prepare themselves better for such an undertaking. If they do take positive steps to reestablish themselves, this could prove to be a valuable learning experience for the fraternity and the College Douglass Cater

President

continued from page 3

including original canceled checks and bank statements, and provide its successor with the locations and balances of present accounts. Only by perceiving the SGA as an organization that outlives individual administrations can SGA leaders hope to promote continuity and honesty

But student leadership cannot do all the work. As mention earlier, the malady within budgetary procedures is exacerbated by student apathy. If students continually say they not to care.

don't care, then leaders eventually assume that, in fact, the don't care. Leaders get the impression, rightly or wrongly that they can do anything they want because the majority of students have made a conscious decision, by default, not to par ticipate. Democracy is a two way process: leaders must lead but participants must partici-In his address to the student body at last week's conve cation, President Finney talked at length about responsibility How many students were there to hear him? Far fewer than I can number without embarrass ment. Therefore, in the future when we read of the alleged mishandlings of student funds we must not excuse individua perpetrators, but we also cannot excuse ourselves, for weta are responsible-we too make decisions, even if the decision is

'Need that photo framed?

Gallery 5 carries: Paintings & Prints of Washington College Local Scenes & Wildlife Art work from over 90 local Artists Sculpture, Selected Crafts Jewelry & Custom Framing

ISSUE:

What can be done in the future to prevent the mishandling of student funds?

Funds may be controlled by the Business Office

The most distressing and difficult part of writing this article is having to be able to once again face the poignant fact that either students cannot be trusted with money or, they are not responsible enough to handle it. In either case, or perhaps both, it disheartens me

I hope that the current system the SGA uses (which has been implemented in the wake of recent events which plagued the SGA) could remain intact checks written on SGA accounts are required to have two signatures, that of the president and that of the treasurer. This makes the system more accountable and it grants a sort of integrity to the system. The two signature system is a common business practice which should have been implemented by the SGA a long time ago. It is unfortunate that it takes a crisis for the SGA to realize and repair its internal flaws.

While I would sincerely

remain in the hands of students, my experience within the SGA tells me that this cannot con tinue. What will probably be done to ensure the security of the funds is that they will be placed in the hands of the Washington College Finance Office.

The only accessibility the SGA will have to the actual funding, under this system, will he in the form of youchers which will be presented to the finance office to receive funding. If the case vouchers cannot be used or are not appropriate, the SGA With this system all like to see the the SGA funding and its affiliate clubs and organizations will present the Finance Office with receipts for bills for expenditures which were at one point authorized by the SGA senate. With this method the SGA Treasurer is relegated to a mere liason between the clubs and organizations on campus and the Senate and nothing more.

Perry Finney

It is a sad state of affairs dent of the SGA this year that has lead us to ask ourselves this question. All that can be hoped for is that some sort of positive aspect arises out of it. Perhaps a step is being made in the right direction. currently, by asking ourselves this question and trying to remedy an apparently flawed system. Then again, upon reex-amination of the circumstances which lead up to this, it is hard for me to see any positive as pects to the situation at all. Perry Finney is a senior majoring in philosophy, and is Presi-

Kevin Allen Senior Amityville, VA should be subject to review by other members of the executive committees

Justine DeSantis Freshman Piscataway, NJ Responsible people should be I feel there should be a system elected ... And if necessary they so that checks are co-signed.

Jenifer Clark Freshman Baltimore, MD Have faculty intervene occa- I'd like to know why they're Have the administration apsionally to check how things are going

Dave Stuart Junior Newark DE

starting with Phil-Tom since past SGA officials stole as much, bought cocaine with SGA funds and stole the SGA computer

Sophomore Washington, D.C.

prove each and every check that the SGA writes; or don't trust them

Surrender of finance responsibilities is not the answer

Perhaps the first question to address is not what can be done in the future to prevent the mishandling of student funds, but rather what cannot be done. Answer: the Student Government Association cannot surrender its rights and responsibilities as a student organization by allowing the tollege's administration to manage its finances. That's the tasy way out. That's also the wrong way out. For a student government to carry any credibility as an autonomous body it must control its own money. Control, however, is easier reteived than maintained.

allegation of misappropriations is only a symptom of a greater malady inherent in the SGA's Present financial structure and Propagated by student apathy. A few procedural changes on the part of the SGA could remedy part of the problem. First, at the beginning of each semester, the SGA executive committee could use previous financial records (if they existed) to prepare an itemized budget of all projected expenses and present this budget to the Senate for revision and approval. Once approved, the projected budget could then be published in the Elm to make financial matters a more visible concern of the student body at large. Later, at predetermined intervals, quarterly perhaps, the actual itemized budget reports could be published in the Elm alongside the previously published proections. If presented in a standardized format and compiled accurately, these reports would highlight gross discrepancies and bring them to the attention of the college community, thus reducing to some degree the temptations involved in isolated decision-making.

I suspect that the recent

Mona Brinkley

"Well then," you ask, "what if these reports are not compiled accurately? How can we reduce the mishandling of funds in the decision-making process?" I offer a second suggestion. Without a doubt, all SGA checks should require two signatures. This would not be perceived as a negative reflection on the character of our elected officers; it would simply be a matter of course. Almost all independent organizations, even church groups, which we expect to uphold the highest standards of integrity, require two individuals to co-sign the dispersement of funds. This reduces the possibility of one individual succumbing to temptation, while at the same time protecting each individual from exclusive responsibility.

Of course, if both parties conspire to mishandle funds, the plan fails. Such a scenario, however, could be further prevented by having the SGA fac-

co-signers. The Senate itself chooses this adviser, and if well chosen, he or she is an impartial, insightful person who is "in tune with" eampus life and whose loyalties lie with the best interests of the students. Faculty members, by virtue of their positions as teachers, have ready access to students and can form close, working relationships with them. If the SGA faculty adviser were given a greater role in the literal as well as in the figurative "checks and balances" of the budgetary process, student officers could benefit from the practical wisdom of an experienced money manager while at the same time maintaining their financial autonomy.

Moreover, the Executive Committee along with the faculty adviser should doublecheck the Treasurer's receipts for expenditures against the original canceled checks and ulty adviser serve as one of the bank statements. These documents should be made available during Senate meetings for the perusal of individual senators. Visibility reduces temptation: corruption thrives in concealment

> Third, I propose that in order for any of these suggestions to have a lasting, corrective effect, each ought to be incorporated into concrete guidelines and included in the SGA Constitution. Additionally, the SGA ought to adopt a standardized and specific accounting system that can be used year after year so that annual budget comparisons can be made. And, it goes without saving, that each outgoing administration should leave behind it a complete record of all its financial transactions, continued on page 2

Mona Brinkley is a senior majoring in English, and was Vice President of the SGA in 1986-

In the World

final chapter in a report on stocks and rental profits, and Defense Secretary Nominee the profits or losses from the John Tower. The report says sale of the same, as well as the that there is no evidence that size of personal debt. Mr. Tower is unfit for the position of Secretary of Defense, and substantiates Mr. Tower's claim, that although he had a drinking problem during the Federal Ethics and Law Reform is considering several proposals that would limit the financial disclosures a potential office holder would have to make. The proposals being considered tinental Airlines.

The F.B.I. delivered the the disclosure of income from

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland warned that if President Bush does not intervene in a possible strike of the Meseventies, it is under control chanics Union against Eastern Airlines, it will be taken that President Bush's panel on the President is siding with Texas Air Corporation. Mr. Kirkland warned that if this happens, the strike could spread to include all of Texas Air Corporation which also owns Con-

Japan

Japan to attend the funeral of Emperor Hirohito, The Japanese see the visit of President Bush as a sign of how impor-tant the U.S.-Japanese relationship is. During his three day stay, President Bush will meet with Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita. It is unlikely they will discuss the co-development of a new Japanese Jet being supplied by air. Fighter. The development of the Jet Fighter is one of the main trade relationship Afghanistan The second largest city in Afghanistan, Khadahar, is under seige by Afghan mujaheddin rebels. The rebels have the three roads that lead into it, and the Charge d'Affaires et President Bush will fly to They appear to be waiting to ensure that the Soviet Troops who were protecting the city and its airport have left. Once this is ascertained, it is expected that the rebels will ask the city leaders to surrender. If the city does not surrender, the rebels may launch an offensive. With the roads leading into Khadahar cut, the city is now

Iran

The Avatollah Khomeini's disputes in the U.S.-Japanese call for the execution of author Salman Rushdie prompted twelve European governments to recall their ambassadors from Iran. Geoffrey Howe, British Foreign Secretary announced that Great Britain would also surrounded the city, cutting off recall the four other diplomats compiled by Laura Hopper tioned in Tehran. Mr. Howeal hinted that Iranian diploma in Great Britain may be asked to leave the country

Soviet Union Soviet Foreign Ministe Eduard Shevardnadze began visit to the Middle East Monday by meeting with Ego tian President Hosni Mubara in Cairo. This is the first tim a high level Soviet Official ha visited Egypt since Forms President Anwar Sadat ex pelled Soviet advisors from Egypt in 1972. Mr. Shevard nadze will also meet with Is raeli Foreign Minister Mosh Arens, and P.L.O. chairman Yassar Arafat.

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

PRICE'S MUSIC

Records, Tapes

CD's, Stereos

Musical Instruments

Telephones

Ph. 768 - 4282

Kent Plaza

PRICE SLICED ON PAN PIZZA!

What's better than a fresh. hot Pan Pizza from your home town Pizza Hut® restaurant? One that saves you money! Come on over, bring the coupon below and let us make one just for you-with doug we make fresh every day, tang sauce, pure mozzarella chees and your choice of deliciou toppings. Pizza lovers never had it so good!

$2.00 off any large Pan Pizza, or $1.00 off any medium Pan Pizza. Hurry This special offer expires soon. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® restaurants.

Rt 213 Kent Plaza Chestertown 778-1070

Woodstock remembered: WC faculty recalls 1969 in its heyday

by David Snyder

There was nothing unique unusual about Max Yasgur's New York dairy farm. The cows ere just plain ordinary cows. he fields were no different than ny other fields on any other

As a matter of fact there wasn't much of anything out of e ordinary that August weeknd, except maybe the crowd of 00.000 people who gathered to ar the most sought after erformers of the decade, makng history in the process.

The year was 1969, the of a turbulent era in merica's history,an era that whitter race riots, the Cuhan Missile Crisis, the Vietnam War, and the assassination of or Martin Luther King and wo of the Kennedys.

But for that one August eekend, however, the message aspeace, and the people didn't gather to riot or protest. Intead these youth gathered for concert that would mark the id of a decade filled with confict and turmoil, a concert that me to be known as Wood-

It had been planned-for onths, a three day concert saturing such popular performas Janis Joplin, Joan Baez, Who, Jimi Hendrix, reedence Clearwater Revival. d Jefferson Airplane, names onymous with the 60's. Corrate sponsors supplied much the finances needed to cover $750,000 event, and tickets re sold at $7 for each day of concert, or $18 for all three vs. Woodstock Ventures Inc. three man group responsible organizing the entire event, ected an estimated 200,000 ople to show up for the con-, and preparations began in

While the concert has to be known as the Woodk Festival.the event actutook place about 60 miles thwest in a town called hel. When a suitable place d not be found in Wood ck, the organizers shifted eyes to a town called fallkill, about 15 miles south of Bethel, but a zoning oblem thwarted the plan her contacting a 49 year old ary farmer named Max he agreed to rent his 600 e farm to Woodstock ures...for $50,000. The date set for the weekend of Pust 15 through August 17 ndreds of police from all over W York were assigned to trol the concert. First aid ions and food stands were tup, 600 portable toilets were brought in, and a fence was set had about a 12 mile walk from ber at 400,000, both on the up around the farm. The police were expecting heavy drug use by the concert-goers but promised not to arrest anyone for using marijuana, simply because there were not enough where we parked."The scene as Yasgur farm and all over the he first saw it was incredible. "By the time we got there, chaos had already hit. It was already totally free, whether you had tickets or not. The fences were cells to hold all of the expected already torn down. JOODSTOCK SHOPPE TODAY! LOVE BEAT SPECIAL I GUESS CAPITALISM WON mile backup

that the crowd was going to be much larger than anyone had anticipated when fans began arriving a week before the concert was scheduled to begin. In the few days prior to the concert, the New York freeway

became so congested with traffic that people just left their cars parked right on the highway and walked, creating a 20

repair at WC. remembers what it was like as an 18 year old.

After meeting some friends he says, "we got up there the day before the first day (of the concert). The New York freeway

was crowded already, and we

Jay Meranchik, director

GREAT HIPPIE IDEAL."

David Cohen, Visiting It soon became obvious Assistant-Professor of the WC English -Department, recalls what it was like as an 11 year

> "My uncle owned a farm that was half a mile away from Yasgur's farm. My parents wouldn't let me go, so I had to sneak away." He remembers seeing the Who, Arlo Guthrie and Joan Baez in concert, but he also recalls some of the other events that were taking place all around. "It wasn't just a concert. There were little things audio-visual and computer going on all around," he says. Meranchik agrees. "There were things going on all night. Everything was a side show. The turnout was amazing. Police helicopters flying over the crowd estimated the numsurrounding hills

"You were stuck. By the nd of the first day they closed the New York freeway," Meranchik remembers. Musicians who were playing in the concert had to be airlifted by helicopter

Even with the tremendous crowding of people, there was suprisingly little trouble with fights. The main problems the medical staff at the first aid stations had to deal with were accidents, exposure, and adversedmigreactions In the first 24 hours, 1,000 people were treated. By the end of the concert, 4,000 people had been treated for injuries, two deaths had been reported (one victim hit by truck, the other overdosed on heroin), and two babies had been born. Steadyrain starting on the second day didn't drive many of the fans off. Fires were started whenever the weather broke Both Meranchik and Cohen describe the great sense of pensagain, the vivid memories community that the bad of that one rainy weekend in weather brought with it. The August, almost 20 years ago, next three days we spent just wandering around, listening to a has one particular memory of music, going from fire to fire those days he likes to recall. trying to get warm. Everyone was friendly, helpful, food was free," says Meranchik. "If the weather had been nice, I don't think there would have been the comradery that there was," -

"There really was a sense of community there which I was welcomed into, even at 11," says

Finally, after three days, the crowd began to dissipate Though the concert had drawn a much larger crowd than any one had anticipated. Woodstock Ventures, Inc. lost an estimated one to two million dollars in the deal, largely due to the fact that the fence had been torn down even before the first day of the concert, allowing spectators who had not paid to swarm into Attempts in later years to have a Woodstock reunion have met with little support from those who originally organized and helped with its production. Both Meranchik and Cohen said they would like to see it happen again, but neither thinks that it would be possible.

"It's having happened will proclude it ever happening again," explains Cohen.

Even if a phenomenon such as Woodstock never hanwill never be forgotten. Cohen

"I remember this convertible that drove through town with this naked blond in it. Her body was painted, and she was holding up the 'peace' sign with her fingers... For an 11 year old that's really neat."

Facials & Waxing Paul Mitchell Products &

Kenra

OLDE TOWNE BARBERS

FRENCH BRAIDS

FROSTING

PERMS

Super Fresh Parking Lot

Mon-Sat

778-4771

SPORTS

committee

Coach Tom Finnegan offers support during recent home victory Nobody ask but...

It's now late February, and mas for last year's Eastern Dithe baseball season is just vision Champions. The Dallas Some different thoughts on

Brett Lankford

these subjects

Adrian Dantley is apparwith his coach and his teammates. As their new acquisi-Dallas with none of these problems. This is mainly because he has not shown up to play for his new team. Meanwhile, Mark Aguirre is happy playing with boyhood friend Isiah Tho-around the corner. Spring train- Mavericks were trying to get ing is just one of the topics, rid of an attitude problem, and however, which is presently instead acquired a head case prominent in the sports world. who is four years older. Things could get worse in Dallas before they get better.

The Philadelphia Phillies should have a similar problem as they could descend into a season of Oriolesque proporently attempting to take the tions. The team is attempting place of Mark Aguirre as the to follow the old baseball adage new attitude problem on the that suggests winning teams Dallas Mavericks. The Mavs are strong up the middle, but were trying to get rid of a player they are going about this procwho was constantly bickering ess in a different manner. The team has two talented second basemen, no catchers, no shorttion, Dantley has presented stops, and no center fielders. Juan Samuel, never known for his steady fielding, will now play center field for the Phils. Steve Jeltz is not going to win a pennant for anyone at shortstop. Most importantly, how can a

B-ball on 'the bubble' Keehan honored

by Don Steel The ques tion will be an-Bauer and Tom Auvil went swered Sunday. without the glory they deserved. Keehan scored 24 points to no The question is will the Washingavail. Brandt and Bauer had College 15 and 12 points in the loss. Sho'men Basket- Tom Auvil had 10 points and ball team get an nine rebounds in the losing NCAA tournacause. The team suffered a big ment bid? loss in the first half when Chris After miss- Jamke was ejected ing a chance to The loss left the team at linch a bid on 19-6 with the fate of their season in other peoples hands.

Tuesday night the Last Friday marked the team is now on "The Bubble" and must wait. It season highlight with a 71-65 is in the hands of the selection win over Johns Hopkins. In this must win game the team, Tuesday the team had a led by Chris Jamke, came through. Jamke led the team chance to clinch a bid but lost to Ursinus. It marked the third with 17 points and an astoundloss to Ursinus this year. ing 16 rebounds. Jamke also Ursinus forward John Madody provided the excitement in the Cain Athletic Center with a scored 30 points to burn the one player remaining from the team expect to win anything with Steve Lake and Darren 1983 Champions. It could take time for the team to return to Daulton platooning behind the plate? Saddest of all, the Phils prominence, but they are definitely taking strides in the right have very few prospects coming out of their farm system in the near future. This could be a Frank Bruno has been very long year in Philadelphia. seeing a hypnotist to prepare himself for this Saturday's Maybe the Phillies should follow in the steps of the team championship bout against Mike Tyson. It seems that he that defeated them in the 1983 should be visiting a psychia-World Series. The Baltimore Orioles are currently in the trist instead. Bruno's manager claims that his fighter has an ing project, getting rid of such advantage because he has a Baltimore traditions as Eddie good head on his shoulders. Murray, Mike Boddicker, Jim Frank Bruno can only hope that Dwyer and Fred Lynn. They his head is still attached to his have made the commitment to shoulders after fighting Mike young talent, and there is only Tyson.

Tim Keehan had a strong point performance. Bauer's 13 second half pi provided a steady stream points when they were near

For the team it co down to hope. With the a tion of eight teams to the nament field there is a gree chance of an at large bid. nothing is certain and there only be prayers.

Other interesting de-opments occured. Last Sat day the National Association Basketball Coaches annour that Keehan has been nam the MAC District team. honor also qualifies Keehan be placed on the national I sion Ill ballot for considera to recieve All-American state

The National League will be the toughest division the major leagues this year. Reds, Dodgers and Padres have legitimate chances to the division this year The R have an incredible amoun young talent on the team cluding such up-and-come Eric Davis, Barry Larkin Chris Sabo. Combine t players with the pitching of Browning and John France it is easy to understand they have a good chang making the playoffs.

When Brett is not writ for the ELM he is engaged writing fiction

Tuesday-Saturday

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md. 21620

Janie Thompson 788:0898

DROP-OFF LAUNDRY

We will professionally wash, dry, fold and hang your clothing, $.55 lb., $5.50 minimum, same day service.

> COIN-OP LAUNDRY - PROFSSIONAL DRY CLEANING

> > KENT LAUNDRY 607 high Street Chestertown 778-3551

middle of a major houseclean-

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

FREE COMPUTER CHECK-UP WITH APPLECARE PURCHASE MARCH 9, 1989 10AM-3PM

APPLECARE SPECIAL THRU 3/31: -BUY 24 MONTHS, GET 12 MONTHS FREE

-BUY 12 MONTHS, GET 1 MONTH

PROTECT YOUR INVESTMENT

WCBOOKSTORE

Intricacies of Greek theater subject of senior production

by Stephanie Hess

Senior Drama major, Gina Braden is bringing Greek theater to Washington College with The full stage play is being roduced for the fulfillment of Gina and fellow major Cindy Corley's senior projects. Braden rects, and Curley is light and mask designer along with movenent consultant, which makes herresponsible for releasing the inhibitions of the actors

Braden is very excited about the play and its potential. She hopes that audiences will not be intimidated by the form of Greek theater; she accessible to modern audiences The director maintains that the story lines, emotions and hutime and place.

production make the play even anew approach to Greek Drama by combining the best of ancent Greek Theater with the roduction uses the Robert Lowell translation of The Eume-

Greek play without losing the rich text. The Lowell translation blends these two elements.

Braden also blends old and new, with the technical aspects of the production. While keeping the traditional Greek masks, Braden utilizes the modern technique of the scrim scene to show the interior of people's minds. She also uses a slide projector and the music of Philip Glass

The play is the last in the Orestia trilogy. The protagonist in the trilogy, Orestes, kills his mother after she kills his father. The Eumenides presents the trial of Orestes. More importantly, Gina says that the play "deals with change." Although it is the final play of the man situations are universal in trilogy, it is about the beginning of an era. It is about the Braden's ideas for the blending of the old administration with a new. In the year more accessible. She is taking following a presidential election, this theme is particularly

The last Greek play to be est of the modern stage. This produced here was in the spring of 1984. What prompted Braden to pick something Greek? She theater... there was something about [Greek theater] that has grabbed me." She was charmed by the Greek Drama for many reasons. Greek Drama is the father of the modern theater, and it was created for the people. She was enchanted by this product of a rich artistic time when everyone, not just the wealthy and artistic, went to watch the plays for entertainment. Braden was im-pressed by the tradition and ritual of this form; she chose a Greek Drama to experiment The cast of The Eumenides prepares for next weekend's opening with it, and to provide a learning experience for herself, for others involved, and for the

It has certainly been a learning experience. Although this is not Braden's first directing attempt, (she directed the comedy,On the Verge, last spring) she admits that it has been difficult. She is working with a very large cast with the flu epidemic that hit the school, scheduling has been difficult. She also realizes that people have "a lot of wrong preconceptions" about Greek Drama, and through her directing. In addi- sive exams or write a thesis. tion, she must produce the Sheaddsthatasa Drama major, whole show, make costumes, budget of two-hundred dollars.

Braden admits that the roduction has been stressful, but she also asserts that it "means more to me than studying for comprehensive exams would." She believes that the Drama Department's practice of requiring majors to "show a propensity in some form of drama, either in directing or designing," is much more useaides, which Braden says capexplains that "ever since I was that these must be overcome ing them to take comprehen-

"It would be silly to write somemasks, slides and a set within a thing. What I learn through this experience will stick with me forever, whereas if I studied for a test or researched a thesis, it might stick for a year or so. She continues, "this [is] handson experience; that's what this department is about." By producing and directing their own show, Braden and Curley are tested on their ability in all areas of production. Like Braden and Curley, many stuful and practical than requir- dents combine their senior projects, giving each other support and further insights.

This is done mostly because theater is a combined effort. A lot of work has gone into this effort, and if all goes as Braden intends, the play will be both beautiful and educational." Braden adds that "I think people will enjoy it if they come without preconceptions.

The Eumenides will be performed March 2, 3, and 4, at 8:00 PM in Tawes Theater. Because it is a student produccontinued on page 8 tion, admission will be free.

African influences explored in faculty Symposium

by Michele M. Volansky

a half of African awareness vents will culminate in Nornan James Theater on Tuesday the twenty-third at seventhirty in a Symposium titled, Beyond Europe: The Influnce of Afro-American Heritage m American Culture." The

Campus Calendar

Weekend-Feb. 24, 26, 27 The Film Series will show he film, River's Edge this rekend. The movie is based the actual incident in which young man strangles his girlfriend and then tries to cover 49 the incident

Tuesday Feb. 28 The Committee on Afroerican Culture will present the Symposium, "Beyond Eu-The Influence of Afromerican Heritage on Amerian Culture at seven-thirty in Norman James Theater.

This week the "Voices and ions" film series features the he and writings of poet Wilam Carlos Williams

Thursday March 2 The Drama Department will present a combined senior Roject, The Eumenides, beginling Thursday night. A related Symposium hopes to allow stu- bers Dr. Garry Clarke (music), The Committee on Afro- dents, faculty and community Professor Tex Andrews (art), American Culture's month and members to see beyond the usual, accepted cultural influences. There is a world, the Symposium contends, of heritage far beyond Europe, a world which includes Africa, Asia and other "culturally unexplored" areas of the world. With this departmental areas. premise, panel moderator Dr. Richard DeProspo and mem- tention that the Symposium,

DAVID B EASON

Dr. J. David Newell (philosophy), Professor Calvin Forbes (literature), and Dr. Robert Fallaw (history) will discuss their own aspects and views of culture in respect to their given

It is Dr. DeProspo's con-

511 WASHINGTON AVE. CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620 776-2988

experience in which the depth of the school's and the country's ignorance will be strongly felt. He, like many others, feels a definite need for further, in-Afro-American and African depth, study into the African influences on American society. Suggestions include the formulation of a "rotating chair" to serve as a "conscious raising"

BEER * LIQUOR * WINE * PARTY SUPPLIES CASE LOT DISCOUNT C-TOWN LIQUORS & DELL Reasons

cover

Friday, February 24th. 9-1 at the Coffe House.

Position Announcement

The Student Center is now accepting applications for two (2) Head Student Managers for the 1989-1990 school year. Applicants for these positions should be 21 years of age by September '89 and be a student in good standing. Successful applicants will begin training this semester. Please contact the Director of the Student Center for interviews. EOE

NEWS

Symposium

continued from page 7

bring prominent black scholars, and the need to raise the profile of blacks at Washington College through the recruitment of more black scholars. Both Dr. DeProspo and Dr. Newell agree that the College is lacking in expertise in the subject of black culture. "We have," DeProspo states, "a responsibility to recruit specialists"so that the ignorance America reflects of the issue of black studies may be overcome

Dr. Newell's approach to the Symposium is one which deals with Africa's philosophical issues. He will discuss, in part, a relatively new phenomenon known as "African philoso phy." An interesting aspect of this philosophy is the notion that early Greeks (the so-called founders of philosophy) were influenced by Egyptians-or North Africans. Even if this premise were true, African philosophy, with no direct documented works, is difficult to justify and explore in large detail. Regardless, recent explorations into the possibility of such an African philosophy is the first step towards further cultural awareness. Newell will also explore the influences of Martin Luther King, Gwendolyn Brooks, Frederick Douglass and Jesse Jackson in his discussion

It is the extreme hope of all those involved in the planning and execution of the Symposium that the result of such an event will be the heightened awareness of black culture, both to acknowledge its existence and to work away from the ignorance which surrounds such a culturally-rich heritage.

The birthday ball was a enjoyable for everyone, as you can see a great success for the freshman class. Festivities on Saturday nig included a dinner and dancing which lasted late in the night, until that this was a major advance. "We don't want the same people constitution to the Senators with the same views on all these Hopefully it will last anoth committees. We don't want to ten years. " stagnate.

The new constitution will not be official until it is printed in the student handbook next semester, though the SGA cur rently operates under its guide-

"Because of recent events we ously. I think.. it has allowed us to really take a good look at

Board. Rayanbakhsh stated our officers and Senate men bers. We have stressed the

The WC HELPLINE

... operates Thursday lines. Stated Ravanbakhsh, through Sunday, from 9:00 Ph to 12:00 midnight every wee The number to call is 778-020 We are also looking for volu teers. If interested contact Chr.

PCB statement

continued from page one to Hessey, "The College took immediate steps to comply with the indicated requirements." Steps were also taken toward disposal of the transformers. A licensed firm was engaged to remove two transformers which were not in use and to repair leaks on others. However, the College was too late to avoid the complaint which was filed by the EPA in January, and thoughts turned from removal of transformers to a search for legal counsel.

On Friday, January 20,1989 Hessey and Alexander G. Jones, Chairman of the Legal Committee of the Board of Visitors and Governors, decided to retain Venable, Baetjar and Howard as legal counsel.

Hessey predicts that all transformers will be removed within six to eight months and that the projected cost will be $300,000, which was approved by the Board of Visitors and Governors. Hessey stated that the Queen Anne transformer will be the first one removed. The Tri-Am Corporation will handle removal and has promised that they will do their best to supply replacements for the other five transformers

Constitution

continued from page one dents being represented by only one. The new constitution allocates one senator to every 45 residents in a hall. Another important change empowers Class Presidents with full voting rights in the Senate.

Any undergraduate student enrolled in at least eight credit hours at Washington College is considered a member of the SGA, and the new constitution allows all members are taking our jobs more serito serve on faculty committees with preference to be given to those on the Student Academic the roles and responsibilities of Schannothrough campus ma

Mom's Cookie Jar

Congratulations go out to James Sobezak and Don Steele for winning the Chicken Wing Eating Contest last Wednesday night, Feb. 15th. The prizes received were $75.00 for first place and $50.00 for second place

Thanks a lot to the other students who also participated And OH Yeah! thanks Audience, Judges, M.C., and J/P Brokerage who made it all possible.

Hopefully, everyone had a fabulous time at the Birthday Ball which was held Saturday night.

Next Wednesday night we will be kicking off The National Nutrition Month with the Health Fair. The menu or the evening will feature: Broiled Steaks, Vegetarian Vege Puffs, Vegetarian Cutlets, Baked Potatoes, Fresh Green Bean Casserole, Devils food cake, Low-cal Custard, Low-cal Gela

Nutritional Note: Try skim milk today; it has 64 less fewer calories per cup than whole milk.

Until next week

Washington College Film Series Presents...

River's Edge

Described by Vincent Canby of The New York Times as the "year's most riveting, most frightening horror film." River's Edge is based on an incident that occurred in California in 1981. When a group of directionless, disafected suburban teenagers discover that their friend has strangled his girlfriend and left her nude body by the river's edge, they plot to cover up the crime. This desparate and deeply disturbing film won't be easy to shake off. Screenwriter Neal Jimenez and director Tim Hunter have constructed a horrifying American myth (more horrifying because it's based on a real event), that although frightening and uneven in places, is generally overwhelming and brilliant

Norman James Theatre, 7:30 pm

Friday, February 27 * Sunday, March 1 Monday, March 2

Students, Faculty and Staff $1.00 All others $2.00

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 18

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 3, 1989

American Studies Major revised

by Ed Schroeder

ajor at Washington College undergone some major anges in its content. The ichard DeProspo, has been strumental in these changes. Ithough the modifications will ot affect current American ophmores declaring the major gorous or that well structured the past." DeProspo exained. The changes are being ade to give future American tudies Majors a broader powledge and understanding the field."

The new work load reres a more serious and foused student. "I'm anticipatg fewer majors because of is," DeProspo said."

The new program requires ors to enroll in two nonditseminars: one in the first lester of the junior year and ter of the senior year. The first The American Studies seminar will deal with theories of American Studies, exposing the students to such contempo rary theorists as Marx and airman of the program, Dr. Henry Nash Smith. The second seminar will help the major with his or her senior thesis A disciplinary concentration has been added. Now udies majors, they will affect American Studies majors will have to concentrate their studies in the Social Sciences or "It really hasn't been that Humanities. Six of their eight courses must be taken within one of these divisions. Majors are also required to take two courses outside of American

> "It's not to frighten students off," DeProspo cautioned "Rather, it is to warn prospective majors that American Studies will be a rare strenuous major in the future.

> DeProspo's goals are to increase the rigor of the program and to decrease provincialism, in order to expand the tions why members of Phi Sigma Kappa were evicted from East II. Hemet with the Sigs to answer questions two weeks ago. Since they have relocated

Students can breathe a sigh of relief now that work is well under way on what will become the new Art House. Plans for the much needed facility had reached a stand still because of lack of funds earlier this year. A donation from Constance Stuart Larabee has made it all possible.

Committee plans benefit for Tamara Alexander

On April 8, 1989, a campus-wide bazaar will be held from noon to two A.M. in the quad area between Kent House and Hodson Hall. Assisted by a committee of fifteen people, The expense of flying the child John Billingslea, coordinator of to Shock Trauma at Johns ment will be provided by seven the party, hopes to raise between six and eight thousand dollars to contribute to the medical expenses of Tamara Alits will be paid to the hospital of admission to this fourteen-hour

Tamara Alexander suffers other half will be invested in a keeper in the Cecil dormitories. medical expenses. Hopkins causes extreme financial difficulties for Tamara's parents. Half the party's prof- and Derry Berry. The cost of

from a collapsed esophagus and Washington College Trust Fund needs continuous treatment. to generate interest in aiding Her mother is an employee of other College community Washington College as a house-members who have major

The musical entertainbands, including the Incorrigibles, Forty-Nine Reasons, continued on page 12

Jackson to face counts of theft in April Trial

Mrs. Alexander's choice. The

Philmore

Jackson, former SGA Treasurer, was charged on February 10 with 16 counts of theft by Washington College's Student the theft counts. Government Association.

Finney, announced Jackson's meeting on February 13, say-ing that "allegations" had been made which concerned "mal- Senior Vice President for Man-feasance of duty". Though local agement and Finance, advised law enforcement officials had the SGA, working with the charged Jackson three days Board of Visitors and Goverbefore, Finney failed to announce the number or nature of the case. He is currently under

Dr. J. David Newell, head comment. SGA President, Perry of the Philosophy Department and SGA Advisor, was also resignation at an open Senate unaware of these facts. He states that, "Mr. Hessey was in State Prosecutor. control at that point." Hessey, nors and with legal council on subpoena for a court date set on April 11, and thus is unable to

Sgt. J. Brian Kirby conducted the investigation for local Police and Fred Price is Jackson refused to com-

Trial by rumor

The allegations against John Tower, Bush's nominee for secretary of defense, are numerous, but remain unproven. He is accused of having a continuous drinking problem; however, Mr. Tower's doctors determined that he is not an alcoholic. It is alleged that Tower has a history of indiscreet relations with women; the nominee admitted that he dates women, as he is unmarried. Another allegation concerns Tower's possible relationships to persons under indictment or investigation in the ongoing "Operation Ill Wind" defense contracting investigation. Although the nominee's senatorial campaign fund may have accepted contributions from these persons, no evidence has emerged that he knew of their allegedly criminal activities or even of their contribu-

Senator Sam Nunn, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and the rest of the Senate should turn away from these particularly potent rumors and look at more pertinent facts and questions. Instead of quibbling about whether Tower is an alcoholic or not, they should question whether this staunch military advocate is the best choice to preside over a fiscally restrained Pentagon. They should wonder if Tower will work well with themselves and especially with Nunn. They should remember that while they deliberate on the nomination, the Pentagon is left leaderless when budget cut decisions, arms control negotiations and relationships with allies need to be addressed

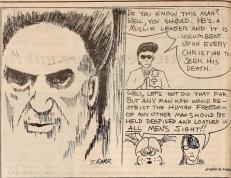

Most importantly, the Senate should consider the broader issue of a president's historic prerogative to select his Cabinet. If the Senate's vote rejects Tower. Bush will be the first president to lose a Cabinet choice since Dwight D. Eisenhower, and the first to lose a nominee so early in his presidency. Bush's aids argue that Tower's rejection would undermine the new president's ability to govern. And it could cause problems in the new president's relationship with the Senate.

Unless the F.B.I's report reveals some real evidence against Tower, instead of unsubstantiated allegations, the Senate has no reason to reprehend Bush's choice. Any doubts about Tower having a drinking problem may be dismissed with his oath: "...I hereby swear and undertake that if confirmed, during the course of my tenure as secretary of defense I will not consume beverage alcohol of any type or form" With plenty of politicians and the public watching him, Tower will not be able to escape from his pledge, and if he violates it, he will be forced to

It is understandable that Senator Nunn wants to protect himself and the Armed Services Committee from the possibility of any future scandal, but the questioning of a nominee's ethics must be based on facts about issues that concern the secretary of defense position. It isn't fair to review rumors that may lead to Tower's political demise.

Washington College Elm

| washington Cour               |                        |  |  |  |  |
|-------------------------------|------------------------|--|--|--|--|
| Editors                       |                        |  |  |  |  |
| Editor-in-chief               | . Jennifer M. Harrison |  |  |  |  |
| News Editor                   | Tracey Connell         |  |  |  |  |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum        |  |  |  |  |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatner         |  |  |  |  |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansky    |  |  |  |  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson          |  |  |  |  |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Karr              |  |  |  |  |
| Managers                      |                        |  |  |  |  |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekman           |  |  |  |  |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-Williams    |  |  |  |  |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobezak          |  |  |  |  |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Goss           |  |  |  |  |
| Office ManagersJulie G        | reene and Cathy Lease  |  |  |  |  |

Letters to the Editor

Crosswalk complaints

To the Editor: The administration has been receiving increasing numbers of complaints from citizens of Chestertown and Kent County about students crossing Washington Avenue at locations other than the designated crosswalk. I too have observed a number of such improper crossings. I would remind the student body that the crosswalk on Washington Avenue was a direct response to student protests about the lack of protection for students crossing this heavily trafficked State highway: Several students had been injured in accidents on Washington Avenue. The Chairman of the Board, the Honorable Louis L. Goldstein, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Honorable Clayton Mitchell, Mayor Horsey of Chestertown and several State Highway Department officials all assisted in placing the maximum pedestrian safety facilities permitted on Washington Avenue for the use of our stu-

MONTHS FREE

It is an affront to all in- mittee is next on the list volved in providing the safety review the bill. provisions at the crosswalk location to have students constantly crossing Washington the crosswalk. The next accident victim is likely to be one of those who persist in failing to use the designated crosswalk

Gene A. Hessey

E.P.A at cabinet level?

Senator Barbara Mikulski recently announced that she and Senator Frank Lautenberg of New Jersey and others are co-sponsoring a bill to elevate the Environmental Protection Agency to Presidential Cabinet status

If passed, this bill will ensure more direct involvement from President Bush in shaping the nation's environmental agenda and a full cabinet-level partnership in the Federal Government for the head of the environmental policy. The Senate Governmental Affairs Com-

Established by Preside Nixon in 1970, the E.P.A.'sm priorities are the prevention Avenue at locations other than air and water pollution, regitration of pesticide product regulation of drinking wa quality, and cleanup of hazar ous waste sites. continued from page 3

The Satanic Verses, as if ded threats and writing a books somehow comparable. ever, in his first major ad office, President Bush was to the Reagan legacy, sent the same person to Hirohi funeral that Reagan wo have: George Bush.

The European Co mon Market can responding one way to Iran's extremi They must, and will, break diplomatic relations. But f United States has its own ou to follow: It is our duty ast leader of the Western world protect the freedom of spe and from terror that we h always represented. We show boycott Iran's oil, and break trade with countries that di join the boycott. If we buy that goes to kill an author, business with those who do lose our self-respect

BOOKSTORE 25% off

> ALL CARDS THROUGH MARCH

-ST. PATRICK'S DAY

EASTER -BIRTHDAY, ETC.

PROTECT YOUR INVESTMENT W C BOOKSTORE

FREE COMPUTER CHECK-UP

WITH APPLECARE PURCHASE MARCH 9, 1989 10AM-3PM

APPLECARE SPECIAL THRU 3/31: -BUY 24 MONTHS, GET 12

-BUY 12 MONTHS, GET 1 MONTH

ISSUE:

How should the threats against Salman Rushdie and his novel. Satanic Verses be handled?

Satanic Verses are not the Final Judgement

What a violent uproar order of execution against the T.V. mini-series, doesn't it? As ally read! The fact that most of us have yet to crack the spine of Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses ought to tell us that it is not so much the book itself that lies at the heart of the concern, but the feelings and the pasons that the book's symbolic value, somehow, is able to raise. The events surrounding this book have in themselves the implicit hand of the artist: afterquiet beginnings, the novel's mblication leads to mass demenstrations and nation-wide ans in India, Pakistan, South Africa, Saudi Arabia, and Egypt. The Ayatollah Khomeini (whose name continues to be mysteriously respelled every few years) in a dazzling and successful attempt to once again ssert his insanity to the bulk of the civilized world, posts an about a book so few have actu- author, with the reward of millions of dollars and instant martyrdom to the lucky man who guns him down (the assassin is thus assured of both earthly as well as heavenly

Western governments react in outrage to the order (just as a number of them were attempting to renew tighter diplomatic relations with the Iranian state - will they forgive this transgression ten years down the line?). Booksellers in America, after initially backing down from the pressure against sales of the book, are reinvigorated by widespread support of Rushdie, and now the book is once again on the shelves (what new threat, I wonder, will have them shoving books back into the warehouse?). Sounds a little like a

we await the final episode of this curious tale, the dénoument of this world-wide comicaltragical-historical, I wonder where does Salman Rushdie's The Satanic Verses fit into all

Scars of anger and prejudice make it almost impossible to view Rushdie's book objectively. Just as the Ayatollah is once again in the role of the insane. Islamic terrorist gang leader, so is Rushdie the lone, doughty champion of 1st Ammendment rights: nice. simple, black and white symbols. I have the impression. however, that the sides are not as clearly drawn as the media would like us to believe. While many Americans may enjoy the ease with which Khomeini can be used to symbolize unanimous Islamic vengence against the book's author, too many contrary facts exist to seriously consider this viewpoint. To sustain their illusion they must ignore the widespread disapproval of many Islamic clerics, who regarded Khomeini's pronouncement as "vengeful and contrary to Islamic teachings of They must overlook, too, the criticism of the edict by three Iranian newspapers, one of which hit the nail straighton when it commented: "Those tactics are exceptionally poor and ridiculous methods, and speak more of domestic politi cal opportunism than a real desire to defend the faith."

Bruce Danner

fundamentalist minority of Islam - certainly not one who should represent the general opinions of the Islamic world. I wonder also about the reasons behind the book's wide spread criticism. Is Rushdie solely the poor, oppressed inno cent who had no idea how followers of Islam would react to his work? His book parodies the life of Muhammad, "revered by the Muslims as the model of sinless human perfection," casting him in the guise of "Mahound," a pejorative name used in medieval religious play: that portray Muhammad as a Satanic figure. This alone is enough to evince outrage from most Muslims, but when in one scene Rushdie depicts a brothe l continued on page 4

Bruce Danner is a senior major ing in English and French

Jack Hoffberger Sophomore Baltimore, MD

the part of the Government tract on the Ayatollah. would be, really, really unnec essary. But how much political everage could I hold?

Jeff Schneier Sophomore Rockville, MD Any support or intervention on Someone should put out a con-

India Henson Aberdeen, MD It's really ridiculous that there The Ayatollah should be is such a big controversy over brought down hard! this book, but if Rushdie is harmed I think our government should do something about it.

Rob Svec Freshman Abingdon, MD

Liam Kennedy Sophomore Towson, MD

Let's just hope our helicopters don't break down or get stuck in the mud this time. The Ayatol lah would not have threatened Ben Hinkle if he had written

If we buy oil from a country that stifles freedom of expression, we'll lose our self-respect

I should say to begin with that I haven't read Salan Rushdie's The Satanic lerses, and I've only heard a rt excerpt, but on that epi ode I can quote Michael Wood, rofessor of English, Univery of Exeter, who said "it is illiantly realized, a fine flight comic, tragic, skeptical imagiation, a moment worthy of rass or Garcia Marquez. The y is surely in appalling taste. uthat is its point." Earlier in becontroversy, when Muslims ofined themselves to book ming, Rushdie said he had a Gd-shaped hole" in his heart, adturned to literature with a faith as fanatic as his critics. I don't doubt that what Rushdie wrote did with justification enrage hundreds of millions of people, who in making their one real choice, that of religion, chose Islam. But the quickness to take offense is a weakness, not a strength, in faith. One American Muslim initially angered by the book, recalled a line from the Koran.

Andrew Donaldson

The fate of Iran can be taken as a judgement of its leader, and of rashness. Iran, a rich and abundant country, has suffered wracking pains as a result of Khomeini's aborted attempt to export his Islamic Revolution to Iraq and beyond. Now, Khomeini is preaching an unprecedented Crusade on one man's life that makes every consenting Muslim a censor and executioner. "It is incumbent on every Muslim to employ everything he's got...to send [Rushdie] to hell," Khomeini said. When the spiritual leader "Say Allah and leave them to of an Islamic country said that, it became incumbent that everyone who cares about ideas protect Rushdie, that the Western world and the world of ideas

More than the protection of his life, we must protect his book, and make it available to as many people as possible. First, B. Dalton deserves criticism for refusing to stock the book for a while, and their bookstore clerks and other employees deserve praise, who said they would be willing to face death threats to stock it. Viking Penguin should be pressured to put out a paperback in August, as originally planned, possibly in consortium with other publishing companies, to help defuse threats. These initiatives would come best from our President, who deserves both criticism and praise. True he left the country to leave Jim Baker to say that death threats are "morally unacceptable." a less than ringing endorsement of the First Amendment. When the President did speak out he called Khomeini's death warrant "offensive." the same word the Ayatollah used to describe continued on page 2

Andrew Donaldson is a

In the World

UNITED STATES

President Bush returned from a five-day diplomatic tour of Japan, China and South Korea. Upon arrival in the U.S., Bush began lobbying senators by telephone in an effort to win Senate confirmation for defense secretary nominee, John G. Tower. The Senate debate on confirmation will begin by Thursday. Mr. Tower's pledge to abstain from alcohol during his Pentagon tenure does not seem to have changed the opposition of many Democrats. said the P.L.O. cannot escape responsibility for a recent attack by three guerrillas on Is- Council, in an effort to combat

continued from page 3

in which the prostitutes bear the names of Muhammad's wives, can one seriously believe that the author could not have been aware of the potential impact of such a shocking portraval? How would Americans view parallel inversions of Christian legend, after last year's uproar against The Last Temptation of Christ (which took an extremely sympathetic standpoint toward its subjectmatter)? Rushdie defends The militiamen in southern Leba-

The Iran-Contra judge adjourned court abruptly to clear up a "roadblock" created by an apparent defense attempt to disclose a name that the government wants to remain classified. It was the first disruption of the trial on national security grounds. presence of unsafe levels of the contaminant aflatoxin in 6% of the U.S. corn it sampled in recent months, but said consumers shouldn't be concerned The State Department about contamination of the food supply

The Washington D.C. raeli soldiers and Christian escalating violence, voted this women. Satanic Verses as an artistic and it is not always funny work, not concerned with the religious implications that have been interpreted from it. Al-review of the book in The New Republic, agrees with Rushdie's opinion, it nevertheless contains a note of criticism that may vindicate many of the book's critics (a note, coincidentally, edited out of an Elm edi-though Michael Wood, in his Rushdie seems to be at least torial last week which also cited read the god-damned book (no the passage): "The Satanic pun intended). In reading the week to impose a curfew of 11:00 pm on weekdays and midnight on weekends for persons under 18 years of age. The guardians of violators will be charged anywhere between $100 to $500 in fines In 1988, the ozone standard was violated 60% more often than in 1983 and violators now include 26 new cities The FDA confirmed the and 2 rural areas. Medical experts cited new evidence that ozone may scar or prematurely age human lungs after long exposure, increase susceptibility to other health problems and pose higher risk of respiratory disease in children. It also may endanger fetal-development in heavily exposed pregnant enough to lift its irreverence into satire or speculation." The charge of obscenity against within the realm of possibility.

what's wrong? How should we innocent Westerners react to all this? There seems to be only one common-sense answer:

Alright, now, what's right,

student drug use dropped to its decade

TISSR

Lithuania published a draft constitution giving it the right to veto laws passed in Moscow and an increased poparty organizations.

VENEZUELA President Carlos Perez suspended constitutional guarantees of free speech and movement and imposed a curfew after the recent rioting in several cities in which at least 60 people were killed and 500 wounded

El SALVADOR

In 1988, high school-age forces today unilaterally sus pended military actions until its lowest level in more than a June 1 after left is trebels agreed to direct peace talks with the

U.S. backed government. HUNGARY

Hungary accused its Warsaw pact ally, Romania, of human-rights violations, and it litical role for non-Communist agreed to join Western countries calling for the U.N. to investigate the situation.

ISRAEL

Prime minister Shamir termed nationwide municipal elections as a referendum on the Arab-Israeli conflict, savinggains for his right-wing state Likud bloc would demonstrate that the Jewish state will never talk to the P.L.O.

The Salvadoran armed compiled by Jacqueline Collins

Verses is certainly irreverent: work we show not only our Restaurant Manager - Chuck Rider Assistant Manager - John Nadolny Sally Hensley Breakfast Manager - Delonia Black Sondra Mack about it, we show also our vehement contempt of Khomeini's outrageous threats. Censorship is bad enough when it occurs can give is to allow the book to inside our country; outside, it is cling to its symbolic value, to an even greater threat. The book must be read and judged on its own merits. If critics are correct, and the book relies too heavily upon religious slurs for its content, then it shouldn't be pawned off as an artistic piece. If its literary worth can be us floundering in this immense appreciated and supported, and violent issue.

then let it rise among other desire to form our own opinions modern works and to hell with the critics (figuratively, of course). The worst reaction we sustain the prejudices that have clouded the situation, and have made the media the final judge, and not ourselves. Only finding out the truth for one's self will be able to dispel the confu sion of ignorance that has left

> Rts. 213 & 291 701 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md. 778-6622

OPEN DAILY 7 A.M.-11 P.M.

Burger King #5306

Greeks serve campus and community by Patricia Karnes The Greek Organizations

menot only a source of unity for the campus, but they are also an asset to the College community and Chestertown

Throughout the year, Fraternities and Sororities manize fund-raisers for charitable organizations. party, dance, or event sponsored w Greeks, helps to reach their adividual goals for the year

Fraternities hold events for the children of the community: Kappa Alphas have an nnual Christmas party for the children of Chestertown, and Lambdas contribute money and time to the Big Brother/ Big Sister Organization.

Each Sorority has a speific charity they contribute to warly. Monies are collected brough dues, parties, and other events. Alpha Chi Omega gives to Easter Seals and Cystic Fibrosis, Alpha Omicron Pi suports the Arthritis Foundation, nd Zeta Tau Alpha support and work with the Association for Retarded Citizens

Washington College's hree national Sororities parixipate in the Panhellenic Association, a national organitation that unites College Somities. In their February 22nd meeting, the women elected to onate $100.00 to the Big Brother/ Big Sister Organizaion in Chestertown, and 100.00 to the Tamara Alexanler Fund in April

All the Greek Organizains, in cooperation with the frector, KA John Billingslea rebuilding an enormous fund aiser for the Tamara Alexanler Fund. The grand event will wolve several bands, who will by for an amazing 14 hours. Dean McIntire states that the Greek Organizations prodeapositive experience which Wes participants an opportuhity to develop leadership abilibes. They make the campus tore colorful, and provide a

Not only do the Greeks CORRECTION

ense of tradition.

Last weeks Elm incorrectly reported that this week's production of The Eumenides was based on the Robert Lowell translation. The translation being used is by Richard Lattimore. The Elm apologises for the error

Construction men lower the Cardinal Dorms into place in this picture above. Recently College and Community officials entertained concerns that the dorms may be in a dangerous position, due to the proximity of Stenger's propane tanks. The tanks are within every regulation, despite the hopes of those who want them moved.

deal with organizations off campus, but they are directly in contact with the Social Life Issues Committee on campus; this creates a strong and working relationship between administration and the Greek Organizations

In addition to the Social Life Issues Committee, the Greek Organizations must sign and abide by a Statement of Mutual Responsibility between Washington College and its Social Fraternities and Sororities. This document enables the College and the organizations to know what is expected from the other and how matters will be handled

The guidelines which the organizations must adhere to are outlined in the document. Provisions pertain to academic responsibility; affiliation with respective national organiza tions, residential responsibilities, education and service responsibilities, social and legal responsibilities, and institutional responsibilities The Greek Organizations serve the College community now through parties and social events, but through alumni who were members of these organizations, much time and money are put back into the campus. Because of their bond, created by their association with Greek Organizations, to Washington College, a significant amount of scholarship money is donated to the College. The Greek Organizations involve a large number of Washington College students and alumni. Their ability to work with charitable organizations and the administration shows maturity, concern and versatility. Their unifying ability, therefore, is an important asset to the college community, but more specifically to individual students which will continue to be an asset to the college for years to come.

Student Government Senate Meeting Report: February 27

Controversy plagued the SGA at their last Senate meeting as they announced that Thomas Philmore Jackson had resigned from his position of SGA Treasurer due to "alleged malfeasance of duty". This Monday night, at a meeting in the Sophie Kerr Room, The Student Government Association began to pull itself back President Perry Finney opened his committee report by introducing the new Student Social Life committee. The group met Tuesday to discuss campus alcohol policies and the renovation of Hodson Hall's basement.

There is a tentative proposal to remove the arcade and knock out the wall to Ms. Dee's, enlarging the Coffee House

Vice President Rob Al bers reported on the Student Academic Council's approved motion to add a five year cap on senior theses. It was proposed that seniors be limited to five years after their initial graduation year to submit their theses. This motion will most likely go before the full faculty for vote at some future

Finney announced the SGA's current working budget. There is approximately $4,200.00 in the account, with an additional $4,000.00 or so outstanding, which the Business Office owes the SGA.

Last weekend the SGA sponsored the band 49 Reasons in the Coffee House. It is within the students' rights was the first such social function to prove successful, bringing the SGA a profit of $200.00

Student Conduct Council Chairman, Scott Jones, rebeen brought before the coun-

Pleading guilty to charges of possession of fire arms and conduct unbecoming of a Washington College student, Sophomore Henry Miller was fined $25.00 after shooting a BB gun from the window of East Hall

Scott Smith has been put on a form of social probation and may not enter the Coffee House until the end of March, in addition to having been fined $25.00. The freshman was charged with attempting to use a fake I.D. in the Coffee House. This was his second offense.

Senior John Macielag was fined $10.00 and charged with conduct unbecoming of a Washington College student. It was determined that Macielag was responsible for his visiting friends' conduct in that they threw bottles from the widows' walk of Middle Hall. This ruling may set a precedence for future cases

The SCC has established that in the future the minimum penalty levied by the jury will be equal to the maximum penalty levied by Resident Assistants which is a fine of $25.00.

Finney inquired of Jones as to whether or not he SCC had discussed the situation of "double jeopardy"-that is, if it New post on Elm Staff

The Elm Editors have created a new position on the News Staff, Student Government and Organizations Contact. It is intended that this individual act as a liaison between the Student Government Association and other student organizations.

position should contact Jennifer Harrison, Editor in Chief, or Tracey Connell, News Editor. at the Elm office or through campus mail.

Anyone interested in this

Any student organization that wishes to participate should also contact the Elm with pertinant information to be tried before school courts as well as actual legal courts for the same charges. It is to be discussed further, although the general consensus was that it would be proper. Professor Newell, SGA Advisor. commented that Washington College is, in a sense, "a separate society. The Kent and Queen

Anne's Volunteer Fire Department has asked Washington College to donate money towards their purchase of a new fire engine. The proposal was tabled, but if agreed upon by the Senate, the gesture may help to improve town-campus

Old business involved continued refusal by Stenger Hardware to remove the propane tanks behind As they Cardinal dorms comply with all federal codes and regulations, even the town has failed to persuade a clean-

Election of officers to the Executive Council has been set up for the week of March

The SGA will meet next n March 20, at 7:00 P.M. in the Sophie Kerr Room on the second floor of the Miller Library. All students who meet the requirements set in the Constitution are considered members of the SGA and are free to visit all open SGA Senate proceedings.

This report will appear bi-weekly in the Elm:

Model NATO conference provides insights for politically oriented students

by Troy Petenbrink

On Wednesday, five Washington College students began attending the fourth National Model NATO (the North Atlantic Treaty Organi zation) at Howard University Washington, D.C. The confer ence, an opportunity for students to learn about international relations, will conclude

"This is the first time Washington College has participated in this event," says Arian D. Ravanbakhsh

"Turkey was one of our choices of countries we wished to represent, and [we] were fortunate enough to receive it."

"We felt Turkey was a different and unique country, and felt it has been underrepre sented in NATO," adds Monte

F. Bourjaily, IV The Model NATO is designed to increase awareness of the role, organization, and activities of NATO, and to emphasize the need for effective diplomatic, economic and military cooperative action in an unfolding crisis. Washington College will work along with American University students, who rep-schools from around the coun- Ramazanoglu, Economic Af- world importance will occur, gan State students, represent- Affairs; Arian Ravanbakhsh, General Session. ing Great Britain; and repre- Defense Planning; Neil MacIn-resent the United States; Michi- Michele Hartnett, Political urday and then will confer in a dag, Turkish Ambassador to the

During the course of the sentatives from thirteen other doe, Nuclear Planning; John event, a simulated crisis of

Shown here is Dr. Tai Sung An, faculty advisor, with the five W.C. students participating in the fourth National Model NATO. The conference gives students the opportunity to learn about international relations

Each of the five students will serve as a representative to a NATO committee: with their committees until Sat- group met with Sukru Elek-

North Atlantic Council. The students will meet fairs; Monte F. Bourjaily, IV, and the students will prepare a position for NATO.

On Wednesday the U.S., for a morning briefing at the role the group will need b

The students have been studying information from the Turkish Embassy and the Stab Department in preparation to this endeavor.

Work on their presents tion for the conference begani-November, and they have me once a week since the start the semester.

"The students are in the driving seat for this, I'm justin the background. They desens all of the credit for their work explains Dr. Tai Sung An, the faculty advisor for the group.

Ravanbakhsh commenter on the intensity of the prepara tion. "How much does the aver age student know about Turkev?"

MacIndoe adds that 'I has been a great help in havis John [Ramazanoglu], since h is a Turkish citizen.

The students hope to shan their insights with the College through a panel discussion about their experiences.

The Elm's first annual swimsuit issue

Cold weather got you down? Picture sand, a pink wetsuit...

Welcome to the Washington College Elm's first annual swimsuit edition. I'm Bill, your host for the afternoon. I hope that you enjoy your greasy chicken sandwich while the WC celebs strut their stuff.

To your left is Libby Cater. Libs is wearing a glittery two piece pink wetsuit that she found in the basement of the Hynson Ringgold House.

"I just had Lula dust it off, and now it's like new."

W. once owned the swimsuit. "Mahtha Wahshington nevah had it so goood," laughs

Dougie just nudged me. "She's a hot babe, that Libs."

Dougie's official pre-released statement about the swimsuit edition was "No comment." In private, however, he " It's a whale of an idea. Bill." He'd never admit it.

Next up is Dean Baer.

Lizzie is in a daring one piece Clint-O denied his previous cation. topless string bikini. Yes, that's her, the one shouting, "I am woman, I am free." Notice the absence of tan lines. "I've been working for months on this tan," brags Lizzie. "It's hard to find quality ultraviolet light in sub-freezing weather

"You see, whenever Clint-O comes by I slip up to the roof of the Buntagon for another tanning session. I tell him that Sources say that Martha I'm on a secret special projects and long range planning expedition. He buys it every time."

Clint-O Baer, by the way, was supposed to appear today,

"I'd love to appear at your first annual WC Elm swimsuit edition celebration," said Clint-O last week. "It will provide a necessary diversion for the students, and offer unlimited learning opportunities that cannot be found on cable TV."

remark

"The swimsuit edition is counter-productive to a healthy learning environment at the College. We strongly oppose all such activities and will move swiftly to abolish them without

This morning, however,

Bill Beekman

Clint-O again changed his

"Again, my words have been misstated by the Elm," said Clint-O. "I have been mislead into making comments that I did not intend to make.'

"The College strongly opposes all such misleading comments unless they originate from within the Administration. All misleading comments must Yesterday, however, be cleared by me prior to publi-

Just minutes ago, however, Clint-O again altered his

"I deny all of the previous remarks that I have made for my entire life. It wasn't me speaking," claimed Clint-O. "It was the PCB." "I have no comment on anything at this time, or ever!" continued Clint-O. "I've got too much work to do on a long-range special project."

"By the way," added Clint-O. "the College strongly opposes nepotism and superfluous positions. And you can print that!"

One can only wonder about all of the duplicity. Three rumors have surfaced: Clint-O has been contaminated by PCB, or Clint-O has been poisoned by waves emitted from his cable TV, or Clint-O is preparing for his future job as Secretary of De-

Well, that sums it up for today. The important peoplethe professors -are all earning their pay now, teaching. This year's swimsuit et tion has been co-sponsored the WCDS special dinne committee See you all next we when we have the Leban

Polka Dancers, and more gress And by the way, this is fiction. So don't get the Ayali lah after me We all know the truth

much funnier anyway

Outward Bound If you have ever partici

pated in an Outward Bound program, or plan in the future, please con tact Jennifer Harrison Anne Lindenbaum via student mail or at ext. 32

Your help is appreciated

Cager Tim Keehan strives for excellence

Tim Keehan has earned respectability both on and off the court

TOM LANDRY AND CLASS - BOTH NOW MISSING IN DALLAS

een a few things that are taken for granted in the NFL. The Phoenix/St. Louis Cardinals will not make the playoffs. Fewer than 20 000 people will show up for games at Atlanta's Fulton County Stadium. The winning quar-

Brett lankford

terback in the Super Bowl is ning to vacation at Disney World. Tom Landry patrols the sidelines in Dallas as he has for the past 29 years. Landry and Dallas go together like Laurel and Hardy, like Abbott and Costello, like Martin and Lewis. Unfortunately, all great partnerships must end eventu-

Still, the football world was shocked last weekend when andry was fired as coach of the Cowboys, replaced by the niversity of Miami's Jimmy hnson. The most distressing Pertof this firing was the way it was handled. Tom Landry arned the news through the ledia, which is certainly not he treatment he deserved

Until last weekend, Tom andry was the only coach in the history of the Dallas Cowboys. Now he's the only coach ver fired in the history of the Dallas organization

Landry was the driving tree behind the team's domistion of the NFC in the 1970's. He will be remembered with on Meredith, Roger Staubach, Bib Lilly and Drew Pearson as he definitive members of the as Cowboys. He possessed the ability to remain calm in Staubach at quarterback. The Cowboys became known as America's Team, the Celtics of pro football. They were a team that was either loved or despised - there were no passive fans of Dallas.

Tom Landry was a favorite son in Dallas, but was hated by fans in Washington and New York. Regardless of whether he was loved or hated, he was admired by all people who followed pro football. For 29 years, Tom Landry was the classiest man in pro football.

Recent times have not been good to the Cowboys, and Landry was blamed for most of the downfall. Attendance was dwindling in Dallas, and the Washington-Dallas rivalry lost some of its appeal. It was once taken for granted that the Cowboys would make it to the NFC championship game, if not the Super Bowl. They are now considered a long shot to make the playoffs. Roger Staubach has been replaced by Steve Pelleur, Herschel Walker is at running back instead of Tony Dorsett, and Michael Irvin has replaced Tony Hill and Drew Pearson. Jimmy Johnson is the new coach, continuing the changing of the guard. It may have been time for Landry to Landry has been replaced by a coach who is severely lacking in the class department, and Landry's firing was handled very poorly. Tom Landry was in the Dallas organization for thirty years, and he deserved to be treated with respect. When Oklahoma millionaire Jerry Pressure situations, and was Jones bought the Dallas Cow-leave, but his departure presents a few problems.

There have always able to pass this trait on to boys, he immediately announced the hiring of Jimmy Johnson. Tom Landry was notified after the media, an absolutely classless move by

> In Johnson, the Cowboys are now led by a man of considerably less class than Landry Johnson's only interest is winning, and while at Miami he frustrated a lot of people with his lack of interest in academics and discipline. The Hurricanes were always talking down to their opponents, having no respect for the other teams Johnson did not care if his players graduated as long as they won. Tom Landry cared about his team as both players and people.

Landry helped Thomas "Hollywood" Henderson control his drug problem. It is doubtful that Johnson would make this effort for his players. He is a good coach, but lacks compassion. His attitude and style of coaching will not be accepted well in pro football circles.

Until a week ago, the Dallas Cowboys were a bad football team with a great amount of class. Despite all of the hardships of the 1988 season, there was very little feuding among the players. They no longer have a coach who prevents problems, inheriting both a coach and owner who like to start difficulties. Though the football team may turn their fortunes around with Johnson and Jones, it is doubtful the Cowboys will ever reach the same level of class again.

Brett Lankford is a sophmore English major

by Don Steele

The Washington College an offensive leader. Basketball team has had an outstanding season and one of the driving forces in their success has been the outstanding play of Tim Keehan. Keehan has been an offensive sparkplug and a defensive leader. Keehan has been rewarded by being named to the Regional M.A.C All-American first team. He is the first W.C. player to be so honored since Kurt Keller in Keehan is a junior from Lutherville, Maryland, began playing basketball when he was about 5 after his father taught him the game. After playing at Calvert Hall against players such as Rodney Monroe and present Shoremen Chris Brandt and Andy Bauer, Keehan chose W.C. over F&M and a few Division I schools.

Coach Tom Finnegan remembers recruiting Tim. was impressed with his work ethic and determination to win. He always gives 100%."

It is the work ethic that Finnegan spoke of that has carried him to the elite group of M.A.C. players.

Keehan has already scored 1,000 points and still has another season to play. His scoring prowess is not the key to his game though. Keehan remarks on his game, "My key is my defense". Coach Finnegan agreed and said how he always puts Tim on the oppositions best offensive guard. This year, however, Tim has become

In his time here at W.C. Tim has also won many awards. Apart from this year's M.A.C. All-American honors, he won First Team District M.A.C. honors for the second straight year. This year he also repeated as M.V.P. of the Wild Goose Classic. He won the M.V.P. at the Frostburg Invitational.

Tim's basketball does not take priority over his academics. He is a Dean's List student but it is not easy

To work out the time it. takes to excell in the classroom and on the court Tim disciplines himself. "I schedule my time and set my priorities. This allows me to play ball, do well in school and have fun." Coach Finnegan agreed with this and praises Keehan on his "ability to focus his energies on academics, athletics or relaxing." Tim thinks that the closeness at W.C. is what makes school so special. He feels the family atmosphere is a definite plus about the school.

The team plays in the NCAA regionals against Grove City today. It is hoped that Keehan will be fit to play. An ankle injury has Keehan on crutches. Also, good luck to Keehan in the upcoming All-American voting. The team and the school can be thankful that Keehan will return for his senior year and hopefully carry the team to new heights.

Sho'men get tourny bid

The Washington College basketball team got its bid, and is seeded fourth in this weekends regionals at Franklin and Marshall. The team will play on Friday against a tough Grove City squad from Pittsburgh.

The Grove City squad is seeded third in the region, with a ecord almost identical to W.C.'s: 19-5 compared to 19-6. Grove City, however, plays a big inside game with a few bodies to fill the paint. The winner of this game will advance to play the winner of the F&M/Susquehanna game

Going into the tournament the Shoremen have lost Chris Jamke and also are unsure of Tim Keehan's status. This will mean the team must play its best to win. Coach Finnegan said that the "rest of the players have to adapt to the situation." The hasketball team represents the Washington College in the NCAA tournament and has to give it their all to win.

> Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave Chestertown, Met 21620 Janie Thompson 788-0898

The NHL Heats up as Weather Warms

National Hockey League season, now that every team has played fifty games. I told him that I could really not get too excited about the league until March, when the playoff races start to take shape. Throughout the month of February, I had the classic "Hockey Blahs. Quite simply, this period of doldrums is due to the fact that the league simply lacks focus throughout the early part of the year. No team is really breaking away, and no team is really falling out of contention. Also, it seems that the schedule every night is filled with those soon-to-be classic games such as Detroit at Winnipeg, Quebec at Toronto, and Minnesota at Hartford. Even the most rabid fan has trouble at this juncture in the season

Arian D. Ravanbakhsh

But sing me no sad songs about the February Blahs today. It's March and the focus is now on the playoffs, which are just a short month away. Also, this season has been filled with some outstanding individual achievements which will surely add excitement to the wanning days of the season.

Clearly, the most exciting of these is the race for the Art Ross Trophy (as leading scorer). Right now, Mario Lemieux has a thirty point lead over Wayne Gretzky, but that is not an impossible margin to overcome when you're talking about the Great Gretzky. Another individual battle to watch is to see who captures the rookie-of-theyear award. Will it be the New York Ranger forward Tony Granato, or his teammate, Brian Leetch? Surely, Guy Lafleur has to be named the comeback player of the year.

me what I thought about the this is an article about the upcoming playoffs. So, here

> Starting out west, the Smythe division appears to be much more interesting than it has been in the past. For one, the trade of Gretzky from Edmonton to Los Angeles has shifted the balance of power in this division. No team will catch Calgary for first place, and Calgary should advance to the division final. A vastly improved Vancouver team is at least a year away from posing a serious threat to the solid Calgary team. The battle in this division is between the Oilers and the Kings. With Los Angeles recent acquisition of Kelly Hrudey from the Islanders, they bring a proven goaltender with Stanley Cup Playoff experience to bolster their defense. A first round series between Edm ton and Los Angeles should go the distance, with the luckier, if not better, team prevailing. However, unless Calgary selfdestructs, they are the favorite to emerge out of the Smythe and even into the Finals

In the Norris Division, I usually can not predict a thing. Beyond Detroit, the teams all have serious deficencies. The semifinal which does not have Detroit in it will be typical Norris division hockey and will provide proof for the phrase winning ugly." Look for the Detroit RedWings, behind the great Steve Yzerman and Gerard Gallant to steamroll the other teams in the division and make it to the conference final.

Moving east, we now come to the Adams Division. The Montreal Canadiens, as they seem to do every year, are leading the pack. Under rookie head coach Pat Burns, the Canadiens have played tough and determined hockey, which is sure to give them some playoff success. Buffalo and Boston

Montreal in the division finals. To all the Bruin fans; do you really thing that the Canadiens haven't forgotten about last

Finally, I get to the Patrick Division. This division is the toughest for me to talk about because I have trouble putting aside my personal feelings. Right now, it is really too close to call in regards to which team will finish in first. And as a bonus, that first place team gets to tackle the Philadelphia Flyers in the first round of the playoffs, which is never any fun. However, the Flyers this year seem to lack that something extra which makes Stanley Cup winners. This Flyer team is simply not as determined as the one that Mike Keenan lead to the Finals a couple of years ago. Meanwhile, the New York Rangers and the Pittsburgh Penguins, both of which did not qualify for the playoffs last year, are surprising everyone by seriously competing for the lead in the Patrick. The Penguins have been bolstered by the superb play of Lemieux and Paul Coffey, along with the surprising Rob Brown. If Pittsburgh is weak in one area it is defense. The goaltending they get from Tom Barrasso is ade quate, but not the type of goaltending needed to win Pittsburgh a Stanley Cup

Excitement in New York during playoff time seems to always center on the Islanders. This year, they can't stop talking about the Rangers, who haven't won a Stanley Cup since 1943. And I really hate to break this to the Ranger fans out there, but this won't be the year either. This Ranger team needs some playoff experience before they win it all. Maybe next year. Though the talents of Granato and Leetch, along with

Which brings me to my favorite team, the Washington Capitals, who have yet to make it out of the Patrick Division a playoff team. However, this has got to be the year. They are ready. Geoff Courtnall is the leftwinger who scores, Mike Ridley is the most underrated player in the league, and Rod Langway leads the league's best corps of defensemen. Last year,

Recently, a friend asked. However, all arguments aside, are figthing for the right to see do make this team one that. Dale Hunter started a winning what I thought about the this is an article about the which team gets to lose to should not be taken lightly. led past a defeated Flyer goa tender. Clearly, they will buil on it this year, and maybe, it maybe, win it all. Maybe, I'v been working too hard, or hoo ing too long. But, if the Gods Hockey are willing, Rod Land way will skate around the C Centre with the Stanley C hoisted high come late May The answers will be revealed

photo by Dave Joh

Cold temperatures and slippery court conditions have conspired forcing Washington College netters inside in preperation for this upcoming matches. Here Larry Gewer returns a volley.

Softball warms up for season

Mary-Jo De Crescenzo

The Washington College Women's Softball team is than past records show. With primed and ready for a new Vandbeisbrouck's goaltending season. The Sho'women want

'89 to prove to themselves and to others that they are better most of the players returning this season and the addition of some talented newcomers, prospects are good.

Returning senior player Adrienne Cupka feels the team this year is showing a positive attitude and a consistency that she has not seen in the past A prime reason for the high morale of the team is the return of Ms. Penny Fall 85 Coach. Ms. Fall was on sab batical during the last season but returns this year activating a spirited response from the team members. Ms. Fall reports the team is continuing to move upward in execution of the game. The main weight, Ms. Fall feels, falls on the pitch ers and the infield. The pitth ers need consistent perform ances to get through each game the infielders must show a high level of execution.

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists' Materials

> POBox 402 311 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21/020 701-778-5202

Thin Man Deli

Baked Goods * Deli Sandwiches * Assorted Cheeses

> Open 5 Days a Week Monday thru Friday

107 Cross Street

C-TOWN LIQUORS & DELI

DAVID B EASON

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOUR WEIGHT LOSS PLATEAUS

en with Weight Watchers for years. The first year I lost 1/2 pounds but the second ar I went up and down and still at 30 1/2 pounds. I get red with the food, and I just it seem to lose any more. I stuck. Can you give me ne tips? - V.T. El Paso.

Dr. Jock

DEAR READERS: For rters, let's not blame Weight tchers. It's an excellent gram and gives you an eatgregimen you can stick to the st of your life. On Weight tchers, you get all the vitans and minerals you need, s the proper mix of the necsary food groups: fat, milk, ead and cereals. On Weight stchers, you lose weight wly and steadily, and at the ne time, you learn how to in the real world, making althy choices about the quanand quality of the food you That's not true of some of fad diets on the market Drinking protein powder instance, teaches you nothabout getting along, eating food in the real world. If rebored with the diet, check your Weight Watchers selor. We bet you'd get ored real fast if you started se weight again...

Diet plateaus are

Many people have probwith weight loss plateaus.

DEAR DR. JOCK: I have Weight loss is a lot like growth. plan where the number of calo-As a child, you don't grow at a ries you take in is in balance steady rate. You grow in spurts. first, on a diet, you may lose a water loss. After that, the weight loss is slower, Some weeks, you may not lose a That's when many people get discouraged and sop back into old bad eating habits.

Patience is a virtue.

You can avoid backsliding by being patient with yourself. Most people have unrealistic expectations about how much weight they can lose. super-market tabloids that scream "Lose 10 pounds in 2 Days!" are bunk. Don't believe it or you'll be disappointed. And keep in mind, that weight loss is not the only measure of a good diet. Every day you eat right - fewer fatty, processed foods, more fruits, veggies and complex carbohydrates, etc. - you are giving your body what it needs to run more efficiently. Instead of paying so much attention to numbers on a scale, pay attention to how much better you feel when you eat the right foods. No more heartburn, no more feeling bloated - that's worth something too.

Exercise is essen-

One great way to get unstuck when you have reached a plateau is to increase the amount of exercise you're doing. You didn't mention that at all It appears that you have reached a point in your eating with the number of calories you Dieting is the same way. At consume. That's probably the reason you're stuck. You need lot of weight. That's mainly to shift the balance. Instead of consuming fewer calories, treat yourself to more activity. Go out and take a walk for 30 minutes to an hour every day. That burns up four to five calories per minute for a 155-pound person. Over tie, over distance, not only will you lose weight. you'll also feel better, stronger and healthier. It's not enough to follow the Weight Watchers diet, you know. You need to pay attention to the exercise component of the program, too.

Don't let vour set

Some weight experts talk about a "set point," a weight that your body just naturally gravitates to in spite of your efforts to weigh less or more. If you are eating sensibly, and exercising regularly, and you still can't reach your goal weight. maybe you need to reevaluate your goal. Most of us don't have model bodies and we never will Being thin should not be the be, end-all goal of life.

Why make yourself mis erable over a few extra pounds? Learn to listen to your body. Focus on your health and wellness, not some numbers on a scale. Good luck.

Here are four facts that every fitness fan should know: cise.

- Avoid salt tablets at all costs. You get more than enough in your food.

Carbohydrates undoubtedly increase athletic performance. A big steak before the Big Game is the last thing you ought to eat. Pasta power!

- Athletes must drink even if they're not thirsty. You must condition your body to get used to taking fluids by drinking them during training sessions, not just competition

- Vitamin supplements are vastly overvalued. Many symptoms that athletes associate with vitamin difficiency (i.e. fatigue, muscle aches, depression) are simply the natural consequence of physical exer-

Swimmers finish 9th at MAC's

Last weekend the Washington College Swim Team finished ninth in the three day MAC Championship Meet, Fifteen teams contested with Gettysburg taking top rank and WC scoring 112 points to last years 40 points.

The meet lasted three days: swimmers qualified in the morning, and competed for placement at night. The maximum number of events is seven, but those that qualified eventually ended up swimming more because of the placing and amount of work, not to mention five full months of training to be a physical drain on his swimmers. He stated, "swimming is a very demanding sport, they excellent meet in her finish as began to show how tired they eleventh in the were at the end, but still swam breaststroke.( Conference is full potential."

As for the individual rankings, Kasey Carroll, freshman, placed second in the 1650 and fourth in both the 200 IM and 400IM. Carroll's races were performed up to potential and she swam an excellent championship meet. Jen Korten placed fourth in the 100 back and twelfth in the 200 back. Overall her performance has been progressive and enthusiastic temporarily holding scores.)

Samantha Streamer, in Coach Berry found this one of her most competitive swims, took ninth in the 100 freestyle. Kathy Finneson won tenth in the 100 back. Freshman, Leslie Newcomb swam an next year's MAC's.

Vicky Carroll, a less visible swimmer, had one of her best meets. She improved all her times every day and when the team needed her in the 400 medley, she swam the "best leg of the relay and finished her season on an up note," stated

At the meet's completion the team felt as if they had been successful in fulfilling their goals of the season. Their goal to break into the top ten was successful. Fifty points separated places five through nine, and the team is in good position to improve their standings in

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4.30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 FREE Hors D'oeuvres

Monday shooter nite $2.00

Tuesday pitcher nite $3.50

Wednesday shot & draft $1.50

Thursday Ladies Nite

THE MOVIES - $5.00 cover Final Engagement as a Group

Sat 3/4

Fri 3/3

Steve Taylor - No Cover In the Front

778-1984

SCUBA CLASSES BEGIN APRIL 11th

With our professional instructors, you can expect the highest quality instruction. In addition to our entry level scuba classes, our experts teach a wide range of advance and specialty courses. For More Info Stop By or Call: Dennis Berry at the Casey Swim Center, ext. 335

Mears Pt. Marina

CALYPSO DIVE Grasenville, MD SHOP 639-7883

Flying Colours attempts to bring DeBurgh into U.S. musical limelight

by Ken Winkler

Chris DeBurgh is not a newcomer to the music world. He began in the early seventies as a folk singer in England and is popular in many places around the world. Unfortunately, the United States is not one of them. He is known here as the man who did the song Lady in Red. Some people may even remember a song called Don't Pay the Ferryman, but apart from that he is anonymous in this country

The tragedy of this is once again brought to light in his latest release, Flying Colours, on the A&M label. His music, suitable for a mellow, romantic setting, is at the same time danceable, and in many cases, poignant. His distinctive voice and lyrics make the album his. but he displays a new side that appears more frequently on his recent albums: his increasing fascination with synthesized sounds. Once a man who lived children and died by the acoustic guitar he has discovered a whole world ried over into the next song of effects for everything from his guitar to percussion to the fretless bass that he loves, and has created a unique sound that can be powerful without being intimidating. He also shows more of a jazz influence in his recent albums, which comes through from the very first track on Flying Colours.

This first track is called Sailing Away, and it is a love song. Indeed, four of the first six songs on the album fit that category. His romantic lyrics are sometimes sappy and sometimes detached, but they always serve his purpose. They do not fall into the clichéd trivialities of Barry Manilow or Air Supply by any means but keep their integrity by refusing to bow to the typical ballad form. The songs are either up-beat or treated in such a way as to create a nonstandard slow rhythm, as in Lady in Red. The lyrics are at the very least imaginative

Another trademark of Chris DeBurgh is his storytelling talent. He produced an entire album of tales called Spanish Train and Other Stories. Only one tale, Night on the River, appears on this album, but it does allow him to show his audience that he has not lost his sense of humor or his creativity. "Naked and frozen at the side of a lake/ I think I've gone and made my big mistake/ I took her swimming, we had a fight/ Now my clothes and the lady are well out of Library sight."

Leather On My Shoes is another noteworthy track. A song of social consciousness, its sound has an Irish flavor, not tion and violence reign. only in the guitar (a la U2 or Big Country), but in his voice and in the quiet synthesized woodwind tones played in the background. While he may be influenced by this popular unification of Irish folk music with rock, the subtle electric guitar riffs and the completely unique drum sound all bear his very personal signature

The second side begins with two more love songs including Missing You (billed as the sequel to Lady in Red ), and I'm Not Scared Anymore . It is in this second song that the album changes texture. Beginning as a typical Chris De Burgh love song, it changes by the end. It concludes in a somewhat anxious tone, expressing his paternal anxiety about the orld he is leaving for his new

This anxious mood is carcalled Don't Look Back Some obvious parallels can be drawn between this song and the earlier success from his Getaway album, the song Don't Pay the Ferryman. Don't Look Back is another song about a man involved in a desperate chase. Ferryman was a fantasy; however, into a driving rhythm. The side may seem somewhat dis- of significance in the process by Sabrina Kenny Mondays at four is "Tea and Talk" time in the O'Neill Literary House. The Spring 1989 Monday Series presented issues ranging from saving the Greyhound Bus Terminal to Early American Indians on the Eastern Shore to T. E. Lawrence and the Arab Revolt. Now, this song is about a real chase taking place in a nameless urban setting where prostitu-

This mood is promptly, but not completely, broken acoustic song fades in. On his last album, Into the Light, there is a song DeBurgh wrote for his baby daughter, Rosanna. Just a Word Away , written for his new son, is a song for solo acoustic guitar. It is a song of comfort for his child, appropriately following his words of anxiety in Don't Look Back . The mood effectively does for us what the lyrics promise to do for his son: calm the fears created by the

He travels next over two thousand years for The Risen Lord . Many times in past albums DeBurgh has adopted Biblical themes for his lyrics. In this song, Simon of Cyrene, the man who helped Jesus carry his cross, speaks in a very subtle and spiritual manner accompanied by the piano. DeBurgh never commits himself to more than a fascination with religion, although in every album it is

Each of his albums concludes with a serious and personal song. The Last Time I Cried explodes from the previous two quiet acoustic songs bum its unity. While the first flying colours

lyrics cry out, "Eli, Eli Lama, organized, as a random stri Oh Lord, you have forsaken me.' The song summarizes the fear that the album conveys about second side becomes a log the state of man. It is not the usual political statement one might get from Sting or Peter Gabriel, but rather a simple and sincere concern for human-

This theme gives the al-

of the best songs he has writte in the past year and a half, progression of musical thoug Perhaps it is time for Ameri to discover something that English and others learne long time ago: Chris DeBo has a gift for music and wo and is able to combine the to entertain and say someth

Spring Tea and Talk Series takes away Monday "blahs"

ues, and the month of February closes, there are only three fessor of English, will read in advidednation ... where the more appearances, presentamen memory of the late fiction writer and Caesar walk hand in Son more appearances, presentations and tea times left.

Irving Weiss will initiate the new month with his talk titled Visual Poetry on Monday the sixth of March. Following this, Mary Clarke, visiting fellow in editing; Kevin Holland, as the spring semester contin- junior English/ Drama major; about the conflict in Northern ous."

and poet Richard Carver, whose work frequently appeared in the New Yorker. On the last Monday in March (the twenty-seventh), education professor Sean O'Connor will perform an im-provisational one-man drama

Thus, throughout Mondays in March, some Washington College's face and students will enliven Literary House with ta readings and demonstration on "matters worthy and ou

Halio and King Lear provide for enlightening talk

by Angela Henneman

Once again, the works of William Shakespeare will be the topic of discussion at Wash ington College when the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series presents Jay Halio from the University of Delaware on Wednesday night at eight p.m. in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller

English and Drama, will direct should be quite interesting." his lecture towards one of Shakespeare's most interesting and difficult plays, The Tragedy of King Lear. Dr. Nancy Tatum, Chairman of the Department of English and the Chairman of the Sophie Kerr Lecture Series, notes that Professor Halio, "has been studying the play in-depth and his

A well-known Shakespear-

ean scholar who is involved in several aspects of writing and editing, Halio has served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Folger Library in Washington, the National Shakespeare Theatre. Because of his extensive knowledge of Shakespeare and of the play Halio, who teaches both insight and commentary on it King Lear, Halio should prove all community members.

to be a tremendous asset students of Shakespeare Washington College.

Whether or not a stude or faculty member is an act observer and scholar of works of William Shakespe or an avid fan of the thest Halio's discussion of King L promises to be enlightening informative. The talk is ope

Campus Calendar: March 3-8

The Film Series will presthe movie Working Girls . cted by Lizzie Borden, the depicts the adventures of issue. in a New York brothel rking Girls has been called of the most controversial s of the year.

Also running Thursday. day and Saturday nights will Gina Braden and Cindy ley's senior project, the ek tragedy, The Eumenides.

Sunday March 5

sents a program of music posed in and around 1740 Norman James Theatre at

Monday March 6

at 4:30 PM, will be pre- this issue

Weekend-March 3.5.6 ceded by tea and cookies at 4. A related article by Sabrina Kenny, on this Spring's offerings of talks, appears in this

Tuesday March 7

The Voices and Visions video Series will discuss the life and works of Marianne Moore. The films are shown in the Literary House Reading Room at 8 PM and are sponsored by the Writer's Union.

Also on Tuesday will be eglay begins at 8 PM in the panel discussion presented was Theater. Because the by the Margaret Horsely Sociyis a senior project, admisers the panel discussion presented by the Margaret Horsely Sociyis a senior project, admisers the panel discussion presented by the panel discussion by the panel discussio ened Right or State Sanctioned Crime?" The panel, moderated by Linda Cades, includes Drs. The Music Department Newell and Taylor and Associate Dean Sansing.

Wednesday March 8

The Sophie Kerr Lecture Series will discuss the intricacies of Shakespeare's King Lear. The Monday Tea and Talk - The speaker will be Jay Halio ries will discuss "Visual and a related story written by try" with Irving Weiss. The Angela Henneman appears in

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:30-6 TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

778-1222

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

OLD WHARFINN ON THE CHESTER DIVER

OT OF CANNON ST ESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Braden and Cindy Curley's senior obligation. Here, the cast prepares for the production in the costumes designed and created by Wendy Snow. The show runs Thursday to Friday nights at 8PM.

PRICE SLICED ON PAN PIZZA!

What's better than a fresh, hot Pan Pizza from your home town Pizza Hut® restaurant? One that saves you money!

Come on over, bring the coupon below and let us make one just for you-with dough we make fresh every day, tangy sauce, pure mozzarella cheese and your choice of delicious toppings. Pizza lovers never had it so good!

$2.00 off any large Pan Pizza, or $1.00 off any medium Pan Pizza. Hurry This special offer expires soon. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut® restaurants.

Rt 213 Kent Plaza Chestertown

NEWS

The high cathedral-like cieling adds atmosphere to what will be the new Art House. Construction has begun (see photo page one). This may not have been possible if not for a private donation that paid for what the Administration refused to Helpline hours

Helpline is in operation Thurs- contact Chris Schanno through day through Sunday nights campus mail. from 9:00pm to 12 midnight.

Helpline volunteers must All calls are confidential. The undergo training in agreement phone number to call is 778- with the organization's constitution.

Indiviuals that may want

CORRECTION

A quote attributed to Ken Haltom in the February 17 article, "Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity ordered to vacate East Hall" was in fact contributed by Mike Winkleman. We apologise for any inconvenience it may have caused.

Benefit planned

party is six dollars. For those 21 and over the price includes beer, and soda is available for those under 21. Each class and bands and talk to radio staorganization on campus has the tions. The Greek organizaoption to organize a booth or activity for the day. A dunking booth, t-shirt stand, and many appealing food stands will be included. Activities such as volleyball, hackysack and horseshoes will also promote the spirit and excitement of the day. All community members, parents, and friends of students are invited.

Through this party, the Greek organizations hope to benefit the community and gain comes anyone interested in the respect from all who have doubted their ability to join be held in Middle Hall on Suntogether and work for a com-

Each fraternity and sorority plays a specific role in the pledge olympics; Alpha Omi-Omega is helping to write let-

Alpha and Lambda brothers are helping in various other ways Some members of Phi Sigma are helping to organize the tions intend to break the tensions among one another by working together.

John Billingslea commented, "My first goal was to join all the organizations on campus together, and then found a cause which was Tamara Alexander." Even though many students are already working to organize this bazaar, more people are stil needed. The committee welplanning to attend a meeting to day, March 5.

The fundraising party, in order to be successful, needs success of the party: Theta Chi the support and enthusiasm of is responsible for organizing the entire campus. This day initiates a hope of harmony cron Pi is designing posters and among the Greek and other forming a raffle; Alpha Chi campus organizations. Anyone interested should contact John ters; Zeta Tau Alpha is organ- Billingslea or attend the meet

Mom's Cookie Jar

National Nutrition Month was kicked off Wednesday, March 1st. The annual Health and Fitness Fair was held in the Student Center. Blood pressure and Weight were checked, and numerous pamphlets were displayed for everyone interested There was also a tape on AIDS, and a speaker who focased on the topic of stress, geared towards seniors who will be graduating this May. Hopefully those who participated in this mini seminar received valuable information to take with them after gradu ation. There will continue to be nutritional informa ion distributed throughout the month in the main dining roo

I know that everyone enjoyed themselves in the snow last week. Wasn't it just beautiful? Well, until next week, have a good мом

Washington College Elm

olume 60, Number 19

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 10, 1989

Propane leaks plague college and local officials

partment responded to two rms in three days concern-Stenger's propane tanks ated behind the Cardinal unteer fire department connger of the situation. present the rms occurred last Thursday, bruary 2, at approximately 00 P.M., according to Washgton College Chief of Secuy, Jerry Roderick. Roderick ted that there was no evacuin at that time and that there ded that students were not

Walter R. Strong, one of assistants to the Chesterwn Volunteer Fire Chief, there of that alarm. Accordto Strong the liquid proontained in Stenger's and ter propane tanks, has no Instead an trant is added to it, so that Many times when an odor bleeder valve." resent, there is not necesushall, Richard Powell, cited temissions of both odorant liquid propane occur when can occur as tanks natuyrelease pressure. Propane tected easily.

INSIDE:

leaks themselves are not always The Chestertown Fire dangerous because a specific concentration of propane is required for an ignition or ex-

According to Strong the rmitories. Statements from leak on the night of February 2 Fire Marshall and the local was from a tank Stenger claimed was empty of propane at concerning the apparent Odorant was the only substance present therefore there was no

The second alarm within a three day period provided a sharp contrast. The leak was reported and brought the volunteers back to campus last Saturday, February 4. Roderick stated that it occurred at s"nothing to that leak". He approximately 1:00 P.M., that an evacuation took place, "so there must have been something." He was unaware as to the remaining facts

Strong stated that this the Niel, and also a resident second leak did involve propane Chestertown, explained the and was in concentrations well into the explosive range. The Assistant Chief added that a cigarette thrown over towards the leaking tank would have caused an explosion. Most disturbing was Strong's statement en leaks occur, they can be that the leak was caused when somebody turned on the

Both Strong and the other by a dangerous situation. assistant to the Chief, Jeff Strong and the Fire Thompson, stressed the dangers of such a situation. Said Strong, "sufficient amounts of L.P. gas are ignited with rather ats are filled or emptied and deadly results. When it is within the explosive range, all

continued on page 5

These children were only a few of those who enjoyed stedding on campus this week. They played for hours on the hill behind West, East, and Middle Halls while students watched on their way back and forth from classes. The children braved cold and freezing snow on Monday and Tuesday this week white

SGA poses renovation plans for Hodson basement

by Julie Schram

Changes have marked this era in Washington College's history. In order to keep up much construction and renovation has been taking place on the campus. Various committees have also recently been

The Bookstore is expected to relocate to the new Student Resource Center, scheduled for with the times and to accommo- completion in the summer of date the growing enrollment, 1990. The SGA became aware of this early last year and considered ideas for renovating the Coffee House at a Long-Range Planning Committee meeting. considering the possible reno- Since then, the Student Affairs vation of the basement of Hod- Office and Dr. David Newell and the Student Issues Committee have offered suggestions for the project.

An architect recently inspected the basement and will draw up plans. However, according to both SGA President Perry Finney and Senior Vice President for Management and Finance Gene Hessey, it is a matter of agree-

continued on page 12

Students organize to keep West Hall a Science Dorm

by Sharon Bonner A committee for the Advancement of the Science Major's Hall formed to discuss possible proposals for the improvement of West Hall. Under the organizational leadership of freshman Patricia Karnes, the committee members: Heather Sholtz, Kathleen M. Carrol, Karl Seelaus, Kemmi O. Ladeji, Mary Speer, Kevin Billingslea, and David Burg met several times to brainstorm for ideas to refine the living and studying conditions in West

Hall next semester. A letter explaining the one Macintosh and two Apple II-proposals suggested by the com- E computers exist on the first mittee was sent to Dean McIntire, the Pre-Medical Committee, Department of Biology, Department of Chemistry, Department of Psychology, and the Department of Physics. Presently a library is located at the basement of West Hall, yet all of the books remain in boxes and there is a need for the organization of reference materials. The committee wishes to extend the availability of other reference sources such as textbooks, magazines, catalogues, videotapes, reserve materials. Although floor of West Hall, the committee presented the idea of exchanging the Apple II-E computers for one other MacIntosh which operates on a hard disks instead of floppy The need for a science major to experiment is a visible concern, and a lab would be advantageous to the students' studies. The students realize the danger of bunsen burners in the dormitories and therefore only request that the

continued on page 5

| letters | to | the | editorp      | 2 |
|---------|----|-----|--------------|---|
| Newell  | ac | cep | ts positionp | 7 |

Basketball season ends...... 8

McCarthy Talk review.....p 11

EDITORIAL

Can responsibility win over capitalist desires?

Last semester, Carl Stenger, owner of the propane tank yard behind Cardinal Dorms, commented that if gas vapors emitted from the tanks, "the natural flow of air between the tanks and the dorms wouldn't allow any possible vapor to reach the dorms." Well, unfortunately, this isn't true, since students in the Cardinal dorms noticed and reported a leak just last month.

So far we've all been lucky - none of the leaks have caused any major damage. But the problem with the tanks is not what has occurred, but the threat of what may

Apparently, if propane tanks are well maintained, they present little danger. According to the Chestertown Fire Company, the propane tanks present a danger to the community. This is reflected in the number of times that the Department has been called on to deal with propane leaks. Compared to other businesses using propane tanks, Stenger's tanks required far more attention from the Fire Company.

Granted, much of the attention the propane tanks have received is caused by the placement of the Cardinal Dorms. The tanks were there first, and they are made more dangerous by the added traffic around them that the dormitories bring. But the danger extends itself beyond the area of the Cardinal Dorms: the leak that occurred on February 10 encompassed 400 feet, and had it not been contained it would have threatened the Cullen and quad dormitories.

If a tank leaked propane in a high concentration (as one did last Saturday), and a person walking by flicked a burning cigarette butt that came in contact with propane fumes, the fumes would ignite. The fire would follow the fumes back to the tank, and the tank would explode, causing other tanks in the area to explode as well.

Aresponsible citizen would be willing to remove any properties that threaten the well being of his neighbors. A responsible citizen wouldn't continually take advantage of the services of a volunteer fire department. And responsibility is a necessity when one works with propane tanks

Legalities limit what can be done about the propane tanks: the tank yard complies with local and national zoning laws. This does not render us powerless, however. Student action may be a factor in preventing further problems: sign the petition that will circulate after Spring Break. Perhaps the fear of students, evidenced in our signatures, will cause officials to reexamine the zoning. And there is the chance that by voicing our concerns, Mr. Stenger will reevaluate his need to keep the tanks where they are. Perhaps humaneness will defeat capitalist desires

Washington College Elm Editors

Jennifer M. Harris

....Julie Greene and Cathy Lease

Editor-in-chief ..

Office Manager .....

| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbau    |
|-------------------------------|-------------------|
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boats      |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volans |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnse      |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Ks           |
| Managers                      |                   |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekm        |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-Willia |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sober       |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Ge        |

AS STUDENTS AT WASHINGTON COLLEGE ANDTHEREFORE MEMBERS OF THE CHESTERTOWN COMMUNITY CAN EXPECT THE SAME RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES OF CHESTER-TOWN RESIDENTS ... OR SO WE HAVE BEEN TOLD. YEAH IT KIND SAY, DO YOU SMELL ANY-LIKE ... THING FUNNY

Letters to the Editor

Correction about the Master Plan

To the Editor:

After reading your March 3, 1989 issue, I wish to correct the inaccuracy which appeared in the cutline below a photograph on page 12 of the old boiler plant, soon to be converted into the Constance Stuart Larrabee's gift as covering the costs of renovation "the administration refused to For the benefit of your readers, this capital project is one of eight made possible by private contributions to the Campaign for Excellence, None of these projects - the Alonzo G. Decker, Jr. Laboratory Center, the renovation of Dunning Hall, the renovation of Bunting Hall the construction of the Academic Resources Center, the construction of a new field house, improvements to Miller Library and implementation of the academic computing program - is funded from the administrative operating budget. The operating budget supports salaries, instructional expenses, student services, general institutional expenses. plant operation and maintenance, and student financial aid. Its revenues are derived from tuition and fees, income from endowment, and private donations to the Washington College Fund.

Capital expenditures, on the other hand, are always financed through private contributions. Washington College is grateful to the many benefactors whose generous support of the Campaign for Excellence is making the campus Master Plan a reality

> Sincerely F. David Wheelan

A meritorious contribution

To The Editor:

The Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty seeks nominations for its community service awards. If you know a student who is making a "meritorious contribution" to the community of Chestertown through volunteer service, please send a written nomination, stating the details of contribution to the committee care of Dean Maxey

Student Affairs

R.A. applications available

Resident Assistants for the next school year will be selected during the upcoming weeks. Anyone interested in becoming an RA for next year may pick up an application form from the Student Affairs Office. Candidates must also be able to participate in two interview days

An RA's responsibilities range from developing a pe sonal relationship with st dents on the hall to offerin advice and informing the stadents of college policies. Mor importantly, an RA must b available for assistance to t students on his/her hall.An R must also maintain continuo communication with fells

REHIND CARDINAL REPRESENT NO DANGER? BLIND CAPITALISM

REPRESENTS

All RAs must return campus for pre-orientation sta meetings, attend RA meeting and remain on his/her hallun all of the residents of that ha have checked out for Chris mas vacation and after grad ation. RAs are also responsible for room condition reports.

An RA must be at least sophomore and should have GPA of 3.0 or higher, and i good standing with the Studen Affairs Office. Some of th personal qualities the Studer Affairs Office is seeking in Resident Assistant are sel discipline, commitment to sta dent growth, effective leader ship skills, communication skills, and sense of self.

Applications for the pos tion of RA are due by Tuesday March 21. There will be meeting, for all interested per sons, on the same date to di cuss the selection process. The meeting will be held in th Coffee House at 8 p.m.

Sophie Kerr Award

The Sophie Kerr Prize is awarded at commencement to the senior deemed by the Sophie Kerr Committee to have "the best ability and promise for future fulfillment in the field of literary endeavor." Students wishing to submit samples of their writing are invited to do so. All submissions must be in the hands of the committee by the last day of classes and may be brought to the office of the Chairman of the English department for convenience and safe-keeping. Manuscripts will be returned to their owners after commencement. All graduating seniors are eligible recipients of the award.

ISSUE:

What should Washington College and the community do to alleviate the threat posed by the gas tanks behind Cardinal Dorms?

Students should write letters and demand that something be done

The propane tanks are have to admit, I think about outrageous and dangerous. The gerous and should be moved mewhere (personally, I think ey should be destroyed) that not a residential area.

True, Washington College ided to build the Cardinal tive ms right next to the tanks. although this may have vantageous abode, it is Colge property and therefore they ve the right to build there.

Now, what happens to our how I'm going to do on that next only warning we're going to ge History exam more than I think about the tanks blowing up. I do, however, think about the tanks more than I think about nuclear war. Much of it is rela-

There have been four alde Cardinal a less than leged gas leaks (one whiff, and the 'alleged' goes out the window) and two actual evacuations of the dorms all within a period of a month, with three of the four alleged leaks occurring to be safe in our dorms? I in just one week's time. This is

is a leak. After that, there will be no small contained explosion to help clue us in that the tanks are truly unsafe

The College must, as a put pressure on the Town Council to in turn pressure Mr. Stenger into moving the tanks. Apparently, from bits and pieces of rumor I've heard, Mr. Stenger has found himself in legal battles before, but we must be

Alison K. Auber

Speaking of legal battles, political power in Chestertown, the College should be well aware of the consequences jurisprudence may wreak upon them.

> every student to write a letter to the administration and/or the Town Council demanding that something be done about the propane tanks. In all serious ness, what if the Newtowne Pub is destroyed? Those tanks could conceivably take out a good chunk of Chestertown. Do we as a student body want that to happen? Of course not.

Not to mention if the Cardinal dorms are annihilated, I guess every senior who had his or her thesis inside is S.O.L. (schucks on luck) when Therefore, I am asking it comes to graduating.

Alison K. Auber is the English representative to the Student Academic Board. She resides in the Cardinal Dorms.

Lisa Peterson Junior Medford, NJ

nd of those tanks this summer. but they have been there for most twenty years and they laven't blown up yet. It's just me of those things people like complain about. I don't think that anything can be done.

Charlie Pilkington Sophomore Glen Head, NY The town already tried to get Call the Environmental Protection Agency immediately!!

Drew Elburn Junior Reisterstown, MD

should be forced to fix them or replace them immediately. If something happens to a student, the administration will have to deal with it

Dave Miller Freshman New York, NY I believe those responsible for Contact the EPA for advice like I think we all should protest the installation of the tanks they were supposed to do in the school. Until the school gets first place.

John Harty Freshman Garden City, NY

something done about it. Put them in someone else's backyard.

by Thomas Cushing

Use our contacts to remove the threat

When I was asked to write sarticle I figured: "Why Not? fur hundred words should be sy." In looking more closely I talized I did not know whether he propane tanks in my backard actually posed a threat. I ad to find out if the situation as dangerous before I could Petulate on a solution

I first turned to the Colee and was told by someone I rust, that "if there had been a thous threat, the College ould never have put the dorms re." This response did not West my fears; maybe in the tessity to add housing the aplications of the tank's presto were not immediately recmized. Reflecting on PCBs in dorms and carcinogenic

Rachel Smith

fertilizers on our apples, I was not reassured that society fully understands the potential hazards of its technological ad-

Town officials explained that the College was aware of the tanks when they received the building permits. Yet the question "should the dorms have been built?" seemed a little late-the dorms are there. The issue now has to be whether the residents are in danger. The Fire Marshall conducted spot was cited for violations a few years ago, he has complied Why then have the residents of Cardinal had to be evacuated twice this semester because of leaks? The fire department gave me a different answer to my question of the about the danger involved. possible threat. The department stressed that the danger of leaks or explosion presents a threat not only to the dorms but also to the homes and businesses around them. In addition the tanks' location makes the possibility of vandalism a serious threat I understood that each source had its own objectives, He added that the proper func-

learn about the danger of the chemical and the tanks themselves. I called my roommate's brother, who holds a dual degree in chemistry and chemical engineering. While not an expert on propane gas tanks, he could objectively tell me

He explained that hydrocarbons of any kind -octane and propane- are known carcinogens in the right concentrations. The concentration the building of the dorms near determines the level of danger them merely brought the probof inhalation. He also said that continued on page 4 of inhalation. He also said that a leak of any degree has serious implications because a random spark could ignite the fumes. dent Assistant for the Cardinal checks and the tanks met state which colored what they would stioning of the safety valves is standards. While Mr. Stenger and could tell me. I needed to important because the gas is most dangerous when under pressure. His concern became the location of the dorms, bars, and other homes in proximity to the tanks because if someone tampers with one of the valves, as happened on Saturday, the tanks become a serious threat

I decided that the tanks are a cause for concern. Stenger's track record made me believe that the tanks have always posed a threat and that

Rachel Smith is a Resi-

TEXT THE PLANT OF A TEXT OF THE CONTRACT OF THE PROPERTY OF TH

rilla leader, Ahmed Jabril, h vowed to carry out the Ayate lah Khomeini's orders for the execution of the book's auth-

In the World

In an effort to keep the East ern Airline machinists strike from spreading, federal judges in Philadelphia and New York issued temporary orders barring sympathy strikes by railroad and transit workers. Eastern has also issued warnings to its striking pilots that their jobs may be at stake if they don't end their sympathy

Secretary of State James Baker arrived in Vienna Tuesday for the start of new East West Disarmament talks among 35 other nations. Sec- Following Britain's second day to discuss the agenda for Mr. Baker's Moscow visit. Secretary of Defense Nominee John Tower announced that he has no intention of withdrawing, even though he admitted that the battle of his confirmation in the Senate has burt President Bush, Mr. Tower also said that he is prepared to defend himself in the Senate, although he doesn't feel a personal appeal would greatly alter his chances.

Great Britain

retary Baker is expected to major rail disaster in the past meet with Soviet Foreign Min- three months, British Railroad officials are saying that the driver of the passenger train that struck another passenger train has admitted to failing to stop at a stop signal, but that he had tried to slow the train down. The accident killed five people. A three day conference in London devoted to the elimination of Clorofluoro Carbons was opened by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher who called for a worldwide effort against ozone depletion. President Bush said that The United States would join the Common Market countries in their call for a complete phase out of CFC's by the year 2000.

Poland

As police in Gdansk, Poland clashed with rioters opposed to the talks between the banned labor union Solidarity and the Polish Government, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa said he would like to withdraw as leader of the union if Solidarity is legalized again as a result of the talks with the government.

done enough in the way of criticizing the controversial "Satanic Verses" to prevent a severing of ties between the two countries. A Palestinian guer-

Iranian officials are saying that the British Government has not

Salman Rushdie. Jabril h also been connected with the bombing of the Pan Am jeti Scotland late last year. In an effort to end the six yes old civil war in his country Sudanese Prime Minist Madhi endorsed a tentati peace agreement with the rebels. The Military, which has plotted to remove Made demanded the peace agre ompiled by Laura Hopper

Maryland tax news from Louis Goldstein

tax is based on federal tax law. This makes it easier for students and other taxpavers to complete their state returns, since much of the information is simply transferred from the federal to the Maryland tax form. Even though Maryland forms remain basically the same as last year, Maryland state Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein discusses some key items students should keep in mind when filing their 1988 Maryland income tax returns.

Q. What's the first thing students and other dependent taxpayers should remember?

A. There are different state and federal filing requirements facing students and other dependent taxpayers taxpayers who are claimed as dependents on the federal return of a parent or another person. Because of the differences, students should read the instructions very carefully, dents and dependent taxpaypaying close attention to the filing requirements. Q. What do the filing requirements mean to me as a student?

A. The increased minimum filing levels allow you to make more income before you're required to file. These levels are fully explained in Instruction 1 of the Maryland tax packet. You'll notice that Maryland treats students just like any other taxpayers. For example, if you're a single student, you done to file a Maryland return unless your gross income was $4,950 or more for Q. I'm required to file a federal return. Does that mean I must file a Maryland return?

though you may have to file a federal return as a dependent . . . A: Yes: This year, for the taxpayer with certain amount first time; Maryland taxpayers file a Maryland return unless you meet the filing requirements listed in Instruction 1 of the state tax packet. If you are not required to file but had tax withheld, you must file a return to get a refund

Q. What's new with the short form?

A. Many students and other dependent taxpavers can now use the Maryland short Form 503 - which is generally available to taxpayers who earned less than $50,000 and are not itemizing deductionswhile looking up their tax in the tax tables. We've added a "0" exemption column in the tables for dependent taxpayers who are single, since those taxpayers are not eligible for a personal exemption if they're claimed as a dependent on the federal return of a parent or

Q. What else should stuers keep in mind when using the Maryland short form?

another person.

A. There is some confusion about the figure they need to carry over from their federal return to begin their Maryland short form. The starting figure on the Maryland short form is "Total Gross Income" from the federal return. If you used federal Form 1040, carry over the amount on line 23 to the Maryland short form. If you used federal form 1040A, carry over the amount on line 11. If you used the federal form 1040EZ, carry over the amount on line 3 to the Maryland short Q. I understand there is a feature on the Maryland forms allowing taxpayers to donate to A. Not necessarily. Even the Chesapeake Bay. Can you explain this?

Maryland's state income of income, you don't have to can help protect the Chesapeake Bay and our endangered wildlife by using the Maryland income tax form. By checking the box on line 63 of either the Maryland short form or long form, taxpayers can donate any amount to the Chesapeake Bay and Endangered Species Fund. The amount will be subtracted from your refund or added to your state tax, but it will be deductible on next year's return if you itemize deductions. For more information about the

A. If you have any questions, please call or visit any of the 15 Maryland income tax offices and we'll be happy to questions, provide all the necessary state forms, and even complete your Maryland income tax return free of charge, if you like. Just be sure to bring along a completed copy of your federal return and all W-2 statements. Our offices are open fund, call 974-2941 or 974-3195. Monday through Friday, 8:30

Q. Where can I get help? a.m. until 5:00 p.m., include all state holidays and certain weekends between now and filing deadline, Monday, An 17,1989. These extra hourse help you. Our state tax experts listed in the state tax packs will be happy to answer your The addresses and telephone numbers of all 15 Maryla income tax offices are listed the back of the state tax pade and in most local telephi directories. If you can't re us with a local call, call toll-si 1-800-MD TAXES. We're he

Scholarships are taxable

scholarships or fellowship grants awarded after August 16, 1986, should be aware that, for payments after 1986, part or all of such income may be taxable, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

Only degree candidates can exclude these amounts from income, and only "qualified amounts" can be excluded. The Tax Reform Act of 1986 defines qualified amounts as tuition and fees required for the enroll-

continued from page 3

lem to the community's attention. Some stress that the tanks have been there for several years without disaster. But I was told that although the fire department had been called to similar sites only twice in twenty years, they were called to Stenger's site twice last week alone. The issue should not be who was there first but how to deal with the possibility of lives, safety, measures, should he pert at least. We have a gr in danger.

ment or attendance of a student at an educational institution, and course fees, books. supplies, and equipment. Any other amounts, such as for room. board, travel or incidental expenses, must be reported as income in the year received.

Many scholarships also include pay for past, present, or future services. Any payment received for services is taxable in the year of payment, even if the service is required of all candidates for a particular

Students who are candidates for a degree m report all scholarship and f lowship amounts as income the year paid.

Different rules apply recipients of scholarships fellowships awarded being August 17, 1986. For my detailed information, call 1-8 424-3676 for a free copy of I Publication 520, "Scholarshi and Fellowships."

I believe we should try to thereby limiting access to negotiate with Mr. Stenger to main and smaller storage tan convince him to move the tanks. Pressure the owner to put ke If not, the College should use on all the valves. Set up ! its power and lobby to have the alarm system attached thro the safety valves to notify lo authorities of a leak impossibility, then stricter study by an independent imposed. Install higher fences, deal to lose by not reacting tanks moved. We should use our contacts-the alumni, students, and faculty-to remove Drecautions can be take.

Until the tanks are moved, to reduce the risk. The possible to reduce the risk. the threat or if removing them is a legal threat involved merits furth

Propane tanks alarm students and citizens

a confined space." This is nducive to the procedures the re fighters follow when facing ch a situation. For example, hen the Cardinal Dorms were vacuated volunteers also ired out" the buildings. tuations where little was ase, "a refrigerator kicked in nd the place blew up. It was ough to blow the roof off the op of the house." Said Strong, our telephone could ring and tart an explosion. According to Strong and hompson propane tanks are relatively safe if properly mainained. Stenger's tanks have een cited for violations in the ast and have wrought three larms on the Volunteer Fire epartment inside of one nonth. Not only are they subect to employee error inevitaly, but they are dangerously ituated in an active area of own and next to the college, hereby increasing the odds of vandalism.

Strong stated that in a erst case scenario an exploeffect an area with a radius neasuring from the Cardinal ism can be a problem.

Dorms to the Fire Station it-

The Fire Marshall stated that he doesn't feel that the tanks are dangerous. Said Powell, "fumes are a normal, everyday occurrence. It can happen a lot at night when the air is heavy and damp. " He The two men also cited further compared the situation to the past airport controver equired to set off explosions of sies. Strong paraphrased the oncentrated propane. In one argument. "The airport was there first, then people moved in around it, buying the land cheap. And then they want the airport to be moved elsewhere.

Strong and Thompson both voiced concerns over the tanks. Strong stated that "volunteers really put themselves in danger." Though many individuals, both students and townspeople, are worried about Stenger's tanks, they are within all regulations and therefor he would have no legal reasons for moving them.

Strong concluded, " Its a danger, but one we face every day in our modern world. Problems have been encountered at this instillation, but trucks carry L.P. gas every day. It becomes a problem when equipment is not properly mainion of Stenger's tanks would tained, with faulty equipment and in instance where vandal-

A local child becomes slightly airborn as his sled leaves the ground. He as well as other children from the town, enjoyed the weather by sledding this week.

Students form committee to maintain West as Science Dorm

contined from page 1

lab consist of old equipment from the Decker Laboratory such as microscopes and slides. In the spirit of celebrating the achievements in the scientific world, and creating a decorative atmosphere, the committee offered the idea of placing posters, portraits, or murals of famous scientists and/or alumnae along the halls. In order to decrease expenses, Senior Art Majors could construct the murals as a fullfillment of their senior obligations.

To promote active communication between the science majors, the committee stressed the idea of round table discussions to focus on scientific ethics and other problems in the scientific field. A comfortable, relaxing area needs to be properly arranged for the purpose of sources could participate in the enhancement of the students' education by periodically visiting and presenting lectures on various aspects of the sciences. The committee proposed the organization of a science club which would cultivate the students' knowlege of new scientific theories and techniques. As this is the first year for West Hall to be designated for the science majors, these students have accepted a responsibility to complete this project even though it incorporates much time and devotion in working together. Dean McIntire commented, "We are always enthusiastic when ideas generate from the students. These ideas are really exciting, especially the idea concerning the formation of the science club." study sessions, help sessions, Dean McIntire was impressed those who want to major in members and other outside the initiative to produce improved learning facilities in West Hall

The purpose of the proosed improvements of West Hall is to create a relaxed atmosphere for science majors similar to how the Literary House serves as a comfortable writing place for English Majors. The Committee for the Advancement of the Science Major's Hall hopes to create a bond between the majors through the developement of these suggested changes.

Patricia Karnes, the committee chairperson, encouraged the interest of science majors as she commented, "We'd like to get as many science majors involved as possible, even those who will not be living in West Hall next semester. It is a benefit for the background for and faculty meetings. Faculty that the students have taken science at Washington College.

Fire Marshall drops Sig's

case

by Tracey Connell

anned the evacuation of memers of Phi Sigma Kappa last onth and the fraternities' embers waited for the Fire farshall's decision, hoping it ould turn suspician else here, Fire Marshall, Richard well, suspended investigaons into the case. According Powell this occurred due to a ck of evidense and leads.

Last month the members f Phi Sigma Kappa were victed from their East Hall esidence after a series of events hich drew detrimental attenons from both the Administraon and local officials. At one wint Student Affairs stated that the Sig's immediate evic-While the Administration tion would hinge upon the outcome of investigations into the East Hall fire, but then revised their views saying that it was partly necessary for safety

> Early this week the Fire Marshall confirmed that the investigation had been dropped. Meanwhile members of the fraternity have relocated.

WRITE for the Washington College Elm. Write News, Sports, Arts, Features. If interested please contact Jennifer Harrison, Editor in Chief, through campus mail or at the Elm Office, extension 321

DROP-OFF LAUNDRY

We will professionally wash, dry, fold and hang your clothing, $.55 lb., $5.50 minimum, same day service.

> COIN-OP LAUNDRY - PROFSSIONAL DRY CLEANING

> > KENT LAUNDRY 607 high Street Chestertown 778-3551

Stop by the Bookstore to find out how

Apple Pays 1/2

Save up to 50% of the suggested retail price on Apple Peripherals through March

Protect your investment with AppleCare SPECIAL THROUGH MARCH: BUY 24 MONTHS, GET 12 MONTHS FREE BUY 12 MONTHS, GET 1 MONTH FREE

Basement of Hodson Hall

Monday-Friday: 8:30-4:30/Ssturday 10-1:00

Daytripping Guide: Let hiking and antique hunting take you away from studying

by Anne Lindenbaum

While Chestertown has much to offer in the way of pleasant diversions, it sometimes becomes necessary to escape the immediate surroundings that remind us that we are only a few blocks away from academic

If you have a car, or you have a friend with a car, consider exploring other parts of the Eastern shore for a fun and relaxing daytrip. So with the hope of escaping schoolwork for a few hours, and the promise of better weather - remember, March goes out like a lamb try Eastern Neck Wildlife Refuge, Chesapeake City, or Wye Mills for a day

Chesapeake City

The Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, on which Chesapeake City is situated, links the Chesapeake Bay with the Delaware River, and was first proposed in 1661, but did not open until October 17, 1829.

It was originally 13 miles long and 66 feet wide, however, in 1921, the Army Corps of Engineers began to widen and

By the late 1940's, time once again closed in on the C&D partment store. Canal. It had reached its economic and physical limitations, necessitating further work. Today, more than 22,000 ves-busiest waterways in the world.

The historical district of Chesapeake City offers many shops for those interested in yearly making it one of the new or antique decoys, hunt- Schaefer's Canal House on the attention when, in 1909, at lectibles, as well as candles, baskets, and local folk art.

ing, nautical, and related col- other side of the C&D Canal.

All in all, the relaxing and laid back atmosphere in Che-Black Swan Antiques (3rd sapeake City should prove sat-

Tired of the same old surroundings? Give yourself a break with a trip to Wye Mills or the Eastern Neck Wildlife Refuge. Or try a visit to historic Chesapeake City, pictured above, and explore their numerous tage clothing, artifacts, and costume jewelry. Anyone lookdeepen the Canal, remove the ing for unique rhinestone jew-This work was completed in while the prices may seem high, they are considerably less than what one would pay at a de-

antique and crafts shops

The Bohemia Three (3rd and Bohemia Avenue) specializes in antique furniture and Bohemia Avenue) carries vin- stoneware, country accessories and local folk art. The Back Creek General Store (100 Bohemia Avenue) specializes in locks, and construct bridges. elry will be glad to know that unusual gifts and crafts, as well as an exclusive line of gourmet Wye Mills, MD. Although the hunting makes you hungry, try the Village Cafe (401 Second Street) "If you're lookin' for home cookin'," or for a more repair, while B & B Decoys and formal meal, visit the Bayard sels of all types use the canal Antiques sports oak furniture, House (11 Bohemia Avenue) or antiques. The Canal Lock (105 and Bohemia Avenue) features isfying for a short getaway,

Wye Mills

For a briefer diversion visit the historic Wye Oak in actual age of the white oak tree And if all the antique is not known, it is known that the tree has lived through the Colonial period, the Industrial period, and two world wars.

Spanning 37 feet in circumference and 97 feet in height, the tree first gained careful measurements a comparisons with other reco size oaks, it was found to be largest known representat of its species. Today it is still official titleholder on the Ame can Forestry Association's of tree champions. When the Wye Oak St Park was acquired in 1939, inner portion of the Wye Oa trunk, to a height of ten fe had been rotted away by furs attack. This portion of the tr is now hollow, the basal ope ing skillfully sealed off by molded steel sheet. measures of preservation of white oak are also employed

Just alongside the tree a tiny one-room schoolhou established in 1720, the secu oldest in Talbot County, at near the schoolhouse are afe unobtrusive picnic benches. if your mood demands solitu and a shady tree, the Wye 0s is the perfect place for settling down with a good book.

> Eastern Neck Wildlif Refuge

In good weather, one con spend all day at this space wildlife preservation. from dawn to dusk, the refu has large, isolated areas picnicking, hiking, birdwat ing, and just plain putteri

There is no charge to ter the refuge; according there are no gift shops or n taurants. If you are a nat lover, you will definitely be your element at the Easter Neck Wildlife Refuge.

Looking for Volunteer Work?

The Career Development Center has information on local volunteer programs.

Contact Linda Cades or Vicki Sawyer at ext. 311 to find out more.

The Sisters of the Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority

would like to announce and welcome

Claudia Baldwin, Katrina Beernink, Victoria Berger Deborah Boyer, Karen Brady, Jennifer Clark, Margaret Doyle, Tracy Greenwalt, Kristin Hilgartner Jennifer Jaeger, Beth Knieriem, Joan Koo, Leslie Newcomb, Deeann Pinczok, Susan Rosasco, Jennifel Sponseller, and Karen Stritehoff as their Spring Pledge Class of 1989, and Rebecca Bowman, Courtney Davis, and Sharon Orser as social members.

Philosophy chair J. David Newell will serve as a Visiting Professor of Philosophy next year at West Point Academy.

Newell accepts position at West Point

by Amy Caddle

Dr. J. David Newell, Professor and Chairman of Philosophy and Religion and Director of the Graduate Program at Washington College will be serving as a Visiting Professor of Philosophy at West Point Academy for the academic year of 1989-90. The 21-year faculty member was shocked to receive

"I received a phone call last August from the West Point department of Philosophy asking me if I would consider a visiting appointment there. I didn't apply for the job. I had never even been to West Point before, and I've never been in the Army," he says.

the Academy I realized this was an offer too good to pass up," explains Newell Newell's job will entail teaching one upper level Phi- will allow him to take advan- Newell.

teach other professors of Phi- Point area has to offer.

on Knowlege and Belief first semester, and a course on Ethics and Medical Ethics second semester," he says

Newell also holds an official position of Lecturer on Medical Humanities at the Medical College of Pennsylva-

"I think my year at West Point will prove to be a very different kind of experience, Newell states.

"It will be interesting to compare a classroom full of medical students, a classroom "However, after visiting full of military students, and a classroom full of Washington College students."

Newell's flexible schedule

losophy course as well as a lunch tage of the many cultural and hour seminar in which he will historical aspects that the West

"I'll probably take my sail-"I plan to teach a seminar boat with me and sail the Hudson River. Talso plan to get a season Football pass. And I have a lot of writing to do. I'm definitely taking my Macintosh," he says.

> Despite the advantages West Point has to offer, Newell will find it very difficult to leave Chestertown and Washington

"I'm very involved here, and I love Washington College. But I know I'm coming back Chestertown will probably be my home for life."

Dr. Ellen Klein, who is currently teaching at Rollins College in Florida, has been appointed as as Visiting Professor of Philosophy at Washington College in place of Dr.

State Archives offer internships

chives has seven internships ords and assisting researchers available this summer for its by answering mail and workten-week 1989 summer intern- ing in the public search room. ship program.

able to Maryland college students (graduate or advanced undergraduate) or Maryland residents attending an out-ofstate school archival control over perma- deadline is April 3, 1989.

The Maryland State Ar- nently valuable historical rec-

Qualifications for candi The internships are avail- dates include demonstrated academic excellence, preferably with an interest in archival science, history, library science or related fields

The salary is $1,838 each The purpose of this na- (before taxes). For information tionally recognized program is and application materials writ to expose interns to archival to Archival Internship Program, Maryland State Archives, 350 Rowe Boulevard, Annapo-This includes establishing lis, MD 21401. Application

Media-hands off Eddie

deserves. Right now people are remembering his last traumatic years in an Oriole uniform. If the number was retired about five years from now, people would have more of a chance to remember what he meant to Baltimore and the Orioles for twelve years.

Still, the suggestion that Murray's number should not be retired is ridiculous. The media seems to be claiming that a player's superlative statistics should be ignored because the player was not a good interview. A player's number is retired when he has put up amazing statistics for a number of years while playing a key role in the city and the organization. Murray is the team leader with 333 limetime home runs. He leads the team in total Robinson in most other categories. It took Robinson twentythree years to put up these numbers, while it took Eddie only twelve. He is fourth in team batting average at .295 and won three Gold Gloves at first base. Murray was Baltimore's favorite son for most of his twelve years in the organization. He donated large sums of money to needy charities, giving away 50 tickets a game to underprivileged children. He opened the Carrie Murray Foundation in Baltimore to help these same children. All of these contributions cannot be ignored just because of disagreements with the bases, and is second to Brooks gested to retire numbers of players such as Rick Dempsey, Mark Belanger and Willie Miranda should have their numbers retired before Murray. It seems that Steadman has been living in the past a bit too long. These players should certainly be in the Orioles Hall of Fame. but it is ridiculous to retire a player's number just because he is feisty and glides around on tarpaulins during rain delays. Statistics must play some role in the decision, and lifetime .200 hitters should not have their number retired. Leave the honor to players and people such as Eddie Murray. After that, try to leave the man alone and let him continue his career in peace.

One other writer who shall go unnamed (no need to implicate John Steadman) has sug- the writers floor.

Brett Lankford resides on

ELM POSITIONS

Anyone interested in the position of Editor-in-Chief of the Washington College Elm for 1989-1990 should submit a cover letter and resume to Jeff Chaffin by April 10, 1989

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

A Washington laxer receives a pass....then converts it into a score. The Sho'men dropped their season opener to Navy

Laxers drop opener to Navy

by Joe Van Name

The Washington College Men's Lacrosse team opened their season last Saturday against the United States Naval Academy. The midshipmen won but it was close, save a few mistakes and the game could have gone in favor of the Sho'men. The final score was 15-9 reflecting the closeness of the game. In all other categories the Sho'men were almost equal to the Middies but in the end Navy hung tough and prevented Washington from win-

Washington were sophomore Ben Lamana and Freshman Nick Darcangelo with two goals pleased with the teams attitude and the fact that they never third quarter.

to use some of the momentum

each. Dave Slomkowski tended goal, and came up with 11 saves. The defense played well according to Coach Corcoran but ... maybe a little too aggressive and in the end we gave them some easy goals." He was also gave up even through a bad Coach Corcoran is hoping

The Caps: trading for the cup

this hockey team. Well, I will not argue with that assessment. However, this week has been trade, my chin fell to the floor very difficult for Cap fans. General Manager David Poile. in an attempt to spark the team

Arian Ravanbakhsh

and get them out of the Patrick Division come playoff time, has been making trades. And he made a blockbuster deal on Tuesday, when he sent veteran players Mike Gartner and Larry Murphy to the Minnesota North Stars for Dino Ciccarelli and Bob Rouse

Without really going into detail about the trade itself. I want to state that I do not welcome this change. Yet, I realize that something had to be done in order to help the Capitals escape their playoff failures. Half of me welcomes the addition of Ciccarelli. But the other half of me wonders about the logic of trading Mike Garner. ington Capitals become the

As everyone knows, I am a Because for as long as I can Washington Capitals fan. Some remember, ever since I've been would say I am fanatical about a hockey fan, Mike Gartner was a Washington Capital When I first heard of the

> This struck me like a bolt of lightning hurled from Mount Olympus. How could the Washington Capitals trade my favorite player? One begins to wonder if the added stress of too many recent failures began to take its toll on the Capitals' management. Mike Gartner was the heart and the soul of this team. For ten years, his name was synonymous with the Capitals

Mike Gartner was the first round draft choice of the Washington Capitals in the 1979 entry draft. He made an immediate impression on a poor team. Mike Gartner had the ability to score from anywhere on the ice. And he did, as evidenced with the fact that he never scored less than 35 goals every year with the Caps. But his talents extended beyond mere numbers on a statistical chart. He was determined to see the Wash

The leading scorers for gained this weekend against #1 tices have been relegated to the the team plays Ithaca College After this Johns Hopkins. weekend Washington will have faced five of the top ten teams in either games or scrimages. The only problem that the team has faced is the weather. Because of the snow and cold this ran the loss last weekend was Over spring break the week they were not able to get team will play Johns Hopkins just remember to bring your ID out very often, so their prac- Sat. March 11, at 2pm. Then card.

gym. According to Coach Corco- at Hofstra University Saturday, March 18 at noon. The first not a set back, the mistakes game here after break will be were their own and "our future on Wed. March 22, at 3pm rests in our own hands." against Whittier College of California. Admission to all home games is free for students.

Basketball ends season against F&M

by Don Steele

The Washington College basketball team ended their season last Saturday in the NCAA South Eastern Regional final with a 96-76 loss at the hands of Franklin and Marshall.

The defeat leaves the team with a 20-6 record on the year. The team failed to overadvantage. Earlier in the regional competition the team defeated a tough Grove City In the Grove City game

Charles Johnson and George Small came off the bench to inspire the team with their performances. Johnson nailed three three-pointers and Small had a strong nine point, seven come the strong F&M team who rebound game. The Sho'men were playing with a home court rolled on to an 82-69 win. The loss to F&M ended the season as well as the careers of six Sho'men. Tom Auvil. Andy Bauer, Steve Brody, Scott Jones, George Small, and Matt Wilson depart from the team after entertaining Washington fans for four years. This also starts the break-up of a team that has won 57 games in the last three years compared to only 21 losses.

playoff contenders that they are today. And it's a real shame that he will not be able to participate in the finishing touches. Since he is my favorite

Cap, my mind is filled with memories of the way Mr. Gartner played the game. For one, he always gave 100%, even when injuries took their toll on his effectiveness. Also, over the years, Gartner adopted his game to fit the Bryan Murray Mike was defensive scheme. able to become a solid defensive forward. Ironically, one of his better defensive efforts came in his last game as a Washington Capital. But Mike Gartner's value is not on defense. He is a scorer, in the mold of a Maurice Richard or a Guy Lafleur. Simply put, Mike Gartner owns every scoring record in the history of the franchise.

the 1985 playoffs against the New York Islanders After Alan Haworth won game 1 with an overtime goal, the Caps knew they had to take advantage of the opportunity to take a two game to none lead. As Game two progressed, it was obvious that this game was also going into overtime. The first overtime finished without any team breaking the tie. Early in the second OT, Gartner took charge. He skated into the Islander zone, eluded the Islander defense and circled the goal. He proceeded to the top of the right wing circle and blasted a shot behind a stunned Billy Smith. Though the Caps blew the series, that goal was the most important in the franchise's history until Dale Hunter's last

Changing gears a little, My clearest memory of the the Caps were able to acquire value of Mike Gartner was in Dino Ciccarelli from the North

Stars. He provides a proven goal scorer and a power-play specialist which the team needs if they want any playoff success. But Ciccarelli is not going to be able to provide the same kind of leadership that Gartner provided. As a fan, I can only hope that the Capitals front office knows what it is doing-And I hope that it is more than sending a message to the team that the front office is not going to tolerate another year of playoff disappointment. Cap fans around the region will just have to wait and see what happens as they prepare for another playoff year. Call all of us diehards, but we are just ex amples of the phrase, "hope springs eternal."

Arian is a Senior major ing in Political Science.

Pistons and Jazz jazz up the NBA

years, the Detroit Pistons and the Utah Jazz are strong bets to make the National Basketball Association finals

Parity has strengthened the league's image and there is a legitimate chance that neither Boston nor Los Angeles will make the championship game. (The last time this happened was when Washing-

Greg Coss

on was in its final glory days, alling to Seattle in 5 games in

It was evident last year that a changing of the guard took place when Boston showed ggns of aging, losing to Detroit in a conference final. Although [like Boston's chances at knocking off the inexperienced Cavaliers, I don't think Boston or anybody else will be able to stop

Detroit Dantler to Dallas for Marc Aguirre strengthened the Pistons. Aguirre is much younger, more physical, and outspoken than Dantley, which makes him fit in with the boisterous Detroit team. Last year Detroit came within a minute of winning an NBA championship. This year they have the second best record in the NBA through two thirds of the season and are getting stronger. Detroit certainly wants revenge for losing that bitter seven game final to LA, so look for them to get back without any problem

Why without any prob lem? Detroit has too much depth for anyone else in the conference

Joe Dumars and Isiah Thomas are backed up by guards Vinnie Johnson, who "heats up" at playoff time, and mokie sensation Fennis Dembo of Wyoming, who is capable of playing either the guard posibon or small forward. Dennis Rodman and former Bullet Rick Mahorn are strong rebounders and usually fill the forward spots, and James Edwards and Bill Laimber are both very capable centers with excellent thooting range. Detroit is not thin in any position, and has quickness, strength, and expehence on defense. They have the tools to win it all and after asluggish start (9-6) appear to be peaking at the right time. (40-16)

The NBA's best team, the Cleveland Cavaliers, will lose the first round of the playoffs again. Recent injuries to Center Brad Daugherty (knee) and guard Marc Price (head) could

For the first time in ten spell disaster, as well as the return of Larry Bird to Boston. who will come back with ten games left in the regular season to stave off Washington for the eighth playoff spot. From there Boston will take one in Richfield Coliseum and shock the Cavs in six

The surprising New York Knicks will go down in the quarter final round to either Atlanta or Chicago. Look for them to jump to an early lead in their series, however they will fall flat. I say this because the Knicks rely on heavy half court and full court pressure defense from guards Marc Jackson and Trent Tucker. Either Michael Jordon or Spud Webb could shred them with their quickness after adjustments they could make in a seven game series. The resurgent Bucks will fall to the Pistons in the conference final after defeating worn out Boston. Detroit will beat Atlanta in the quarters.

In the west, Utah has

Sub-freezing temperatures have forced many teams inside, here the women's crew gathers before a workout in the gym.

after the loss of Coach Frank should be a force to reckon with. out the Piston's home court. Layden to retirement. The Jazz also has the League's best defense thanks to the talents of guard John Stockton, (one of the league leaders in steals) Karl "The Mail-Man" Malone (5th in rebounding) and center Mark Eaton (leader in blocked shots). With Malone to lead them on offense (29.1 ppg) and and one win in the Coliseum in the Conference final will end LA's quest for three straight the glamour will be present on championships. But in the end, the court with the attractive depth and home court advan- new match up which could tage will spell an NBA champi- dominate the NBA for the next onship for the Detroit Pistons, who will win a seven-game thriller over Utah in the final. power forward Thurl Bailey to Andthis time it will have chants and this is his first contribution The trade of Adrian pulled itself together (36-23) helpbalancetheattacktheJazz of Beat Utah echoing through- to the ELM.

Finally, the Salt Palace There will be no glamorous performers like Dyan Cannon and Jack Nicholson present, but

Greg Coss is a freshman,

To the Baltimore media-leave Eddie Murray alone

obsession or complulsion that is prominent in their life. It is incredibly rare, however, for an entire city to be dominated by a single obsession or complusion. Amazingly, this rare occurence has taken place right in Balti-

Brett Lankford

more. The city of Baltimore has an obsession with Eddie Murray - kind of an Eddie Murray fied. fatich was always the topic of conversation in Baltimore, even when he was loved in his earlier years. In the recent years with the team, Eddie had a falling out with the owner, the media and the fans, leaving him unhappy and the fans and media complaining. Everyone finally received their wish last December 4th when Murray was basically given away to the world champion Los Angeles Dodg-ers. This should have ended Murray is not trying to forget

Most people have a little the Eddie Murray watch, aside the last twelve years of his life. Baltimore Orioles. About a from occasional updates on his performance and attitude with the team. Unfortunately, this could not be further from the truth. So far this spring, Murray has been the subject of more talk in Baltimore than the entire Oriole team combined. Admittedly, there aren't that many exciting things to say about this year's Baltimore Orioles. Still, the Eddie Murray watch has not only continued, but intensi-

This spring, pictures of As a superstar, Murray Murray in his Dodger blue have graced the paper at least twice a week. The media made sure to print a photo of Eddie making his first error in a Los Angeles uniform. He is mentioned daily in the "Orioles Notes" section of the Baltimore papers. Baltimore writers have been sent to Dodgertown in droves to follow every move he makes. When Eddie doesn't talk to the Baltimore media, it

Austin Carpet 778-4656 Rt .213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Instead, he is attempting to concentrate on his new opportunity in Los Angeles, realizing it is time to look to his future. The Baltimore media is still upset at the departure of their favorite whipping boy, so they still need to get in a few shots against him. This obsession by the Baltimore media is very immature and childish, and they should just let Eddie live his life. He was my favorite player, and even I am tired of reading about his every move in the paper. If the Baltimore media would overcome this absurd obsession, wish him luck in the future and stop bothering him, everyone would be There was, however, one vonderful announcement made about Eddie Murray by the much happier.

week ago, the Orioles announced that Eddie Murray's number 33 would be retired. This is a show of appreciation and class by the Baltimore organization, but the Baltimore media's predictable response was an outrage. There were claims that Murray was not worthy of this honor, that his contributions to the Oriole organization were not that important. These statements are so absurd it is almost laugh-

Admittedly, the an-nouncement could have been timed better. It was not necessary for his number to be retired this soon after his departure. If it was retired a few vears from now, the move would have received the acceptance it continued on page 7

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave Chestertown, Md. 21620 Janie Thompson 788-0898

Fine Young Cannibals find success in The Raw and the Cooked

by Don Steele

After three years of separate projects the Fine Young Cannibals have come back with The Raw and The Cooked. The title describes the style of the album with new fresh sounds as well as another, enjoyable, dose of the soulful sounds that made their first album so musically successful. On this album, the band experiments with drum machines and kevboards, and allows lead singer Rowland Gift to showcase his come across as monotonous. On distinctive voice

The trio from Birmingham, England, is an offshoot of back-ups to the sounds, mainly the successful ska band of the Gift's powerful voice and the early eighties, The English horns, which were so success-Beat. The two musicians in the ful on their first album. band, Andy Cox and David Steele have been involved in a wide range of musical moveshown on the album. This is tars, the jazz beat and elecdance-club, while the song Tell Me What is a song that a forties-type crooner would be happy to sing. The band also does a unique cover of the punk anthem Ever Fallen In Love. With this, they change the song

upbeat melody

One of the biggest differences between The Raw and The Cooked and their selftitled first album is the addition of keyboards and drum machines. These two instruments provide a base from which the trio can spring into their jazzy sound. However, the band is smart enough only to use the sounds as back-up while not allowing the beats to the song Don't Let It Get You Down the machines only act as

The first single She Drives Me Crazy also reflects the new style the band has created for ments and this flexibility is itself. The band uses the guiespecially prominent in the tronics to provide the melody Fallen In Love, was featured in various styles of songs included for a very interesting vocal in the album. The song I'm Not track. Gift sings the refrains in The Man I Used To Be would be a soft melodic voice, but he accepted on the play list at any breaks into the powerful voice that he is known for in the chorus. This vocal technique also adds to the feeling of the song: the praises and affections felt for this woman are expressed by the soft voice, while the powerful voice par- bals' new album The Raw and critics. On this, the band proves ential bands of the nineties from a grinding tune to a jazzy lays the frustrations of his love.

The second song on the album is reminiscent of their earlier work. Good Thing is a jazzy upbeat tune about a man who lost his love; however, the music does not say this. It is the sorrow vice of Gift that expresses this remorse. The song is also notable as it features a fun piano solo by Jools Holland of Squeeze fame

The final two songs of the album further reflect the talent of this trio. Hard As It Is is a song that showcases the abilities of the whole band. The musical diversity of Cox and Steele is heard through their clever use of a wide array of instruments. It is also the best indicator of the power of Gift's voice on the album. The combination of these factors gets the sorrow of the tale across.

The final song, Ever the film Something Wild and is a classic Cannibal tune. The music is upbeat, complete with the guitar and jazz rifts that the band is famous for. Gifthas fun with the song and combined with the new musical additions. makes the tune a treat for the

The Fine Young Canni-

HE RAW & THE COOKED

FINE YOUNG CANNIBALS

The Cooked is a definite success. The criticism of their last album was inconsistency but this album will silence many Fine Young Cannibals' talent gives them the potential to stake a claim as one of the most influ-

A. C.T. to produce Of Mice and Men during break

Professor Jay Halio of the University of Delaware spoke to students and faculty Wednesday night on the topic of Shakespeare's King Lear. Hallo, an expert on the play, is currently editing a new edition of it.

By Valerie Walbert The Actor's Community

Theatre, organized and founded by Vince and Leslie Raimond, will perform John Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men. The play follows Steinbeck's novel and movie script . Because Stein-beck wrote three versions of the same story, (in a short story,a novel and in play-form) direction of the play was not as difficult as a straight-adaptation would have been.

This powerful tragedy of friendship and love takes place in twentieth century Salinas The play Valley, California. illustrates the special relationship between two migrant workers, George and Lenny. George acts as protector and guardian of the slightly retarded Lenny. The hardships George encounters in caring for his simple-minded companion are emotionally empowered in characters. These themes are masterly created by the direction of Bonnie Hill and her cast, which includes: Kent Armiger Earl French, John Farr (hus band of music professor Kathy Mills), John McDaniels (a 1985 graduate of Washington College), Jim Landskroener, Vin cent Hynson, Dan Garrett, Bobby Leg, Sarah Floyd-Jones, William Blake, and Katie the Golden Lab.

The story also focuses on the deadly innocence and unfulfilled dreams of the central | play.

Performances for Of Mice and Men will be held on Thursday through Saturday, March 16,17, and 18 at 8:00 p.m. in th Norman James Theater of William Smith Hall. A tentative matinee run of the production is set for Sunday, March 19 at 2:00 PM. As of printing, this date has yet to be confirmed However, students, faculty and community members who will be on-campus during the spring break are encouraged and in vited to attend the scheduled performances of this moving

Nonviolence subject of McCarthy talk

by Stephanie Hess

On Thursday, March twenty-third, following spring break, Colman McCarthy, syndicated columnist for the Washington Post, will speak as part of the William James Forum. McCarthy writes on many, diverse subjects in his general interest column, but recently, his favorite topic has been nonviolence. Accordingly, his lecture will answer the onestion, Does Nonviolence Really Work

As the founder of the Center for Teaching Peace in Washington D.C., McCarthy is well qualified to answer this question. He still heads the Center, and contributes his speaking income to its support. In addition to founding the Peace Center, he taught an Alternative to Violence course at Georgetown University and at the University of Maryland. Described by Smithsonian magazine as "a man of profound spiritual awareness," McCarthy believes that peace studies should begin in kindergarten and first grade and should ontinue through high school.

Among other things, McCarthy is concerned in par ticular with the violent harassment of women and violence to animals. He feels that Americans "glorify violent sports" and that warfare is emphasized too much in the study of history. He further assents that" non-violence has failed..." and proposes that colleges create a "Peace major" so that young people can graduate with a degree in the study of Peace.

McCarthy was born in Old Brookville, New York and is a graduate of Spring Hill College n Mobile, Alabama. He has ladarticles in magazines rangng from The New Yorker to Reader's Digest and his syndiated column appears in fiftyive newspapers across the country

Dr. Peter Tapke, professor of Philosophy, claims that McCarthy will have something lo say to "many people with all Sorts of interests." This claim is Supported by McCarthy's schedthe for his day at Washington College. He will visit Professor Fallaw's class in American Intellectual History, Professor sychology and the Liberation Theology class taught by Proessors Tapke and Brien. His ica who play a role in the evolu-

visit in this last class should be McCarthy's first indication of Cater in his well-publicized recently visited the College. interesting as McCarthy knows interest in Washington College. several figures in Latin Amer- Last summer, he wrote two articles about the College. The tion of Liberation Theology. It first, "Writing Up a Storm" is also possible that he will be praised the writing program quarrel with Education Secre tary William Bennett. When Bennett attacked private, liberal arts colleges, claiming they were poorly managed, Cater jumped in to their rescue, using this College as an example. McCarthy sided with Cater,

Cater wishes to honor McCarthy by offering to establish a one-time, three thousand scholarship in McCarthy's name. Previously, such an award and honor was bestowed on columnist Art. Buchwald and novelist Toni thirty, in Hynson Lounge. Morrison, both of whom have supporting him completely.

All in all, as Tapke states, McCarthy's visit to the College should prove to be an "exciting visit." With his visits to classes and his lecture in the William James Forum, he will bring many new ideas to the College community.

Students who would like to meet with McCarthy informally are invited to the William James Forum reception at 117 High Street at five PM on the twenty-third of March. The lecture will follow at seven-

'Dr. Peter Tapke claims that McCarthy will have something to say to 'many people with all sorts of interests. "

eon with some students inter- Kerr prize. The second article, ested in creative writing and which ran in the late summer, iournalism

This visit is not meeting in an informal lunch- here and discussed the Sophie supported Washington College's President Douglass

Campus Calendar: break and beyond

The Actor's Community Theatre will present the dramatic version of John Steinbeck's classic, Of Mice and Men. The production runs on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at eight PM. A related story by Valerie Walbert appears on page ten.

Tuesday March 21

The Film Series will show the Grand Prize Winner of the San Sebastian Film Festival, A Weekend-March 16-18 Wedding in Galilee , on Tuesday night at seven-thirty. The film, which also won the prestigious International Critics Award at the Cannes Film Festival, has been described as "fascinating and sensuous.

Thursday March 23

Columnist Colman Mc-Carthy will speak on nonviolence as part of the William James Forum at seven-thirty PM in Hynson Lounge. A related article by Stephanie Hess appears above

OLD WHARFINN

ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301.778-3181 Located Downtown next to the Court House

OLDE TOWNE BARBERS

FRENCH BRAIDS * WAXING * PERMS

Facials &

Paul Mitchell Products

Kenra

Super Fresh Parking Lot

cic of Shokespapere's King case. Hallo, an organic on the play, is as

Mon-Sat

Waxing

778-4771

NEWS

Master Plan makes progress

by Ed Schroeder

Now under construction. the new Washington College Academic Resource Center was approved only following a series of heated meetings with the Board of Public works. The Board approved the contract for building the structure.

Governor William Donald Schaefer headed the board that awarded the contract to the builder with the lowest estimate. Three contractors bid on the project. The company estimates that work will be complete by the summer of 1990.

The construction company will be working under a $5.6 million budget. They will use the money and resources to fill a thirty three thousand square foot area that has been alloted for the building between the Gibson Fine Art Center and Hodson Hall.

This three story brick building will reflect a tradi tional style of architecture, much like that seen in other of the buildings on campus. A white cupola is being planned for the roof of the complex

Included in this facility will be many new academic, administrative and extracurricular activity center. It will hold the expected admissions offices, student affairs, study skills development offices and computing areas. Additional ideas are also being planned. The bookstore may move there. They also project that the building will have an "authentic" lounge, a foreign language department and a multi-media auditorium for featured guest speakers. An outdoor amphitheater is also being planned.

This new addition will be only one of the many new establishments finished on campus in the upcoming years. Once the campus construction is complete, final phases of the Master Plan will also be completed. Administration and the student body are both looking forward to this

Maryland's state share of the contract was approved by the General Assembly through Washington College's loan policy of 1984. It will eventually sumise to an amount of $1.059.135.00.

SGA suggests renovations for Hodson Hall

continued from page 1 ingon a plan, while keeping the removed, enlarging the facilbudget in mind.

One possible project would involve moving Ms. Dee's Snack Bar to the area that the Bookstore now occupies. If structurally sound and/or economical, the wall between the snack bar and the Coffee House could be

Although no official word has been issued, Ms. Ruth Dickerson, manager of Ms. Dee's, did not seem to object to some future renovations. She said however, "Why should the Coffee House be enlarged-no one uses it as it is."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Finney as he explained that he hoped the Coffee House would be used more often. He said, "I'd like to see a new image cultivated for the Coffee House." He also added that student input and opinions are necessary at this early pre-planning stage.

Students file suit over Birthday Ball fight

by Tracey Connell Students John Macielag and Matthew Kelly will battle in court this month over events which occurred in the Cain Gymnasium on Birthday Ball

Security reported that an alleged fist fight erupted between the two students at approximately midnight in the men's bathroom. Security was notified and arrived on the scene after the incident. Security conducted an investigation, but refused to comment further.

Reportedly Macielag and Kelly were not the only students involved, despite the fact that they were the only individuals who filed charges and counter charges, respectively. Kelly was unavailable for comment. Macielag chose not to comment in order to protect his legal proceedings.

Other issues may arise from this case as the Administration muses over whether or not it may be tried by the Student Conduct Council. No decision has been made as yet. Local courts will deliberate matters after March 20.

Health Center conducts discussions

In March the Health Center will conduct a variety of discussions: Relationships: Lavers of Love" on March 7 at 7:00 pm, Stress Management on March 9 at 7:00 pm, a discussion of journal writing and insights will take place on the 21st at 7:00 pm, Alcohol and drug awareness on March 21 and 28 at 6:00 pm. A smoking cessation work shop remains to be scheduled.

Mom's Cookie Jan

Last meal before Spring Break will be lunch on Friday, March 10th

Regular meals will resume on Monday March 20th during breakfast.

The dinner with the Registered Dietitian has been rescheduled for March 21st.

Hope, everyone will have an enjoyable as well as, a safe Spring Break. Until after Spring Break take MOM

"HILARIOUS"

"A STUNNING PIECE OF WORK.

"AUDACIOUS" "A TRIUMPH" "A SMASH".

"AMAZING"

'A BRILLIANT TOUR-DE-FORCE"

CATCH THIS ONE-OF-A-KIND MOVIE"

March 21, 1989 (1 hr. 40 min.,

GAINGEE "Your lilm is greater than any prize we could give it," Alain Tanner said to Michel Khielis before awarding khielis *Wedding Intelligence of the Grand Prize at the San Sebastian Film lessval. This factarising and sensuous drama ooks at a village of Palestinians living under Zionist military dominance. This is the salf-reliexive tale of the part of the salf-relieving the salf-reli of Mukhtar (Alie M. El Akili) who seeks to follow his ethnic tradition despite indifference to its many of Munitar Puller M. Et Asing who seeks to follow his sufflict action despite inchineration of international critics Award at Cannes The N. Y. Times described the film as Trich, vibrant, excite and often dazzling."

Washington College Elm

Volume 60, Number 20

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 24, 1989

Stenger addresses propane controversy

this week to the controversy which is currently boiling over his storage yard of liquid pro-nane tanks. These tanks, which are situated within a hundred eet of Washington College's Cardinal Dorms, have reportedly been a source of anxiety for nany students and townspeople as local volunteer fire officials have addressed a number of alarms for suspected leaks". Stenger nevertheless commented throughout on the safety of his facility

According to Stenger, liquid propane is composed of three parts carbon and eight parts lydrogen. This in turn is comlined with oxygen and and an odorant when it is stored within atank. Before leaking propane an be considered at a point of critical flammability" the ixture must be 93 to 97 parts tygen and two to eight parts opane. "If it is say eight parts opane it won't burn.

Stenger stressed that se numbers translate into igh concentrations which are ifficult to achieve, especially inthat specific area. "It's pretty ard to get. In that spot the ince of the College creates a lyway. You could never get a lammable mixture because it 18 50 dissipated in the air

The tanks themselves are anstructed to reduce dangers dangerous concentrations. or example, a "fixed level Ruge" governs proportions of opane as the tanks are being filed. The gauge will "blow apor until the propane reaches Spercent and then it will blow but liquid." Federal Law prolibits further introduction of

Propane into the system, hereby maintaining safe conentration and pressure of the Federal Law also requires hat before a hazardous mate is introduced, the individmust "know that the vessel prepared to receive it." The must be qualified on than 5 percent of its original Carl Stenger responded steel weight rusted away." According to Stenger safety is part of the "nature of the vessel

When asked if his tanks posed any danger to students or citizens Stenger replied "They are totally safe. There is absolutely no danger there. A hundred pound tank holds 23 and a halfgallons of propane. If the bottom were to drop out, by the time that propane moves 75 feet it will have dissipated if there is any kind of movement of air." He further stated that "catastrophe" is only a "remote"

Stenger's tanks have occupied the yard since May, 1957. He stressed that during the thirty year period his tanks were a source of alarm only an approximate twenty times, and fifteen of the twenty there were no leaks. Local fire officials were unable to provide confirming statistics when asked two weeks ago

Fire officials were able to provide a list of their own regulations as to their handling of liquid propane. According to their Emergency Response Guidebook , liquid propane is considered "extremely flammable; may be ignited by heat, sparks or flames. Vapors may travel to a source of ignition and flash back. Container may explode in heat of fire." Listed under Health Hazards, "Vapors may cause dizziness or suffocation. Contact will cause severe frostbite. Fire may produce

Though propane itself is considered highly dangerous, Stenger maintains that his facilities are safe. He cites misinformation as the true source of student and citizen concern. Stenger concluded by stating, "to my knowledge there has never been a flammable mixture in that yard."

irritating or poisonous gases."

Stenger has no immediate plans to satisfy requests that he relocate the tanks and will not do so unless, in the points, "no dents, no deep interests of family members, "it ils, and there cannot be more would be profitable"

Monday, March 20 beheld the first day of Spring as flowers began to emerge on campus. Sights such as this one greeted students returning from break.

SGA Senate Meeting Report: March 20

by Julie Schram

Allocation of funds was the immediate point of order of the March 20 Student Government Association meeting, held at 7 PM in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library. There is now approximately $1245 in the working treasury President Perry Finney presented requests from four groups for SGA funds. The International Relations Club was allocated $150 for the expense of the reception held for Soviet high school students who visited Washington College in February. In addition to miscellaneous expenses, the money will go towards three speakers scheduled for this semester. The German Club was allocated $150, some of which will pay for a German singer currently booked to perform.

Fifty dollars was allotted Washington College Helpline primarily for the cost of phone bills.

Receiving outside grants and SGA funding to sponsor speakers on current issues, the William James Forum was appropriated $200. Next year the group will receive funding nator of the Tamara Alexander from the general operating col-

Bill Bertles, Social Chairman, requested money for the upcoming luau and Heineken Party. Funds are primarily for the bands scheduled to perform at the separate events. He was allotted $800 for the reggae band Determination, scheduled to play at the Pavilion on Saturday, April 22 at the SGA luau. Pat Trams, Director of Alumni Affairs, offered to help with expenses. Food Services may serve dinner at the function.

Jointly sponsored by the Theta Chi Fraternity, the Heineken Party will be Saturday, April 1. Bertles was allocated $2250 for a Motown-dance and Final Chapter. The band hails from Baltimore and has an elaborate sound and light system. Admission will be $4, with beer and sodas extra. It will be held in the Dining Hall. Finney expressed concern at the amount of money the Senate was willing to apportion the Social Committee saying, "If this flops we'll be scrapthe bottom of the barrel."

John Billingslea, coordi

Benefit to be held on April 8, received $500 from the SGA. At $6 a head and with cost of food additional, Billingslea hopes to raise $8,000. Seven bands are scheduled to play during a 14 hour period to contribute to Tamara Alexander's medical expenses. Vice President Rob Albers announced that a representative from the education program has joined the Student Academic Board. There was no previous representation because it is not a major and did not have a considerable number of students.

A joint nursing program with the Johns Hopkins University School of Nursing is being arranged through the Academic Council. After completing three years at Washington College and two years at Hopkins a nurse may graduate with dual degrees from both schools

Albers reported changes in the requirements for an English major. Details need to be clarified, but future World

continued on page 8

Bennett's "shock treatment"

While Mr. Bennett begins his test case in Washington D.C. there are several things he should keep in mind. In the America's war against drugs so far, concentration has been in three major areas: interdiction, education and rehabilitation. Federal spending in drug programs rose by 194% between 1981 and 1988-more than tripling previous spending in drug law enforcement, nearly quadrupling prevention efforts, and doubling funds for treat-

Drug use is extensive all over the country, 23,000,000 Americans, documented among most occupations and socioecgroups, use drugs at least once a month. And although two-thirds of Americans believe drug possession should be subject to criminal penalties, there doesn't seem to be enough space to hold all of these offenders.

The amount of money spent in drug interdiction doubled between 1981 and 86, increasing seizures of cocaine by sixteen fold with the number of arrests and convictions growing. Yet cocaine imports more than doubled in the same span of years, and marijuana imports remained roughly constant.

In drug education, spending rose by 288% between 1981 and 88, from $117,000,000 to 454,000,000. According to a recent report from the National Institute of Justice "there is no consistent evidence that drug education programs either decrease or increase the likelihood that students will use drugs," and it further notes that "programs that address only the negative aspects of drug use, especially those that exaggerate these aspects, tend to be disbelieved. The unfortunate result is that young people may become more rather than less likely to experiment with drugs." A report on drug education in 1980 found that "by far the largest number of studies have found no effects of drug education on

Federal spending nearly doubled in rehabilitation and treatment programs since 1981. Evidence is persuasive that current drug treatment and rehabilitation are not very effective in reduc-A Rand Corporation study of drug treatment programs in the District of Columbia discovered that the percent of drug users successfully completing rehabilitation programs ranged from a maximum of 50% for marijuana users to a minimum of 20% for heroin users. Rehabilitation seems to be effective only in preventing continuing use by current users, and then only among those who choose, or are forced, to undergo treatment Another thing Mr. Bennett should consider is that of the 23,000,000 people using drugs, 500,000 are heroin addicts and another ten percent may be addicted to cocaine or other hard drugs. The remaining number, somewhere near 20,000,000 are apable of stopping their use, but choose not to do so

f Drug related crimes and abuse are long term that continue to grow, despite the amount of money the federal government phus into programs. Bennett plans some kind of new crack down, including a special federal-local strike force that intends to target repeat drug offenders, attempt to shut down the District's open air drug markets and lower the homicide rate. He has a long road ahead of him, pouring millions of dollars into the millions spent in the past, with no real promise that he will be successful.

Washington College Elm Editors

Jennifer M. Harrison

| News Editor  | Tracey Connell                           |
|--|--|
| Features Editor  | Anne Lindenbaum                          |
| Sports Editor  | Carter Boatner                           |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor  | Michele M. Volansky                      |
| Photography Editor   |  |
| Graphics Designer  | Todd Karr                                |
| Managers   |  |
| Managing Editor  |  |
| Advertising Manager  | Erin Hodge-Williams                      |
| Circulation Manager  | James Sobczak                            |
| The state of the s |  |
| The Washington College Elm is the offi   | cial student newspaper of Washington     |
| College. It is published every Friday during the scade   | mie year with the exception of vacations |
| and exam weeks.  Editorials are the responsibility of the Ed   |  |
| Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opini   |  |

ess hours are 7:00 to 9:00 PM on Tuesdays and 7:00 to 11:00 er of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in G

Letters to the Editor

was a terrible tragedy. Now it seems that there

Whatever happened to the Student Center?

To the Editor

Once upon a time, only a short time ago, there was a Student Center. It was affectionately called the Coffeehouse. Students came to the Coffeehouse to play pool, hang out with their friends, listen to some good bands, and drink beer (if they were 21). Everyone pretty much enjoyed the Coffeehouse. It was a service that existed for the students of Washington College. And almost every weekend, a band or DJ played in the Coffeehouse and it seemed like everyone had fun. People danced, played pool and drank beer (if they were And even the student employees liked working at the Coffeehouse. It gave them the opportunity to serve the college community in a way that they enjoyed. It was a nice way to make a living. It really seemed that the college community liked the services that the Coffeehouse offered. But then one day, a bad thing happened. The Coffeehouse was not able to offer the student body all those services that they wanted to offer. They wanted to give the students the opportunity to buy pizzas at a very reasonable price with delivery! But they could not do that anymore. The Coffeehouse wanted to be open every Saturday and Sunday afternoons, so that the student body could come in and play pool, study, or just relax. But they could not do that anymore. And the Coffeehouse even wanted to offer the students alternate enter tainment every night of the week, so that the local bars were not the only forms of entertainment available. But they could were a variety of reasons why the Coffeehouse could not offer the Washington College Students all those things that they deserved. When the WC Administration made up the Coffeehouse budget last spring semester, no one knew about the upcoming student salary raises that were to take effect in the fall. So the budget was approved without taking the well-deserved raises into account. At the very end of the summer the appropriate measures were taken to ask for an increase in the student salary budget to support the increase in student salaries. This way the Coffeehouse could be open as many hours as possible to

Now it would be very nice for the Coffeehouse to offer fresh pizza and delivery on a regular basis just because it is a nice thing for the Student Center to offer the students of Washington College. And it would be very nice if the Coffeehouse could be open every Saturday and Sunday afternoons for the meet the complex and varied needs of all the students on campus

That request was convenience of the students, just because it is another nice thing for the Student Center to offer the students of Washington College. And it would also be nice if the Coffeehouse could offer more of a variety of bands and entertainment on a nightly basis, just for the same reason mentioned above. But this cannot be done. And the reason it cannot be done is because of money. There is not enough money to pay the employees of the Coffeehouse to keep it open for all these services that the student body should have. The Coffeehouse is not an institution that is out to make a profit. When students do not spend time or money in the Student Center, because they not do that anymore either. It are dissatisfied with the mini- for more information, mal services that the Coff house offers now, it appears they do not want their Stud Center, when in fact the dents want and need more for their Student Center. FUNDS=SHORTE HOURS = FEWE

SERVICES=LACK INTEREST=LACK FUNDS, etc. Its just one we large circle, which is going fround and frou The End.

Deborah Nahmias-Senior David Kelly-Senior Jennifer Jefferson-Sophomo Sarah Danowski-Senior

P.S. We wrote this let because we felt it was imp tant for the students of Wa ington College to know w and why this was happening

Pro-choice march in D.C.

The National Organi tion for Women is organiz The March for Women's Equ ity/Women's Lives. The page pose of this march is to expreto the nation that those " support keeping abortion birth control safe and legal the overwhelming majority Both President Bush Attorney General Thornbut have stated their support overturning Roev. Wade, whi may happen in the upcomi case of Webster v. Reprofit tive Health Services. points out that if this is the then women will return to the alleys" and endanger the ture they are trying to saw The March is schedul for April 9 in Washington D fifteen days before the Supre Court will hear oral argueme for the Webster case.

The Margaret Horst Society is organizing transp tation for this event. Cont Andrea Kehoe or Jenni Harrison through campus #

ISSUE:

Can a case be tried in both the SCC and the civil courts?

Hopefully justice will be done either way

me case should be tried by oth the Student Conduct nuncil and the district courts cording to the Student Handnok, the Student Conduct atters concerning the social onduct and behavior of the ege community." Parties found ation, constructive work penties, disciplinary probation, official College warning, estitution, financial penalties, suspension from the College. Also, the President of the Cole has the right to suspend a student from the college for a specified time so as to protect the health or safety of another member of the college community. So there you have it. The by-laws in the handbook say nothing about what to do if the party involved is charged with committing a criminal act.

Cathy Lease

I believe that, in such a case, the party should be tried by the district courts only. A criminal case is a criminal case.

no right to try someone for a criminal offense. The college is not a form of police enforcement and has neither the right or the jurisdiction to punish someone for a crime such as arson or grand theft, even if the said act occured on the college campus. That's what the district courts are for.

Granted, offenses such as disturbing the peace and assault and battery are also socalled criminal charges, but I wouldn't consider them to be district courts, Jones said. serious crimes

"If an incident occurs at Washington College, then the party involved is first and foremost responsible to the College." Jones is concerned about inconsistency. The SCC recently heard a case on a certain matter, but last year a case similar to this one was turned over to the local authorities. Extreme cases, such as a major criminal charge, and a case in which the guilty party would be dismissed from the College, should be automatically turned over to the be a problem for me. I believe a person need only be tried once for one offense. I guess what this all comes down to is the severity of the crime/violation. A misdemeanor, such as disturbing the peace or assault and battery involving students of the College, should be tried by the Student Conduct Council only. On the other hand, a felony should be tried by the district courts only. Hopefully, justice will be done either way.

Scott Jones, chairman of double jeopardy? This would tional Studies.

Cathy Lease is a freshman What about the concept of planning to major in Interna-

Karl Seelaus

John Grev Freshman should be tried in just the Depends on the nature of the If it is a serious crime then it If the offense is serious enough CC for anything not too ma- crime, but if a law has been broken, then prosecute them!

Rob Cabaniss to the civil courts. But if it is a trivial crime then the SCC should deal with it.

Beth Wilson Sophomore

should bypass the SCC and go it should be put up in front of the civil courts. But if it is only a minor offense, then the school should handle the problem.

Leslie Newcomb Freshman

It depends on how extreme the offense is. If it's something major it could go to the civil courts, but otherwise it should be taken care of by the school.

by Thomas Cunking

Inconsistencies in the system cause problems

When approached with students are allowed to imbibe he was an underaged drinker. the question of whether a case ould be tried in both the SCC and the civil courts, my initial sponse was an unequivocal Having been involved in he SCC for two years, prestitly as clerk, I have seen variscases in which persons have en tried in every imaginable State and local offenses lave been left to the SCC, school hefts have been brought only the civil courts, and a select w cases have been deliberited by both. I will focus my Ruest editorial on the inconsiscies present in the system and I will let you decide whether not cases should be tried in oth the SCC and the civil

The inconsistencies begin lems with our college's social proceures. When fraternities have freely, regardless of age. But when sororities or the SGA have a social function in the Coffee House also on campus students must be the legal age of 21 to consume alcoholic beverages. This type of inconsistency leads to very difficult cases for both judicial bodies. For instance, after a typical weekend at WC (the social mecca of the Eastern Shore), the CSB (conduct screening board) receives a case involving an inebriated student who has acted irresponsibly. At the same time it gets a case where someone has been caught using a fake ID in the Coffee House. When the SCC decides the verdict of these cases we are faced with the following prob-

With the first case, we are asked only to judge on the per-

With the next case, the only thing we are to consider is the underage drinking problem since the college is undecided on its policies, the SCC is left unsure of its decisions. The College claims to be an institution independent of the state's laws, but only acts so when it is to their favor The next problem is the enforcement of vague policies. The Coffee House ID problem is a good place to start. A few months ago a student was caught with a "fake" ID; it was confiscated, torn up, and forgotten. A week later, another student was caught using a fake ID; it was confiscated, held for evidence, and the student was prosecuted through the SCC. A few weeks after this, another evidence, and turned over to local authorities to be dealt with through the civil courts. Security now claims that all fake ID's will be turned over to local authorities. Security also told us that a thorough investigation would be performed with the East Hall fire, this never

Michael Winkelman

The inconsistencies lie not only in Washington College's drinking policies. First semester a student was caught with road signs in his room. Security informed the local police, and the student was dealt with through the civil courts. This case never reached the SCC Recently the SCC heard a simistudent was caught with a fake Recently the SCC heard a simi-

ensued

had been caught with road signs in his room. This case never reached the local courts. Both of these students broke federal and campus rules. Last year a student was caught stealing from a local business. He was prosecuted by both courts. Another student was caught stealing on campus, he was tried only by the SCC. Stealing is a federal offense regardless of location.

These inconsistencies fundamentally hamper the system and cause unnecessary injustices. An investigation into these inconsistencies would prove beneficial to the college community and help alleviate the problem of whether a case should be tried in both the SCC and the civil courts.

Miche & Tir Imar

In the World

The confusion and lack of coordination about the U.S. policy toward Japan divides American officials in debate about the importance of military and political aims over economic concerns. A U.S. helicopter crashed in South Korea killing 19 Marines and injuring 16 others. It is the second fatal U.S. helicopter crash in the last four days of participation in joint military maneuvers with South Korean

Preliminary data from and plant life are adjusting to rebels. the hole in the protective ozone layer; thereby, easing ecologi-

The Supreme Court agreed to decide how strictly to enforce a procedural requirement for lawsuits by private citizens on environmental hazards. The court also agreed to decide whether the First Amendment protects the rights of the Native American Church to use the hallucinogenic drug peyote in their religious rites

A former congressman testified at the Iran-Contratrial that the late CIA Chief Casev tried to discredit a congressional committee staff member during an inquiry into North's ef-Antarctica suggests that ocean forts on behalf of Nicaragua's

Tower's tumult

Many things have been voted against their party's written about John Tower and majority. (It is also an interesthis rejection by the Senate. Several weeks ago I predicted that despite the controversy, Tower would be confirmed. I must admit that I underestimated Congress and the Democratic senators. I also must say that I am very impressed with both sides in the controversy and the way they managed to hold their party members in line. Only four senators, three Democrats and one Republican, ing note that one of the Demo crats was Lloyd Bentsen and the Republican was Nancy Kassebaum, the only female Republican senator.) My admiration for the way the Senate showed their strength led me to write this short political fairy tale. It is dedicated to the victorious leader of the group oppos-ing Tower's confirmation, Sam Nunn. Hopefully it will be the last anyone ever has to hear again about John Tower.

Wendy Kloiber

Wendy Kloiber is a junior majoring in Humanities.

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANHON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Austin Carpet 778-4656

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

clined comment on the Iran- and Peace) has broken the ban

Congress over the Federal budget heightened and compromises on the differences have been elusive during the first Union since the 1960's. week of negotiations.

"rebel," gained support over the officially backed candidate, Yevgeny Brakov, in the campaign toward a seat in the newly revamped Soviet Parliament. Although Yeltsin does not consider himself an "alternative leader" he is calling for such reforms such as "half-measures" or private farming to resolve the country's neverending food shortage, and a freeze on space research lasting 5 to 7 years.

Contra trial testimony.

on the work of Alexander Disagreements between Solzhenitsyn's work in the the Bush Administration and USSR by publishing his 1974 essay entitled "Live Not By Lies." Solzhenitsyn's work has not been printed in the Soviet crashed just before landing Boris Yeltsin, a Kremlin Tuesday at Sao Paulo's international airport, killing 12 persons and injuring 200. The cause has not been established. ISRAEL.

BRAZIL

> Prime Minister Shamir denied reports that Israel's military intelligence chief had told the Cabinet that the government must speak to the PLO if it wants to end the Arab uprising SYRIA/LEBANON

Moslem militiamen and

Syrian troops severed all routes A small, obscure Soviet to Lebanon's Christian heart-

Reagan's office has de- magazine (Twentieth Century land, effectively imposing blockade and leaving the north ern port of Jounieth the on link to the outside world. The military action was the late development in an escalatin

FRANCE

The ruling Socialist Part A Brazilian cargo jet madegains in the final rounds the French municipal election as it won control of several mair cities from the conservation position. French voters continu to drift away from the Commi nist Party, while the Ecologic Party made a rather stron showing.

EL SALVADOR

Fighting broke out again in El Salvador between th military and the anti-government rebels. At least ten wer killed following the election of President Jose Duarte's success

compiled by Jacquie Colling

don pubs, shops and offices from Laura Ashley to the Hard Roo dents bypass the administrative process for work permits to Cafe, as well as farmlands and work temporarily in countries such as France, Ireland, Costa countryside resorts. The pro-Rica, New Zealand, Jamaica, gram is open to students 18 and and the Federal Republic of older who are currently study Germany. National Student ing at an accredited college of university. There is an $82 fee for the program. Details and applications are available from CIEE, Dept 16, 205 East 42nd ite country of American stu- St., New York, NY 10017, Tele dents, who may work in Lon- phone: 212-661-1414.

Working overseas

Recently the Council on International Educational Exchange announced that over 6,000 college students are expected to travel overseas for summer jobs this year. Stuorganizations aid the U.S. students in finding jobs and lodg-Great Britain is the favor-best. Pizza Hut" Pan Pizza. Try one bite of its deep, golden crust, two layers of cheese, and toppings galore and your taste buds will choose it their unanimous favorite too. Award yourself with one today

Drug-related violence in D.C. escalates

by Carter Boatner

As a native of Arlington. Virginia, I have become increasingly aware of the rising levels of drug-related violence being carried out in neighboring Washington, D.C. and the adpining suburbs. The drug-related violence that was once onsidered to be an isolated situation confined to the few "had areas" of the district has now escalated into a regionwide concern extending to the areas bordering my own neighborhood.

The area in Arlington where this violence has manifested itself the greatest is the Nauck community, south of the

Prior to the Civil War, this area was a plantation estate with a large land holding. Following the Emancipation Proclamation the area was turned over to the Freedmen to settle upon and make a living. Since then the area has slipped into low and middle income housing, and the community foundations have become unstable Although not considered safe after nightfall, Nauck was considered to be slowly on the upswing like the neighboring Shirlington area. With the construction of a small-industrial park and the arrival of new business, the prospects for Nauck looked bright. The Shirlington area was also being eveloped, and upscale business was being drawn in, not onewarter of a mile away. More and more people were being drawn into Nauck and the community was being greatly exposed. I myself frequented the pet store in the industrial park and when I did not ride the school bus. Nauck provided me with a convenient short-cut in route to my neighborhood. This, however, has changed.

Gradually over the past few years Nauck, has developed and maintained its reputation as having the county's largest open-air drug market. The ommunity widely referred to among locals as "Arna Valley", "Green Valley", has been repeatedly cast into the headnes following police raids resulting from undercover invesligations. Each year the raids ocur with the regularity of the leasons and net easily over 50 people every time. Regardless if the repeated police action the trug trade continues and retently the raids have been neting crack houses carrying out arge scale operations. acrease in the drug activity has been coupled with the mergence of violence maniested by shootings and stab ings. More often than not these random acts of violence the intended victims, resulting since relocated to a safer loca- and almost half said they no in innocent bloodshed. This has indicated to Arlington officials that there is a definite increase in the level of operatraffickers.

The violence in Nauck reached a point where, in December, community activist John Robinson requested the help of the Nation of Islam because of the growing concern over drug-related violence in The Muslims have recently been credited with ridding the drug-infested Mayfair Mansions apartment complex in the District

Robinson, 54, who lives in an apartment directly behind the county's worst street drug market, invited the Muslims to Nauck to patrol the community in an attempt to curb the violence. This action perturbed the community leaders who felt they should have been consulted before the action request was carried out. However, Robinson's unilateral decision to request the assistance of the Muslims is indicative not only of his abrasive manner but also of the desperation the situation in Nauck has reached

The Nauck situation is just one example of the impending effects of the District's growing drug problem. As I have read about the changes occurring in Nauck and areas of Prince George's County over the past few months, I became aware of the fact that the District's problem, if not held in check, will expand to affect the greater surrounding areas. No longer does Nauck serve as a convenient shortcut for pedestrians or those in vehicles. The tion. All of this I believe is because of the increase in drug did because they fear violence.

Each day when the local tions among Arlington drug paper features the section listing arrests made in the area. the words cocaine and crack appear in nearly each mention

> UNITED STATES CAPITOI

A poll conducted by the Washington Post of District and Prince George's County residents in areas most affected by the drug problem has revealed that their daily routine has changed since the onslaught of violence over the past years. In 1988 more District residents died from "drug-related" violence than died during the entire Vietnam involvement period. Twenty percent of the District residents polled said they have stopped seeing a friend in 1988 because of drugs, longer visit clubs that they once

Because of the recent onslaught of violence, the District's medical examiner's office and the ballistics labs have had a backflow of cases to deal with. Many of the innercity hospitals have been flooded with patients who lack healthcare insurance, putting considerable strain upon the city's public health care system. A recent city study found that homicide is the third leading cause of premature death behind heart disease and cancer. Many of the bodies of homicide victims lay unclaimed at the city medical examiner's office. which has lead to discussion of possibly having the hospitals take responsibility for disposal of the bodies. What all of this amounts to is that the increased burden placed upon the hospitals because of the drug-related violence has made it increasingly difficult for the public health care facilities to fulfill their obligations to the commu-

The situation in the District must be held in check. This sentiment is backed by antidrug crusader William Bennett's proclamation labeling the District as an emergency crime zone. As part of the emergency crime program, starting March 6, desk-bound veterans of the police force began patrolling the streets. This measure increases police presence without putting addihave extended past the reach of are no longer there; they have walk in certain parts of the city, tional officers on the payroll But because of the increase in police activity, many fear the drug dealers will move out of the District and into the suburbs to peddle their wares. As a result it has been requested by Virginia Republican gubernatorial candidate J. Marshall Coleman that a 100 member squad be created to patrol the George Washington Parkway in an attempt to curb the tide of drug activity migrating to Virginia. Coleman blames the escalation of the drug war on the District's "failed leadership", citing that there are "three times as many public drug markets in our nation's capital as there are supermarkets". Echoing these sentiments was Senator Warren Rudman who proposed that the D.C. police force be replaced by a federally controlled force.

Actions taken recently to curb the activity of open-air drug markets are the confisca tion law, as well as the curfew imposed upon youths. confiscation law states that if an individual is arrested taking part in drug-related activities in the District, his or her automobile will automatically be confiscated. If that person has auto payments remaining, too had This is a measure aimed at the suburbanites who. by frequenting the Districts open air-markets, have helped bolster the volume of drug sales occurring. The curfew is an attempt to contain youths by keeping them indoors after continued on page 6

We will professionally wash, dry, fold and hang your clothing, $.55 lb., $5.50 minimum, same day service.

> COIN-OP LAUNDRY - PROFSSIONAL DRY CLEANING

> > KENT LAUNDRY 607 high Street Chestertown 778-3551

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's MASS SCHEDULE ST.JOHN'S

SACRED HEART

11:30am junday 9:30 to 10:30am sions are heard 6:15 Saturday Evening

Sunday Mass 10:00am CCD-Sunday 9 to 9:45a

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor
Officer Kent Street Side Entranc
Chestertown, MD. 21620
(301) 778-3160

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor
Officer Kent Street Side Entranc
Officer Kent Street Side Entranc
Officer Kent Street

8:30-4:30 Mon-Fri 10:00-1:00 Saturday

为 苏大方头 大大大之 充

Spring Sale at Washington

College

Bookstore

(basement of Hodson Hall)

3 20% off all Clothing

Mar 25th-31st

大大大 苏大大

ligious Education Coordina Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F.

Phone: 1-801-820-7437

Netters keep busy with road schedule

Over Spring Break the Washington College Women's Tennis Team, Spring Break meant a trip to Hilton Head Island, S.C. to play some highly competitive tennis.

After falling to Division opponents: George Mason U. (7-2) Davidson College (8-1), & Murray State U. (7-2), the Shorewomen nearly upset Virginia Commonwealth U. (another Div. 1 school), Macfoe and Swarthmore College before bowing 5-4 in each match Despite trailing 4-2 after singles Washington rallied and nearly swept doubles only to fall one match short of upsetting Swarthmore. Singles victors were Tracy Peel & Sarah Pyle. Peel then teamed with Monica Blanco to defeat Laurie Power & Donato at #1 doubles. WC's #3 doubles team of Pyle & Meg Wheatley also won to make the score 5.4

within one set of knocking off Div. I Virginia Commonwealth In a tight match the Sho'women bowed in three three set matches thus preventing them for capturing that elusive "W." Playing the doubles first WC fell behind 2-1 but singles wins by Tracy Peel & Miriam Dittman put Washington ahead

3-2. Rachel Rice & Meg Wheatley lost at 5 & 6 respectively giving VCU a 4-3 advantage. Pyle's straight set victory knotted the score at 4 all, however Monica Blanco's loss in 3 tough sets spelled defeat for Washington.

The Washington College Men's Tennis Team trekked down to South Carolina for a "short out" with the University of the South ranked 9th in Divi sion III. A loss to Sewanee would virtually eliminate WC's chances for a 4th consecutive trip to the Nationals in May.

With only 3 matches under their belts the WC tennis team

The showcase match between the Tiger's Guerry and Washington's Larry Gewer was what could be expected between two of the top players in Div. III with Gewer downing Guerry 6-2.7-5. The Sho'men now needed a win by freshman Andy Bahutinsky to take a 4-2 lead after of Bill Shaw & Shepherd also and pressure packed match of baseline game, Bohutinsky was too sharp for the Tiger's Matt Farley thus taking the pivotal match of the day. Without letting up the Gewer, Read doubles team scored a decisive 6-3, 6-2 victory over Lufkin & Alexander to clinch the team match for and ripping UNC-Greensbor Washington. The doubles team nowfaced their most important singles play! Playing a gutsy aided in the team victory by defeating Jim McCurtain & Clay Duncan 6-4, 6-3,

Following their triumph over the U. of South the WC netmen chalked up 3 more win on their trip. Walloping Tran sylvania U. (Ky.) and George Mason U. by identical 8-1 score

Laxers rest at 3-2

by Joe Van Name

The Washington College Men's Lacrosse team record now stands at 3-2 with wins over Western Maryland, Ithaca, and Whitter College. The only loss of the spring break came against Johns Hopkins. In the game against Johns Hopkins the scoring for W.C. came from Bob Mirtino on an a assist from e Greig.

On Tuesday March 14 the Sho'men faced off against Western Maryland College, winning 20-7. Washington was lead in the scoring by Tim Hormes with goals and two assists. five goals one assist, Nick Darcangelo three goals three assists, and Bob Martino and Greg Rupert who had three goals each. In goal for the Sho'men Dave Slomkowski had 14 saves against the Green Terrors.

Ithaca College was the next opponent for the Sho'men on the 18th of March at Hofstra on Long Island. The Sho'men played well against Ithaca defeating them by the score of 16-2. The leading scorer for W.C.

The Sho'men record rested at 2-2

To wrap up their week the Sho'men faced Whitter College from California on Wednesday, defeating them 18-7. Scoring for the Sho'men were Hormes five goals, Rupert three goals Martino three goals three as sists, Darcangelo three goals. and Lamanna with three as sists. Slomkowski had 11 saves The next home game for Sho'men is Wednesday March 29 vs. Clarkson College was Tim Hormes who had seven

D.C.'s drug wars

continued from page 5

areas of the District are in a severe crisis. This situation is no longer confined strictly to the District and has spread to the outlying areas of the District. In times of crisis all figures and operational plans come under fire, and not the least of which has been the highly controversial D.C. Mayor Marion

In certain areas of the city a human life has no value other than that attached to an increase in market territory. As of last Monday evening at 6pm, lence co at 119. At this rate, the year's total will be well above 500, and Needless to say, certain it does not look like there is an end in sight. Something must be done and there does not appear to any solution in sight. It does not look like Marion Barry will be back in office upon the completion of his fourth term. One Washingtonian insider proposed for his 1989 predictions that Jesse Jackson would run for Mayor to get experience for his next attempt at the White House. Who knows? Perhaps under different leadership the alarming escalation of drug-related violence could slowly, but surely,

Softball beats Lebanon in opener

by Mary-Jo DeCrescenzo The Washington College Softball team opened their season Saturday with a victory over Lebanon Valley. The game that was played however ended in a 7-5 win for the Sho'women. Sophomore Right-fielder Jill Reppert said, "The victory was a great morale booster and confidence builder for the team.

The first college performance of Freshman pitcher Shannon Cupka did not go unnoticed. Cupka ended with 10 strike outs and only 2 walks in the five inning game. Coach see everyone relax." Coach Fall also feels, "The Freshmen [pitcher-catcher] combination of Shannon and Kathy Brewster is slowly coming together. Brewster's progress is coming along nicely job behind the Appointed to lead the Softball team are Junior cocaptains Sharon Orser and Tracey Coleman. On the prog- with three RBI's, Adriennt ress of last year's team Orser commented, "There is a whole Brewster and Mary-Jo De Cres new feeling over the whole cenzo with 1 each.

Fall said, "When she struck out team-we have a very positive the first batter, I could visually attitude and everyone seems confident about the season. We are definitely a complete team this year!". Coleman, who did not play last year, felt, "The game on Saturday showed our potential. We have the talent to have a good season if we keep our heads in the game. Saturday was definitely a team of fort."

Coleman also led the team Cupka followed with 2 and

Pub Hours Opens Daily Mon-Sat 4:30

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 EREE Hors D'oeuvres

Monday Tuesday Wednesday Thursday shooter pitcher shot & Ladies nite nite draft Nite $2.00 $3.50 $1 50

DJ Jeff Reed - $1 cover playing in the back Tom Sebock - no cover playing in the front

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-4 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:38-4 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

778-1222

Be. 213 & 291

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave Chestertown, Med: 21620 Janie Thompson 798:0898

Unique events characterize local theater

by Stephanie Hess Something exciting is always going on at the Church Hill theater in Centreville. During March, the theater, a non-profit organization owned by Queen Anne's County, was host to everything from a benefit fashion show to a Canadian troupe that performs children's theater Mary Wood, a member of the theater's Board of Directors, says that the theater was built originally as a community center and theater in 1928. In the thirties, it was converted into a movie theater that at the time served as a popular pasttime for Washington College students. Recently, after the movie theater started losing business to video rentals. plans were made to demolish the building. The people of the community raised public money and bought the theater. With help from a grant, the stage was extended, stage lighting added and the old movie theatre was turned into a theater for live productions and performers Wood claims that the appearance of the theater has otchanged much and has been redecorated in the Art Deco style. Thanks to the changes and renovations, the theater is now in its second year of presenting public productions.

The theater presents many different performers and forms of entertainment. There children's shows which includes magicians, puppet shows and plays. On March nineteenth, the matinee production for children was "Nightlights," performed by a Canadian troupe talled the Green Thumb Thea-

The Church Hill Theater also works in conjunction with the Queen Anne's County teen drug prevention program to produce what is known as Teen Team Theater. Directed by Frank Van Latun, the group produces plays for teens that teal with the pressures and problems of drugs and drug

The theater does not deal teclusively with children and hows for children, however. In the past, the theater has presented two one-woman shows and an original play co-written by Washington College profesfor of political science Ed Weissman and Mary Wood, a Washington College graduate and member of the Board of Visitors and Governors. month, the theater had a visit from "Voices," an acting comlany which presented a show intitled "Actresses on Acting." The show, partially funded by

Council, featured monologues and scenes from the lives of famous stage stars, as well as scenes from some of the most notable pieces written for the heroines of dramatic literature The audience heard a tragic Medea, a noble Mary of Scotland, and a delightfully wacky Madwoman of Chaillot

For music lovers, the theater offers Blue Grass concerts every fourth Saturday at eight o'clock. Their Blue Grass per-the Queen Anne's County Arts Walls Family's, "Eddie Walls Grand Ole' Opry." Their next performance will be on March twenty-fifth. The theater has also had Barbershop Quartets and Chamber Music Concerts.

To benefit the theater, a fashion show was held on March fifteenth which featured clothing from Chestertown's Butterfly Bush, "Spring Fashions Part Two" will be held on May seventeenth, featuring original designs by Julia Blackwood of Easton, and hand knit sweatformers include The Eddie ers by Polly Tarbutt.

Other upcoming events April fifteenth include a visit on May nineteenth from Slim Harrison, described by Wood as "an amusing performer" who sings folksongs. Wood is particularly excited about Rufus Harley, a jazz and gospel bagpiper. Harley is a performer from Philadelphia who has played to audiences in Paris and Germany. He has also played at many colleges in the U.S. and Wood says that everybody from WC will love it. Harley will be

On May fourth through the seventh, the Church Hill Players will present Peter Scheaffer's play, Black Comedy, It is directed by Ted Leates, a Washington College graduate. Mrs. Wood also added that the theater offers acting classes and has work days. She says they are always looking for volunteers to help with any aspect of production.

Information about tickets and performances can be obat the Church Hill theater on tained at 556-6616

Joyce Scott returns for performance piece

by Marshall Williams

I traveled to UMBC last month to scout out Joyce Scott's performance of "Generic Interference, Genetic Engineering, prior to her bringing the piece to Washington College. Because Scott offers such a unique theatrical picture, there appeared to be a need to discover what the performance was about and what to expect. Having loved her previous, hilarious Thunder Thigh Review piece, "Women of Substance." I wanted to see if another production would measure up.
It certainly does. With the same self-deprecating humor that inspired the Thunder Thigh Review (in which Joyce and fellow actress Kay Lawal shows all the primal foibles of being fat and female). Scott creates a frightening world of "designer genes" where any imperfection could be manipulated away (as she says, it's the "permanent wave of the future"). Joyce Scott both wrote and performed, along with ac-tor Mitchell Ferguson, in "Generic Interference, Genetic Engineering." The show mixes up the genres of performance art, comic revue and multimedia extravaganza, and uses scathing humor along with very serious ideas.

Ferguson begins the performance with a solo titled "Rat." It is shadow-play about life in the sewer, with the rat becoming human becoming rat under the watchful guidance of a big-brother type who the audience hears about but does not see. Scott then appears as "Gene 3000", the embodiment of genetic manipulation who wears her genes on her sleeve-and head, and any other convenient place. She explains the latest developments in genetic engineering and introduces the manipulations that will be going on throughout the show. In a beautiful theater move, and one similar to the discussion con tained in herJanuary talk, she slips out of costume and speaks to the audience directly about where she is coming from and why she has written this play Joined with "Rat" it makes a wonderful opening and one which sets the tone for the entire show

Scott becomes serious in a number of sketches - "Marla

1,""Marla 2" and "Sadie," which of certain unavoidable aspects are about shyness, paranoia and schizophrenia; and "Sterilized Girl," a look back at a slave ancestor and an early, primitive form of genetic engineering. This serious dimension is something the Thunder Thigh Review did not have, and Scott's transitions from the comic to the dramatic are wrenching. Their full impact becomes apparent in how they relate the latest scientific technologies, which to us are still remote and simply comic, with historic treatment of slaves and the underprivileged.

In a show like this, the human body is bound to come under intense examination. "Professor" starts off looking for a couple of days before the like it is going to be a boring art lecture with slides, but it be-of anatomy. One of the final pieces. "Genetic Mistakes, consists entirely of a confrontation between two human organs that have somehow ended up hugely oversized

As she did in her lecture, Joyce Scott talks about life and the world with a frankness that is as insightfulfes itsis this arm ing, and as intelligent as it is wicked. As one might assignie from the above, "Generic Intelference oGenetic Engineering may anot be for the overly squeamish, but many mlay learn a lot from her unique perform-

Joyce will be on campus, hoping to meet with students performance, which is Wednesday at 8; student admission is comes a wonderful discussion $2. A reception will follow.

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists Materials

> POBox 402 711 High Street Chestertown Maryland 21/20 701-778-5202

SCUBA CLASSES BEGIN APRIL 11th

the highest quality instruction. In addition to our entry level scuba classes, our experts teach a wide range of advance and specialty courses. For More Info Stop By or Call: Dennis Berry at the Casey Swim Center, ext. 335

CALYPSO DIVE SHOP 639-7883

Thin Man Beli

Baked Goods * Deli Sandwiches * Assorted Cheeses

> Open 5 Days a Week Monday thru Friday

107 Cross Street

SCC and state to hear

same case

by Sharon Bonner and Patricia Karnes

Much confusion has arisen from a fight that occurred on February 18, 1989 in the Cain Gym during the Birthday Ball. Charges were brought against Matthew Kelly and John Macielag in a state court and also on campus by the Student Conduct Council (SCC).

John Macielag coman aggrieved victim. Almost a week later, after talking to a lawyer, Matt Kelly filed charges against me to improve his defense." He claimed that as he entered the bathroom on the night of the incident, Matt Kelly, approached him calling him "a loser" and asked "do you see your KA brothers around?" According to Macielag, the two "grabbed" one another and it eventually turned into "wrestling". He added that William McDermott, another student involved, pulled him up from the ground and held his arms while Matt Kelly "beat" him "in the charges were brought against of protecting evidence him personally by the SCC. comment. He would only state William McDermott's defense vo to el d on and ine. Witissaye matp that he believed the issue has drawn excessive publicity and is being "beaten like a dead horse." He said that everything downtown was already dropped Charges were also levied against Mark Cavallaro, yet were dropped due to lack of evidence. John Macielag was unsure as to the identity of one of his assailants. His confusion mented, "Ifiled charges first as added to the lack of evidence building the case against Mark Cavallaro, therefore the state's attorney dismissed all charges against him.

The Student Conduct Council heard the case on Thursday March 23, of this week. The outcome was unavailable as of this writing Scott Jones, President of SCC stated that "charges were brought against both John Macielag and Matt Kelly and that they were being charged with endangering students in the campus community."

Jerry Roderick, Head of Washington College Security, face". According to John no denied comment on the grounds

Defense Council G. Mitch-Matt Kelly refused to ell Mowell, Matt Kelly and attorney, commented that the incident was a confrontation between two people under the influence of alcohol, saving a lot of things that may not have occurred. He projects that on Thursday March 30th the date of the cases against Matt Kelly and William McDermott. charges will be dismissed as an "inactive docket"; both parties will not be prosecuted. Charges will be dropped pending further violations of a probational

Fire Marshall alerted

Alan Ward, Deputy Fire Marshal, commented recently on Stenger's liquid propane tanks. More confusion has arisen as to the seriousness of the situation that exists.

Richard Powell, Fire Marshal, had said that they're was nothing to be reported on the leakage of the tanks; Alan Ward stated "I, and the Fire Marshal, are unaware that their was any problem that existed. The records of the school inspections show nothing that illustrates that any safety hazards have been violated." Ward was insistent that the local Chestertown Fire Marshal Agent knows nothing about the area's

Ward stated that Stenger began a normal routine process of bleeding tanks at his factory; however, a complication arose where the gas was leaking onto and into the ground in a way that proved hazardous to the community. Complaints were registered by members of the area and the State Fire Marshal was called in to investigate the situation. The leak could have proved hazardous, but a cease and desist order was drawn up, prompting

SGA

Report

pick up petitions from the Stu dent Affairs Office. Fifteen student signatures are needed, towards a major.

safety precautions were taken. Ward was shocked that they were uninformed about what was going on, and men-and the deadline for these petitions is April 3. In order to "promote a continuity, which has been lack. ing, between administrations." according to Finney, he recom-Drama courses will be counted mended moving the elections up to the two weeks before Finney announced that Executive Council Elections will Spring Break. The Senate voted to change Article 6, Section 1 Clause C of the Constitution to be April 4. Students interested in sitting on the Council may enact this policy. New Business included a proposal that the basement of East Hall be equipped with computers next semester and used as a 24 hour study center. Details are still being worked

The Kentand Queen Anne County Hospital is sponsoring a five mile Walk-A-Thon on Saturday, April 22 at 10 AM Funds raised will go towards hospital additions. Interested persons may contact Karen Carlson at 778-3300.

Old Business involved the propane tanks behind the Cardinal Dorms. Finney will draft a letter to be discussed at the next SGA meeting, in order to express student concern to Stenger Hardware.

Stenger to stop the process and The next SGA meeting will shut down the factories until be Monday, April 3 at 7 PM in the Sophie Kerr Room. Any interested or concerned students are encouraged to attend

Mom's Cookie Jar

ing sta st

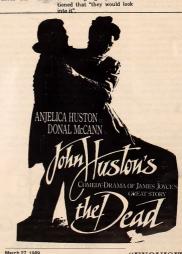

Hope everyone had a swell stress ed stress at spring break. Well, now it's back to business as usual. Hopefully, everyone will put forth all of their best efforts to make this semester the best ever. It's very important that you do a good job with your classes; after all, they will be the basis for your future.

The main attraction featured Tuesday at lunch was soft served fruited dessert. This dessert contains 80 calories, 0 cholesterol, 25 milligrams salt, and 0 fat. We would appreciate your comments.

We will be acknowledging Yoplait Day on March 28th and Dairy Day March 29th. On March 28th there will be a BIKE GIVE-AWAU. See ua there.

Have a MOM

"EXQUISITE"

Sheila Benson LOS ANGELES TIMES Huston's film is smooth, beautiful, and vibrantly alive. Gabriel Conroy (Donal McCann), presides uneasily at the elaborate after-Christmas party given by his aunts in Dublin, and later in atter-Christmas party given by his aunts in Dublin, and later in his hotel room he undergoes an extreme and unexpected morification. Huston recreates the party with surprising warmth and thereby captures much of the Ireland which fascinated Joyce throughout his life. The revelations about Gretta, Conrol's wife (strikingly played by Angelica Huston), provide a starting and profound conclusion to this wonderful work.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 21

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, March 31, 1989

Faculty fights Athletic Center decision

by Ed Schroeder

On January 19th, 1989, a andate was issued from the Senior Vice President for Man gement and Finance, Gene A. essey, in concern of the use of he Cain Gymnasium, the Casey Swim Center and the itness Center. The Faculty Athletic Committee and the xecutive Council, upon review ng the unsupervised use of e facilities, felt it necessary o draw up a policy to protect Washington College from any ability suits

Although new regulations xist, there have been up to ecently some different interretations on how the Washgton College Athletic Facility lse Policy should be interreted, which have created me controversy between the sulty and administration using the gym. I very much resent this, and I consider it symptomatic of how badly the faculty and administration have been polarized," says Dr. Richard C. DeProspo, a professor who felt that the administra-

ing of the policy in an imper-

Geoffrey M. Miller, the Director of Athletics, cited was that in the building were in there when they weren't supposed to be. And it wasn't just faculty members, it was people who had received keys in the past

continued on page 12

sonal manner

When the administration ught this policy before the ulty, it was not welcomed ith open arms. Everything as kept at a quiet level; no orquarrels or disputes came Despite this level of lerance, some of the faculty tembers either chose to or were

"I gather that I've been aracterized by certain adminrators as a bully and a thug because they had helped coach cause I had the temerity to te a faculty interest about

Volunteer Firefighters were on the scene this Tuesday, March 28. They were once again responding to a Stenger propane tank alarm. Volunteer Fire Chief, Bruce Niel, refused to comment pending further investigation into the events of the evening. Three of the four pictured above are Washingon College

New members join premed committee

Liberal Arts students may tion had carried out the enactnot be as inclined to discount the possibility of medical school today as they may have been in The major issue that the past. A March 14 article in the Washington Post described the reforms in medical school "people who had the right to be exams, which will qualify students to medical school who not only have a strong science background, but also those students who are able to express in writ-

> Dr. Kathleen Verville attributes changes to medical school's desire to broaden the pool of students who are acdents at Washington College. cepted, moving away from the narrowly focused. Washington College's Premedical Committee, in its second fully operating year, has added two new members, in the interest of expanding its own program.

Dr. Virginia Collier, M.D. and Dr. Theodore Kurze, M.D. have joined Chairperson, Dr. Kathleen Verville, Dr. David Newell, Dr. Frank Creegan, Dr. Juan Lin, Dr. Marcia Pelchat. and Dr. Linda Cades in the effort to aid perspective medical students as they endeavor to enter medical school.

The Committee was established in order to advise premedical students as well as assist them with the application process and admission tests. A composite letter of recommendation is written for those students who meet the requirements of the program. This letter includes the recommendations of other faculty as well as the recommendation of

Dr. Collier holds a small Chestertown practice and is involved with the Christiana Hospital in Christiana, Delaware. Dr. Kurze, a 1943 graduate of Washington College, has just retired and, according to Verville, is very enthusiastic about returning to his alma mater as a member of the com-the committee itself. There are currently two premedical stu-

A subcommittee consist-

continued on page 5

Wheelan cites financial progress

by Ed Schroeder David Wheelan, Vice President for Development and College Relations, outlined the various efforts of the Washington College Development Offices. Their money raising tactics are quite successful and often go unnoticed.

The Development Office is responsible for earning money to meet the College's various financial needs. All funds raised contribute to paying salaries, the cost of maintenance, the Master Plan, and some campus

Money is raised through two systems: an annual policy and a capital one. Annual efforts usually concentrate on parents and alumni; they are, for example, asked to contribute through mail or phone-athons. There is also a community program which solicits service from local businesses. Capital gains are usually received from big corporations or from private donors

Some recent donations have been from Betty Casey (The Academic Resources Center most recently) and Constance Stuart Larrabee (The Fine Arts Center); each was graciously accepted.

The Development Office has only eight million dollars left to raise before they reach the forty one million dollar mark they set for themselves. They project this will happen within the next two years. This money will finish paying off the Master Plan, the College's eighteen million dollar endowment, and will begin to fund some of the newer planned developments.

"That's not to say that the Master Plan will be finished in two years," Wheelan added. "It's to say that the money will be raised for it. And once we have the money raised we can concentrate on the College's endowment."

This endowment pays

continued on page 5

INSIDE:

| letters to | the editor | p 2         |
|------------|------------|-------------|
|            |            |             |
| SGA elect  | ion news   | mile and an | students to study abroad......p 7

lacrosse update.....p 8

EDITORIAL

Elections bring change in the USSR

Last Sunday, Soviet citizens experienced the most free elections in the history of the Soviet Union. Even though election officials don't expect a full list of deputies to be pub lished until April 5 (not including races where runoffs or new elections are required), it appears that many of the Communist party's choices and leaders have been defeated.

The election took place in order to choose 2,250 members for the Congress of Deputies. The Congress of the Deputies will, in turn, elect 542 of its members to a standing legislature

Voters in many of the 1,500 districts were offered only a single candidate and many faced a choice between two candidates similarly unthreatening to the status quo. However, where challenges arose, the challengers comprised the majority of the winners. For example, Boris Yeltsin, a deposed Moscow party chief won against party supported Yevgeny A. Brakov in a landslide victory of eighty-nine percent of the vote.

Yuri F. Solovyev, regional Communist Party leader and nonvoting member of the Politburo, faced defeat-even though no one ran against him. Voters were given ballots and in structed to scratch out the candidate they did not supp Enough voters scratched out Solovyev's name to deny him the required majority, and a new election will be held for this seat The same humiliation happened to Valentin A. Zgursky, the mayor of Kiev, and several other high ranking officials. None of these officials will lose the job he already holds, but the defeat stands as a vote of no confidence by the public. Gorbachev warned that those rejected or heavily opposed by the public cannot count on keeping their party posts indefinitely.

The victors included most of the candidates who campaigned for greater autonomy in the Baltic Republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, including some candidates who favor secession. The Lithuanian movement, Sajudis, claimed victories for thirty-two of its forty-two seats, with eight others forced into runoff elections. In Moldavia, six radicals from the writers union were all elected. The new deputies include some who hold prominent official positions, but have made reputations as outspoken free thinkers. Others ran as outsiders and are more openly oriented toward Western policies. The results were not a rejection of the Communist Party, but a disavowal of Party members viewed as unenthusiastic about Gorbachev's program of economic and political reform.

This is evidence of the beginning of great change in the Soviet Union. Gorbachev has been attempting to institute perestroika (restructuring), with much difficulty. The election results seem to be helpful to his plan, since the independent candidates pledged their loyalty to Gorbachev, who will head the legislature.

Gorbachev says that for reform to succeed, there must be more democratization, allowing the Soviet people to play a larger role in running the country. The election shows that the people are willing to accept more responsibility than they have been allowed in the past. And perhaps, with the support of more free thinking deputies, Gorbachev can escape the compromise that has relegated his plans into ineffectiveness.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                         |
|-------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso     |
| News Editor                   | Tracey Connell          |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaur         |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne           |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk      |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson           |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar                |
| Managers                      |                         |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma             |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William      |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobcza            |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Gos             |
| Office ManagerJuli            | e Greene and Cathy Leas |

Erin Hodge-Williams

WELL SGA OFFICER ELECTIONS ARE COMING UP ... AND I KNOW WHAT YOU'RE THINKING: "NOT ANOTHER DUMB ELECTION

IT'S TIME TO CHOOSE RE-SPONSIBLE NEW LEADERS TO GRAB THE REINS OF POW-ER AND LEAD THE SGA INTO A BRAVE NEW WORLD TO BOLDLY GO WHERE NO MAN HAS GONE BEFORE. TO BUILD UP THE TREASURY ALLELUIA AMEN

Visit from 98

Rock Bob Rivers and Sean

Donohue of 98-ROCK in Baltimore will be on campus Tuesday, April 4, from noon until 4 p.m. At 3 p.m. in the Norman James Theatre Bob Rivers will meet with the college community to talk about Washington College! Come meet radio stars! Be interviewed for radio! Free T-shirts, cassettes and many gifts from 98-ROCK.

Petition for Women's rights

The Washington College Young Democrats are sponsoring a trip to Washington D.C. on April 9 to join The March for Women's Equality/Women's Lives. The March is being held to support pro-choice and the Equal Rights Amendment.

The Young Democrats are also holding a petition drive for those who believe that every woman has the "right to make her own decision about abortion

If you wish to sign the petition supporting your belief in this please contact Wendy Kloiber at ext. 291. If you wish to join the March, a fee of $3 is required. Please sign up in Student Affairs. Information for the petition and March were provided by the National Abortion Rights Action League

continued from page 7 year abroad."

Jacqueline Collins, an English and Drama major, is looking forward to getting involved in the Drama society at Oxford. "I'll be right around the corner from London's West End, as well as the World Shakespeare Company. have the opportunity of seeing many unusual productions." she says. "I plan to combine my study of English and Drama, I will be taking courses in Shakespeare, Medeival Jacobinian Drama, and maybe Gothic Literature. I'm looking forward to studying under the tutorial

continued from page 3 should be developed and implemented in schools at a very early age. It is often the case that in drug education, the elementary school student knows more about drugs that the teacher trying to educate him/her City officials should be granted wider authority under city building codes to condemn, destroy, and rebuild run down commonly associated with drug trafficking. Only after the inner city is revital ized will businesses return, providing more opportunity for employment and a more stable home life.

Finally, society is concerned with the great influence that television, movies, and music has over the youth in the United States. This influence should be harnessed and used to society's advantage. Not only should a drug education program be launched via the entertainment world, but glamorization of drugs by Hollywood and the entertainment industry should be discouraged and ridiculed by the government and the public.

The drug problem will only be solved when government realizes that even more than a legal problem, drugs are a social problem. Their sales are result many times of a lack other opportunities for any nancial success. Any one, matter how against drug use would give serious consider tion to trafficking drugs for $5000 a week when their on alternative is a $120 week salary at Burger King®. Dru use is also many times the sult of unstable home life, problem also reflecting a dimin ishing opportunity for poore groups in society. William Bennetthas bee charged with one of the m difficult tasks which one co conceive. He will be walking fine line between the need prevent a breakdown of a society and the need to pr of freedom and liberty. He w surely incur great battle sta from wars with the Nation Rifle Association, The Ame can Civil Liberties Union, and state officials, and nun ous other interest groups both sides of this fight. most important thing for d zens to do is make sure th this issue remains as a prio on the agenda of every level government, lest it slip out sight and any hope to save nation's cities and drug rid rural areas would be lost.

system, which is the old English method of education. In it, the student studies one subject intensely, and writes an essay once a week on the readings. You meet with your professor and discuss what you have studied. This is a refreshing break from the four class system. It allows you to center your studies."she says. Collins was also accepted at the University of Kent at Canterbury, but felt as though Manchester College had more to offer, especially in the area of teaching methods.

Collins senses that her year abroad will add another dimension to her educat "After a while things bed redundant and one needs an perspective on life. One of most exciting and unique w to experience this is a ) abroad. I hope to gain a kni edge that isn't available thro books. Things have bee vicarious for me and I nee change from this static atm phere. I need to be pushed in new situations. For those interested planning a year abroad for 1990-91 academic year, in mation is available in the reer Development Office as as through Dean Sansing.

ISSUE:

What course of action should William Bennett take in order to be effective as "drug czar"?

Start moving with the tide instead of against it generation runs this country, the William Bennetts will have failed to solve the drug "prob-

m" in this country. urminology "drug problem" is fast on its way to being more curately described as a "drug Tens of millions of Americans use drugs, and ere's little doubt that those umbers will continue to climb teadily, despite overnment's futile dollars abilitation My point is this: the they choose to lead. number of drug users is increas-

Certainly by the time our ing, and once they're in the I'm supposed to answer: what majority, it's going to be mor-ally acceptable to use drugs. It's a hard notion to swallow, but it's inevitable. I know more First of all, I think the people who use drugs than don't, and there are a few who are pathetic. Then again, there are many who seem to have their lives in order, and they're just as alcohol is. Fine people happy. Do you think they're going to give up drugs when they graduate? When they marry? When they have children? Perhaps. But for many, med at enforcement and re- drugs will make a smooth transition into whatever lifestyle person should Bill do? This is a tired answer to a tired question, but drugs should be legalized. Eventually, they will be anyway. So why not start now, tax 'em, deplete the national debt a Drugs can be regulated, for buying drugs if they're underage. Fine them for driving under the influence. Punish them for endangering the health of another person. Punish them for killing another

I have a problem with the

Susan Di Leo

drugs and alcohol, given the fact that their detrimental effects are so closely related. Why is it morally and legally reprehensible for me to smoke a joint, and yet legal for me to guzzle a bottle of Jose Cuervo tequila if I so choose? We are all responsible for our own fate, which includes abusing our minds and bodies if we see fit.

So back to the question disparity which exists between nickel bag next to the aspirin in Elm True, the idea of seeing a

 Rite Aid makes me squirm, but we have to deal with reality. The Bush Administration is continuing with the same "just say no" ideology that should have been sent to Fairy Tale Land with Reagan, since that's the only place where it has a chance. Just face it, Bill: people are not going to stop using drugs, and it's time to start moving with the tide instead of against it.

Susan Di Leo is a sophomore majoring in English, she is a former news editor of The

Arian D. Ravanbakhsh Annapolis, MD Senior

Logically, he is going to e to address the demand ide of the problem. However, I e no answer as to exactly that policies need to be imple-

Kris Wallenburg Haddonfield, NJ Sophomore

Respectively, he should drugs in this country, then he should educate this country ment for the users. about the dangers involved in drug use and abuse.

Glen Warner Binghamton, N.Y. Freshman

I think there should be a try to prevent the trafficking of stiffer penalty for the pushers and create some sort of punish-

Pixie Walbert Queenstown, MD Junior

I feel there should be stricter control of drug traffick- give into stronger sentences to ing and harsher penalties im- the offenders yet the execution posed on those who have com- is where we face confrontation. mitted an offense in either us. ing or distributing illegal sub-

Helen MacMahon Middleburg, VA Senior

The obvious solution is to

by Thomas Cunhing

Make sure this issue remains a priority on the agenda of every level of government

William Bennett, followg his appointment by Presi-Bush as ministration's "Drug Czar", san almost impossible task. has been charged with the skofnot only defining a newly med office with specific dusand responsibilities, but he 30 has been charged with the sk that many feel will never reached by our current poland actions

Provided that decriminalion of drugs will never be thieved, there are several tions that could be impleinted first on Bennett's "test Washington D.C., and an should be applied to all an and suburban areas of United States to curb and hally abolish illegal drug traf-

Tony Caliguiri

There are a few things that Bennett should not do. First, the United States cannot send armed military strike forces down into Latin America expecting to burn all the drug producing shacks and fields as an end to the supply problem. For many of these nations, drug trafficking provides one of the only forms of stable and significant income to poor citizens. The United States should take the resources it uses to destroy and use them to rebuild foreign economies in order to discourage drug trafficking as a viable alternative

Second, on an issue closer on the trafficker, while stronger release to home, D.C. officials should not impose a curfew for minors in the city of Washington. To banish all minors to house arrest every night is a punishment without a crime. In addition, it would turn an already overworked police force into a bunch of babysitters, taking time away from the city's protection to make sure that seventeen-year-old kids are in bed

There are several policies which could be implemented by the federal government which vary in cost and difficulty, but all are feasible within reason.

First, there should be stronger efforts to curb drug use and purchasing. Presently, most police efforts are focused drug trafficking following their penalties against purchase, possession, and use should be implemented. The same methods of undercover work, except using undercover traffickers instead of buyers, would surely be effective.

Second, the government made these policies against drug trafficking, and they should be expected to enforce these laws. This is only possible with a dramatic increase in prison space, especially in the Northeast United States. These prisons should serve two functions. Not only should they serve to incarcerate prisoners. but they should be an institution which will prepare inmates for a life beyond a return to School officials should be given more authority in the high schools to crack down on sales and use in the school. If it takes uniforms, outlawing beepers. and fencing in school grounds, then it should be done. Expulsion is never the answer hecause it simply puts uneducated kids back on the streets. If students understand that total school treatment depends on the few dealing in drugs, then they will be more inclined to police themselves. Comprehensive drug education programs continued on page 2

Tony Caliguiri is a junior majoring in political science, and is a former news editor of

PERSPECTIVE

In the World

United States

Alaskan Governor Cowper has asked President Bush to declare Prince William Sound a disaster area. A 250,000 barrel oil spill resulted when an Exxon Corporation Tanker ran trial aground with the third mate at the helm. If President Bush declares the Sound a disaster area, it will bring in federal funds to assist in the cleanup The White House has said that it will proceed with plans for an agreement with Congress on non-lethal aid to the Contras. This comes after internal misgivings about the policy were made public on Friday.

Oliver North's bid to have former President Reagan appear as the first defense witness at his trial was rejected by federal judge Gerhard Gesell. Gesell did not rule out the possibility that North's defense could call the former President as a witness later on in the Soviet Union Elections in the Soviet Union this past week saw the defeat of many conservative communist officials. In Moscow, Boris Yeltsin, who had been kicked out of the Politburo last year and is considered a radical, won with 89% of the vote. Populist fronts in the Baltic States of Estonia, Latvia, and Lithuania won the majority of the republics' seats. In some cases top communist party officials, unofficially including the Latvian Prime Minister, were beaten by populist candidates. These populist movements avoided running candidates against communist officials Mikhail supporting Gorbachev's reforms. It is thought that these nationalists might cause problems for Mr. Gorbachev when he tries to reconcile ethnic differences Israel Israeli Prime Minister Shamir is expected to discuss his peace plan with officials in Washington next week. Among the proposals might be Arab elections in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. This might be a way to open peace talks with the Palestinians without involving the PLO.

Yugoslavia

A curfew was imposed in the province of Kosovo in southern Yugoslavia as rioting by ethnic Albanians continued for the fifth day. Two police officers and one demonstrator were killed as Albanians protested Serbia being giving greater control over the region. It is the worst violence seen in Yugoslavia in the past eight years.

Guatemala Seven people were killed when 250 inmates seized control of a prison farm twelve miles east of Guatemala City on Sunday. Authorities have said that security forces have surrounded the farm where the inmates are holding over 500 neonle hostage

Factional fighting contin ues around Beirut as Drus Moslem Militiamen, Syrian Troops, and the Christian Arms exchanged artillery fire. The fighting which began three weeks ago prompted an appea for a truce by an Arab League mediation committee.

Turkey

Despite his party's defeat in last Sunday's elections, Turk ish Premier Ozal has declare he will remain in office until the end of his term in 1992. M. Ozal had previously threatene to resign if the gains made b the opposition party in the elec tion made it difficult for him:

compiled by Laura Hopper

Snake expert saved by Iranian citizens and others

ward off potential prey

1948. The injections containing venom derived from the world, serve to build his bodies'

hite The Saw Scaled viner.

gist just embarking on the task of procuring a reptile collection will no doubt come across the more than once. Haast is a pioneer in the field, dealing primarily with highly venomous

Carter Boatner

snakes. Last month Haast, with the help of the White House, Iran's Razi Institute and an anonymous Iranian restaura-

ous snake bite

Although he has been bitten often by snakes which would weekly venom injections he has name of William (Bill) Haast drop the average man, Haast was recently bitten by one of the most deadly snakes in the world and one which is often referred to as a "Two-step" snake, because after a bite you only have two steps before dying. The snake was a Pakistan Saw Scaled viper, a deadly desert-dweller, so-named be-

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

however, contains a specific combination of venom which cause when confronted it rubs only the antivenin can ade-

The amateur herpetolo- teur survived his 148th venomits saw-like scales together to quately combat, and here is where the Iranian restaurateur Haast's secret is his comes in Before working with the administered to himself since viper Haast tried to procure some of the antivenin from the only place in the world where it various venomous species of the can be gotten: Iran. His two requests were both turned antibodies and in essence make down, and on the return envelope of one of the letters was a him immune to venomous snake stamp depicting the Iranian jetliner being shot down. Needless to say when he started showing deadly symptoms following the viper's bite, there was some concern for his life Here was a man who in 1976 received a presidential citation for aiding 21 snake-bite victims yet now seemed helpless against the viper bite. His generosity towards others in the same situ ations extends far and wide. He is the man responsible for the practice of extracting snake venom, pioneered the field and developed the market for the venom. He sells the venom to many laboratories for treating polio, arthritis, and multiple sclerosis.

His blood-clotting abilit had been destroyed as a resul of the viper bite, and he been to bleed profusely. He starte receding dangerously when a associate of his contacted hi son-in-law, an Iranian restau rateur, to contact the Razi In stitute in Hessarak, Iran. special aid to President Bush was contacted, and he ensured the White House's help in cut ting the red-tape involved transporting goods of that m ture. The restaurateur cal his brother in Tehran and hi brother told the institute the he needed the antivenin for Iranian doctor in West Ge many. He got the antiver and then, with the help of the White House, swiftly trats ported the antivenin to t United States. At the sa time some of the required and venin had already been p cured from the English Nation Poison Unit in London, Et land. Both shipments arriv to Haast four days after thebi which was timely enough save his life.

Please Stop By Soon

New Spring Fashions Have Arrived

All the latest styles in a wide range of colors and sizes to suit your needs

Bramble's Traditional Clothing

For Men and Women

Downtown Chestertown

778-6090

Wheelan projects goals

continued from page 1 salaries, maintenance costs and other specifics, while helping the College to maintain a bet-

"Once the endowment has been reached, inflation can be fought," Wheelan explains, meaning that we can maintain stuition that doesn't rise, one that is beneficial to the Washington College student." An-nual tuition increases have become an expectation of the students in recent years

Wheelan also addressed the issue of what the Development Office spends to maintain itself. "People seem to think that we have a life of luxury," David Wheelan commented, But in all actuality we (of the Development Office) only spend five cents for every dollar that we earn. That is far less than in other colleges."

embers of the Development Office are hard at work. This office is highly effective in appropriating funds for the college

SGA elections April 4

The elections for the Student Government Association Executive Council will be held next Tuesday, April 3. All petitions were to be due this Friday. Positions open are: SGA President, Vice President, Treasurer, Secretary, and So-

Some petitions have already been turned into Student Affairs. Running for President: Steven Attias, Kevin Langam, Matt Zuech. Running for Vice President: Tracey Coleman, Liam Kennedy, Stuart Neiman. Students competing for the

SCC Rules on recent case

by Tracey Connell

The Washington College Student Conduct Council (SCC) heard the defense of two students, Matt Kelly and John Macielag, as their cases were tried last Thursday, March 23. The students answered to charges which stemmed from a fight which took place on the night of Washington's Birthday

John Macielag pled "not responsible" to the SCC's charge of "endangering a member of the College community." The student introduced written osition of Treasurer are: Rob Grey, Jennifer Jefferson, Joe continued from page 1 Van Name. Running for Secretary: Brooks Durke, Kevin Kelly, Troy Petenbrink. Mary Beth Enright and Chris Warren are joint candidates for the office of Social Chairperson.

Any interested individuals should contact Student Affairs today. Speeches will be made on Monday, April 3.

testimony from witnesses, hoping that it would provide support. Apparently the Conduct Council found no evidence to support his defense. Macielag was fined $50 and was placed under a form of proba-

Matt Kelly also introduced testimony from witnesses to the event. Kelly left with only a warning

Both students are in the process of tying up proceedings involving the same allegations in the local court system.

premed

ing of Verville, Newell, Cades, and Kurze is hoping to look into and initiate an internship program with the Kent and Queene Anne's County Hospital this summer. It will not be for credit but would provide invaluable experience

Dr. Verville hopes that this program will be available by the upcoming fall semester

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST.

CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md. 21620 Janie Thompso 788:0898

OLDE TOWNE BARBERS

FRENCH BRAIDS * WAXING * PERMS

Facials & Waxing Paul Mitchell Products

Kenra

Super Fresh Parking Lot

Mon-Sat

778-4771

Invest a little time in your future. Come by the campus computer store and see how an EMAC peripheral will give your Macintosh® more zip and a lot more storage space.

Check your campus computer store for the complete line of EMAC hard disk drives, tape backups and modems, all designed to make your Macintosh more time-efficient. A small investment now could save you a lot of time.

EMAC DL Series

Powerful and reliable hard drives Available in 20MB, 40MB, 66MB and 80MB capacities.

April is EMAC Month at the WASHINGTON COLLEGE BOOKSTORE

(basement of Hodson Hall) Mon-Fri: 8:30-4:30 Sat:10-1:00

Test drive an EMAC 20MB Hard Disk and take home a free t-shirt.

Mayor Marion Barry adds to Washington D.C.'s problems with drugs and corruption

by Carter Boatner

Adding to the controversy over Washington D.C.'s drug problem and escalating murder rate is longtime mayor, Marion Barry

Often thrust into the spotlight by the media for suspected drug use himself, Barry has been fighting long and hard for credibility in regards to his role as mayor of the nation's capital. His reign as mayor has been sprinkled with allegations ranging from womanizing to drug use, and as the problem with rival street gangs heated up last year, resulting in a record number of deaths in the city, his role as mayor has been increasingly scrutinized

In times of crisis, leadership is the first to be scruti-In the case of nized. Washington's escalating drug wars this is also the case and Mayor Barry has provided Washingtonians much embar-

Barry entered office in 1978, a prominent figure in the Black leadership movement. He had been steadily groomed for the job over some years and one day pictures of him appeared in the Washington Post and other local papers such as the now-defunct Washington Star. He was depicted as a African Nationalist wearing native garb and a smile from ear to ear. At that time he did not seem threatening.

However, as time passed, he was photographed in threeniece suits and seen among prominent members of the city. One thing led to another, and in the election of 1978 the District had a new mayor by the name of Barry. His rise to prominence was more involved than that, yet for all practical purposes, the details have been omitted in today's news reports

What the media did not report was Barry's entire involvement on the city streets in the late seventies.

Several years ago I met some Vietnam veterans who upon returning from the service in the early seventies were employed by the District to work construction around the city's main arteries, namely 14th street, Washington's infamous "Red Light" district. I heard stories that when they were on the job site, they often saw Barry walking up and down 14th street with his enforcer, (a thug who lives up to his name if a creditor fails to make payment) peddling dope.

The veracity of these stories is questionable; but the number of people who relay the same stories is alarming.

Since taking office Barry has found himself in a shroud of controversy, much of which is Inn incident where they failed police were going to enter. A use Federal Grand jury has been appointed to investigate further into the matter of the Virgin Islands project, as well as the

Aside from the alleged misapropriations of funds for the Virgin Islands project and suspected drug use by the mayor and his associates, the District role of the police in the Ramada

In a closed meeting with his cabinet members in Janu ary, the Washington Post re ported that Barry told his staff that there was a 60% change ended 1988 with a $14.3 milthat he would seek reelection in

> He claims that with the barrage of negative reporting about him over the past severa months, the number of people opposed to him seeking reeles tion should be higher than what it is (approximately 67% as d February).

Watching Barry's political career evolve from a black activist to a city mayor has been eventful and often scandalous His antics and allegations about personal misconduct have been made known far and wide.

Two summers ago when was walking down Water street below Georgetown, a woman wanted to back her car out of precarious spot but was unsure if it was legal. There were several people around, some like her, from out of state.

When she wondered aloui the legality of her actions, I, in Business leaders are now a jestful manner replied, "Wh cares, Marion Barry runs th city". Much to my surprise, this was taken by all to be a gow joke and elicited a hearty re

Barry's ship is sinkingfas and there does not appear to be any hope left in his rapidly di minishing role of leadership.

To date his ex-wife has been sent to jail following funds-diversion scandal, (in volving an operation that Bam

Eleven of his aides have been sent to prison for corrup tion and he has failed to explai six visits to convicted dru dealer Lewis in a hotel, and h adamantly refuses to take drug monitored urine tests, although not long ago he claimed to have been taking such tests for the past five years

Many questions remainte be answered by Barry on Barry and it appears now that h long stint as mayor of th nation's capital will soon b

Looking for volunteer work? Contact the Career Development

Center, ext. 311

centered around suspected personal drug activity. stance in the early 1980's there were stories circulating that Barry frequented a now-defunct go-go called "The Butterfly".

When ever one traveled by the place it was common for years after to hear at least one person in the car point to "The Butterfly" and exclaim with enthusiasm, "Look, that's where the mayor did drugs". Barry's rise to power is questionable and while in office the honor of his personal life has also been questionable.

Perhaps the latest and most damaging controversy surrounding the mayor has been his involvement with Charles Lewis and the D.C. Personnel Study conducted in the Virgin Islands

In the probe which Lewis directed, there was an alleged misuse of District funds which is now being investigated. Lewis himself is one of many associates of Barry's who has been under police scrutiny.

In March, Lewis was ar rested for attempting to sell 85 for the past five years. rocks of crack to an undercover agent. In December, prior to Lewis' arrest, a maid at a Ramada Inn in downtown D.C. complained that Lewis had offered her drugs for sex. Police were called in to arrest Lewis. yet were later called away before the arrest actually oc It turns out that Barry was allegedly in the room the

to properly pursue Lewis after investigation into Lewis revealed that he is considered by many to be a drug user and Several persons testified that he either did drugs in their presence or supplied them drugs in the Virgin Islands. Lewis has been an associate of Barry entered office

At the beginning of the month, D.C. school board member Calvin Lockridge also ccused Barry of drug use. Lockridge said the mayor used drugs during the 1984 Democratic Convention. He backed his accusations stating that he had two people who were ready to come forward to testify against the mayor.

Allegations such as this have cropped up throughout Barry's tenure in office. Earlier this year he was requested to submit to random drug testing but refused. Then he came out and stated that he had in fact been submitting to drug tests

This was shocking news to everyone, even his personal physician who claimed not to know anything of it. Barry claims not to have used drugs, but in a 1984 meeting with prosecutors he admitted to them that he had experimented with drugs on several occasions. An attorney for Barry said that he would not testify in front of a lion budget deficit aking out about the image of the District as being run by corrupt and incompetent government. The audit of the city's financial status revealed that the District failed to cut their accumulated deficit by $20 For years Barry boasted of the District's budget Barry's allegedly since before office giving sound financial performances, but now that no longer seems to be

A poll conducted by a local television station in the District reported that two-thirds of the voting-age residents of the District do not want Barry back in office. His third term will end in 1990. Barry dismissed the poll results saying that it in no way diminished his leadership of the city However, the poll shows that the Ramada Inn incident. the Virgin Islands project, and the grand-jury investigation have had a debilitating effect on the mayor's image. He has failed to this day to defend visiting Lewis in the hotel and has even gone so far as to blame the police for the entire incident. He continues to defend himself and the job that his administration has done for the Dis-

Although he can not be held entirely responsible for the escalating death toll, (120 as of the beginning of the week) his actions over the past several months have not been what was grand jury in regards to drug expected of a man in his posi-

Professor Norman James remembered as "the artistic center" of Washington College

by David Snyder

Teaching has been described by some as a transitory profession. Students advance through the ranks and graduate, teachers move on to other schools and other professions, and there is no lasting or permanent reminder of the work that has been done. Occasionally, though, a teacher comes along that disproves that philosophy, and makes a difference in an institution that has a very profound and lasting in-

In 1952, Norman James came to Washington College as an English Professor, and over the course of the next 26 years taught everything from art history to drama. "He was a very tall man," remembers Dr. Nancy Tatum, Chair of the English Department, who shared an office with Professor James for ten years, "with a kind of big personality, a person who loved every form of art. You don't know a big personality like that without being influenced by him." Dr. Tatum describes Professor James as an avid music lover and opera lover," and remembers his most outstanding characteristic as being his "good sense of hu-

Though his first love was literature, Professor James taught a wide variety of courses over the years. Remembers Dr. Tatum, "He taught art history here at the college before we even had an art history department. He also taught drama. English professor Richard

Gillin first met Professor James in 1973 when he moved to Chestertown to begin teaching at the college. "He was ex- lions?"." tremely kind to my wife and I when we first came here. Though, at the time, he was raising four children of his own, he literally opened up his house and let us live there until we got situated." Dr. Gillin described Professor James as "...the artistic center of the college. He was almost a one man show. He was very serious about literature, and he was absolutely dedicated to teaching." Though Dr. Gillin admits they didn't always get along, he says Professor James "had the ability to make everyone laugh and reduce things to their proper perspective. He had a good sense of putting things into perspective. He was a very interesting man to work with, very lively and animated. He was very theatrical when he taught, and sometimes students simply didn't understand him, but they appreciated his humor." As a young teacher at WC, Dr. Gillin remembers, "he had a maturity that I didn't Outside of the classsroom. Dr. Gillin says, "he had an abiding love for beauty in all forms, especially in nature." He remembers with a smile one Spring day sitting in Professor James' office on the second floor of Bill Smith, window open, talking to Professor James. "In the middle of the conversation, he got up and walked to the window. Looking out over the field, he began yelling 'mur-derer, murderer!' quite to the astonishment of the man who was cutting the grass, who looked up and asked 'What's wrong? Norman replied, 'Stop! You're murdering those dande-

Dr. Gillin remembers another incident that involved aginko tree on the lawn in front of Bill Smith. Every Fall, says Dr. Gillin, the leaves would all change to brilliant colors at exactly the same time and then they would all fall off within a day of two of each other. One Fall day, he remembers Profesor James running across campus yelling. While many thought a major disaster was taking place, Professor James was yelling at the groundskeeper...who was raking the brightly colored leaves from beneath the tree.

When Professor James wasn't working, says Dr. Gillin, "he was a real presence in the town as well. He was very active in the Episcopal church downtown, and," he adds with a smile, "as a story teller in the Professor James died suddenly of a heart attack in the Spring of 1978 while playing a game of tennis here at the college. Dr. Gillin remembers, "There was a universal sense of shock and grief in town as well as on campus, a genuine sense of loss. The day he died was a very sad and profound day.

Says Dr. Tatum, "I suppose the accomplishment Norman would be most proud of would be the number of students he introduced to his teaching, his love of literature and

Dr. Gillin remembers a particularly touching gesture on the part of Professsor James in the years before his death. "When my first child was born, he called and read a poem to me by his favorite author, Yeats, a

The late English professor Norman James, for whom the Willia Smith theatre is named, was remembered by Dr. Nancy Tatum as, "a very tall man with a big personality who loved every form of art.

One line in the poem reads, "My mind, because the minds that I have loved, the James will never be torn from sort of beauty that I have approved, prosper but little, has him. dried up of late, yet knows that poem called "A Prayer for my to be choked with hate may well Daughter." It really helped be of all evil chances chief. If identify a lot of what I was feel- there's no hatred in a mind ing at the time. I've never for- assault and battery of the wind can never tear the linnet from

> And Professor Norman the minds of those who knew

Students anticipate new opportunities in England

by Amy R. Caddle

Several Washington College students will have the unique opportunity to study abroad next year at Manchester College in England. Roy Kesey, a transfer student from Georgetown University, is anticipating a productive year at Manchester College. "I'm a double major in Philosophy and English. The Oxford community offers some of the most profound minds of our time. I want to be able to take advantage of that" he says. "I have always wanted to go to Europe, and this is the perfect opportunity to to get a feeling for the culture and experience the educational diversity that the Oxford community has to offer. You can't get a better Liberal Arts educa-riences in England will give me plenty of ideas for my writing," Kesey says. "An experience abroad is necessary to considering oneself a fully educated person. We as Americans are too ethnocentric. We don't think in global terms. We are getting deeper and deeper into the cult of comfort. We are unwilling to experience things, be they good, bad or indifferent, if it means giving up our comforts. That is a big mistake. I want to break that mold." Kesey plans to spend time in between trimesters traveling throughout Europe and Asia as well. Mike Winkleman plans to use his year abroad as a time to think about the direction of his education and his future. "It is tion than at Oxford. I am a an excellent opportunity to get writer, and I am sure my expe- away for a year and think about ety is the chance of a lifetime. I don't think the student can what I want to do in the future,' he says. "I'm looking forward to getting involved in the Oxford Student Union and Student Government. I think this will be an invaluable experience, since I am a Political Science major. I hope to study the British Parliament and return to Washington College and write my thesis on British Parliamentary Government." he adds. Winkleman is amazed that more students don't take advantage of the study abroad programs offered. "Student apathy contributes to the lack of interest. It does take a lot of willpower to go through the entire selection process, though." he says. "I hope to ain a broader social sense.

Being a part of the Oxford soci-

also plan to travel all over The process of selection for the Study Abroad program don't want to." at Manchester College entails a formal application, an essay written by the student applying, three letters of reccomendation, and a meeting with several department heads to dicuss the student's aspirations and reasons for wanting to

Rob Thompson does not think that the application process is an especially difficult one, but he does think that the administration is careful in whom they select to study abroad. Each year there are six openings for Washington College students. The administration will turn people down if they handle the responsiblities that are involved. They don't have to fill those six spaces if they Thompson views this opportunity mainly as a chance to travel. "I want to see all of Europe as well as Scandanavia. I'd also like to get behind the Iron Curtain." "I appreciate the education Oxford has to offer. I am an English major, and I plan to study Romanticism and the History of the Industrial Revolution." When asked what he hopes to gain as a result of his year abroad, Thompson answers "Something I can't explain right now, although I'm confident it will change my perspective on life. I know I'll feel different after a

continued on page two

Women's lacrosse team matures with wins

by Greg Cuss

After a shaky start, the loss. Washington College's women's lacrosse team appears to be gaining strength and maturing as a team. The past week's results show this, as Washington has rebounded from a tough opening day loss to Johns Hopkins by winning two of their last three games, the loss at the hands of Franklin & Marshall, a heartbreaking 8-7 overtime

In their opener, Washington played the undefeated Johns Hopkins club very evenly in the first half. Goals by the team's three hottest pl ers, Kristy Hilgartner, Jennie Blenkstone, and the high scoring Sarah Coste left Washing ton only 5-3 down at half. But Alice Collins, Kathy Hart, and Patty Legator combined for 7 second half goals for the Blue Javs. Washington regrouped to hold Johns Hopkins scoreless the last 19 minutes of the good, yet unproven teams face: crosse

This confidence carried on into their next game against previously unbeaten Goucher Despite rainy and cold conditions Goucher could not slow down WC, which dominated both halves of the game, with a 47-16 shot advantage, largely in part to the great efforts of Blenkstone, (7 goals, 1 assist). Washington never trailed and was helped on defense by Erin O'Neal and Lee Anne Ledwin.

Two days later, Washington continued on its roll, crushing a Widener team. Blackstone had another big game and Sarah Coste came up big also, 4 and 5 goals respectively. After 13-1 halftime advantage, Washington began experiencing with new players in the second half and coasted to an easy 18-6 victory

Three days later, Washington experienced what most certain trends are developing.

Once again, the Big Ten game. The result was a 13-5 heartache in losing the close

After being drubbed by F&M 16-5 last year, the Washington College Sho'women stunned Franklin and Marshall by holding a 4-2 lead. Balanced scoring by Margaret Doyle, Blenkstone, Coste, and Hilgart ner helped the cause But F&M battled back in the second half and pulled out the game in overtime 8-7 on a Nancy Benzel goal at 4:14. However, after the disappointing loss, Washington realized they were playing very competitively with teams that were basically the same as last

This is a well-balanced. tightly knit group with some real talent and rematches against Johns Hopkins and F&M should show much different results. Washington will end very strong, and could be one year away from becoming a dominant force in women's la

In recent action against Whittier College, Tim Hormes, the teams leading scorer was caught in action leading an assault for the Sho'men

Men's lacrosse: continuing the roll

by Joe Van Name

The Washington College Men's Lacrosse teams record now stands at 5-2 after wins over the Rochester Institute of Technology and Clarkson

Last Saturday the the Sho'men faced RIT, a traditional power in Division III. In the game Washington used a strong second half to power away from RIT and go on to defeat them by the score of 19-11. RIT which is usually a very tough opponent was a good win away from the friendly confines of Kibler Field.

In the game Juniors Tim Hormes and Bob Martino came up big with seven and five goals respectively. Along with these two five other players contributed on the day which added with 12 saves by goalie Dave Slomkowski was all the Sho'men needed

On Wednesday the Sho'men again came away with a win, this time at home against Clarkson College, Clarkson, with its best team ever, put up a good fight before going down to defeat by the score of 15-10.

The Clarkson game was gain led in scoring by Tim Hormes who had six goals and one assist on the day. Nick Darcangelo added four and Bob Martino and Steve Kline each had two a piece. Dave Slomkowski again was there in goal recording 11 saves on the day.

Tomorrow, is the big game of the year. Hobart the top team in Division III and visits Chestertown to play Washington. The game starts at 1:30 pm and all are encouraged to ome out and support the Sho'men as they defeat Hobart. Admission to the game is free to all student; show your support by attending.

STRAIGHTENING OUT THE MARCH MADNESS

March is one of the busiest times of the year for sports and 1989 has been no excep tion. Spring is and always will be baseball season, and this year's spring training has offered its share of unusual hap-

Brett Lankford

penings. Pete Rose is already in deep trouble, Dave Winfield is out for at least half the sea son and the New York Mets have reinforced the fact that they are not one big, happy family. Still, one sport seems to be taking over the national pastime in terms of its prominence in the month of March. This is NCAA Tournament time, now also known as "March

This season's tourney has displayed its typical amount of. upsets, cinderella stories and overpowering performances. Many office pools have been wrecked by teams such as Siena, Minnesota and Virginia. My personal picks were Arizona in the West, Illinois in the Midwest, Duke in the Southeast and North Carolina in the East. Instead, Seton Hall won out West and is the Big East representative in the Final Four Michigan ran past Carolina as well as every other team in their amazing run to Seattle. Now with a Final Four of Michigan, Illinois, Duke and Seton Hall, showed their strength in the regular season, as teams such as Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Michigan were routinely situated in the top ten. Still, many basketball experts predicted their traditional fold when it came time for the tournament. This year, however, the Big Ten proved their doubters wrong. Though they received one less bid than the ACC(six to five), two of the Final Four teams come from the Big Ten. Along this road of success, the Big Ten was more than able to hold their own against the other two big conferences. Michigan defeated an ACC opponent to make it to the Final Four, while Illinois is going to Seattle as a result of a rictory over Big East foe Syracuse. As a result of this tournament performance, this year's Big Ten Conference can be considered the best conference in both the regular season and the post season

Michigan is receiving the sentimental backing in the tournament this year. Two days before the start of the tournament, then-Michigan coach Bill Frieder announced he was leaving the Wolverines for the vacant Arizona State coaching job Athletic director Bo Schembechler responding by relieving Frie der of his duties and inserting former assistant Steve Fisher at the helm. The Michigan team new coach and make Bill Frieder's amazingly classless move seem unimportant. Behind the coaching of Fisher and the deadeye shooting of future NBA lottery pick Glen Rice and others, Michigan has displayed impressive composure in its travel to Seattle and the Final Four. It would only be appropriate for Michigan to win the championship, then laugh while Arizona State flounders around the bottom of the Pac Ten for the next few seasons Now what you've all been waiting for - my pick to win the national championship. Illinois has been able to respond to the and Duke were my original picks to not only make it to the Final Four, but to meet each other in the championship game. I see no reason to change either of these picks. Seton Hall will have difficulty with the talent of Danny Ferry and the defense of the Duke Blue Devils. Though I would love to see Michigan win the national championship and humiliate Bill Frieder, they are due for a letdown of some sorts. Illinois is too consistent and too deep for the Wolverines, so the Fight ing Illini and the Blue Devils should meet in the final. Who will win, you may ask? Expect to see tournament MVP Danny Ferry leading the Duke Blue Devils to the national championship and the bragging rights in the state of North Carolina.

Phone: 1-801-820-7437

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor Office: Kent Street S Chestertown, MD. 21620 (301) 778-3160 of Sacred Heart Church Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pr Iglous Education Cool Sr. Constance Davis, O unlikely group of characters, from left to right, Chris Brandt, Tom Auvil and Andy Bauer, found a healthy alternative to the excesses of Spring Break in Florida by participating in the Right Gaurd Sport Stick 3 on 3 Basketball Challenge in Daytona Beach, Florida

THE LOWDOWN ON LINIMENTS

DEAR DR. JOCK: I work the muscle aches and pains they categories of topical analgesics: out four to five times a week. feel. Indeed, according to a counterirritants and trolamine Sometimes my muscles get sore. I'm interested in trying one of the analgesic products I see of these analgesics hit $133 advertised to take away the aches and pains of exercise. What can you tell me about that 58.5 million adults use them? - S.K. San Fransisco, Calif

Dr. Jock

DEAR READERS: The fitness field is crowded with competitors for your dollars and the people who produce topical analgesics are no exception. All athletes, professional or recreational, have heard of them. But what are they? How do they work? Should you use them? Here's some information to help you decide:

MANY PRODUCTS MANY USERS. Topical analgesics come in a variety of forms. There are liniments, sports creams and balms. Many people try them, looking for relief from recent issue of The Physician and Sportsmedicine, the sales million in 1988 in the United States alone. Their estimate is these products. Athletes use them but so do many, many other people who suffer from backache, arthritic pain and sore muscles from whatever

ARETHEY EFFECTIVE? There is no simple answer to this question. Most sports medicine professionals seriously question their effective-And few professional athletes use them regularly. If they do use them, they generally do it on their own, not on the advice of their athletic trainers or physicians. Why is their effectiveness questioned? Read

ALWAYS READ THE LABELS. There are two basic salicylate creams. The most popular counterirritants contain a combination of menthol and methyl salicylate. Others may contain eamphor, capsicum derived from cayenne pepper, methyl nicotinate, or turpentine oil. These are sold over the counter and classified as category 1 drugs by the FDA. This classification suggests that they are both safe and effective. Trolamine salicylate creams and eucalyptus oil are classified as category 3 drugs (safe but questionably effective) by the FDA

COUNTERIRRITANTS. These are the classic liniments that have a strong smell and provide either warmth or cool-

THE WASHINGTON COLLEGE ELM ness to your skin. When you the skin and causes redness by dilating blood vessels. It's assumed that this can stimulate pain receptors or heat or cold receptors. Just how this reduces pain is still up for debate. Some of the pain relief may come just from the act of rubbing the skin. Certainly, selfmassaging a sore muscle makes it feel better. The question is: why spend your money on a cream if it's the rubbing that's beneficial?

TROLAMINE SALICYL-ATE CREAM. These analgesic reams have no tell-tale odor. They cause no sensation of heat or warmth. So how do they work? Their action is by ab sorption of salicylcate through the skin. Studies have shown that does happen, but you should also know that taking salicylate (aspirin) by mouth gives a much higher concentration in the body. So why not just take aspirin? TOO FEW STUDIES

There have been few well-controlled scientific studies to test the effectiveness of analgesic creams. Most of the studies have depended on subjective assessment of a feeling of wellbeing after their use. In these studies, patients with arthritis seem to feel less pain. Obviously, people wouldn't buy these products if they weren't feeling ome positive result, but there's a big difference between firstperson testimonial and objective scientific study. The problem with using useless creams is two-fold: you waste your money and, as with any drug, you risk a negative effect

SAFETY IS A FACTOR. While these topical analgesics are deemed "safe" by the FDA, they are not without danger. Some users of topical creams wind up with blistering of the skin, burns and contact dermititis after use. This is particularly true if their use is combined with heating pads or tight

Friday, March 31, 1989 bandaging. Light skinned rubit into your skin, it inflames people are particularly prone to allergic skin reactions BOTTOMLINE? NEVER MIND. DR. JOCK has concluded that analgesics are probably not worth the cost. You may as well save your money and do something that really will help you...warm up thoroughly before you play and apply ice after activity if you have problems with muscle soreness. To minimize the chance of muscle strain and soreness, do your stretching exercises daily

REMEMBER: You can prevent many of the aches and pains of exercise by warming up and cooling down your muscles before and after you workout. Topical analgesics should NOT by used as a substitute for proper stretching.

WC sailing news

by Colleen Moran & Alison Wallop

The sailing team at Washington College has recently been accepted into the Mid Atlantic Inter-collegiate Sailing Association. In the past the team was only allowed to participate in a few regattas before being added to the MAISA as a full status member. In the fall season the team finished 11th out of 19 at the Freshman Dinghy Seminar and 7th out of 9 at the Area C Eliminations

Every Wednesday they practice with the Navy team. competing against many other area schools. This semester the team plans to host several regattas along with attending four other area regattas

Members include the 420 teams of: Colleen Moran/Alison Wallop, Paul Schunke/Beth Karukas, John Macielag/Bill Seward: and Matt Zeuch. Dan Helgerman, and Don Diefendorf skippering lasers

778-6940 High Street, Chestertown

Chestertown's Bicycle Shop Have Your Bicycle Ready For Spring!

Spring Tune-up....$25

We now carry Specialized bicycles Hard Rock ..... $299 Rock Hopper....$489 Bicycle Shorts Also on Sale - $22 per pair

Offer Good till May 15

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available

Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Original sin repeated in The Appletree

by Andrea Kehoe Washington College will become a place of sin - original sin, that is - on Thursday when The Appletree begins. Junior Peter Johnson will direct this independent production of the musical adapted from Mark Twain's short story, The Diary of Adam and Eve. cast began rehearsing the music with the text this week. Senior Ken Winkler plays Adam to junior Felicia Shakman's Eve, and sophomore Rob Thompson has the part of the Snake and "the voice." Freshman Stephanie Hess is the stage manager, with Ryder Daniels, a junior, as the lighting designer. Johnson designed the set. Junior Geoff Girard, who orchestrated the show, serves as musical direc tor. He will play the keyboards in the band, with freshman Sally McGee on cello, sopho-

The music adds an extra dimension to the typical eleprops, Johnson pointed out. "It's just another form of communication between the play and the audience," he said. "The show makes connections between the music and the play. If it's a good musical, the music reflects the play and has something to say in and of itself." Johnson said he takes more Renee King on flute, and sophomore Leah Peterson on the clarinet.

"I guess maybe I have a special in his rocking chair on the ver-liking for the musical," he said "I just like the music. They're entertaining.

On the advice of drama professor Jason Rubin, Johnson decided to produce a musical on his own this year to prepare to direct a show of that type for his senior project next year. Rubin recommended that he read The "Things have been going Appletree, a collaboration by really well," said Johnson. The Jerry Bock (music) and Sheldon Harnick (lyrics). The book combines three separate acts into one musical. In addition to The Diary of Adam and Eve. the act Johnson decided to produce, the show includes adap tations of Frank Stockton's The Lady and the Tiger and Jules Feiffer's Passionella. First run on Broadway in October 1966, the original cast included actor Alan Alda as Adam "I love the text," said miere performance at Washing ton College as the Dreamer in Camino Real last semester. "It's funny, poignant, musical, vonderful and exciting." Shakman echoed his enthusiasm for the script. "I think it's ments of text, costumes and areally cute musical," she said. It's nothing heavy. It's just a ment Inspector. She also played light comedy," A drama major, the lead in last semester's per- April 6 and Friday, April 7. The can be made by calling ext. 269.

Winkler, who made his pre-

The cast of The Appletree rehearses for next week's opening on Thursday night. The show, which also runs at eight on Friday night, is directed by Junior Peter Johnson as a preparation for his senior project.

number of productions, Appletree

Shakman has appeared in a formance of Anne Frank. The performance begins at 8:00 each including The Eumenides, Thompson's theatrical debut at the basement of Tawes Thea-Camino Real, and The Govern Washington College. noisystat terrou Admission is free, but will mark evening in the studio theater in The show runs Thursday, seating is limited. Reservations

McLinn recreates Twain at Talbot H.S.

"A master as the master would imitate himself."

by Kate Absher particular pleasure in the walrus mustache, willow tree musical form, but does not hair, and Colonel Sander's suit preferitovernon-musical plays. and tie swayed back and forth

American Literature, according to Ernest Hemingway who wrote. "All modern American literature comes from one book by Mark Twain called Huckleberry Finn. It's the best book we've had...There was nothing before. There has been nothing so good since." His image and writings have ingrained themcalves into American society: the red-haired, freckled-nosed boy with a straw hat and overalls white-washing a fence is a brick in the foundation of United States culture.

But before Mark Twain lionized himself, the steamboat, and orphaned boys, he first earned his fame through lecturing. Twain's lectures were sarcastically humorous. He obtained this effect by using the dead pan style of Western humor where the speaker pretends not to grasp the ludicrous meaning of his own words. Throughout the lecture halls of the expanding West he was known as "The Wild Humorist of the Pacific Slope."

Mark Twain with his the Mississippi River. This Mark Twain" is presented in personage was the father of the Talbot County auditorium on Friday, March 31, at 8 p.m. Bill McLinn, described by television's Bill Moyers as "A master as the master would imitate himself," will appear as Twain, a role which he has perfected over the past ten years in more than 1,000 performances in this country and abroad. The performance is a benefit with proceeds going to the restoration of historic Christ Church in St. Michaels.

> During the past ten years, McLinn has appeared on television networks, at the Twain sesquicentennial in Hannibal, Missouri, the Smithsonian Institution and the Library of Congress, in addition to touring the lecture circuit. On March 31, he will appear in black tailcoat and full Twain make-up against a background evocative of the times in which he wrote and lectured. Those who see Bill McLinn as Mark Twain must agree with one of Twain's most famous comments, "The rumors of my death are greatly exaggerated."

anda while the sun dived into nated when "An Evening with entertainment, which will include an opportunity for students and other members of the audience to question McLinn, still in Twain's character, on a variety of subjects, are $10 for adults, $5 for students, general admission. The $5 student price is available to registered college students as well as to all those aged 18 and under. Tickets may be purchased through Christ Church Parish House P.O. Box S, St. Michaels, MD 21663, as well as at these locations in St. Michaels, Easton and Oxford: The Blue Swan and St. Michaels Pottery Shop, Talbot St., St. Michaels; the Children's Shop, 11 N. Harrison St., and Fair Harbour Marine (Rte. 50), Easton; the Robert Morris Inn or the Oxford Mews Bike Boutique, Oxford For detailed ticket information, call 745-5992.

Reminder: Good luck to the lacrosse team against Hobart and don't forget the Heineken party afterward, sponsored by the SGA and the Tickets for the two-hour Thetas.

This wit will be reincar-

Award winning musician culminates 1988-89 Concert Series

by Stephanie Hess

The jazz sounds of the Billy Taylor Trio will bring the 1988-89 Washington College Concert Series to an end on Saturday April 1. The group features "Ambassador of Jazz, Billy Taylor. He is a jazz pianist, composer, arranger, conductor, lecturer and teacher. Taylor holds a doctorate in music and has written over 300 songs. His compositions include Suite for Jazz Piano and Orchestra, and I Wish I Knew How It Would Feel To Be Free. The latter became one of the theme songs of the civil rights movement. Taylor has written a has made over 30 recordings. He himself has referred to some of these recordings as "the best kept secrets in jazz."

An on-air correspondent for the CBS-TV program Sunday Morning, Taylor was awarded an Emmy by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences in 1983 for a segment on producer Quincy Jones. He also won a Peabody Award in 1982 for his 13 part series for national Public Radio on the history of jazz piano. A National Council of the Arts, jazz is classical music." He Taylor was named 1979 "Man explains, "I don't consider it of the Year" by the National Association of Jazz Educators.

Born in Greenville, N.C. Taylor began his music career at the age of seven in Washington, D.C. After graduating from Virginia State College, he went to New York and began playing piano with the Ben Webster Quartet. During the jazz bebob revolution of the forties and fifties he performed with music greats such as Billie Holiday, Dizzie Gillespie, Coleman Hawkins, Roy Eldridge and Charlie Parker. In the 60's, after traveling the world with his music, he became a popular dozen books on jazz piano, and disc-jockey on Harlem's WILB. He eventually became general manager of the station.

Since its conception in 1965, he has served as President and principle fundraiser of "Jazzmobile," a program that brings named artists and their spirit." music into the inner cities of several American towns. In 1969, Taylor became the first Black music director of a major television series, The David Frost Show

About his music and him-self, Taylor says, "I was the presidential appointee to the first to make the statement that

Black classical music, but American classical music. Black music has contributed much more to the culture of this country than many of us realize. All of the popular music had its origins in the same kind of musical experience that gave us the spirituals, the blues, and of course, jazz. The New York Times calls Taylor "A jazz Virtuoso." John Wilson, also with the Times, writes, "Taylor has that happiest of combinations: technique, taste and imagination. Few modern pianists play the instrument as engagingly as he does." Wilder Hobsen of the Saturday Review has similar thoughts, asserting that Taylor "is in the great jazz piano tradition ... [He] completely blends the modern jazz vocabulary with the traditional jazz

Taylor runs the gamut from solo piano recitals to performances with symphony orchestras. When he performs in the Concert Series, he will be joined by Bobby Thomas, percussionist, and Victor Gaskin. bassist. The program, made possible in part by a grant from the Kent County Arts Council, Billy Taylor will perform on April first at eight PM with his Trio.

will include five of Taylor's own tion by Dizzie Gillespie and by compositions, and a composi-

Clifton will read her poetry, presented by the Sophie

Clare Fischer.

It is an honor for the college's Concert Series to include a performance by this "extraordinary Jazz Musician." The concert will begin at 8:00 PM Saturday April 1, 1989 in Tawes Theater. It is suggested that those interested in attending call 301/778-2800 to hold tickets

Poet and fiction writer Lucille Clifton to read tonight Adrienne Rich. "It is made with King Award.

by Julie Greene This Friday in the Norman James Theatre Lucille Clifton, famed poet and fiction writer, will give a special reading of her poetry.

Clifton, a former poet laureate of Maryland, is probably best known to our generation by her Emmy winning children's book and television show, Free To Be You and Me. She has been nominated for the Pulitzer Prize in poetry and has published such major works of poetry and memoirs as Good Times, Good News About the Earth, An Ordinary Woman, and Two-Headed Woman Educated at the State

University of New York at sity, she has gone on to write State College, Goucher College, and the American University in Washington D.C. She has taught poetry and prose workture and Creative Writing at the University of California at Santa Cruz in California

Lucille Clifton's poetry is "artful and intense," states poet

Opens Daily shops as well as courses con-Mon-Sat cerning racism and sexism in 4:30 children's literature. Clifton is presently a Professor of Litera-

Campus Calendar

March 31-April 3

Film Series presents the movie which has sent theatre-goers rushing to their favorite restaurants. Babette's Feast has won an Academy Award for Best Foreign Film and is a "must-

Saturday April 1 The Concert Series will present its final performance of the year with the popular Billy Taylor Trio. This will be held at Today." All are welcome

8 PM in Tawes Theatre. A The Washington College related article appears above. Monday April 8

The German Club will present Austrian-American singer, songwriter and actress Joe Harriet at 4 PM in Norman James Theatre. Harriet entertains her audiences with a Vienna-coffeehouse" repertoire of German and English songs. Her unique performance is titled, "Austria-Yesterday and an unerring ear and a burning mind" Clifton is one of Fredonia and Howard Univer- America's most distinguished Kerr Committee, on Friday, Afro-American poets and in March 31 at 8 p.m. Admission poetry and teach at Coppin 1984 she won the Coretta Scott is free and is open to the public.

Pub Hours

Happy Hours Mon-Fri

4-6:30

FREE

Hors D'oeuvres

College Students Welcome

Monday shooter nite $2.00

Tuesday pitcher nite $3 50

Wednesday shot & draft $1.50

Thursday Ladies Nite

Fri 3/31

Dr. Hecter and the Groove Injecters

$3 cover in back Sat 4/1 Steve Taylor - No Cover in front

> 515 Washington Street 778-1984

NEWS

Athletic Center

continued from page 1 youngsters were caught wandering around unattended."

the past with written approval, but now, to help secure these buildings, Hessey explained, "there are plans underway to rework the lock systems so that all the old keys in the past can't be used anymore and we can try and crackdown on those who use these facilities when they are supposed to be closed." Unfortunately though, this has been a privilege that the faculty has had for some time; this free use of the gym has been an enjoyment for those faculty members who have taken advantage of it

"It would be nice if the access to these facilities," Dr. Daniel L. Premo, a professor in the Department of Political Science, pointed out, "or at least consult those directly involved with those that are affected by the situation setting us up," DeProspo this is not so much a problem claimed. "They knew what they wanted and we're going to send it through anyway, but it was like our opinion wasn't really necessary.

The college's recent proone of the teams and often nouncement, not only restricts the use of equipmen., but also the locker rooms, showers and the gym area. "And this is two Keys have been issued in different areas," believed Premo. "I mean it's one thing to be restricted from the use of equipment that can be harmful to a person, but it is something entirely different to be restricted from a gym where one can shoot baskets or play games with their kids.

Faculty members allowed to use these facilities after the regular supervised hours would only bring on huge liability suits against Washington College "We still have problems though," Miller shrugged. "The keys that were issued still work in most of the locks, so many people think that the policy is still in affect. That's when we college allowed unrestricted have to ask certain of the faculty members to leave."

Throughout the year doors have been left open in both the Cain Gymnasium and the Fitness Center. Security has fixed a good number of the doors that "The administration was were always left open so that anymore. New additions are also being planned so that the fitness centers will be a safer environment for students and faculty to operate in.

Classes start to move outside as the weather heats up, as this class did on one of the sunny days this week.

"We are tremendously sorry to create this reaction with the faculty," Miller apologizes. "And are willing to listen to their time requests so that we can properly staff it for them."

Many faculty members believe that this is more than just an issue of the gym; it is, as Dr. Premo putsit,"the price that a college pays for progress. Mainly Washington College is becoming more compartmentalized, taking away from the personal touch that our school boasts. The network among informal norms is difficult to maintain because new people are unaware of new customs and procedures.

The problem that Miller had initially with the Department of Athletics was that their was no written or definite policy: the 'informal norms' that existed here at Washington College posed a threat to the safety of the school. "Some of the faculty members here on campus are irresponsible when it comes to their own health," says Miller. "The policy was written so that a safer environment could be created."

Mom's Cookie Jar

Thanks to everyone who filled out the meal surveys at lunch and dinner on March 22nd, and March 23rd. Your concerns were greatly appreciated and will be considered in the very near future. At this time we would like to share with you some of the responses:

1) More chicken filets

2) Mono Sodium Glutimate (We do not use MSG in anything.) 3) Garden Gourmet Line will be incorporated throughout our cucle soon

4) Hope smokers will respect non-smokers.

5) Put out more loaves of bread at dinner meals for peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

6) Glad you enjoyed frozen dessert. Will run throughout semester on trial

On oceasion during our rush peaks we run out of milk, fruit and even our main entrees for short periods of time; however, we do continuously refill each item throughout the meal. Your continued patience will be greatly appreciated. If ever you don't see what you need please do not he siture to ask our dining staff or manager on duty

Due to the Annual All-Campus SGA Spring Weekend Dance on April 1st there will be a small adjustment to the Sunday April 2nd brunch schedule and seating arrangement. Brunch will be served from 10-11:30 a.m. with seating in Hymson Lounge. Picnic lunch "to go" will be from 11:30 a.m. -12:30 p.m. The box lunch will consist of Sliced Turkey, Sliced Ham, Sliced Provolone, Kaiser Rolls (to order), Tossed Salad w/ Dressing, Chips/Preszels, Canned Sodas, Assorted Fruits, Yogurts, Cookies

No seating will be available from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Wishing everyone in the month of April a Happy Birthday

Editor-in-Chief positions for the Pegasus and Elm for school year '89-'90 available:

Submit cover letter and resume to leff Chafin in the library by April 10th.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 22

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 7, 1989

Benefit to aid Tamara Alexander

All of the excitement on campus this week has surrounded plans for the campus wide party and benefit for Tamra Alexander taking place on Saturday, April 8. Festivities will begin at noon and last until midnight. The party will take place outside in the quad area between Kent House and the Cafeteria, from noon until 6:00 PM, and in then will continue in the Cain Athletic Cen-

John Billingslea, who formed a committee with students from about eight organizations around campus, began to organize the party to benefit Tamra Alexander. Billingslea sent a letter to several campus leaders to invite them to participate in the planning and to encourage anyone else who was sororities and other campus groups are taking part in the organization of the benefit. John Billingslea thought of the idea as a way to unite the campus by having everyone work for a common cause.

Parental donations have been a great help, totalin an approximate $2,800.00.

The admission is $6.00 a person which includes: a free mug, unlimited drinks (beer or soda), continuous musical entertainment and freedom to participate in several events throughout the day. Raffle tickets have been on sale for the past few weeks and will be on sale on Saturday also. The Grand Prize is one night's stay

INSIDE:

editorial.....p 2

Sports Supplement.....p7

Choral Concert.....p15

Greeks donate.....p16

for two at the Imperial Hotel plus $50. Other prizes include tape case from Price's, a pizza from Proc's, Reunite from Pip's. Southern Comfort from Suds 'n' Soda, $25 gift certificate from Peebles, $25 gift certificate from Paul's Shoes, brass picture frame from the Finishing Touch, a teddy bear from the Single Tree, stationary and a stamp box from Rhodes, pot pourri from Rhodes, two necklaces from Forney's Jeweler. quart of Creamy Crab Bisque Soup from the Old Warf, and Aerobics Air Mat from Towne Sporting Goods. At this point the raffle has brought a profit of Hamburgers, hotdogs chips, baked goods, and various other choices of foods will be sold throughout the day. The Dining Service will be offering interested. All fraternities, a picnic style lunch, perfect for carrying around the bazaar or simply finding a space on the grass under the sunlight with a group of people.

The Bands will be playing throughout the day as follows: at 12:00 noon the Bill Dicy Band, at 2:00 the Jammin' Band O'Boys, at 4:00 the Shoplifters, at 6:00 Billy Breslin and the Swamp Weasels, at 8:00 The Incorrigables, and from 10:00-12:00 PM 49 Reasons.

A Volleyball Tournament will last from 12:00-3:00 and a Hackeysack Tournament will run from 4:00-5:00. Derek Serra and Matt Keller will be the announcers throughout the day

continued on page 16

Lucille Clifton, famed poet and fiction writer, visited Wasington College last Friday. Clifton is a former poet laureate of Maryland and has been inated for the Pulitzer Prize in poetry. She read and discussed certain works as a part of the Sophie Kerr Series.

WC Governing Board of Alumni holds final meeting

by Ed Schroeder

The Washington College Governing Board of Alumni met for their final time this year. During the meeting they finalized current efforts and started planning others for the upcoming year.

"We try and promote activities that will involve the alumni," said Chuck Waesche, the president of the organization. "Our seven active chapters are always on encouraging alumni to come back to the campus and get involved with the classes that are on their way out.

All the members who served on the committee this year were reelected. This official board was expanded by creating a group of new members (names are unavailable at

was also the issue of whether or not a constitutional amendment should be passed stating that non-traditional students can be members. A non-traditional student is a graduate of Washington College. Currently they are considered members of both this organization and of the governing body, but without a written law to support this.

Plans were also initiated for the Alumni Retreat in the fall. Upon their graduation seniors of Washington College will receive an invitation to attend this group activity, along with a t-shirt, a miniature diploma and complementary champagne. The retreat will take place over the weekend of the 15th in September and will include activities such as a candle-light tour of Chestertown and the benefit of various Discussed at the meeting speakers from the faculty and

SGA announces election results

by Julie Schram

Nearly 500 votes were cast in last Tuesday's election for next year's SGA executive officers. Current SGA Parliamentarian, Arian Ravanbakhsh. said, "I thought it [voter turnout] was a little heavier than normal." He attributed the rise in participation to closeness of the races going into the elec-

Steve Attias will serve as President for the 1989-90 academic year with Tracey Coleman as his Vice President. and Mary Beth Enright and Chris Warren will assist them as Secretary, Treasurer, and Social Chairpersons, respec-

Attias expressed excitement about his new position and is anxious to start implementing his platform, which included improvements in residence hall living conditions and campus image. He plans to organize functions that will increase student participation and encourages responsible people to run for dorm senators. "These are the people," Attias said, "who will be forming the platform subcommittees; they will be working."

He added, "I'm very excited about the other candidates: we should have a good administration of Washington

Sophomores may also be informed of this retreat because by-laws of the Alumnus Constitution deems a person who has attended the school for two years an alumnus. This would be beneficial because it would increase the number of agents that the governing body would have to reach alumni.

"Our organization also tries to raise money for the college,"Waeschestated, "We have agents that try and reach all of the graduated classes of the school. The more interested

continued on page 16

Choosing between comfort and environment

There are certain risks involved in living in a complex, technologically oriented society that are impossible to get rid of. As long as the factor of human error plays a part in industry, problems will occur.

The oil spill in the Prince William Sound is a reminder of just how vulnerable the environment is to mankind. This disaster points out the unresolved conflict between American desires for an unpolluted environment, and demands for more fuel.

Behind the realization that Prince William Sound mover again be the same is the knowledge that this molestation of pristine wilderness could have been avoided. The entire tragedy is the result of human errors, one after another.

Joseph Hazelwood, captain of the Exxon Valdez, had his blood tested nine hours after his ship ran aground — his blood-alcohol level was .08; .04 is the highest level considered acceptable by the Coast Guard. In 1985 and again in 1988, Hazelwood was convicted of drunk driving. In five-years, his driver's license was revoked three times. Although Exxon sent their captain to an alcohol rehabilitation program, they claimed to be unaware that his problem persisted. It is interesting that he is not permitted to drive a car, but he was allowed to continue to command a ship.

Hazelwood left the bridge and retired to his cabin while the tanker was traveling along Prince William Sound's jagged shores. Third Mate Gregory Cousins took over the steering, even though he is not licensed by the Coast Guard.

The Coast Guard lost radar contact with the Valdez, after Cousins was given permission to switch his path from the one taken by outgoing ships to the one taken by incoming ships. If contact had not been lost, then Cousing course rocks of Bligh Reef.

After the tanker was torn open and at least ten million gallons had spilled into the water, cleanup was delayed. The first cleanup crews didn't get to the spill until ten hours after the accident — not within the five hours promised by the Alyeska Pipeline when the consortium of oil companies (including Exxon) drew up a contingency plan for dealing with such an accident. The equipment they had was insufficient or damaged: they were not prepared to handle the spill because they left their equipment area down so much that it couldn't handle a small spill of 1,500 bbl. in January, this spill was at least 240,000 bbl.

Exxon Chairman L.G. Rawl promises that his company will meet all cleanup expenses and all obligations to anyone suffering damage from the spill. It is interesting how it always comes back to money, even though no amount of money can possibly return Prince William Sound to its former state. Earlier spills indicate that only ten percent of the oil from such a massive spill will ever be recovered. Some of the remaining ninety percent most turns into a thick black gunk that will sink to the bottom. There it will release harmful petroleum hydrocarbons for an extended period of time.

Naturally this disaster will focusAmerica's attention on the environment, and many citizens are irate about it. Maybe others will demand that oil shipping be stopped. But there is no way around it, without oil from our own country Americans will be dependent on other countries (which will also use tankers to transport oil). It seems that the only way to continue the present standard of living and maintain the natural beauty of our environment is to discover cleaner fuel. Until this clean fuel is used extensively, America will have to either choose between comfort or a clean environment.

Since few would be willing to give up the light and heat that oil provides, and most people don't relish the thought of oil swelling through the ocean, the shipping industry must be prepared to prevent any future accidents. The oil that spilled out from the Exxon Valdez would have reached its destination had it not been for last alcohol policies, and it would have been cleaned up much more quickly if the oil companies were compelled by strict policies to maintain the equipment and people needed to reseauch the environment from man's mistakes.

Letters to the Editor

Harsh rules in C-House keep students out

To the Editor:

In the March 24th issue of The Elm workers from the Coffee House wrote to express their beliefs as to why the Student Center, has deteriorated so much. While many of the reasons given for the failure of the Student Center are valid, left take a serious look at one of the main problems. The C-House is there for the students. A the control of the co

Three years ago there were people in the Coffee House every night of the week. Thursday nights were packed. People drank. This has not changed. What has changed is the sort of police state many feel exists in the C-House.

If you were under 21 you weren't served at the bar. There were no managers out on the prowl in the crowd searching for underage drinkers. If by chance a person younger than the legal limit was seen with a beer, that person was asked to get rid of it. That's it. Today's students are in fear of being kicked out of the C-House brought up in front of the SCC on a variety of charges, being fined and possibly being put on social probation. A little harsh, don't you think?

gets hassled, I'll be less likely to appreciate the good things the C-House offers, and more likely to remember the bad. Even if one of my supposed peers has the right to cut someone's LD. is it necessary? I know people working behind the counter had drinks before they were 21, so let's cut the holier-than-thou attitude.

When one of my friends

You need our business, as much as we need your service. Let's cooperate to bring the students back into the Student Center. We can change the C-House back into what it was, a fun place to hang out, with a warm and welcome atmosphere.

Steve Leary Senior Alumni left

bannerless

To the Editor:

We are the Alumni Director and Associate Alumni Director at Washington College and we have a long standing problem that has finally angered us to the point that we must write to the Kent Co. News and The Elm.

For some reason persons unknown seem to find that banners and signs on Alumni House property are theirs for the taking. In the past four years we have "lost" three signs and three banners. The most recent loss was this past Friday night when one of two banners, that were secured with locks to the roof of the Alumni House porch, disappeared. We haven't even received a bill for the banner and it is gone. These are expensive items and by presuming a right to this odd souvenir someone has left 6500 alumni without a banner

Our faith in the young people who are always welcome in our house will be restored if the last banner reappears as mysteriously as it disappeared.

> Pat Trams Alumni Director

Mackey Streit Associate Alumni Director

Washington College Elm

|     | Editors                      |                      |
|-----|------------------------------|----------------------|
| E   | ditor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrison |
| N   | ews Editor                   | Tracey Connell       |
| F   | eatures Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum      |
| S   | ports Editor                 | Carter Boatner       |
| A   | rts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansky  |
|     | hotography Editor            |                      |
| G   | raphics Designer             | Todd Karr            |
|     | Managers                     |                      |
| M   | lanaging Editor              | Bill Beekman         |
| . A | dvertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-Williams  |
| C   | irculation Manager           | James Sobczak        |
| A   | ssistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Goss         |
|     | ffice ManagersJu             |                      |

ollege. It is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations at exam weeks.

Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opinion of the staff. Signed columns, committaring, letters, officiral is and colorial carteons represent the opinions of their authors and as not necessarily the views held by the Editorial Beard.

All letters to the colitor are read with interest, but due to ispace limitation, colliurs cannot always publish every letter received and some must be aberticand. Those th instructor of his feet sames. Students about instruct their year and major. To ado just an emberre should include their positions and departments. Intelligent little test 0.00 weeder a less childs day and evening phone numbers in the event that clearfination of portions of the little intelligent processing of the control of the control of the control of the control of the little within the control of the con to the Reid Hall Iounge. Business hours are 7:00 to 0:00 PM on Tuesdays and 7:50 to 13:30 Wednesdays. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in 0.778-2800, extension 321.

In the World

Truly is expected to be named head of the space agency this week He has flown two shuttle fights and would be the first astronaut to head the space

Actresses Cybill Shepherd and Susan Sarandon will join in this Sunday's pro-choice march in Washington D.C. The U.S. Supreme Court will hear arguments on April 26 that antiabortion activists hope will overturn the landmark 1973 abortion rights ruling Roe vs. Wade. Hundreds marched this past Sunday in pro-choice rallies in San Francisco and New NASA veteran Richard pected at the Washington rally.

The latest evidence suggests that Exxon was never prepared for the type of oil spill that occured March 24 in

The Agriculture Department withdrew a plan to reduce the frequency of meat and poultry inspections at most processing plants and to cut its force of food-safety inspectors. The plan had prompted consumer protests.

Scientists at a IIS backed lab have tentatively confirmed the discovery of room-temperature fusion by Brigham-Young University researchers.

on Sunday, March 26 and were the first contested elections in

USSR

Gorbachev and Castro met this past week and have agreed to establish better East-West ties and to work together to help Third World debt prob-

Haiti released three military commanders who led an attempted coup over the weekend. Mutinous soldiers ended their occupation of an airport outside of Port-au-Prince. SPAIN

Basque guerillas called off a three-month-old cease fire. shattering what was viewed as an opportunity to end a violent 21 year campaign for independence in a northern region of Spain.

ISRAEL

Israeli Prime Minister Shamir arrived in New York for a 10 day U.S. tour. He has refused to disclose any of his peace proposals before talks with President Bush.

Mubarak defended the scope and pace of his nation's economic changes and told members of Congress that Cairo needs continued high levels of U.S. aid. He also urged parties in the Mid-East to improve the climate for peace, but said he didn't envision any way to halt the Arab uprisings in Israelioccupied teritories

NAMIRIA 180 people have been and USA Today killed in four days of fighting between the black nationalist guerillas and the South African led forces

PALESTINE

Yasser Arafat was elected President of the self-proclaimed Palestinian state by the Egyptian President organization's central committee

POLAND

Poland's Prime Minister Rakowski save talke that resumed this week with Solidarity are putting the communist nation on "the home stretch" toward political and economic reform.

-compiled by Jacque Collins from the Wall Street Journal

Soviet Union's freest elections in 70 years

There have been many results. critics who have doubted the sincerity of the changes being made in the Soviet Union under Mikhail Gorbachev. It has been said that Gorbachev is in a perilous political position and that if his economic policy of perestroika doesn't result in some definite improvement

Wendy Kloiber

soon he stands to be ousted from power. These arguments have been tempered down somewhat since the Party Congress this past summer where Gorbachev managed to put more of his supporters in positions of power. In the final analysis it seems that Gorbachev is a controversial figure and the sincerity of his reforms are debatable. One area however that few people question is the reform policy of glasnost, or openness. The increased, but still far from complete, freedoms of the Soviet people can be seen perhaps better no where else than in last week's Soviet elections and the real struggle was not over two years ago, abolition of privi-

continued from page 6

Or I dream about other people's theses. For example, I am sitting in an English class and suddenly Rachel Smith is overcome by a panic fit.

"I forgot to put page five in my thesis," yells Rachel. "I'm going to fail! I'm going to fail!" Rachel and I run to central services and xerox 1,000 copies of page five. We distribute them in the dining hall and the library and all of the professors' mailboxes, and we print page five of her thesis in the But Rachel still fails (I'm sorry to embarrass

The elections were held the Soviet Union in seventy years Lenin allowed one nonular nationwide election shortly after the Bolsheviks came to power, but when they were defeated in the vote he banned the assembly and declared a "dictatorship of the proletariat." Seventy years later the Soviet people were finally given a real choice when they went to the polls. In 75% of the 1,500 races for the new legislative body of the Congress of People's Deputies, there was more than one candidate. However, 750 seats in the body have already been reserved for representatives of officially registered "social organizations," including the Communist Party. In addition 85% of the 2.985 people running for office belong to the Party. So while there are definite signs of change the limitations placed on these changes cannot be forgotten.

Another consideration that cannot be overlooked when evaluating the election is that this dream.)

Or I dream that I win the Sophie Kerr prize, but because of poor stock speculation I owe the Sophie Kerr committee more than $9,000.

I am not allowed to graduate until I pay the committee, but because I am plagued with the Sophie Kerr curse I am never able to find a job.

Nancy Tatum handcuffs me to the elm tree. Kevin Coveney redirects all prospective freshman tours past my pitiful you, Rachel, but I really had not pay MONEY, MONEY, is a lot to learn."

lature is not a permanently standing body. They will elect from the larger membership 422 standing members, known as the Supreme Soviet. The Supreme Soviet has the real legislative power in that they are the ones that select the President of the Supreme Soviet, elect the Prime Minister, form the Supreme Derense Council and approve the state budget. Whether there are enough re form-minded and independent members to make a significant change will be seen when this is

The election was an important step in the reform movement no matter what the outcome in the Supreme Soviet selections. The new voting freedom was most obvious in the Moscow area election. Boris Yeltsin, who was ousted from his position in late 1987 as Moscow city Communist Party leader ran against the director of a large transport factory, Yevgeny Brokov. Yeltsin ran on a populist platform that included one of the positions that caused his disgrace in the Party

MONEY...

Or I dream that Richard Nixon is the speaker at graduation. He speaks about ethics and openness. The WC administration applauds and whistles

Dean Baer is about to give me my diploma.

"This boys looks too honest," snarls Trickie Dick

"I know what you mean!" replies Dean Baer, as she snatches my diploma from the tips of my fingers "Perhaps he needs a les-body. "See," says Kevin, "this son in duplicity. He should stay could happen to you if you do here another year or so. There on election day. The new legis- leges for the Party's elite. Even city council, the chief of the before election day people rallied in Moscow, despite government bans, in support of Yeltsin. On election day they gave him their overwhelming support with 89% of their votes. Yeltsin received 5,118,745 votes compared to 392,633 for Brokov. Even in elections where > there was only one candidate isfaction with the conservative Party politicians. The party chief of the Leningrad region, Yuri Solovyov, who also happens to be a non-voting memher of the Soviet's most powerful political body, the Politburo, ran unopposed, but lost anyway. Soviets have traditionally been given a choice even in uncontested elections to vote for or against the single candidate. Many used this option in this election to show dissatisfaction with the candidate they were offered. Other important men who ran unopposed but were defeated include the commander in chief of the Moscow regional armed forces, the prime minister of Lithuania, The admiral of the northern fleet, the chairman of the Moscow

Estonian KGB and the commander of the armed forces in East Germany. The elections in the Soviet Union are still far from being democratic. Some independent candidates were eliminated in Pre-Election meetings for questionable reasons. However, the results from the electhe system even if it is only by a little bit show definite improvements. Great changes cannot always be expected in sudden bursts, most need time to grow gradually, which is what Gorbachev is trying to do. Whether he can keep the changes under control or whether they will move forward unheeded is another question that critics will be able to fight over. It seems though so far the Soviet people haven't really been listening to the critics' opinions and when it comes down to it they're the ones who will be responsible for reform, not the critics.

Wendy Kloiber is a junior humanities major.

Sophie Kerr Prize

The Sophie Kerr Prize is awarded at commencement to the senior deemed by the Sophie Kerr Committee to have "the best ability and promise for future fulfillment in the field of literary endeavor." Students wishing to submit samples of their writing are invited to do so. All submissions must be in the hands of the committee by the last day of classes and may be brought to the office of the Chairman of the English department for convenience and safe-keeping. Manuscripts will be returned to their owners after commencement. All graduating seniors are eligible recipients of the award.

องโรงเกีย จำนนก สากจ้ำ ของของขางขอ แต่ แม้จะอำ นะ ก็นโรง

All is well in Yugoslavia: A letter from psychology professor

Since September, we have been living in Yugoslavia, an Eastern-block country which has 2 alphabets, 3 major religions, 4 (main) languages, 5 (principal) nationalities, 6 republics, and borders with the following 7 countries: Italy, Austria, Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Albania, and Greece. Yugo slavia is quite different from the United States in many positive ways and some negative ones; personal crimes such as mugging and rape are essentially unknown; there are no supermarkets; there is about 400% inflation; an excellent bottle of wine is about a dollar whereas rents for foreigners are about double that of Chestertown. The government is ever present; letters out of the country must be mailed unopened so that postal employees can "check" them, and the police are continuously stopping motorists to check "safety equipment" (i.e. obtain bribes). We were stopped 4 times in one weekend although as foreigners we are always hut serves home-cooked meals

We quickly found a number of friends (all Yugoslavs) and we have as much social life as we can bear. For a very long time, we had no friends who were native English speakers

There are often American movies on TV; in Yugoslavia, foreign movies are not dubbed but have subtitles so we can watch them. The very definition of surreal is watching John Wayne in "Yellow Rose of Texas" with Srbsi-Hrvatski subtitles; he gives a long speech to the cavalry about heading someone off at the pass and it is trans lated with a single word: "Idemo" (let's go). In February, Miami Vice began in Zagreb with the first episode. We buy the local newspaper occasionally and try to work our way through it; the International Herald is available most days so between the two we have a rough idea of what is happening in the

Our flat is in a fine area and is

As kind as Yugoslavians are, they make the same transformation which many Europeans seem to make when they step behind the wheel. I am convinced that each driver in Zagreb was, at some time, a New York Cab driver who failed the driving test. As a result, crossing the street against the light is about as dangerous as questioning the manhood of Mike Tyson. I have come to believe that there are only two types of pedestrians in Europe; the quick and the dead.

immediately released

Zagreb is an ex-Austro-Hungar ian city of about 800,000 with beautiful parks, many museums, and a fine tram system. It is constantly used as the setting for pre-WWII movies; for in stance, much of Dr. Zhivago and Sophie's Choice were filmed here. At least one English or American film is being made here at any given time.

Zagreb is very hilly and nestles against Zagrebachka Gora, whose summit is several thousand feet above the city & provides a panorama of Zagreb. It is a walker's city; people stroll to museums on the weekend stroll about the parks, sit at sidewalk cafes for Espresso or Turkish coffee, or hike to the top of the mountain as we do on nice weekends where a log-hewn close to the main square of the city (Trg Republicke) and the cathedral (St. Stevens); however, it leaves something to be desired. Basically, it needs paint everywhere and a long list of small problems need to be fixed. More than anything, it looks like a student apart ment. Instead of central heat we have 50-year-old wood driven ceramic stoves about 5' by 5' by 2' in most rooms, which were converted to gas sometime in the past. They are slow to warm the room, but work well enough

Our children are in the local school system, where the language of instruction is Hrvatski, a language consid ered to be one of the most complicated in the world. The two boys are doing well enough but sometimes it is hard for them to keep up. Joanne is in the Marijan Krajacic nursery school where she typically is the only English speaking person. She now speaks Hrvatski at school and English at home. We do well enough to get along; Becky is now taking a Hrvatski class to improve our communication

My work is quite interesting. Part of my time is spent at the Department of Neurology at the University Medical School Hospital; there I am attached to the EEG lab where they have the same brain mapper as we have at Washington College. All sorts of patients are sent down from the wards for electrophysiological work-up: people with sensory disorders, those suffering from degenerative nervous disorders, those who have had a serious cranial injury. We also collect cortical blood flow data patients breathe a small amount of a radioactive isotope which becomes bound to glucose in the blood; as parts of their brain work harder and so take up more blood, the detectors note the changes in radioactivity and so infer changes in cortical blood flow. In the evenings I go to the Centar za Istrazivanja Poremecaja Pamcenja, which is a center for research in memory disorders. There we are doing research into closed head trauma and also in estigating the effects of industrial solvents upon memory. It is all a lot of fun, and I have had the opportunity to travel a little and give talks about our work at the Medical School and the Psychology Department at the University here, in Novi Sad, and, last October, in Cartagena and Bogota. That was an eye-opening experience. Every 20 meters stands a soldier with a Most of the Fulbrighters in Yugoslavia are teachers of English at a University somewhere in Yugoslavia: there are also some architects and a chemist or mathematician or two. I replaced Linus Pauling as the Fulbright Research Fellow for Croatia; the good news is that between the two of us, there were 2 Nobel Prizes but the bad news is that he has them both. We occasionally see other grantees from Zagreb but don't regularly see the others which are spread across the country. In mid-September we went with the other Fulbrighters on a trip to Kosovo (where the political trouble is now) and came to within about 40 miles of the Albanian border. Albania, you may recall, is the country which referred to the Brezhnev-era USSR as lackeys of the Imperialist West. No one goes in and no one goes out. During the Fulbright orientation in Beograd, we were all sent to the University for an orientation; unfortunately, the Commission mixed up the addresses and sent 40 Americans to the Albanian Embassy! It was like walking into the Iranian Embassy and asking if anyone wanted to buy a copy of Satanic Verses. Kosovo is Islamic and much closer to Islam & Turkey than northern

Yugoslavia, and no discussion of the wilds of Kosovo would be complete without a brief introduction to Turkish. Repeat after me as we have our first lesson in Turkish: towel, delight, and toilet. The toilets down in Kosovo are identical in size and shape to ceramic versions of the roller pan one uses while painting walls and ceilings back in the States. These "pans" are set flush into a floor which is awash when you enter the stall, and after one manages to get one shoe off at a time to de-pants oneself, well, .... you get the idea. Did I not mention toilet paper? Well. . . . . you get the idea. After the user manages to relieve oneself (and, if one has partaken of the local water, one will surely feel the need) then a cord is pulled, and a healthy stream of water sprays the ceramic convenience. the floor of the stall, and the lower third of one's body. These ceramic wonders are definitely not "user friendly." The sophisticated peoples of Croatia and Slovenia do not care for travelers from Kosovo using their toilets; they claim that these simple people from the south do not know how to use such conveniences and that afterwards one is apt to find "user footprints" upon the toilet seat. To be fair, their southern brethren cannot fathom why their northern cousins use such silly toilets: they feel that balancing over such a small hole upon a raised ring makes no

Yugoslavians are a very polite and well educated people. I understand that the literacy of those under 40 is higher than the corresponding rate in our own country. Most Yugo slavs speak several languages; people here speak Hrvatski-Srbski, Slovenian, some German, and English. They are fascinated by American ideas and icons; everyone is wearing a sweat shirt with something written on it like "Big American University" or "Exclusive Health Club" or "Lotto. . . Outdoor. . .Life." Students show me shirts with patches sewn on; these patches proudly proclaim the wearer

Congratulations to Erin Murphy!

She is the winner of the O'Neill Literary House first annual chapbook contest.

Congratulations also to Michele Balzé who won an honorable mention.

RING and DRY CLEANERS CORP. 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available own next to the Court Hou Austin Carpet

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

and Fullbright winner Dr. George Spilich

to be a member of the New York City Department of Corrections, or the LaPort Indiana Sanitation Department. I am always suitably impressed. Yugoslavs in general like Americans very much and most people under 40 speak some English. When combined with the beauty of the country and the prices which are lower than European countries, Yugoslavia is an attractive vacation spot. Between the Julian Alps in Slovenia, Olympic class skiing in Sarajevo, and the warm Adriatio around Dubrovnik, you have it all. People were skiing in Saraievo this winter while 150 miles away, they were swimming at the coast. As kind as Yugoslavians are, they make the same transformation which many Europeans seem to make when they step behind the wheel. I am convinced that each driver in Zagreb was. at some time, a New York Cab driver who failed the driving test. As a result, crossing the street against the light is about as dangerous as questioning the manhood of Mike Tyson. I have come to believe that there are only two types of pedestrians in Europe; the quick and the dead. Since lead-free gas is unknown in Yugoslavia and not popular in Europe at all, the air at rush hour is a toxic gauze, so thick it would horrify all but unreconstituted New Yorkers who do not trust air they cannot see

The food in Yugoslavia is quite good, although a bit heavy on cholesterol. Bread is freshly baked daily; the wines are quite good, vegetables are abundant and meat is available. There are no supermarkets; you walk in the morning to the open air market in your neighborhood and dicker for carrots and beets with little old ladies in black dresses and babushkas. There are no prepared foods and no fast food shops: the options are to go to a sit down restaurant or cook from scratch. Our refrigerator is about 2.5 feet high by 15 in. wide; the freezer compartment can easily handle a good sized ice cream sandwich. We bought a little freezer about 4 cubic feet to store food in so we would not have to shop each day. While some foodstuffs are quite cheap, much is not; lunch meat is $2-5/pound and so on. Anything imported is very expensive; coffee is several times more expensive here than Yugoslavi ans love imported goods such as German, Japanese or American electronic gear or imported whisky; these can only be obtained at a duty free shop with hard currency (dollars, shillings, or deutschmarks) and only with a foreign passport and so are status items. Of course. Eastern Europe in the States.

ans are adept at working around the system; I was recently in a duty free shop (there must be 50 now in Zagreb) to buy a friend some Austrian coffee and of the 30 or so patrons crowding in line, I was the only non-Yugoslav. The government recently has begun to ignore such events because these stores bring in much needed hard currency.

Inflation here is a terrible prob lem. Prices increase from day to day; we often see employees in the morning marking up items from yesterday's Wages increase but not as quickly. Almost everyone has a free flat to live in which was provided by the state or job (although some have to share it with a stranger, as the family of 5 upstairs from us has since 1959) but there is not enough new housing for young couples. Wages are low; my colleagues at the University make about $300/month while physicians make about $500/month. enough to live on but with such a wage. it is not possible to save to buy a car or a bigger flat as the economy turns from There are often American movies on TV; in Yugoslavia, foreign movies are not dubbed but have subtitles and so we can watch them. The very definition of surreal is watching John Wayne in "Yellow Rose of Texas" with every employee has a say in every decision, regardless of their expertise in the matter or their stake in the outcome. As you can well imagine, inefficiency abounds and so it is rare for a publically owned business to show any profit (Elan, which manufactures excellent sports equipment, is one obvious counterexample). Private businesses (which are new here) do very well. Most professionals drive a Yugo;

most private busi nessmen like those who own pizza parlors or tire shops drive a BMW or Mercedes. This is all the more remarkable when one remembers that a 200% duty is imposed on such goods; you buy one BMW for yourself "and 2 for the government" as they say. Although this is theoretically a socialist state where all share equally,

(party officials, etc.) live in marble-covered houses with high gates and satel-tite disnes; others pack 2 ramilles into a 2 bedroom flat and eat bread and

We recently found ourselves waking to dreams of crabbing in the Chester and eating pizza at Procolinos, so I think that we are looking forward to coming home. We have really appreciated the letters sent us by students and other friends; we read them "until the print wears off." All told, we have all had an interesting experience living in such a different country, and we look forward to returning to Chestertown.

a heavily socialistic model to a free market system

Srbsi-Hrvatski subtitles; he gives a long speech to the cavalry about heading someone off at the pass and it is translated with a single word: "Idemo" (let's go).

The political and economic sys tem here is changing. While in the USSR the state owns the means of production, here in Yugoslavia, the workers' group (factory, hospital, etc.) has control. For instance, my hospital needed a new CT scanner. The request was brought to the committee which is comprised of doctors, cleaning people, cafeteria workers, etc. Only when the physicians can convince the others that the CT scanner needs to be replaced was something done; this took more than a year. This system means that

High Street, Chestertown

Chestertown's Bicycle Shop

Have Your Bicycle Ready For Spring!

Spring Tune-up....$25

We now carry Specialized bicycles Hard Rock ..... $299 Rock Hopper....$489 Bicycle Shorts Also on Sale - $22 per pair

Offer Good till May 15

OLD WHARF INN

FOOT OF CANIMON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3568

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

9 to 9:45

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Page Chestertown, MD. 21620 (301) 778-3160

Friday, April 7, 1989

Benefit's bands look forward to promoting a good cause, a good time, and 'dance therapy'

by Amy R. Caddle

On Saturday, April 8 the Tamara Alexander Benefit Committee will present an indoor/outdoor concert from noon until 1:00 am behind the Coffee House and in Cain Gymnasium. The bands being featured include The Incor rigibles, 49 Reasons, The Shoplifters, Jammin' Band of Boys, Billy Breslin, and the Bill Dicey

The Incorrigibles, which consists entirely of Washington College students, includes Ken Winkler on vocals, Jeff Cessna on bass, Todd Karr on vocals and keyboards, and Todd Deitelbaum on drums. The band prides itself on offering their audience a wide variety of

"We are creative in both selection and adaptation" says Deitelbaum. The members met on campus about two years ago and have been playing ever fun. We're a bunch of guys having a good time," Deitelbaum adds

"Our success feeds off the audience. If the crowd is having a good time, we have a good time," Winkler says. All of the band members agree that the School Tamara Alexander Benefit is an excellent cause. "Not only is it for a good cause, it's going to be fun too." Winkler says. The Incorrigibles also have shows planned for April 22 at the Coffee House, April 27 at the Upper Shore Mental Health Center, and May 1 on the Literary House porch.

49 Reasons, a local band, will also play in the Benefit. The band, consisting of Mali Vujanicon vocals, Todd Ross on that no one before us has filled," bass, Kirk Ross on guitar, Jack he adds. The band agrees that on vocals, Seth Engel on bass, Kenny Davis on drums de- though the bands participating County High School, on drums.

monica and percussion, and is a good concept, but feels as Downer, a student at Kent fun. Being down to earth is 49 Reasons is just one of the bands playing for the Tamara Alexander Benefit, Saturday, April 8. Other Band. The benefit begins at noon and will run until one in the morning.

scribes their music as "socially have been treated unfairly conscious." The Ross brothers attend Chesapeake College, Hoffberger is a Washington College student, and Davis attends Kent County High

"Progressive music was a common interest among all of us," says Todd Ross. The band has been together for five months, and describe themselves as a "professional band."

"Being professional is an attitude. We do our best, and we haven't had a bad reaction yet," says Todd Ross. "We just want to play music. Luckily, everyone in the band is very talented. We represent a niche

"They have left a lot of the Beatles to Joy Division," things to chance. The concept is good, but the execution is not there." says Ross.

Kirk Ross added that there's too much band rivalry on campus. "We're willing to play with bands, not against them." he says. 49 Reasons will be closing the indoor part of the concert. Additional upcoming dates include April 7 at the Pub, and April 15 at the Coffee House for the Alpha Chi Omega Dance. The Shoplifters, a campus band formed just three months ago, have a very positive outlook on their music and their role in the Benefit. The members include Leho Poldmae (Unite).' However, we don't do the song." Poldmae describes the band as having a unique per-typical cover songs. I guess you

"Our music is asked about how the band came up with the name The Shoplifters. Engel explains "It was taken from the Smiths song

'Shoplifters of the World

Hoffberger on keyboards, har- the Tamara Alexander Benefit Noel Breger on guitar, and Rob we're playing together to have more important than labeling ourselves as professional Poldmae adds. The band is look ing forward to the Benefit.

"It's a good cause, and it's good publicity for the band." Breger says.

"We are a people oriented band. We're very energetic. We have something different to offer,"says Poldmae, The Shoplifters will close the outdoor portion of the concert, from 4 to

The Jammin' Band of Boys consists of past Washington College students. With Tom Hopkins on bass, Bob Komiskey on guitar, Sam Hensey on guitar, John Cummings on vocals, and Rich Taylor on drums, the band plans to add some "roots of rock and roll" to the Benefit.

"We all get great satisfaction from playing in the band together. It satisfies our souls We just want to make a big, happy sound," says Hopkins,

The band, also known as "We play everything from JBOB, gottheir name from, "our crazy friends" says Hopkins. "It also makes for a great acronym." he adds. "We try to stay away from The band decided to do can describe us as playing clasthe benefit not only to help raise sic progressive music, while adding our own style," Breger funds for an excellent cause. but to help the audience realize that, "it is important for people challenge,"says Downer. When to dance and release themselves through music. It's great therapy." Hopkins says. JBOB will play from 2 to 4 pm. Other bands participating in the benefit include Billy Breslin, who will be an evening performer, and the Bill Dicey Band, a professional blues band, who have recorded with Muddy Waters, among other national acts. They will per-"We're all friends, and form from noon until 2 pm

Dreams of vanishing classrooms and forgotten classes torture seniors We sit in the back of our dreams

by Bill Beekman

not been approved by the Washington College administration. Like Cable TV. its contents may be hazardous to your academic health. If you have read this far, you may already have

I've had these dreams lately

Have you noticed all of the seniors who strut across campus in a frenzied daze?

classes with a stupid, apathetic look on our faces. We fall in love with freshman in order to relive our glory days and postpone all thoughts about life after And we suffer sleepless estroika.

night after sleepless night. No, it's not because we stay up late writing theses or study ing for comps. Instead, we stay up all night dreaming. We are plagued with SENIOR ANXI-ETY DREAMS.

Here are some of my unwritten...

sleep. I think of wonderful, original ideas. I write and I rewrite and I rewrite hundreds of pages on Mikhail Gorbachev's Per- but whenever I try to write, my

By the end of each night, I have nearly completed my the sis. I am so relieved; my anxiety is nearly over.

And then I wake up And then my anxiety returns, and my thesis remains

Every night, for hours and ing my last exam of my college career. I only need to answer one simple question correctly to pass, and to graduate.

I know all of the answers, pencil breaks. After three grueling hours, I have only pencil smudges in my blue book. I hand the blue book to my professor, and prepare for yet another year of anxiety attacks ....

enrolled in a fifth class that V continued on page 3

Or I dream that I am tak- have forgotten to attend all

On the night before the final, I cram for this unknown class by reading 8,000 pages on medievel literature

But on the day of the final exam I can not find the testing room. I search for three hours, and finally locate the room as the test is finished. The professor looks at me and shakes his

"Bill, Bill, Bill," he says, Or I dream that I have "you've really let me down ...

1989 Elm Spring Sports Supplement

Photo spread by David Johnson & Thom Cushing.....

Brief history of crew by Carter Boatner.. p 12

Indian's game by Joe Van Name.....p 13

... notherens upo to other our and

Count however a meet

SPRING SPORTS 1989

SPRING SPORTS 1989

REFLECTIONS ON OPENING DAY, 1989

disclaimer

my Final Four predictions were printed to read Duke and Illinois in the championship game, with Duke winning the national championship. This was an unfortunate misprint. My real predictions were Seton Hall and this route. His fault again.

Brett Lankford

Michigan in the final, with Michigan winning in overtime. As you saw Monday night, I was exactly right with my picks. Unfortunately, my editor Carter Boatner thought he knew more about college basketball than me, and decided to "help me" by changing my selections. In reality, Carter was just making me look like a fool. I just wanted to clear this up and make sure you realize this was all Carter's fault. Thank you Anyway, now back to our story. I've always viewed the in the game, and this allowed arrival of spring in a different way than other people. The singing of robins is nice, and the blooming of flowers can be beautiful. Still, neither of these gifts of nature symbolize the beginning of spring for me. In my mind, spring always starts at Memorial Stadium on Opening Day. In celebration of this believers in the annual trek to Baltimore for two of the greatand baseball.

Opening Day in Baltimore is a day of tradition. The yelling of "O" in the middle of the Star-Spangled Banner, the thunderous roar at the first strike of the season, and the sweet sounds of John Denver's "Thank God I'm A Country Boy" in the 7th inning stretch all contribute to an atmosphere unique to the first day of the baseball season. Another tradition is the pre-game traffic jam and, like any self-respect-

Before I start my article ing Oriole fan, I was sure to be brilliant catch on Boston first on my trip to Orioles' Opening a part of it. My plan to fool Day 1989, I would like to offer a everyone by taking the obvious route through downtown Balti-In my article last week, more backfired, so I was forced to sit with my friends Greg and Elizabeth (I told you two I would get you in one of my articles) on Pratt St. and Charles St. for over an hour. Actually, Carter was the one who told me to take

Greg, Elizabeth and I entered the stadium just as Wade Boggs, lead-off hitter for the Boston Red Sox, stepped to the plate. Even though we were still down in the concession areas, we could easily hear the chants of "Mar-go, Mar-go" raining down upon the Boston third baseman. I realized two things will happen to Wade Boggs this year - 1) he will be taunted everywhere he goes about his infidelity and be verbally abused throughout the American League, and 2) he will block it all out of his mind and hit .350 once again. We arrived at our seats in the bottom of the me the opportunity to take in the atmosphere of the stadium. In my mind, Memorial Stadium is the best place in the world to see a ballgame. This is, of course, a biased opinion, but I absolutely love the place. If it weren't for the fact that we need a new stadium to get a football team, I would love to have arrival, I joined 52,160 other Memorial Stadium as the Orioles' home for many years. The smell of cigarettes, hot dogs and est seasons in existence-spring beer overwhelmed me. Nothing smells like a ballpark. It probably takes a sick person to love the smell of a ballpark, but

There was no scoring early

Orioles had not only spoiled Roger Clemens' no-hit bid, but led the game 1-0. The capacity crowd roared in appreciation of our first run and first lead of the year. The Orioles had been very impressive to this point. Steve Finley, our rookie right fielder who is sure to be a crowd baseman Nick Essasky, crashing into the right field wall. This also brought screams from the Baltimore crowd. Unfortunately, two girls sitting directly behind us decided it would be really fun to scream at every available opportunity throughout the game. This annoyed not only my friends and my family who we sat next to at the game), but our entire section. Many vicious threats were muttered people have finally found an entertaining use for Oriole programs. Every year around the fifth or sixth inning, paper airplanes come raining down from the upper deck. It is usually accepted procedure, and few people are terribly disturbed when they are beaned. There was one group of people who under the beer-drenched breath were upset and went to get the of the people in Section 7 police about the flying planes.

'Even though we were still down in the concession areas, we could easily hear the chants of "Mar-go, Mar-go" raining down upon the Boston third baseman."

on how much alcohol was being consumed in Memorial Stadium. Opening Day annually records amazing statistics when it comes to the "most drunk people per square inch" category. In all seriousness, Opening Day at Memorial Stadium makes a fraternity party look like an AA meeting. A very kind gentleman sitting in the row behind us accidentally doused my sister and father in beer, but no one was really angry. After all, it was baseball season

The sixth inning also proved to be a crucial point in the game. The Orioles, now down 3-1 after a Mike Greenwell home run, had runners on second and third with one out. Cal Ripken Jr., the lone Oriole superstar, was at the plate battling Roger Clemens to a 2-2 count. At this point Greg muttered "He'll hit this one out. By the fourth inning, the If there's one thing I've always admired about Greg, it's his psychic abilities. Cal promptly blasted the next pitch over the left field wall to give the Orioles a 4-3 lead. Memorial Stadium was bedlam, and Ripken responded with a curtain call. It was looking as if the Orioles would be 21 games ahead of favorite this season, made a last year's record.

It was about the sixth Unfortunately, this story is both inning when I finally got a grasp too long and too funny to put in such a serious publication.

tradition is the annual tradition of tossing paper airplanes

Apparently

onto the field.

All of these ridiculous occurrences ceased as the game went into extra innings. The Orioles had blown a few opportunities to score, and the crowd was on the edge of their seats. In the bottom of the 11th inning, the Birds had runners on first and third with one out when Craig Worthington came to the plate. Red Sox manager Joe Morgan gambled with five infielders, leaving only two players to man the outfield Worthington was able to fight phmore English major who off an inside pitch and loop it picked Dukakis in a landinto left-center field. When the ball landed safely, Memorial for Pete Rose.

Another Opening Day Stadium erupted in celebration. It was as if the Orioles had clinched the pennant. Fans who didn't even know each other were exchanging high-fives. then promising to meet at a nearby bar after the game, apparently to talk over strategy. The statement "Don't Drink And Drive" would be soundly ignored on this day.

It is absolutely amazing what a win on Opening Day can do to people. This is truly that time of season when hope springs eternal. On the way out of the ballpark, I heard numerous conversations about how different this year was from last year. Forget the fact that we are only one game into the season. Forget the fact that we lost 107 games last year. Forget the fact that this was the first time in two years that we would be over .500. On Opening Day 1989, the Baltimore Orioles played like World Champions, and it was appreciated. Tradition is nice, the start of the season is wonder. ful, the return of spring is exhilarating, but Baltimore fans really got to see what they came for - a victory. This was just one of the reasons that Opening Day, like it always is, proved to be enjoyable and exciting.

Brett Lankford is a soslide and also picks ponies

W.C. vs. Hobart, the saga continues

On Saturday the third ranked Sho'men Lacrosse team bowed to the top ranked Hobart Statesmen in a hard hitting battle for Division III bragging rites. The Sho'men traded goals with the Statesmen throughout the first half. Less than a minute into the first quarter, Hobart kicked off the scoring with a screaming shot from fifteen feet out of the crease. Tim Hormes quickly responded with the first of his three goals on the day. The rest of the half was action packed, as the lead changed hands several times When the Statesmen took the field in the second half, they shut the Sho'men down until late in the final period. In fact, after the Sho'men scored the go-ahead goal in the second quarter to lead 4 - 3, the Statesmen rallied for six unanswered goals. Sho'men fans were not disappointed, though, for the Sho'men fought hard to the bitter end, scoring two goals in the final four minutes of the game to make it 9 - 6 in Hobart's favor. With thirty seconds remaining, the Statesmen put the game out of reach with their tenth and final goal.

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

C-TOWN LIQUOR & DELI 515 Washington Ave 778-2988

~Come and try our delicious subs and homemade hot soups!

~ Located walking distance from the College. Open 7 days a week

For Wilson, sports provide lessons on life

by Greg Oliver

Matt Wilson came into the Washington College lacrosse program his freshman year following a successful high school career where he was the second leading scorer and allcounty attackman during his senior year in high school on the lacrosse field, Matt has urer and Presialso excelled on the baskethall court where he helped lead the team to the NCAA playoffs this year. Wilson was an All-League player in high school and captain of The Sho'men both his junior and senior years.

dent in recent graduate school in his future and he will seek em

'Wilson believes that there is a direct relationship between sports and life."

At Washington he began as a midfielder and was soon switched to defense where he has started ever since very successful one as Wilson earned first team All-American honors last year and was also selected as Division III's Defenseman of the Year for the 1988 season. This year Wilson is one of the captains and is in the process of leading the Sho'men to a successful season. of Theta Chi Fraternity and has good season.

to make sure that the team maintains a good attitude and he tries to act as a median be- crosse season is The move was obviously a tween the players and the coach. Wilson believes that there is a direct relationship between sports and life. "Everything you learn in sports carries out into life. You get used to making split second decisions," says

Wilson is also a member

As a captain, Wilson tries ployment after But, the la-> still at hand and Wilsonsays that hard and improve on "the little things' that they will have a really

Lerch thrives on the love of the game

by Don Steele Although highly awarded, Alan Lerch is one of themostaccom plished athletes at Washington College. Heisa four-year varbaseball player and this year he was one of few people at Washington College, ever to captain varsity sports at Wash ington College receive the awards and recognition that others get. but his achievements in collegiate athletics are to be reckoned with from Lothian. youngster he great dexterity. loved all sports but baseball

Lerch is a

dad used to play [baseball] and he would take my brothers and I to his games. There was also a field across the street from my house and I'd spend all summer playing ball." Lerch's early heroes were Ted Williams and Sal Bando Lerch attended Calverton High School where he was MVP of his school's soccer, baseball, and basketball teams. In selecting colleges to attend, the sity soccer and capability of playing both soccer and baseball was an impor tant consideration. Coaches Ed Athey and Tom Bowman were very influential in bringing Lerch to Washington College. "Coach Bowman is a great recruiter and Coach Athey is one of the nicest people I have ever met. Those two and what they He may not told me really made up my mind where to attend college.

At Washington College, Lerch has been all that Coacl Athey and Coach Bowman could have wanted as an athlete. He has been a defensive stalwart for the soccer team and has held his own on the baseball team as well. For the baseball with Lerch's leadership, the team he has played catcher, outsenior and hails field, and is currently this season playing first base. At each Maryland. As a of these positions he has shown ier when I am playing sports. It makes me budget my time and that helps. There was one season when I was injured and I was lazy and not doing my work. now (that I am playing) I realize how much athletics helps my academics.

Lerch is not all brawn, however, he has maintained a was always his B-average in his four years at Triple Crown.

Lerch's attitude towards sports is one that some of today's professional athletes should adopt. "I love being on the field and just playing. Playing sports, making good friends from the teams I have been on, and traveling to different schools have been several of my favorite aspects of college. Through the participation in sports, Lerch has developed some special memories. "When I was a sophomore I hit a grandslam in the bottom of the seventh inning to win the game. Then this year we won (against Haverford) 3-2. That was the best soccer game I've ever

Now Lerch is in his final season of baseball. The team has started slowly but with the athletes on the team, combined team should soar. Lerch is hoping for some professional tryouts in baseball after the season. If the effort he has put into his athletics at Washington College are taken into account he will probably win the

Crew, a tradition started by warriors, commercialized by professionals, and perpetuated by amateurs

by Carter Boatner

Rowing is the oldest intercollegiate sport in America and is bound to a tradition dating back to the Egyptian war vessels with crews composed of warriors, scoundrels and gentlemen alike. Among some of the more notable figures who have been involved in the sport are Japan's late Empreror Hirohito who was a coxswain, and in America, avid outdoorsman Theodore Roosevelt rowed crew

The evolution of the sport from a crude means of transporting military might to the refined sport it is today is a long and colorful story

Since the days when galley slaves manned large vessels about the mid-east, rowing or the sport crew, has enjoyed many technological and intellectual advances. First considered as merely a means of transportation the art of rowing was developed by the British into a refined sport including pag eantry and celebration. Three centuries ago when the river Thames in London enjoyed relative tranquility with few or no barges, men and women would hire ferrymen as laborers to transport them across the river. After some time people began to put wagers on who they felt was the fastest laborer. This lead to impromptu races held for the entertainment of spectators along the river's edge.

The sport continued under under crude and unorganized conditions until 1715 when the British actor and playwright, Thomas Doggett, requested in his will that a row ing race be held on the first of August every year. The prize for the victor was to be Doggett's coat, an elegant red garment adorned with a victory patch. A seemingly humble prize, Doggett's coat would be worn with a great sense of pride by the victor and afforded his great respect when seen wearing it in public. The act of gaining a coat as a prize grew in acceptance; and it lead to the modern tradition where the losing crew hands over their racing shirts to the winners, representing an act of humility. The Doggett races began in 1716 and have continued to this year. The participants were those who made a living transporting people across the Thames but those who first witnessed the races were of some notoriety, including Jonathan Swift, Joseph Addison, John Gay, Rich-will that the races be held on the Westminster reach, the part of the Thames known for the difficulty in which oarsmen had in moving their boats. In 1906 oarsmen Guy Nickalls described the race over the particularly tough stretch of water. "Never shall I forget the sight of six wherry men in 1906 battling against a raging sea in Westminster reach, utterly unable now and again to scull at all, the boats full, their arms tired, missing the water mostly , or anyway stopping entirely every few seconds, to try and bear up under the strain of the huge sea, fairly smothering man ard Steele, Alexander Pope, and themselves to great lengths in Doggett specified in his fort, coupled with the spectator's ill sense of sportsmanship often resulted in serious injury to the participants.

Not until 1775 when an entire Venetian regatta was imported to London did the sport start to become more enlightened. The term regatta means an, "Italian boat race held in grand manner." This was not an entirely new term to the British since many travelers noted these events in their travels. In Italy the emphasis was primarily upon the display of military might whereas in England it was purely competition. This is where the traditional pageantry of the modern nation. Shortly thereafter in the mid to late fifties, boatclubs began springing up in New York along the Hudson and also along the Schuylkill. Many of the boathouses constructed along the Schuvlkill are still operational and the area, "boathouse row", has become a mecca for east coast crew powers. Currently the National Technical director, Kris Korzeniowski, who lives in nearby New Jersey, bases his operation out of Philadelphia and the majority of the Olympic team members were selected from boatclubs

As the boatclubs began springing up, America was provided with their first sports heroes. After the Civil War, the

along the row.

several instances when oarsmen would arrive to the race to find that their shell had been sawed in half, or other competitors would simply take money to throw a race against the odds. As would happen in other sports, the money involved would combine with the commercialism to create a great deal of temptation for the oarsmen who all too often would succumb to throwing a race for . personal financial gratification. The scandals of the sport, confined mostly to the 1870's lead many college and other amateur programs to disassociate themselves with the "scoundrels" which tainted the sport. Although there are no professional oarsmen today, they are duly credited with giving such popularity to the sport as we

'As the sport was ridded of the scoundrels which did equally as much to advance the sport as detract from it, several famous oarsmen rose to prominence, reinstating the traditional values of the sport."

and boat in mad turmoil." As if often the racing conditions were not bad enough, the spectators would do their best to increase the difficulty in which the rowers endured in the competition. An example of this was documented in 1736 when during a race a spectator threw a bottle at a oarsmen, reportedly nearly killing him. Another strategy used by spectators wishing to thwart the attempt of oarsmen, was hiring boats to crash into the competitor during the course of the race The spectators were also emotionally caught up in the drama of the events. In 1754 it was reported that a crowd watching a race broke out into a brawl and 12 people were shoved into the water. In 1795 on the Mill Bank. it was reported that a "Thoughtless spectator...", put his pipe which was still lighted into a hollow tree and the blunder was not discovered until after the race at which time the tree was completely on fire and "...with great difficulty it could be cut down in time enough to prevent the fire from communicating to the other trees." The infatuation with the brutish nature of rowing caused the sport to gain prominence as a popular form of entertainment among the

The rowing races continued to flourish and grow in popularity yet remained crude and gladiotorial in nature Many of the participants drove regatta originated. On Friday the 23 of June the regatta was held and reported upon by a London newspaper called the London Register. It was reported by the London Register that over 1,200 flags flew. There were maps of the race course sold and songs written specially for the occasion were sung. The barges that usually carried cargo were geared to carry passengers. Following the races a dinner was served. The races were carried out, yet with all of the commotion they were almost missed by the spectators. This set a precedence for the regattas to follow. The event that carried on in 1775 helped transform the rowing events from a crude-gladiotorial contest between "wage boats" to the more refined version of the sport which emphasizes competition, comradeship and pageantry

For the first half of the nineteenth century crew grew in popularity and spread to America. In May 1843, a junior at Yale purchased a secondhand Whitehall boat which cost $29.50 and when he arrived with it at New Haven he formed the first boatclub at Yale College. What followed over the next decade were informal races, and intramural racing was introduced to American colleges. The Detroit Boat Club. founded in 1839, is still operational today making it the oldest functioning boatclub in the Biglin brothers, the Wards, Max Schmitt and James Hamill had gained national recognition as elite oarsmen, making anywhere from $50-$3,000 racing in crews. The origins of the well-paid athlete can be seen ironically to have originated in a sport which today has no professionals. The only way to earn pay is coaching or administrative duties. Thomas Eakins is the best-known painter of these early sports heroes such as the Biglin brothers and Max Schmitt.

In the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition of 1876, rowing and sailing were the only two sports presented. It was here that Ned Hanlan of Toronto bested two other Canadians and a Londoner which launched his brilliant career as one of the greatest scullers of all time. His winnings earned him trips all over the States, Europe and even Australia. Hanlan's was still racing in 1897 and his brilliant career was the basis of the movie, "The Boy in Gambling had increased to the point where several thou sands of dollars would be placed on a single race, and the odds changed several times before each event. Commercial interests and gamblers were the two sponsors available to rowers, and the latter proved to lead to the sports demise as national favorite. As the stakes rose, so did the corruption. There are know it today. As the sport was ridded of scoundrels which did equally as much to advance the sport as detract from it, several famous oarsmen rose to prominence, reinstating the traditional values of the sport. The name Jack Kelly rings with tenacity in the ears of all the rowing world. John Brendan "Jack" Kelly was born in Philadelphia in 1889 and early on was fascinated by the world of rowing. He trained fervently from age 17 while holding a job as a bricklayer He would rise early, row then work from seven to five in the afternoon, then row again in the evening until dark. On his day off he would row all day. He enlisted in the service duringWorld Warlthen returned still holding onto his dream of one day having a successful racing career. When he returned from the war his dreams came true as he won the National Title in 1919. He then set his sights on the Henley Royal Regatta in England Prior to his departure for Eng-

As it turned out, Vesper Boatclub, where Kelly rowed out of, was guilty of offering financial support to their athletes. This was considered taboo to British officials who turned the sport of rowing amateur following the scandal-ridden nineteenth century. turned Kelly into a vengeance-land however he received a telegram from the Henley stewards stating that his entry had been rejected! As it turns out that their was a rule which was a throwback from the old days when professionalism was rampant in the sport

continued on page 13

The Indians, French and lacrosse

by Joe Van Name

Lacrosse began its existence many years ago among the indigenous Indians of North America. In its early days, to tribe. The Indian tribes at called "baggataway" by the In-lacrosse was not confined by as times played their games over many rules. The game the fields miles in length and for up Indians played was different to weeks at a time. This origiand the rules varied from tribe nal version of lacrosse was dians who played with a fierce determination. In their games the Indians would frequently try to maim their opponents by smashing them with their sticks. The teams would usually settle down to a more sedate game after both sides had where the name lacrosse was derived. Lacrosse was picked up by the French frontiersmen and later by the Canadians who decreased the number of players and established the first sets of rules.

The game of lacrosse spread from Canada to upstate lost a few players. 'In their games the Indians would frequently try to maim their opponents by smashing them with their sticks."

The first white men to take New York and then down the an interest in the game were east coast Jacques Cartier, Count de Frontenac, and Samuel de Chamcrooked sticks with rawhide by New York University. Labags affixed to them for throw-

In 1877 the first tournament was held, and in 1882 the plain. The equipment included first college team was fielded crosse was a exhibition sport at ing and catching, and a ball the 1932 Olympics. Since the that was made of animal hide. early days Lacrosse continues The stick looked like a bishop's to grow and spread throughout crosier, or cross, and that is the country and the World.

Crew history continued

continued from page 12 ridden competitor and in the following year in Antwerp, Kelly beat the Henley champion for the Olympic silver medal.

His vengeance did not and there however, and it would go on to rage in the soul of his son. John Kelly JR. When his son vowed that he would avenge the Henley stewards for their decision to exclude him from their regatta. By age seven he was rowing a "mini-shell", and eventually the boy grew up becoming the United States Na-sculls no less than eight times, he won twice at Henley, in the same race his father was excluded from in 1919, and in 1956 he won a bronze at the Olympic games. John Kelly realized his father's dreams but was under the scrutiny of his was born, the senior Kelly father who put considerable pressure upon him to win. 'One friend recalled that following a loss, John's hands had to practically be pried from his oars because he was so terrified of facing his father. The Kelly family is just one of many fami-

tional Champion in the single lies who have devoted their lives to attaining excellence in the sport, and provided examples to future oarsmen who wish to follow their example. Since the Kellys the sport has expanded exponentially and today over 150 colleges and universities have programs which enjoy alternating success. Preceeding is just a brief mention of the many people, places, and situations which make up the thick tradition binding the world of row-

Carter Boatner is a senior History major and an ardent fan of rowing.

Support W.C. at the ONLY home regatta. Come watch the excitement as W.C. battles St.John's, William and Mary and Johns Hopkin!

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

A Shear Design

HOME CREW RACE Saturday, April 8th, 11:30am-2:00pm W.C. Boathouse and Pavillion

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md. 21620

Janie Thompson 788-0898

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists Materials

> POBox 402 711 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 701-778-5202

Timely Investing Invest a little time in your future.

Come by the campus computer store and see how an EMAC peripheral will give your Macintosh® more zip and a lot more storage space. Check your campus computer store for the complete line of EMAC hard disk drives, tape backups and modems, all designed to make your Macintosh more time-efficient. A small investment now could save you a lot of time.

EMAC DL Series Powerful and reliable hard drives. Available in 20MB, 40MB, 66MB and 80MB capacities

April is EMAC Month at the WASHINGTON COLLEGE BOOKSTORE

(basement of Hodson Hall) Mon-Fri: 8:30-4:30 Sat:10-1:00

Test drive an EMAC 20MB Hard Disk and take home a free t-shirt.

Friday, April 7, 1989

They Might Be Giants offers unique sound

by Don Steele

The post-modern duo, They Might Be Giants' most recent album, Lincoln, is another step in stretching the boundaries of music. John Linnell and John Flansburgh have continued in their style of upbeat music that uses the accordion as its base sound. Their music is considered by one expert to be "intelligent humour." This style of sound is shown in the songs, Purple Toupee and Stand on Your Own Head, as well as the muchpublicized, Dial-A-Song

Lincoln is a "fun" album to listen to. There are none of the deep, philosophical messages, the love songs or the rock anthems which are so common in the music industry today. Instead. They Might Be Giants provides their listeners with mock country songs such as Cov 'own and anti-love songs such as I've Got a Match . Most of the songs are somewhat bouncy, in the sense that they move joyfully along, without any of the worries or cares which pervade other groups today: One example of this is Shoe Horn with Teeth . The lyrics of Instead of the grandmother the song do not make much sense and are overwhelmingly sarcastic: "He wants a shoehorn, the kind with teeth/ People should get beat up for stating their beliefs." This song gives the listener the feeling that everything is absurd, even the most serious of topics. The music is free of any somber others ask questions to whose answers could fill many books. This feeling sums up all that They Might Be Giants is about. There is an obvious sense that the undertone to the group's existence is one of fun in music and what they sing about, rather than the gloomy side of life which other bands project.

The anti-love song, I've Got a Match , rebels against everything the modern love song stands for and captures the essence of the band. "Love people are there/ The smell of love is everywhere/ You think it's always sensitive and good/ You think I want to be understood/ I've got a match/ You embrace and my collapse." From these lyrics, it is easy to tell that this is not your typical "boy meets girl" love song. Instead, the listener feels as though the speaker has no concern or care about the girl that he refers to

Also included on the album is a more contemporary version of the song, I Saw Grandma Kissing Santa Claus in the form of the They Might Be Giants song, Santa's Beard. kissing Santa Claus, it is the narrator's wife. The lyrics give this song a decisively comic twist: "He's breaking up my home/ She's always had this twisted side to her/ But she'd never drag my name around town/ But lately she's been humming cheating songs/ And I don't like that fat guy around." tones, as most of the lyrics make The music to this song is quick, no sense at all, while select while the whining voice of the narrator adds to the song's

Snowball in Hell is one of the best songs on the album. The musical quality is high, as the band seems to jell best in this song. Furthermore, the conversation which is blended into this song adds a unique and humorous twist to the song as a whole. Snowball in Hell parodies the classic saving, "A snowball's chance in hell" with, "Avalanche or road block, I was a snowball in hell/ Avalanche or roadblock, a jailer trapped in his cell/ Money's all broke, and food's going hungry/ If it wasn't for disappointment I wouldn't have any appointments." These lyrics and the quiet music represent the difficult problem the narrator is facing in his current circumstance The album as a whole is

ood. It presents a different dimension and comparison to other, popular music of today. The music and the lyrics are enjoyable to the ear, but provide little in-depth study and thought, which makes the album simple, yet effective. The duo tries, and succeeds, to make music better through their own originality. They have their own, distinct style of music which is off of the mainstream. yet worth listening to. They Might Be Giants sums up their originality with Dial-A-Song, where interested newcomers to their sound can sample the music through the telephone at the number, 1-718-387-6962. They Might Be Giants is worth

Philosophy chair J. David Newell will serve as a Visiting Professor of Philosophy next year at West Point Academy.

Campus Calendar

Weekend-April 7, 9, 10 couraged to attend. The Washington College

Film Series presents a "fleshy and erotic" picture about Saint Therese of Lisieux in the film, Therese. The story depicts the life of the young saint who died at the age of fifteen, and who was called by Pope Pius XI as the "greatest saint of modern times." Definitely a picture to explore.

Friday April 7

Tonight is the last night of the student production, The Appletree, running in the studio theater of the Gibson Fine Arts Center at 8 PM. The show is directed by Peter Johnson and orchestrated by Geoff Girard Reservations, which can be obtained at extension 269, are recommended

Sunday April 9

The Music Department of deadly disease. Washington College presents the College Community Chorus, comprised of College and community members with "Songs of Protest and Promise: The American Experience from the Civil War to the Great Depression."The concert, which is discussed further in this issue, begins at 4 PM and all are en-

Tuesday April 11 Arena Registration for next semester's classes will take place at 7 PM in the Cain Athletic Center. Don't forget to sign up for next fall's classes!

Wednesday April 12 The William James Forum continues its tradition of exploring timely topics with Rose

Sperry, a Maryknoll Lay Missionary, discussing, "A View from Within a Honduran Refugee Camp." The talk will be held at 7:30 PM in Hynson

Also on Wednesday night will be the AIDS Awareness Task Force Presentation at 8 PM in the Sophie Kerr Room. The public is urged to come and discover the facts about this

> Thursday April 13 The Lecture Committee will present a fascinating discussion with John Goddard, titled, "Exploring Asian Wonderlands: Afghanistan" at 7:30 PM in the Norman James Theater. A related article appears in this issue.

98 ROCK deejays visit WC

by Stephanie Hess

The morning deejays, Bob Rivers and Shawn Donahue, from the Baltimore radio station, 98 Rock, visited Washington College this past Tuesday April 4. They planned to talk about the visit on their Wednesday Morning Show, when they were also scheduled to use campus phone numbers for their popular Phone Booth

Their visit was part of a community relations program, in which the deejays visit businesses and schools, meet the community, and promote their show by giving away free tee shirts, bumper stickers, and cassettes. Their visit to Wash ington College was set-up by Jay Meranchick who noted that also asked about the College

98 Rock has a computer system similar to the college's.

Though they had very little time here. Rivers and Donahue had a short campus tour and met for an hour with students in the Norman James Theater. In the meeting, they discussed such events as the Tamara Alexander Benefit, and the recent SGA elections. They also questioned Matt Zuech, the only candidate present, about his campaign statements and their meanings. Rivers jokingly made a parallel between Zuech and President Bush, saving that like Bush, Zuech was the best candidate because "he's a good bullshitter."

During the meeting, they and about Chestertown, noting that it seemed like a very comfortable place to go to school. Rivers added that he would like to live in Chestertown, commenting that it is "just a short flight to work."

After the forum, the deejays were taken to Miss Dee's for lunch. As they ate, they learned more about the school from administrators and faculty. Furthermore, it was rumored that Rivers discussed computers with Dr. Hamilton and tried to sell him audio equipment.

Before they made their hasty exit, Rivers promised that on Wednesday morning, he and Donahue were "gonna blitz this college" with phone calls for Phone Booth Trivia.

Spring concert studies musical heritage

by Valerie Walbert

Community Chorus will perform its annual Spring Choral Concert on Sunday April ninth at four PM. The theme of this year's concert is "Songs of Protest and Promise", which depicts musically the American outlook, experience and lifestyle indicative of the period from the Civil War to the Great Depression. As the title suggests, the program contains a variety of themes from the somber and poignant to the comic and uplifting.

The focus of the concert features musical adaptations of prose pieces from Randall Thompson's "Americana" column of The American Mercury Mercury, edited by the prominent historical critic, H.L. Mencken, was a classic literary and social magazine as well as being a liberal publication promoting social and moral betterment. The magazine prompted opposition against censorship, slavery and prejudice. These were a clear reflection of the of the early nineteen-hundreds. The "Americana" column interest from newspapers across the country. It featured a variety of noteworthy items of interest ranging from a book of Temperance Union to an ad-Necromancer," which was simi- of Asia. lar to the nineteen-eighties' The film of his travels in "Dear Abby." The uniqueness Thailand includes footage of a of these musical adaptations is impressive in itself and presents a work that is quite different from ordinary musical compositions and other works included in the program.

time period. Such issues explored concern the spiritual re-War, the temperance movement and the protest of work- gram ers. Spirituals such as Deep River and Sometimes I Feel Community Chorus is comwill be featured as well as the prised of students from Wash-

The repertoire also in- workers' songs, such as the ington College along with mem- Kate Bennett in Sometimes I The Washington College cludes a broad spectrum of famous, Hallelujah, I'm a Bum, current issues analogous to the Life is a Toil and Solidarity Forever. Other temperance and anti-slavery songs such as Poor vival, Emancipation, the Civil Little Bessie and Oh, Freedom are also included in the pro-

The Washington College

Goddard is an expert in

bers of the Chestertown com- Feel. munity. Kathy Mills serves as

The Concert will be held the group's director. Accompa- in the Norman James Theater niment music will be provided of William Smith Hall, Admisby Garry Clarke and Jennifer sion is free and the concert is Grindle, both on the piano, and open to the public. Everyone is Ford Schumann and Ken encouraged to attend this inter-Winkler on guitar. Several esting and unique program members of the chorus will be featuring American heritage featured as soloists, including and tradition.

Goddard "explores" teen dreams realized

by Stephanie Hess

World traveler John God- adventure, world travel and dard will present a film lecture, "Exploring Asian Wonderof the year 1932. The American lands," on Thursday, April 13 in Washington College's Norman James Theater. Goddard will present two films: the first on Afghanistan and Burma, and the second on Thailand In the lecture accompanying his film of Afghanistan and Burma, Goddard's discussion of 127 feats that he wanted to will include remarks about his topics, plus a number of others, travels through the Khyber Pass, an ancient invasion route major issues and postulations to India, and his visit to Pagan, Burma's greatest archeological treasure house. The film will carried items of social and moral show Asia's most exotic market place, the Kabul Bazaar, and Inle Lake, home of the famous goals that he did consider im-"Leg-rowers," which are Burmese muscle men who paddle poems, a pamphlet from the their canoes with one leg. National Women's Christian Goddard's film will also show the Shwe Dagon Pagoda, the vice column titled, "The Staff greatest Buddhist shrine in all > crocodile farm, a sword fight and an elephant safari. The Thailand reel also captures Bangkok, the "Celestial City" of gleaming spires, temples, and walled palaces.

exploration. Proficient in fencing and jujitsu, he is a real life Indiana Jones. He has conducted anthropological studies of 260 tribal societies around the world, and he led the first expeditions to explore the entire lengths of the Nile and Congo Rivers. When Goddard was a teenager, he made a list achieve during his lifetime. As of October 1987, he had accomplished 108 of the 127. The only goal that he no longer envisions as reasonable is that of appearing in a Tarzan movie He now considers it an irrelevant childhood dream. Some of the other portant and that he has achieved include: reading the Bible from cover to cover, retracing the travels of Marco Polo and Alexander the Great, lighting a match with a .22 rifle, and watching a cremation ceremony in Bali. In his exploration of more than 120 countries, he has traveled well over one million miles. He has also circumnavigated the globe four times.

He is a recipient of the Encyclo-naedia Britannica Achievement

marks the second time he has Norman James Theater at 7:30 heen to Washington College.

to Washington College. p.m. The presentation, spon-Goddard's film lecture will sored by the Daniel Z. Gibson in Life Award, and his visit take place Thursday April 13 in Lecture Fund, is free

Thin Man Deli

Baked Goods * Deli Sandwiches * Assorted Cheeses

> Open 5 Days a Week Monday thru Friday

> > 107 Cross Street

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

BUFFET EVERY SUMDAY 12-5 HAPPY HOUR - DARLY 4:38-4 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE

778-1222

Bo. 213 4. 291

A PARTY!!!

To Benefit Tamra Alexander

Where: Quad Area Outside of Kent House When: Saturday, April 8, 1989 Time: 12:00am until 12:00pm

Fun and Frolic, live entertainment, food and beverage!

The $6.00 cover charge includes:

-a free mug

-unlimited drinks (soda or beer) -endless musical entertainment -several events thoughout the day

Page 16 NEWS

Greeks donate

by Jennifer Golden On March 8, 1989, the Panhellenic Council at Washington College donated $100 dollars to the Big Brother/Big Sister Organization of the Upper Eastern Shore. Featured in the Kent County News for the philanthropic donation was Beth Bozic. President of the Panhellenic Council, Bridget Bellistri. Treasurer, and Samantha Streamer, Secretary to the Council. Asked for the reason why the Big Brother/ Big Sister Organization was chosen to receive the donation, Beth Bozic said, "A lot of Washington College students are involved with the organization and we felt that it was a worth-

Other fraternities and sororities have donated money to the organization, including the Theta Chi Fraternity, pictured in the weeks Elm.

while cause."

had people such as Bob Polk (of continued from page 1 the Financial Office) and Jeff alumni that we can encourage Miller (Department of the Financial Office) and Jeff to aid us, the more people we Athletics). "These representacan reach." The seniors will tives from different parts of the receive recognition during school keep us in touch with graduation ceremonies and what is going on," Waesche Sophomores through a letter. explained. "This way we have Dean McIntire, of Student Dean McIntire, of Student an idea in which areas we the business office, like any Affairs, came to speak at the should stress our aid."

Some community minded students of Washington College, members of the Theta Chi fraternity, present $244 to the local Big Brothers and Big Sisters Organization.

SGA loses

by Patricia Karnes The transactions of the Student Government Association will be handled through other department on campus. These changes in handling funds are a direct result of charges brought against Tom fund control Jackson, former SGA Treas-

> Although the new way of channeling money was considered at the beginning of the rear, it was decided that the SGA would have access to its money through its trassurer.

Benefit

continued from page 1

for the tournaments and contests. Those who like a different kind of excitement and challenge can get involved in the animal calling contests or can try the dunking booth. Craft stands will be a part of the bazaar also.

One reason to come to the bazaar is that the seven-year old little girl. Tamra Alexander, who has been the center of attention for the party, is expected to come to join in the celebration. It will be so exciting to finally meet the little girl who needs our support so much.

Future transactions will require vouchers, allowing the SGA to release funds to cover expenses.

Lauren Bedell-Bishop, College Controller with the Washington College Business Office, said that, "the Business Office will act as the agent to handle the money of the SGA, just like it does for any other department on campus. Two signatures will be required, the treasurer's and the president's, to liquidate funds."

Mom's Cookie Jan

meeting about the fraternities/sororities that are at Washington College. In the past they've

It is documented that the average American gains one pound per year. That does not sound like much until you figure that it adds up to a thirty pound gain by age 55. There are exciting and enjoyable ap proaches in order to maintain a desireable weight. Just think activity. If you engage in some kind of activity you burn up calories faster than if you are inactive. Climb stairs instead of using the elevator. Eat lightly in the evening when you are least likely to be active, or take a stroll after dinner. A thirty minute walk of about a mile will use up 75 to 120 calories. That's enough to prevent that yearly weight gain.

Until next week ...... MOM

The Washington College Film SeriesPresents

Therese

Although she lived a short life, entaring the numery at 15 and dying of tuberculosis at 24, when Saint Therese of Lisious was canonized in 1925, Pope Pius XI hailed her as the "greatest saint of modern times." The movie is flostly and erection, and no excersion in piety—quo either concentrate entirely this mad, inspired gif or stop looking. This is an extraordinarily moving and perverse film. (In French with English substities! with English subtitles.)

Friday, April 7 * Sunday, April 9 * Monday, April 10 Norman James Theatre, 7:30 pm.

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 23

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 14, 1989

Students and Faculty attend Pro-Choice March

by Tracey Connell

Washington College stuents and faculty joined thouands at the March for Women's Right and Woman's Lives in Washington DC this past Sunay, April 9. Though many ontinue to argue differing wints of the abortion issue, ost of those involved on both ides are encouraged on one oint. They declare that stuent apathy is on the decline. Dr. Kevin Brien, profesor of philosophy at Washingon College, was one of the facity representatives for pronoice at the rally. Brien eemed most impressed by what e called, "a whole rainbow of eople, including young chilren, babies carried by their others, college aged people, cople in their twenties, thires, forties, even people in their ted that individuals from all pectrums and social classes were present. Also encouragng was the apparent ratio of males to males. Brien estilated it to be approximately two to one. There were quite a ew men, but women were by ar in the majority.'

Brien called the abortion ue a question of "persontod," that questions what point fetus can be considered a rson. Though religious facons say that it is apparent at Ocention he stated that "It is possible to determine when personhood is on the scene. For them to impose that view is an imposition

Brien talked at length about the belief systems which lead him to "stand witness" last Sunday, "I don't like the idea of abortion. It's a difficult moral choice, but what about bringing an unwanted child into the world? I think one can have real compassion for a growing fetus. Sometimes intervention can be the most compassionate Brien concluded with the statement, "I really love children. If I ever want to have my own, it would have to be by choice. I would not be able to abide by the state or some religion forcing me to have a child against my choice. I think that if a couple is to bring a child into the world, there has to be a ighties in wheelchairs." He consensus. They have to intend to give it all the nurturing and care so that it can become a real, viable, creative and life affirming human being."

Sophomore Erica Dickson was one of many students who attended the march, some of whom took advantage of transportation arranged by the Washington College Young Democrats. Dickson emphasized most the feeling "of a common purpose. About a third of the people there were college or high school aged and there

continued on page 12

A mother sits with her children listening to the speeches of Jesse Jackson, Cybill Shepherd and others in support of the Pro-Choice March which took place this past Sunday, April 9. A number of Washington College students and faculty attended the event.

Tamra Alexander Benefit earns thousands for medical bills

by Sharon Bonner

The Tamra Alexander Benefit Party was held on Saturday, April 8 from noon until midnight. The event earned over $10,000, with approximately $6,000 in profit, which was directed as promised to the five year old Alexander. About $800 will be given to the Washington College fund, which will help to continue this benefit tradition each year. Next year, John Billingslea's predecessors to the leadership, organization position Beth Bozic and Kevin

Festivities began, in the Coffee House as the weather prohibited them from being held outside as planned. The party continued in the Coffee House until 5:30 and then was taken to the Cain Athletic Center. Organization throughout the day progressed smoothly except for the delay in transferring the Various booths and sales kept everyone occupied throughout the day. The Pinheads championed one of the first events, the hackysack tournament. A volleyball tournament and a dunking booth were eliminated from plans for

Athletic Center plans new facility

by Ed Schroeder The Department of Athletics recently began outlining plans for a new field house facility that will broaden use capabilities for Washington College. Department officials envision this to be beneficial to the athletic teams, students, staff and faculty.

Preliminary plans of the field house consist of three full length basketball courts, which will be easily converted into volleyball and badminton areas. The courts will also be easy to section off for athletic team practices. A two-three lane jogging track will surround the courts and will possibly be elevated above them. Storage area for nets posts, pitching machines, and other equipment will be set aside. Two racquetball/squash courts, locker rooms, restrooms, and aerobic dance/multi-purpose workout areas and a weight room are planned.

"This is merely what we are asking for," Geoffrey M. Miller, Director of Athletics commented. "We still have to bring our proposal before the Long Range Planning Commit-

This facility has a number of features that will enable the department to do a lot more for the Washington College community. It will allow the intercollegiate teams to hold their practices in a large area. Weather conditions can be avoided with the indoor facility; during January, February and March when there is an abundance of teams practicing, it acts as a way to schedule more than one team at the same

INSIDE:

letters to the editor.

| - otters to the curtorium |     |
|---------------------------|-----|
| Peace Studies Coursep     | 1   |
| Sports News               | . 1 |

Neville Brothers.....p 10

continued on page 5

continued on page 5

Displaying the courts of public opinion

"We are marching here to ask, Is the Supreme Court going to affirm that women are full citizens and not property, or is the Supreme Court the captive of the extreme right wing?" Gloria Steinem said to a crowd of hundreds of thousands of people last Sunday. With the United States Park Service's estimation of 300,000 marchers (300,000 less than the National Organization for Woman counted), the March for Women's Lives and Women's Equality was one of the most attended recent demonstrations in Washington.

The Supreme Court will hear arguments on April 26 on the case Missouri vs. Reproductive Health Services . The review of this case poses a threat to the 1973 ruling of Roe vs. Wade that legalized abortion. This is the threat that brought thousands of people to Washington D.C. on Sunday. The case is the result of a Missouri law that restricts the availability of public funds and buildings for counseling and performing abortions. The law also places obstacles before abortions performed after the twentieth week of pregnancy. If the Supreme Court overturns the 1973 decision, abortion will be an issue decided by the Sunday's march was an attempt to bring public opinion to weigh on the decision of the nine Justices of the Supreme Court. After eight years worth of Supreme Court judges were appointed by Ronald Reagan, the Supreme Court seems to lean to the anti-abortionists' side. Molly Yard said, "They are all political creatures, and they do understand political opinion. And I have to believe the Supreme Court doesn't really want to tear apart the social fabric of this country."

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor appears to be the pivotal vote. Unfortunately, she has more leanings to anti-legalization. She has criticized Roe vs. Wade in the past, has practically expressed abhorrence of abortion and has voted often to uphold state laws restricting the use of abortion. Despite these indicators, it isn't certain whether or not she will vote to limit or reverse Roe vs.

Between one-half and two-thirds of the people in this country are pro-choice, according to public opinion polls. This is underlined by the number of people willing to spend a cool spring Sunday marching to the Capitol and chanting "Out of church, out of state women must decide their fate.'

Before becoming Chief Justice, William H. Rehnquist said that the Supreme Court is affected by "the Court of public opinion." On Sunday, the United States brought him their opinion to his doorstep. And now we must wait to see if he heard us.

Washington College Elm

| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso         |
|-------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| News Editor                   | Tracey Connell              |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaun             |
| Sports Editor                 |                             |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk          |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson               |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar                    |
| Managers                      |                             |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma                 |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William          |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobezal               |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Gos                 |
| Office Manager                | Julie Greene and Cathy Leas |

Letters to the Editor

Dreading the arena To the Editor:

Arena Registration: The two words that bring dread into the hearts of all college stu dents freshman and seniors alike we all know what's coming, yet never want to admit it to ourselves until it bumps us in the face. (and bump is such an appropriate word). Approximately two hours of being bumped, pushed, shoved, clawed and climbed over only to find out that you won't be getting the class you wanted. I think that any person who survives arena registration should be given any class they want for the sole reason that they made it out with all their limbs somewhat in tact

The thing that baffles me the most is that if the college insists on arena registration, instead of the more convenient and safe use of computer registration, why don't they form four neatly roped off lines? It amazes me to see more than three people squeeze through a door at one time. People become sub-human, probably because the person next to you is always sweaty and six feet tall so their armpit comes right to your nose. I think the freshman class best summed it up at spring registration when from the back of the hall came a low but distinct mooing sound which grew till the whole hall echoed like cattle. Oh, and to make matters worse, directly after all this torture, we have our pictures taken for "Faces." What perfect timing! Is it any wonder nobody ever looks good in those things?

I thought that I was one of the only people who felt so passionately about this all, but after talking to a bunch of other people I find that the students view registration with the same, if not more hostility. You really when they're three inches from your face Carey Smith Give the C-

House to the students

To the Editor:

Back in the dark ages (1969), I began my freshman year at Washington College. Ms. D's looks almost the same today as in 1969, and the same for the bookstore. What is now the Coffee House was a large empty lounge, with a parkay floor. The student mailboxes were located here. (Unwanted mailbox stuffers back then were put in the trash can). Furnishings included several metal chairs and two square formica top tables with built in Checkerboards. I never saw anybody play checkers. This was the "Student Union." Well, the students being as concerned as those today with providing a fun place for students to gather, put together a proposal to build in this area a 'real' student union. Now, I am not really sure how the original project was funded, but I do know that a great deal of the labor was provided by the students. Different names were suggested for the place, but by that time everyone was used to calling it the "Coffee House," and the name remains today. Two years later the students decided that it needed a face lift, more character. On a midnight raid, a group of students descended upon an old barn in Hawkeye (a blip on the map in lower Dorchester County), and returned with enough weathered barnboards to cover the walls for that "rustic look." The place had character. It was a student creation and we took pride and interest in it. The students get to know how a person feels built it, and the students al managed it. And made a profi Early profits bought a dyn mite stereo system and a po corn maker

This is not just a nost gic, history of the Coffee Hous it is a response to the letter the Elm voicing complain the school ended up runni the Coffee House instead of th students, and I'm sure you con guess some of them. If the El letter is accurate, student i volvement has been reduced complaints in the Elm. sad to see, knowing how cessful the place used to be vears past

I have a great idea. W not give the Coffee House be to the students! It worked fore and it can work again if really do have an interested as responsible student continge Place the ultimate responsi ity on the S.G.A.. No bud from the school. Run it like at business for a modest prof and spend it on whatever students want, be it more hou or more live music. If the pla is trashed the S.G.A. ps. Someone rips down the sink the men's room, the S.G.A. ps. Just imagine being able to a business without rent, a bu ness loan, or even utility bi Is this a good deal busine majors? I see no alcohol pr The students mor themselves, and keep things key. If that doesn't work th the college administration eliminate all alcohol for a mester, and try again. If th happens it won't be much d ferent than it is now, only profits (which now would yours) would be less, and eve one would migrate back to Tavern, Newts or to whate off campus location is populi The food service can still mor tor the operation, help orders etc. The Coffee Hot was yours, and can be agair John A. Wagn

ISSUE:

To what extent should the Federal Government be involved in the oil spill in Prince William Sound?

Spare no expense to get the job done right

"Should the federal government become involved in the cleanup of the Exxon oil spill" is now an academic one-because the feds have already pledged to do so: I should like to focus some attention on the projected extent of this federal aid. How much aid should the feds provide in this catastrophe?

I suggest that in resolving this question we should examine the issue through the parallel use of an analogy. This analogy should strike the Congress where they live-at home in D.C .- just as the oil spill did and still does Alas-

Suppose, for the sake of argument, that a drunken lobbyist representing Exxon made his presence known on the Senate floor. Let's also pretend that he was forcibly removed

was an inflamitory and repugnant ninny

However let's imagine further that just before making his appearence on the floor, unbenounced to the senators. this inebriated incompetant deposited one lit cigarette on a highly combustible couch in the lobby. So amid all confusion, no one noticed that the building itself had caught fire. Eventually, however, someone smells smoke, and in government everyone knows that when there's smoke there's fire.

The Exxon corporation. not wanting any trouble, brings in a bucket brigade. The trusting Senate is led to believe that a major industrial leader such as Exxon should be able to exinginsh the fire without any problem. Exxon encourages the Senate's trust and claims that

Since the question because in a stupor, this man for each lobbiest there are ten men with buckets at the ready in case of just such an emer gency. So the senate, in its entirety, adjourns to the Burger King. They leave the build-

> I believe that we have reached a situation close to that in Alaska just after the spill. Exxon has the fire under control and the feds belive that everything is fine. Right?

Wrong. While the senate is eating lunch the Exxon fire brigade realises that they are not equipped to handle such a large fire. There simply are not enough buckets. The building burns out of control for a week or so. Each time the senate phones, the bucket brigade assures them that every thing is fine-couldn't be better. The building burns to the ground.

So the Exxon oligarchy.

David Morrison

feeling great remorse, composes a letter of appology, beautiful and almost lyrical in nature. The letter is signed appropriately: "regretfully yours." This apology is addressed and sent to the Senate who never recieve, because there is no longer a builing at that adress.

This I believe brings us to the present situation. What can anyone do to compensate for the oil disaster now? After Exxon's incompetant, horrendus, and bungling attempts to avoid the very situation at hand, what should the federal government do?

For one thing the feds could regire that Exxon send personal appologies to each and every intrepid member of the Wild Kingdom-those great beings who have just been jollywell understanding throughout the entire ordeal. The feds could also require that Exxon resurface all of the beaches that were so terribly affected as a result of the spill. Perhaps linoleum tiles should be used. They would make future clean up efforts that much more economical, and less time consuming.

So to answer the ove riding question of how much support the feds should pledge to the oil clean-up: I say spare nothing to get the job done. Anyone who can help should be called upon. At present, how ever, a more important question arises: "what for?" What

continued on page 4

David Morrison is a senior majoring in philosophy.

Jennifer Pfeifer Freshman

Yes, definitely. It is very im- Yes, the federal government Of course. The government is portant to get the oil cleaned up and any money that is offered should be used.

Mary Widdifield and Paul Schuncke should assist in the clean up. The spill is so bad that it affects many U.S. interests.

Tamy B. Hickman Freshman

just as responsible for the negligence and should aid in the environmental disaster.

Adrienne DeAngelo Sophomore

the mistake deserves to resolve the damage that has been done.

Karen R. Reisinger Sophomore

No, I don't think that it is the Yes, of course it should. It was government's responsibility to Exxon's mistake but everyone's clean up the spill. Exxon made

They should force Exxon to be more efficient

The accident in Prince William Sound has inflamed an already incredibly nasty can of worms. The oil spill has placed jobs, livelihoods, and the environment in jeopardy. It has also raised the question of the environment versus a national power source, a long range problem not very easily solved

The spill ocurred after a chain of events which can be described very loosely as irresponsible. The captain (man was he 'faced!') turns over control to his inexperienced third mate, who proceeds to give impotent orders until the Exxon Valdez opens itself like a can of tuna on the rocks. Between 10 and 12 million gallons of oil gurgle out into the cold Prince William Sound in Time magazine, only about 10% of the oil will be recovered. The remaining surface oil will evaporate into the atmosphere and the rest will sink into the sediments and lie there. Clifton Curtis, executive director of the Oceanic Society, says the oil may act "as time-release capsules" giving off "harmful petroleum hydrocarbons for months and even years.'

Alison K. Auber

Aside from the fact that the crude oil on the surface and in the water column have been coating and killing all sorts of birds, fish and even sea otters, it is affecting the microorganisms. These organisms form This is all I would expect the the primary level of the aquatic food chain. Once they are con-taminated, they contaminate everything that eats them and so on and so on. This could possibly cut the productivity of According to an article the Sound for a long time

The spill began as covering approximately 900 sq. miles. About three days ago on the news, I was informed that because of weather changes, the spill now covered over 2600 sq. miles. By now its area must be beyond comment. Obviously, Exxon, who was held responsible for cleanup, hasn't been doing shit in terms of cleaning up the spill. The government has now stepped in and is forcing Exxon to be more efficient. As is appropriate, Exxon is footing the bill for such cleanup, government to do since it would only take taxpayers money for Another great concern is the livelihood and professions of the nearby fishermen. Their harvests of herring, salmon, shrimp and crabs could be ruined, almost certainly this year. and most likely for years to come. Prince William Sound may become a dead body of

It would be easy to say that Exxon is a totally evil company and that oil tankers should be banned forever. Unfortunately, the resolution does not come that easily. The U.S. desperately needs the oil for power and, since nuclear power seems not to be an option, it increasingly depends on fossil fuels

The government says that is merely wants to 'explore' some of the nation's wildlife preserves for oil. What exactly 'explore' means is questionable and if this exploration turns up any oil are they just going to leave it at that? "Yep, Charlie. The oil's there alright-just what I thought. Now let's go home." I don't think so.

We must be cognizant of our environment, but we also must be cognizant of the threat that dependence on foreign energy sources poses. But while we are being cognizant of those things, we can be glad that for once, Exxon gave us a bunch of oil that we didn't ask for and that now they have to pay for it.

Alison Auber is a junior majoring in English.

In the World

Bush Administration, an- ics nounced a series of plans to combat an increase in drugrelated violence. The plans, which would cost between 70-80 million dollars, would involve the building of a pretrial scheduled to hear Missouri v. detention center, a new 700 bed federal prison in the Washington-Baltimore area, the involve- Roe v. Wade. ment of specialists from the of Housing and Urban Developeviction of drug offenders from members

ODK's new

Omicron Delta Kappa, the National Leadership Honor

Society, is pleased to announce that it has offered membership to the following juniors and (juniors), and

The Alpha Psi Circle of housing developments, and last week William Bennett, director federal money to establish three of Drug Policy Control for the out-patient drug treatment clin-

The organizers of Sunday's help the District of Columbia Pro-Choice rally and march in Washington predicted that the turnout on Sunday would leave a lasting impression on the Tbilsi as a pro-independence Supreme Court. The Court is Reproductive Services which could lead to the overturning of

Atwin-engine aircraft car-F.B.I., the easing of Department rying a group of missionaries was hijacked by two gunmen en ment Regulations covering the route from Haiti to Fort Lau- trafficker, Miguel Angel Felix derdale, and diverted to Miami. Gallardo, was arrested at his Tom Conaty, Adrienne Cupka, Dawn Dams, Esther Diamondstone, Christina Fischer, David Kelly, Sharon Orser, Arian Ravanbakhsh, Chip Shaller,

Ann Urban, Kristine Winschel, Janet Young (seniors). Room Draw

Steve Attias, Debra Cohn, ing to seniority on the following Jackie Collins, Ryder Daniels, schedule: Cynthia Gower, Tim Keehan, Wednesday, April 19th (2:00-Peter Maller, Erin Murphy 3:30); 2nd semester juniors on Thursday, April 20th (2:00-Michele Balze, April 2:30); 1st semester juniors on Baugher, Kate Bennett, John Thursday, April 20th (2:30-

mutinous soldiers involved in

Soviet Union

help end ethnic unrest. Moscow schools, stores, factories, and mass transit. The soldiers dispersed a rally on Sunday. The week of unrest has left 18 people

Mexico Mexico's most wanted drug on Friday, April 21st (2:00-2:30): and 1st semester sophomores on Friday, April 21st (2:30-4:00).

continued from page 3 can really be done now? Perhaps the crucial response has been too long delayed

This is, in fact, the case Room draw will be accord- in my view. The feds have delayed action much too long. All seniors on They should have become involved in Alaska at the first sign of trouble. The feds should Exxon's reasurrences that the situation was under control-lardo, known as "The Godfa- ment that the French will prothe rebellion against Haiti's ther" is considered a link bemilitary president during the tween the Colombian drug flict. Two French ships carryproducers and the Mexican drug trafficking network, and fuel to help ease shortages Soviet Foreign Minister is also thought to have been caused by the fighting are due Shevardnadze canceled a trip involved in the 1985 murder of to arrive this week. to East Cermany and traveled a U.S. Drug Enforcement to Soviet Georgia in an effort to Administration agent Enrique Camarena, Mr. Gallardo's arsent troops to the capital city of rest comes just before a vote in complex, Israeli police have the Senate as to whether or not announced that they will bar supporting strike closed down Mexico is doing its part to stem some Palestinian youths from the flow of drugs from Mexico into the United States. A similar vote last year resulted in

> Lebanon Syrian-backed Moslem at-present because of Exxon's in competance and the federal tacked Christian sectors around see how bad the situation actu- inertia, one of the nations most ally was; and not without unspoiled wildlife areas is in evaulating Exxon's capabilities imminent danger of being perto cope with the problem. At manently fouled.

The hijackers are reported home last Saturday. Mr. Gal- Beirut following the announcevide aide in the Lebanese coning food, medical supplies and

Israel

Following violent clashes at Jerusalem's Al Aqsa Mosque entering the city to pray at the

A gunman dressed in an Israeli Army uniform killed one economic sanctions against Palestinian and wounded three other people at the Jaffa Gate in the Old City.

-compiled by Laura Hopper

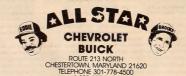

continued from page 11

Mexico.

signed the lights and junior 20, 21 and 22 at eight PM not have merely accepted Wendy Snow created the cos- Student tickets are free, factumes. Among the cast are ulty admission is two dollars Jason West as Prince Albert and general admission is four Billingslea, Thea Bournazian, 3:15);2nd semester sophomores not without at least checking to Troubiscoi, Jennifer Morgan as dollars.

Amanda, and Gina Braden who plays the Duchess

Leocadia will be per-Esther Diamondstone de- formed in Tawes Theatre April

Congratulations To The Graduating Seniors of 1989!

1-800-327-2145

We're pleased to announce that General Motors offers a College Graduate Financing Plan.

For further information, please contact the dealership.

Current Rebates of $400 - $1000 Now in Effect

Plus $400 Additional for Grads

proposal

continued from page 1

Students, faculty and staff aill also be able to take advantage of this facility being inoors. The jogging track has een designed to provide a alking and jogging area when weather conditions inhibit use of the outside track. This will give the campus indoor areas uch as racquetball and squash Expansion of intramural cometitive sports that the college

ffers is also a possible benefit "Students who are look ng at colleges these days are oking not only curriculum, but the facilities as well," Miller xplained. "They look at a school things that they can relate . We are hoping to bring them nore in athletics and physical

The department is well ware of the fact that they must provided for the facility a proper okeep staff and security to help maintain order. Therefor if the college decides to give member hip privileges to the Chester town community, no major problems will arise. Staffing the field house will depend on whether or not the work-study program and student assistance vels remain intact A new supervisory position might also e opened up and there will also be a need for a staff mem erto check identification cards. "Our staff met at the beginning of the year," Miller losed, "And we came up of a list twenty-nine or so priorities that we wanted to accomplish. The field house project covers a good deal of this. We are hoping b put this project through so that we have the flexibility to expand the athletics programs; ssibly even the addition of a wnew sports teams (women's sketball) and more access to the Washington College com-

The Washington Monument stands erect over the gathering crowds. These people visited Washington to support the Pro-Choice March on

Peace Studies Major proposed

by Julie Schram A group of students, under the faculty guidance of Dr Kevin Brien, are working to institute a series of Peace Studies courses into the future curriculum of Washington College. Inspired by Washington Post syndicated columnist, Colman McCarthy and his visit to Washington College, they are currently circulating a petition in order to express interest to the administration. According to sophomore Susan Di Leo, one of the individuals involved, they now have over 200 signatures.

According to Brien, it would not be problematic to add a Peace Studies course under the classification of Special Topics "most likely" in the Philosophy department. A course entitled "Deterrence and Nuclear War: Ethical Issues" was offered by the Philosophy Department in the 1987-88 cata-

Tamra Alexander

continued from page 1

the day because of muddy conditions. Specially designed tshirts for the benefit were sold throughout the day and are still being sold during dining hours in the cafeteria. Baked goods and hot dogs were offered for sale also. A 75-25 raffle winner was announced in the Coffee House but the winner was not present. When asking the crowd if the money should go to Tamra, cheers made the idea possible. The Grand Raffle first prize was given to John Olsen.

Faculty supported the benefit as Dr. Siemen, Dr. Striner, and Dr. Roat collected admission fees at the door in the Coffee House. Several housekeepers gave support in planning. The SGA and the Dutch Dumschot Society both gave help to the Committee for Each band listed in the original plans performed and there was even time for an additional band, the Steve Taylor Band, to play. Charlie more publicity might have inhelping with an essential part of the musical entertainment.

Both of Tamra's parents commented on the success of the day as well as the moral support it offered. "My husband and I really appreciate and thank everyone who got together and came to the bene- tain plans be carried out fit. It really meant a lot to us," said Mrs Alexander.

Chestertown Policeman, gave a touching speech during the benefit in the Coffee House. As he held Tamra in his arms, he expressed his opinion, that even though sometimes the community may have a negative impression of the student body, in continued on page 12 are some of the best people in cess of the benefit.

Following the speech given by Mr. Alexander, John Billingslea, student organizational leader of the Tamra Alexander Benefit, also spoke a few words to begin the day. He gave his appreciation as he said, Thank you to the Committee. Thank you Tamra. And thank you God."

John Billingslea commented later "The Tamra Alexander Benefit was a step towards something that is lacking, which is a link between students and administration and the union of the student body. Too much apathy can prevent these changes." He also explained that the benefit remains as an incentive to students as the organization of the benefit shows that if the student body wants something to happen, then the action needs to be taken to make it happen. Simply talking about ideas is not enough to accomplish goals.

Billingslea explained that Joiner worked the sound board, creased the number of people who attended the party. certain lack of enthusiasm existed on the part of some of the administration and some of the student body. The organization could have been smoother if there was no hesitation by administration in letting cer-

Now five years old Tamra Alexander attends therapy Tamra's father, who is a every Friday. Mr. and Mrs Alexander have decided to use the money made from the benefit to pay for the expenses of that therapy, $500 a week. Mrs. Alexander showed that she was very thankful for the support the student body has given to Tamra's cause and expressed his eyes, the College students her excitement about the suc-

OLD WHARF INN ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

DROP-OFF LAUNDRY

We will professionally wash, dry, fold and hang your clothing, $.55 lb., $5.50 minimum, same day service.

> COIN-OP LAUNDRY - PROFSSIONAL DRY CLEANING

> > KENT LAUNDRY 607 high Street Chestertown 778-3551

Parents - Alumni - Students:

Be sure to attend Family Day 1989

Scheduled are Athletic Events, Receptions, The Luau, a Drama Department Production, and much more all on the Weekend of April 22.

We of the WC Alumni Association look forward to seeing

The College Bookstore, Hodson Hall Will be Open Between 1&2 pm Saturday

FEATURES

Outward Bound: Challenging the mind over body, competing within the self

by Troy Petenbrink

You could be rock climbing in Colorado, mountain climbing in Oregon, or hiking in Maine, but all of these activities add up to equal Outward planned Bound's exciting programs that ment when I finished."

Over 19,000 people participated in the more than 500 courses offered by the program last year, and this year there are over 600 courses

Most of the courses are

The Outward Bound programs offer you the chance to master the techniques of mountain backpacking, camperaft, and rock climbing, among others. Rappelling, above, is a standard activity on most thing about your self at the same

The expression "outward serve basis bound" was a term sailors used to signal the beginning of a voyage, when the ship left its home port for the unknown. Today, the purpose of Outward Bound is just that- to get you to leave the comforts of home, family and friends, and experience the unfamiliar and the adventurous in spectacular wildiscover your own capabilities under challenging conditions.

"I attended four pro grams in Minnesota and North Carolina. Most of the programs lasted 21 days, and I went backwater canoeing, and dogsledding while in the different pro-

self physically and learn some- reasonably priced, but financial aid is available according to need on a first come first

The Outward Bound program has five locations in Colorado, Maine, North Carolina, Oregon, and Minnesota. The geographical diversity is in hopes that each school can reflect the personality and character unique to that area. Each school operates programs in various states and most offer derness settings . . . to fully courses in both warm and cold weather environments during the winter months

"Our courses this year will use the vast majestic wilderness and urban areas of twenty-two states," notes John packing, rockclimbing, white F. Raynolds, President of Out ward Bound

The program is de grams," says sophomore John signed to allow you to challenge Dorr. "The programs tested me yourself, and to attempt things mentally and physically. It felt you thought you could never like one hell of an accomplish- achieve. You do not need to be overly athletic nor do you need previous training. All you need is a commitment and a willingness to try new experiences "I learned a great deal about myself," says junior Steve Attias, who attended a session at Hurricane Island, Maine. "I learned that with hard work you can accomplish anything. The program can really make you appreciate the modern comforts of life. I think a lot of people have become materialistic and this program can really open people's eyes."

Outward Bound is physically demanding, but does not expect you to do anything beyond your ability. The programs are designed for both men and women

"I found the program to be a challenge and a benefit," states junior Sharon Orser, who also attended a session at Hur- people have become ricane Island. "It is the kind of program you hate while you are there, but you love it when it is

The basic exercise of Outward bound is the expedition. Early in the course your instructors accompany your trips, teaching you skills you need for coping with the environment and assisting you in solving the tasks of efficient and comfortable travel

You may have your inobservers for the final expedition, a test of what you have learned about teamwork and the physical environment.

The solo, a period alone, offers a welcome contrast to the intensity of the group experi-reflection, to consider the meaning of your Outward Bound experiences for your future.

The course concludes with cern. a marathon-type event, a last fling with your body at a difficult obstacle - many miles spent running, paddling, cycling, snowshoeing, or skiing - more miles than you may have thought possible.

'I learned that with hard work you can accomplish anything. The program can really make you appreciate the modern comforts of life. I think a lot of materialistic and this program can really open people's eyes."

And, as with almost eve rything else in Outward Bound, the competition is within yourself: the self that says, "Who needs it?" and the self that says, "You can do it.

Outward Bound does not teach survival skills, but rather structors as non-participating the skills necessary to live comfortably and safely in the Outward Bound is as safe as human ingenuity and experience can make it. Instructors are experienced technicians and equipment is first-rate. While ence. It is a time for rest and the dangers associated with the wilderness are real, the risks are acceptable because safety is a major and constant con-

Each course has annual on-site safety inspections, and external review teams audit each school's programs every two years. Systemwide operating rocedures have been established for all course activities. as well as measures for identifying potential safety hazards and procedures to be followed to ensure that risks are more perceived than real Traveling miles across mountains, lakes, or oceans may mean aching muscles, cold feet and wet bodies, but it also brings mutual respect, shared jokes, beautiful sunrises, and the pride of shared achieve

Along with pride will come a sense of self-confidence and inner satisfaction that will last a lifetime

"Students are almost certain to discover new things about themselves," explains Raynolds

"They expect more of themselves, become confident. learn to share, to lead and to follow, and to work together as a group. In safeguarding each other, they form bonds of mutual trust. They discover that many problems can be solved only with the cooperation of all members of a group.

For more information write to Outward Bound USA Box CN, 384 Field Point Road Greenwich, CT 06830, or call toll-free 800-243-8520.

One of the last places in the United States to be explored, the Canyonlands, in Southeastern Utah, of deep canyons, hidden springs, and archaeological treasures that few people have ever seen

Sophie's Curse:

Once again, it's time for seniors to vie for the $30,000 prize

Dear Sophie

Why'd you do it?

Every year, around this time, the entire WC campus turns its thoughts to The Prize

The housekeepers make lists of their favorites. Hungry students at the dining hall jot down names on napkins. Hell, even physics professors start to float a few names

Bill Beekman

Well, dear Sophie, I think your prize is silly. I bet that you made your will on a dare, as a devilish prank.

When I came to WC as a lowly, naive seventeen year-old, I had no idea who you were, and I had never heard of the Sophie Kerr Award

I thought The Prize was a joke when I first learned about it. $30,000? For what?

Your will, of course, provides that criticism to go on top. The Prize go to the student who shows "the best ability and promise for future fulfillment in the field of literary endeavor.

Promise for future fulfillment? $30,000 for promise? It's ridiculous

The Pulitzer Prize, an award for achievement, provides a $1,000 award; your prize for promise rakes in thirty times as much cash. Only the Nobel Prize is worth more

It is ironic, but somehow fitting, that WC's claim to fame is The Prize named after you, a hack novelist from the twenties and thirties

At first, I thought that The Prize was quaint. Perhaps a graduating student can put the $30,000 to good use. He or she can think and travel and study and write, and - of course - start fulfilling some of that literary potential.

But then consider the bad points: First, the Sophie Kerr Committee (you always need a committee for things like this, which is another drawback) must decide from a dozen or so good and varied writers the one writer who has the most promise.

measure, especially when you are considering twenty-one and twenty-two year old college students who have only begun to write seriously. It's analogous to the NFL draft: "Well, this one's got great leaping ability and he makes snazzy rhymes, too. Let's give him the with Ketchup. thirty grand!"

Next, The Prize transforms some seniors into greedy, groveling idiots. Most students try not to think of The Prize, except for the occasional "If I won Sophie Kerr .... " dreams.

But some students actually expect to win your $30,000 prize, and they feel resentful if they do not.

Some stoop to kissing ass in order to tilt the opinions of a few important people, while others spend months, even years, trying to concoct the perfect Sophie Kerr portfolio: a thesis chapter here, three poems, a translation, and a short story there, and a dash of literary

I've divided the Sophie Kerr wanna-be's into four types: the kissassers; the aloofs; the I-don't-cares; and the technocrats.

Kiss-assers, of course, try to say all of the right things to all of the right people. They are prone to lie, and their writing is prone to be adorned with glitz but to be shallow in substance, just like

Kiss-assers never criticize the Administration. They never criticize their professors, and they often raise their hand in class to ask stilted, stuffy questions

And, of course, kiss-assers will sleep with a Committee member or two if that improves his or her chances of winning The Prize

The aloofs, on the other hand, do whatever they want to do. They are different. They are strange. Or perhaps they are different only for the sake of being different, and strange only for the ake of being strange.

This may only be coincidence, but these aloof individuals seem to fit into a nost promise.

Note that is a difficult thing to the seat group. They sit together and eat writers, as the nearly equally talented to together and get drunk together. It's a writers vie to be a little more talented onderful paradox: the Individualists' Club. We should give them SGA funding, or perhaps a communal Sophie Kerr them. I entitled it Dead Individualists

The third type of senior is the Idon't-care. This type, quite appropri-

30's, laughs at WC students each year from the great beyond.

ately, does not care if he or she wins they live and die in anonymity. Eventuyour prize or not. $30,000 would be a nice bonus, but the I-don't-care is not about to fight to win The Prize, or to complain if he or she loses

The fourth type, the technocrat, contributes little to the college but heard all of these complaints before, spends vast amounts of time perfecting and that you will hear them again. his or her portfolio at WC with one ambition: to win your thirty grand prize. They get mostly A's and B's; they do hard work; but they are not imaginative or innovative or bold. And they voted for Michael Dukakis.

At the end of April, members of all four types submit their portfolios and pray to their gods that your spirit will laugh together. nake the Committee vote for them.

The Prize creates competition and resentment among the contending good than the others.

And, of course, The Prize creates a onster. A rich monster.

At graduation, the winner is an-I've written a short story about nounced, and his pocketbook is stuffed. The lucky winner not only gets $30,000, but also a swelled head. The winner, according to The Prize, has more potential than all of the other writers. Maybe he or she can leap higher, too

Perhaps the winner gets the worst. deal, though. He or she is richer, but he or she is also burdened for life.

We've all heard of the Sophie Kerr curse. No winner has ever made a name for himself in the literary circles, although Pete Turchi recently had a novel published and perhaps began to break the curse

The true curse, however, is the pressure that winning your prize brings. The one who wins the largest literary prize in the US is expected to perform immediately

But when the Sophie Kerr winners fail to get published or gain recognition, they are unfairly tagged as underachievers or as undeserving of

Like Van Gogh and Bob Jones, ally, perhaps, they fulfill their potential and they gain prestige

Or, like Bob Jones, eventually they fade away

Well, Sophie, I'm sure that you've

You have probably gotten many These seniors have spent four years hearty laughs from WC seniors who fret your silly award. When I'm rich and near death

perhaps I will bequeath my millions to a more or less anonymous small college, and curse some students with a similar And then we can have a hearty

Sincerely

Bile

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

Tuesday-Saturday Convenient Parking

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

> Janie Thompso 788-089

Happy Hours Mon-Fri 4-6:30 FREE Hors D'oeuvres

Under New Management - College Students Welcome

Monday shooter nite $2,00

Tuesday pitcher nite $3.50

Wednesday shot & draft $1.50

Thursday Ladies Nite

Friday, April 14 - DJ Jeff Reed $1 cover In The Back

> 515 Washington Street 778.1984

505 Washington Ave Chestertown, Md. :1620

SPORTS

Women laxers close in on first place

by Wendy Kerr

Undefeated on the home field, the women's lacrosse team is proving to be a dominant force in the MACs this year. Last week the team demonstrated its skill against six opponents and bowed down only to Frost week with a 7-3 record.

The women were not fooled by Dickinson on April 1, and even though they did not play to full potential they managed to put in 10 goals to Dickinson's five.

The next day though, Frostburg pulled ahead of WC play by Amy Tiehel.

The team shook off the Frostburg loss and blew past the game 11-10. Coach Diane Senior Linds Anders carries on the tradition of ringing the bell which Swarthmore (14-11), MuhlenGuinan noted that while W.MD team that is well respected.

(13-3) in their home games.

biggest home win of all against their own way." Western MD, long-time arch

WC started off slow, letburg in an 8-7 loss, ending the ting 4 goals get by before they turned on the intensity and netted 3 goals, holding W.MD to a 4-3 score at halftime. The second half developed into a battle of wills as WC worked on gaining the lead, but when W.MD pulled ahead by two with as if WC may suffer a heartbreaking loss.

Losing was not on the despite impressive midfield team's mind though, as Margaret Doyle put in a goal and Sarah Coste scored two more to win

berg (13-2), and Wash. and Lee was better man-to-man, WC was better as a team. "It was a great win with contribution April 4 proved to be the from all 21 players-each in

> As the close of the regular season draws near, the team is in a four-way tie for first with Gettysburg, WMD, and Hopkins. This Saturday will bring the tie down to three as the women battle Gettysburg at 12:30 on Kibler Field

Highscorers Sarah Coste only four minutes to go, it looked (42 goals, 4 assists) and Jen Blenkstone (21 goals, 9 assists) ought to keep up the strength of the team with the aid of goalit Linda Anders and consisten defense by Donna White and Lee Anne Ledwin, The flexibil ity of the players has formed a

Men's varsity and women's novices are victorious on the Chester

by Troy Petenbrink

The Washington College great day for the team

The team received two 2,000 Meter Regatta against first place victories. The John's Hopkins, St. John's, and women's novice eight finished William and Mary was held at 8:37, ahead of second place Saturday and proved to be a John's Hopkins who finished at 8:46. men's varsity eight won their race in 6:51, with Hopkins coming in second at 7:10

The men's novice team had their first taste of victory. The eight defeated both William and Mary and St. Johns with a time of 7:33, but lost to Johns Honkins who finished with a time of 7:15

The four, competing for the first time, defeated William and Mary, with a time of 8:10, and came close to beating St. John's, but was overcome by only four seconds.

The two men's varsity fours and two women's varsity fours were defeated by each of the teams they competed against. The women's novice IV The bowman of the women's novice eight leads the way back to the boathouse race was canceled due to rough water."I feel the races went fairly well. We won some and came close to winning in a few," stated John Wagner, coach of the women's var-

"I was really disappointed see where we stand as a whole in the way the weather changed against the other schools." half way through the races, but other than that I am pleased. However, I think it will still

Tomorrow Washington

College will face Villanova Drexel, and Franklin and Mar take a few more races to really shal in Philadelphia.

Stroke Pat devine, of the winning men's eight, breaks a smile after returning to the dock on Saturday.

tennis program at Washington College.

on't let leg cramps put a rimp in exercise routine.

Dear Dr. Jock: I feel a dication. Your doctor may have walking around the track. ould be causing it. Thank poor circulation - A.D., Norwich, Conn.

Dr. Jock

exercise. They hurt and t, very often, leg cramps prevented. The trick is erstand the possible cause cramps, and then take hree major causes of the you're feeling in your leg: or circulation. Somethe cause of leg cramps is lar. That means you have irculation in that leg. Leg during exercise caused reirculation is called clau- hope is that your cramps are less in my right leg when given you a cursory checkup, but further study such as a actor says the pulse in my Doppler Flow Test might be good and doesn't know necessary to absolutely rule out. The two stretches you need to

Dear Readers: Leg cramps another type of claudication n to lots of athletes when called neurogenic claudication that an also produce leg cramps when you exercise. It's caused by pressure on the sciatic nerve due to arthritic changes in the lobble, but the good news back. Occasionally, people will only notice sciatic pain during exercise. The pain will be present in the leg with none in the back. It's often tricky to to dis-To begin, there are at tinguish this type of claudication from the vascular problem. That's why a visit to a reliable orthopedic surgeon or neurologist may be helpful.

Inadequate flexibility. The two problems mentioned above can be serious, so the best

Read, a netter on top of his game

by Greg Cuss

Scott Read has helped to raise WC tennis to new heights Just a few years ago, Washington College had a very weak tennis program and was not taken very seriously. Today they stand as one of the premier teams in Division III tennis, looking to improve on last year's national semifinal loss, a 5-4 decision to UC Santa Cruz. One of the major contributors to the recent history of the powerhouse the Sho'men have constructed within the past 7 years is the play of the Houston, Texas native Scott Read.

Read, a native of Houston, picked up the sport at age nine. He did exceptionally well in the juniors and played many national tournaments, faring well enough to catch the eye of coach Fred Wyman, who has been exceptional at getting top players from out of state (Larry due to be the cause of your cramps, even though you say you exercise before you start your workout. You may not be making the most of the stretches you're doing. You may not even be stretching the right muscles. focus on involve the calves and Nerve problems. There is the hamstrings.

> here's one of the best. Stand at arms length away from a wall (or tree, or bus stop pole). Place your palms on the wall, and stretch your right leg back as far as you can while keeping your knee straight, your heel on the floor and your toes pointed straight ahead. Now lean forward and feel the stretch in your calf. Breath deeply and relax into the posture, allowing the stretch to gently increase. Switch legs and do the stretch until the muscle feels looser.

Hamstring stretch. Again, there are many stretches of this Chances are you can prevent Gewer, Read) and in-state (this withhold this status through year's two biggest freshmen stars Sol Schwartz and Scott Shepard, who eventually will be #1 and #2.) Read decided that playing for Wyman was the right decision so he came here, and made an immediate impact on the team. Playing #2 singles, Read reached the round of 16's of the Rolex National Championships. This year he hopes to improve on this, and should be expected to. He hopes to be ranked as high as #8 in the country, teaming with possibly #1 ranked Larry Gewer to make Washington one of the favorites to win it all this year.

singles, but teaming with Larry Gewer he has become one of the strongest doubles players in Division III as well. He has reached All-American states in singles and doubles and it appears that he should be able to

on the floor. Stretch your right leg out ahead of you with the knee straight and the toes pointing straight up. Bend your left leg up and place the heel close to your crotch with the outside of the thigh as flat on the floor as possible. In that position, gently lean forward and with both hands try to reach your Calf muscle stretch. There right foot. You'll feel the stretch are many calf stretches, but in your posterior thigh muscles your hamstrings. Allow your deep breathes to relax you and > left hamstring muscles. If daily Remember: doesn't eliminate the cramps, be sure to follow up with your physician to find out the cause. Your body is telling you something when it cramps. You can't afford to ignore such a strong Sportsmed Notebook: On stretching with awareness. type, but here's one to try: Sit your leg cramps-and several loosen things up.

out his career here

So what are some of Scott Read is interests? Along with performing in ballet to keep his footwork intact, Scott is a great lover of art. He is also a big follower of the Atlanta Hawks, who have been letting Scott down in the past few years. But if you're a big tennis fan, don't expect Scott Read to let you down at all. His singles and doubles records have been exceptional over the past two years, and even in a recent loss to Swarthmore, #2 in the nation, Read was easily victorious. Read playing more com-Read is not only strong in fortably alongside Gewer this year has made Washington more flexible. Along with Muller, Shepard, and Schwartz Washington has the depth to go all the way. Just wait and see But in the thick of it all look for the Texan wonder > other sports injuries, too-by learning how to stretch with awareness before you use your muscles. Too many people mindlessly run through their warm-ups. Next time, think of your daily stretching routine as a kind of moving meditation, a few moments of peace and quiet when you tune into your body and help it relax and loosen.

-Bring your mind into play. When you are stretching your hamstring, for instance, further your stretch. Don't force get a mental picture of where in it. Reverse legs and stretch the your body they are and what they look like. Then, when you stretch, imagine yourself pourstretching (and plenty of water) ing water or blowing your breath or using tiny fingers to massage your muscles, to loosen them and make them more able to handle the stresses and strains of full activity

-Don't strain when you stretch. Be gentle with your self. If you stretch to a point and feel stuck, take a few deep breaths and see if that doesn't

OLDE TOWNE BARBERS

WAXING * PERMS RENCH BRAIDS *

Facials Waxing Paul Mitchell Products

Super Fresh Parking Lot

Mon-Sat

778-4771

Bramble's Traditional Clothing

A Great Weekend Coming Up!

Parents, Students and Alumni stop by and check out the latest spring fashions!

For Men and Women

Downtown Chestertown

Neville Brothers triumph with Yellow Moon

by Charles A. Roddy

Art, Aaron, Charles, and Cyril Neville of New Orleans' Neville Brothers have one of the richest traditions in popular music today. After their disappointing album, Uptown (EMI) last year, they have returned with one of their finest records ever, titled Yellow Moon. On Uptown, the Nevilles adapted a more commercial sound in order to gain the recognition that has so long eluded them. On this early album, they buried their own, distinctive sound under countless layers of synthesizers and drum machines. On Yellow Moon, however, the Neville Brothers have gone back to their roots, and have somehow managed to push their music into a new territory that seems bold and uncompromising. The new album is a dark, challenging, and often painful meditation on a troubled world, much in line with Marvin Gave's What's or Bruce Going On Springsteen's Nebraska. On Yellow Moon, the Nevilles display their amazing grasp of R&B, gospel, jazz, blues, funk, reggae, calypso, country, doowop. African and many other forms, successfully integrating and expanding on these idioms The album takes on an almost avant-garde feel. There is voodoo felt in every note

But who are the Neville Brothers? A brief history might help in solving that mystery. velop his unique style on sax at All four brothers grew up in New Orleans. Art Neville, the oldest (now at 51) cut his first record, Mardi Gras Mambo,in 1953 while still in high school as the lead singer and pianist with the Hawkettes. The record became a local hit and is now an all-time Mardi Gras favorite. In the late fifties, Art became a solo act and cut several records on the Specialty label, which was the label that Little Richard and Larry Williams recorded with at the time. In the late 60's Art formed The Meters, who, along with James Brown and Sly and the Family Stone, pioneered modern funk. Aaron got into music in the late fifties after being released from prison for car theft In prison, Aaron developed a deep religious faith and discovered that he had a rare gift for singing. Aaron Neville certainly has one of the most beautiful falsettos ever heardand he has been nicknamed by some as "the golden voice." When Aaron was released from prison in 1958, he began his career singing gospel and doo-wop. In 1966 Aaron hit the top ten on Billboard's charts with, Tell It Like It Is. The song has been covered successfully by many artists, including Heart, but the definitive version remains the original cut by Aaron himself Charles Neville entered music from another direction playing jazz saxophone. After serving a three year prison sentence ('62-'65) for the possession of two marijuana ciga rettes, Charles went on to declubs in New Orleans and New

Cyril, as the youngest sings and plays congas and percussion, and has always been interested in reggae, Car ribean, and African music and, as a result of this, is now a converted Rastafarian. In the early seventies Cyril joined the Meters. When the Meters broke up in 1977, the brothers Neville formed as a collective unit. Yellow Moon is their seventh album together to date. Yellow Moon has many highlights. Cyril Neville sings the opening track My Blood, a reggae/African-influenced ode to the oppressed people of the world. My Blood sets a rather dark and somber tone for the album as a whole but the album is, by no means, a "doom and gloom" excursion. In fact Fire and Brimstone, sung by Art, is infectiously funky, despite its apocalyptic lyrics and title. The same is true for the title track, Yellow Moon, the first of five songs on the album to get the royal treatment by Aaron Neville's "golden voice." Aaron also handles lead vocals on the Sam Cooke's A Change is Gonna Come and two early Bob Dylan compositions: The Ballad of Hollis Brown and an expanded With God On Our Side (the Nevilles make all three their own), as well as the esoteric Voodoo, which Charles Neville's saxophone playing graces almost every cut on the record. and the instrumental, Healing Chant, features an extended sax solo. Also notable is Art's keyboard playing and Cyril's driving percussion which, along with the brothers' superb harmember of the four brothers, monies, add a rich texture to Gras romp

the music. One of the most moving parts on Yellow Moon is in the Nevilles' modified version of Will the Circle be Unbroken, in which the brothers swap off vocals, singing about loved ones now gone. Other interesting songs on the album are Wake Up and Sister Rosa, a rap song about Rosa Parks, that may appeal to those who don't like rap (it it roots rap). Yellow Moon ends on a joyful note with Wild Injuns, an upbeat Mardi

The Neville Brothers wise to choose Daniel La produce the album, Land has worked with U2 and bie Robertson, is known understated approach to ing as well as his ability the strengths out of arti works with. Yellow Mos firms a sneaking notion the Neville Brothers are our best musical groups are a band with a heart. when their music hurts ultimately a celebration.

Campus Calendar: April 14-20

Weekend-April 14,16,17

The Washington College Film Series presents the film, Wings of Desire, this weekend. The film, directed by Wim Wenders, is a "metaphysical to be men." An interesting in this issue. concept for a film worth seeing

Sunday-April 16

The Music Department brings to the Norman James at four PM the Washington College Early Music Consort. All are encouraged to come and listen to this unique and beautiful music

Tuesday-April 18

Society, a group which probes Here topics that pertain to women and women in society, will dis- nominated for the National acclaim and henors as a promi- grants from the Ingram Merrill this unique readingcuss "Abortion: Threatened Right or State-Sanctioned Crime." The event, in the form of a panel discussion with members of the faculty, will be held at seven-thirty PM in the Sophie Kerr Room. A related fairytale about angels who long article by Kate Absher appears

Wednesday-April 19

"Irrigation and Terracing in Peru" will be the subject of a talk given tonight in the O'Neill Literary House at seven-thirty PM. All are welcome to attend and learn more about this interesting topic.

Thursday-April 20

presents the play, Leocadia, or "Time Remembered" by Jean Anouilh. The play begins at eight PM and reservations may be obtained at the Drama Department at extension 269.

Also on Thursday The Drama Department William James Forum talk, "Do Churches Nor 'Gay is Okay?" Paneli clude members of Gay M ists, Gay Quakers and Catholics. The talk be eight PM in Hynson Lou

Feldman presents unique outlook on life in works

various issues from surprising and unique points of view, will be appearing and reading from his works tonight at four-thirty in the Sophie Kerr Room of the Miller Library. Feldman will be reading from his most recent The Margaret Horsley collection of poetry, All of Us

Book Critics Circle Award for nent poet and critic. Honors tion for his work, in addition to awards based on his dedication to the fine art of creative writing. His eight books of poetry, from which selections have as The New Yorker, Harper's, The Atlantic Monthly, Grand Street and Partisan Review,

Irving Feldman, the poet All of Us Here, has earned such as the National Institute and fiction writer who attacks numerous awards of recognipoetry award from the Jewish Book Council of America, and the Virginia Quarterly Review's Emily Clark Balch prize are all included on Feldman's impresappeared in publications such sive resume. In addition, Feldman has earned fellowships from the Academy of American Poets and a Guggen-Dr. Feldman, who was have brought him international beim Fellowship, along with

Foundation, the Nation dowment for the Arts at New York State Arts C He has taught at a wide of universities and colle cluding the University of Rico, Kenyon College University of Lyon, in f Currently, Feldman is fessor of English at th University of New Y

All are urged to

ENTERTAINMENT

Aspects of abortion deliberated by faculty

by Kate Absher With three hundred thousand to six hundred thousand people marching on the nation's capital, their voices humming in unison the phrase, "freedom of choice," the abortion issue has been debated again and again and is once again up for discussion. By April twentysixth, the Supreme Court of the United States will have reviewed and decided the fate of the Roe vs. Wade (1973) case which ruled that abortion cannot be barred by state law in the first three months of a woman's pregnancy. The prochoice and anti-abortion arguments, therefore, are once again in the forefront of the nation's conscience and igniting the concerned to adopt a viewpoint and stand on the issue.

the newly-founded Margaret different perspectives pertain- according to Taylor, has three arguments supporting them." Horsley Society, whose object is to raise awareness on women's issues on campus, is sponsoring a discussion on "Abortion: Threatened Right or State Sanctioned Crime?" The discussion is not function. ing as a debate on the opposing stances of abortion, but is instead designed to inform the audience. "We are offering different angles of vision in the problem which will help make people decide their own point of view by presenting them with particular scholarly knowledge...The decision is to allow people to leave and say, 'Gee, I hadn't thought about it that way." expressed Dr. Linda Cades, who is moderating the discussion between four faculty members. These five faculty ing to their fields to project this alternatives: they can "strike multi-faceted issue.

Dr. Kathy Verville's eight minute speech will clarify the biological aspects of abortion. She will specifically focus on prenatal diagnosis, which determines if a zygote has a genetic defect, or can determine the zygote's future sex, and how it is related to abortion.

Discussing the political aspects of abortion will be Dr. John Taylor, associate professor political science. He wants to give the audience "a sense of the way in which the court has framed this as a legal issue, and he will speak briefly about the current legal challenge to the Roe vs. Wade case. He stresses, however, that the outcome of the Supreme Court's down the restrictions" of Roe vs. Wade, limiting legal abortion to the first trimester without the consent of a doctor, "place more restrictions on the law" or "overturn Roe vs. Wade altogether. Whatever the legal decision, American society will be affected by the ruling. Assistant Dean Lucille Sansing, therefore, will ponder the sociological view of abortion. Dean Sansing maintains that the decision of a woman to undergo an abortion is related to a failure of the medical community, pro-choice movement. the educational community, and of the family unit as a whole. "A women's process of decision in deciding to abort or not to abort" does not bear any resem-Because of the recent members will be analyzing the decision is "too uncertain to blance to "the pro-life or free-controversy, it is fitting that abortion issue from several guess." The Supreme Court, domofchoice decisions and the Meaning, for example, if Peggy Sue became pregnant at the age of sixteen from her high school sweetheart Billy Joe Bob, her decision to have an abortion would probably be based on the embarrassment of having a child or not wanting to ruin the rest of her life with just one moment of passion at the drive-in. Peggy Sue's decision to have the abortion is not based on the fact that she does not want a stuffy, cigar-smoking judge telling her what she can and cannot do with her body, which is the philosophy of the

The philosophies of the ethics of abortion, and not the two opposing philosophies, will be examined by Dr. J. David Newell, Chairman of the Department of Philosophy and Religion. His "two key ethical issues are what is a person and what the limit of human choice and freedom." He will also be espousing the theory that whether something is moral or immoral is a separate question from what is legal or illegal."

These four scholars and their own ropes of experience in regards to the abortion issue will be explored on April eighteenth at seven-thirty PM in the Sophie Kerr Room. The talk will cast aside the abortion propaganda and direct the audience towards a discussion of abortion when the floor will be enormously complex." opened for audience comm continued on page 4 on the aspects presented. opened for audience comments

The recreation of love depicted in Leocadia

by Cindy Croot

The spring drama production this year is Leocadia , a romantic comedy by Jean Anouilh. Originally produced in 1939, Leocadia, at Washington College is being directed and designed by Jason Rubin, visiting assistant Professor of

The story is one of a dillitante prince who falls in love with a capricious ballet dancer named Leocadia. After three days together, she dies tragically and the Prince spends the next two years trying to recreate the places they visited together and goes to the extreme of having them built on his at Washington College, has Aunt's estate

members will be analyzing the Professor Rubin sets the play in the late nineteen-thirties, opting to produce the British version of the English translation. He notes that the British version is less romantic, but also remarks that he has incorporated elements of the American version as well, and cites the song that appears in the third act as an example.

Kate Bennett, a student written all of the music for the show, which, Rubin remarks "has captured the play's moods effectively." He has added a brief prologue which he feels will also help the audience experience a "jovial mood."

A play which operates o many levels, Leocadia gives to the audience both the light and dark side of romance. States Rubin, "the question arisescan one recreate a mood, a presence, a person or a remembrance of the past?" Jason West, who plays the prince, agrees that the play can be enjoyed on many different levels, stating that the"plots and subplots and themes of the play are

The Margaret Horsely Society presents: "Abortion: Threatened Right or State Sanctioned Crime?"

A Non-Partisan Panel Discussion With Members April 18th at 7:30 pm of the Faculty In the Sophie Kerr Room

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

Austin Carpet 778-4656

Rt .213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Ironstone Cafe 236 Cannon Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 301-778-0188

Tuesday-Saturday Lunch: 11:30-2:00 Dinner: 5:30 Closed Sundays & Mondays

NEWS

March

were those there that were lit erally seventy." She echoed Brien's statement that individuals from all classes at tended the March. "Everybody was together for a common cause. Dickson also commented on the impact of such an enormous crowd. "It was incredible, all the people that were there. As far as I could see in any direction there were people.'

Though admittedly in the minority, some members of the faculty and student body were willing to voice their opinions in support or partial support of the Pro-Life movement. Jim Sieman, professor of Psychology, described himself as walking a middle path. "I feel that the individual has the right to choose. I'm not in favor of taking rights away from thinking adults, but I don't believe in abortion either." He cited that the issue was "very much in the cauldron with many facets to examine."

Sandra Perez, a Washington College Senior, stated that the arguments were "clear" to her. "I'm a Christian so I believe what the Bible says. That's why I believe that abortion is wrong. At the moment of conception, that's life."

These women, representing Planned Parenthood, take a moment out before proceeding on the March. They were only a few of the reported 300 to 600,000 supporters of the Pro-Choice movement on Sunday.

Peace Studies Major

continued from page 5

These students, however, are currently responding to Coleman's challenge to organize a minor program at Washington College. Freshman Joe Hamilton, who will be interning this summer with a Quaker Peace Organization, said, "We'd been thinking about something like this before, but he [Mc-Carthy] kicked us in the pants." Now busy gathering information from other universities and colleges who already have thriving Peace Studies programs, they intend to draw up a formal plan and proposal of their own.

Peace Studies courses would include the study of pacifist writers, alternatives to violence, the study of the history, theory, and effectiveness of nonviolence, nuclear war, and would most likely include community services of some kind, possible that Peace Studies could be incorporated under the umbrella of Freedom Studies, which would include Women's and civil rights curriculum in addition those of peace.

Although very enthusiastic about being the faculty rep-that the Peace Studies program will develop into a major in the future because of the College's small size. In addition, such a major could, he feels, change the image of the school that Public Relations prefers por-

Brien, who wrote and distributed a pamphlet entitled "A Declaration for Peace" memory of Martin Luther King, Jr., for the occasion of the June 1982 United Nation's disarmament march, added, "This effort is clearly motivated by a sincere group of students.'

The Peace Studies proposal will tentatively be submitted to the administration in

Helpline

The Washington College according to Di Leo. It is also Helpline is open to answer any question you may have, from how to register in a class to the more serious personal problems.

If you need to talk to someone on an anonymous basis then call 778- 0206, Thursday through Sunday resentative for this student nights. Trained student volum teers will be there to answer

Mom's Cookie Jar

Be sure to mark April 12th on your calendar for the bike giveaway along with hats, frisbees, Yoplait cups, T-shirts and many, many more prizes. The prizes were donated by Yoplait Yogurt and J/P Brokerage

The special events for the duration of the month are as follows: April 12th, Turkey Day and Bike Giveaway; April 19th, Spring Buffet; April 22nd, Parents Day and Luau; April 26th, Pennsylvania Dutch Dinner; April 27th, Mini Pasta Food Show.

Nutritional Note: Calcium is the most abun dant mineral in the body and most of the body's calcium is found in the bones (97%0 and Teeth (1%). The remainder is found in the soft tissues of the body where it performs a variety of pertinent functions

It is needed for bone formation and maintenance, nerve transmissions, heart function, muscle contraction, blood clotting, metabolism and some enzymatic reactions and hormonal secretions. Bone is constantly being broken down and rebuilt; thus the body's constant need for calcium does not stop after childhood, but continues throughout life, if calcium consumption is inadequate over time, calcium will be released from the bones, weakening the skeleton and resulting in "osteoporosis" (porous bones).

Eating a diet rich in calcium throughout life may help prevent osteoporosis and its complications Currently, the recommended dietary allowance (RDA) for calcium for adults and children is 800 mg | day, the amount in approximately three cups of milk

Hope that you will have a good week Take care.....MOM

Washington College Elm

Volume 60, Number 24

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 21, 1989

Hessey addresses tuition increase

by Tracey Connell hard of Visitors and Goverors recently approved a tuion increase applying to the 989-90 academic year. rding to a notification letter ated April 5 the increase was cessary to accommodate a sculty and staff salary raise, creases in food and utility sts and the removal/clean up the PCB transformers

Gene Hessey, Senior Vice resident for Management and nance, outlined the approval A proposed budget, hich included the tuition raise, as brought first before the aculty Finance Committee. en before the Board Finance mmittee. After both agreed the changes it received "full ard approval. A letter of notification was en mailed and was addressed both students and parents. it President Cater provided tails, saying that the budget aluded "increases of fees and ition of $860, dormitory rental $212, and full board charges ($188. Next year's tuition will tal $10,500; room rental and board charges will total Cater also stressed that old expenditure increases to elowest possible level. At my ging, the Board sent a direce in December to all college partments that required port budgets be held at frent levels during the year ulty salaries forward."

ahead." Hessey also maintained The Washington College that, aside from faculty and staff salaries, the cost of utilities and food as well as PCB clean up "everything else was held steady. All departmental budg eting for things such as station ary, postage, telephone expenses, xeroxing were held at current levels and moved forward into next year's budget.'

Hessey openly addressed the controversial PCB issue "Obviously if we are fined we will have to pay that fine," he said of the EPA's $150,000 levy against the college. "But the fine isn't budgeted." As for the cost of new transformers, Hessey cited the efforts of the Administration to compensate without taxing students and their parents through tuition increases. "We refinanced an outstanding debt. We were lucky because interest rates had come down." Despite these efforts, funds needed to finance removal were unavailable. "It is not inexpensive and you can't finance something you're taking out and throwing away.

Washington College should remain a "best buy". according to Hessey. He projected that it would attain a still-low rank of "84 to 81 or 80."

"Clearly the priority is in he Board and the President maintaining comparable levels tas a primary objective to of salaries. One can be sure that the product, here the educational value [of Washington College), will decrease over time if one cannot attract a desirable faculty. We've made some significant strides in moving fac-

This student enjoyed the weather by playing hackey sack outside.

Student involved in cross-walk accident

by Tracey Connell

Washington College student, Joan Koo, was struck by a car while crossing route 213 this past Tuesday night, April 17, at approximately 7:30 PM. Koo sustained only minor inju-

According to Washington College Chief of Security, Jerry Roderick, Koo was using the cross-walk to transverse 213 and was in the process of walking from Reid Hall over to the fire-lane when John McCloy, a 34 year old man from Colora, MD, struck her

Apparently the northbound lane had stopped for the student and the southbound had not. McCloy did not see her until it was too late to stop, but he fortunately had enough time to slow down, thus she sustained no serious injuries.

Washington College student. witnessed the accident through a Literary House window. It was Murphy who initiated a call for an ambulance estertown Police Department. stated that Koo was taken by ambulance to the local hospital and was released by 9:00 PM. He stressed that even though Koo cannot be held at fault for the accident, pedestrians should use special care when crossing the highway. "It bears out what I said before," Stetson stated, referring to statements made earlier this semester about student/citizen responsibility in utilizing the walk, "Even if you're right in that kind of situation, you're wrong.

Chief Stetson, of the Ch-

McCloy has been charged with violations of cross-walk laws and was also unable to produce his driver's licence at the time of the accident. Stetson called the latter charge "unimportant".

By that I mean that if you get injured you're the loser

Both Stetson and Roder-Erin Murphy, another ick wanted to warn students to exercise caution. Said Roderick, "Basically be more careful at night or in bad weather. they think they are."

SGA officers inducted

The 1989-90 Student Government Association Executive Council was sworn in last Monday evening in the Sophie Kerr Room.

Steve Attias, Tracey Coleman, Kevin Kelly, Mary Beth Enright, and Chris Warren took oaths for the offices of President, Vice President, Secretary, and Social Chairs respectively. Joe Van Name, Treasurer, was absent, and Stuart Nieman was sworn in as Parliamentarian. Gary Clark will serve as the new SGA faculty advisor.

Finney, concluding the business of his administration. reported that the current balance is $240, although there may be nearly $3,000 of SGA funds in care of the Business Office. The Heineken Party, co-sponsored by the SGA and the Theta Chi Fraternity, caused the SGA to lose $780.

Beginning next year the SGA Vice President will be a non-voting, non-speaking representative at all Faculty Meet-

When Old Business was concluded and the new officers sworn in, Attias took his place as SGA President by saying, "I'd like to congratulate the past administration. I think they did an admirable job under the circumstances

Admissions office orchestrates enrollment

by Jennifer Golden

Most students forget about the Admissions office at Washington College as soon as their letter of acceptance ar-However, most don't realize the amount of hard work that is involved in each selection of a Washington College student. Kevin Coveney, Vice President for Admissions and Enrollment Management, ex Students are not as visible as plained why students should

continued on page 5

| PCB editorialsp 3          |
|----------------------------|
| W.C. internsp 6            |
| Women's Lax top rankingp 9 |
| Student Art Showp 10       |

Letters to the Editor..... 2

Enrollment threatens with its growth

Next semester, Washington College will be filled to its capacity. Every room will be used as it is intended; there will be no more doubles used as singles. Every classroom will be filled as well; faculty will have more papers and exams to grade, and the student-teacher ratio will lose its charm. For students, the two main concerns when planning their college year are "what classes shall I take?" and "where am I going to live?" Next year the answers to these questions are the two most threatened aspects of student life

This year there were eight hundred and fifty students enrolled as undergraduates at Washington College, with the freshman class proportionately larger than the senior class, and also larger than the junior and sophomore classes. Next year the freshman class will be even larger, and presumably the freshman class of 1990-1991 will expand even more.

The problems with this enrollment boom are multi-fac eted. The two most obvious and problematic are housing and class size. Obviously there will be a housing crunch next year, and students and faculty have already had to deal with the overwhelming growth of the average class size.

For the first year, Washington College cannot guarantee housing to all students. There are approximately six hundred and eighty spaces for students to live on campus, without using the lounges as has been done in the past. Two hundred and seventy spaces are reserved for the incoming freshman class, leaving approximately four hundred and ten spaces for upperclassmen. Since room draw works around seniority, most rising seniors should have no problem finding on-campus housing. Juniors' choices may be less attractive, but at least they have a better chance than the sophomores who are left with slim pickings. Hopefully enough people will want to live off-campus o that next year's sophomores aren't completely prevented from living on-campus

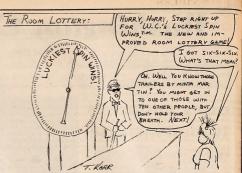

It is definitely a draw back when an upper level class, a seminar for example, is geared toward fifteen people and thirty people are enrolled. Not only is the student's time with the rofessor reduced, but the work load of the teacher is increased. professor reduced, but the work load of the faculty is overworked, and spread thinly over a large number of students, the quality of education is compromised.

The students who came to Washington College chose to give up the advantages of a large university in exchange for the advantages of a small liberal arts college. Part of this advantage was the low student to faculty ratio. Unfortunately this is one of the benefits that Washington College is losing as more and more students are accepted and enrolled. Perhaps the College should reexamine its desire for population growth, as n students reexamine their reasons for attending Washington College

Washington College Elm

| Editor                        |                      |  |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|--|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harrison |  |
| News Editor                   | Tracey Connell       |  |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaum      |  |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne:       |  |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansky  |  |
| Photography Editor            |                      |  |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar             |  |
| Managers                      |                      |  |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekman         |  |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William   |  |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobczał        |  |
| Assistant Circulation Monager | Cumthin Com          |  |

Julie Greene and Cathy Lease

Letters to the Editor

Rules are for your safety

To the Editor:

published article about Faculty use of the Cain Athletic Center, susceptible to injury. I would like to voice the follow ing comments. I am a student supervisor of the Fitness Center. On many occasions I have opened the Fitness Center, only to find Dr. DeProspo already having accessed the weight room through his own key. Dr. De Prospo is an avid user of the "free" weights, many of which require a spotter. The regulation about having a "spotter" is printed on both the entrances to the Fitness Center. Repeatedly, I have found Dr. DeProspe straining under an enormous amount of weight. When asked if he would like a spot, he has always denied me. Sometimes using a harsh tone if he was upset about the way his workout was going. After this I was forced to stand away from him, yet still be available if the weights did happen to fall. My job was created through the student work-study program. The job requires me to ensure a safe environment within the Fitness Center, and to assist anyone unfamiliar with the weight room itself

The faculty must underliability suits, as well as prowho use the facilities. The room without any supervisor not risk leaving themselves open to the possibility of a law suite. Dr. DeProspo is a perfect example because, he often does not use the proper techniques when lifting the weights. He In response to the recently puts a tremendous strain on his back and could be easily

In response to the argument that because of the new regulations Mr. Miller is taking away from the small town atmosphere of the college, I see no basis for this claim. Mr. Miller is trying to improve the conditions of the athletic facilities, and make them safer for faculty as well as student. In no way would Mr. Miller try to change the atmosphere of the college, because it is precisely that atmosphere which draws the faculty and students to Washington College, Mr. Miller is using these changes to help prepare this College for the step into the 1990's. These changes will inevitably help this college in its "renewed drive for suc-

In response to Dr. DeProspo and all the other faculty who are complaining about the new rules, keep in mind "rules are for your safety as well as the student's. Follow and obey them and they might save your

Signed respectfully, John Kelly Fitness Center Supervisor

Aghast over touchy caption

To the Editor:

minute and I allow you that. In fact, I commend you on your being present. The College can your attention something that I have been mulling over for a few days and feel justifies this note. I find the quotation: "The Washington Monument stands erect over the gathering crowds..."insensitive and some what silly in relation to the function that occurred last Sunday, the 11th. I imagine! shouldn't ruminate whether or not this was the product of a sly "ha-ha" in the Elm office the night before th copy went to print or whether was a mere, unintentional slip More than anything it make me sad. The people who gathe to express themselves and their ideologies do so for themselve and, in the instance of the Pri Choice marches, for the cit zens of life around them. Pleas do them justice by sidesteppin those opportunities to count their efforts by sneaking i clever, subliminal hints the condition, hinder, and arre fair development. At what poir do we start examining the infi tration of sexism that slink through our lives, here and now or the gender discrimination that sneaks unchecked between the pages of our newspapers Sincerely

Stephanie Milton Buying back

books To the Editor:

For the benefit of you readers, the Bookstore wou

During the week of fin examinations, May 8th throug May 13th, The Bookstore w have its annual book buyback Books will be bought from 1 A.M. to noon and 1P.M. to P.M., Monday through Frids

The Bookstore will pur chase a very few, select title continued on page

ISSUE:

How do you feel about the administration passing on E.P.A. fines for PCB violations to the students in tuition?

Place the blame where it rightly belongs

The issue of whether or tuition funds being taxed for should not be drained by finanat the administration is justidin placing the burden of the PA fine upon the students is of responsibility. Where es the responsibility for mplying with EPA regula-os lav? The obvious answer to this estion is that the responsility lays in the administra-It was revealed that the PA had warned Washington ellege of PCB violations, and ed given the school time to rrect the violations. The hool failed to correct the viotions completely, thus regardgthe EPA warnings with little no respect. The point is that efine could have been avoided the administration had folhey chose not to do so comletely. In this respect there is justification for the students' the administration's wrongdoings. The students who support the school with their tuition funds (or that of their families) should not be stung with the cost of the fine.

If paying students are having part of their tuition diverted for the fine, than so are those students whose tuition are paid by the government. This makes it just one tight, happy vicious circle! The government fines the school, then the school places the financial burden upon the students, some of whom are financed by the government.

The student's tuition is intended for his or her academic costs. Teacher's salaries are wed the proper channels, yet raised in this manner and so are the costs accrued from the procurement of academic resources. The tuition fund

cial demands placed upon the institution by the government. Finishing my fourth year at Washington College, I have seen my tuition steadily increase well beyond the rate of inflation. This is not a phenomenon unique to this school, yet additionally taxing the students makes it much more pain-

Another question comes to mind following this incident. Is Washington College attempting to expand beyond its means? With the levying of the fine there has been no talk of suspending the plans for long range development. A letter received by students earlier in the week explained that there may be a housing shortage due to the prospective increase in incoming students. By not ensuring adequate housing for the students who choose to remain at Washington College the school shows little support for the students who wish to remain on campus. It appears that rather than drawing from the development funds for the payment of the fine, the school will draw the resources from the student's tuition fund. Since the school has reportedly raised $33 million for the Master Plan. it seems conceivable that a separate fund raising campaign could be initiated to raise the required money for the fine.

Carter Boatner

By passing the fine onto the students the school may be cutting itself short of future Alumni support. Not only do the students feel that it is not their responsibility to finance majoring in history. He is sports the cleanup, but that the school editor for the Elm.

has not provided the students with a model of responsibility in dealing with the PCB situ-

It is time for the administration to re-examine itself and that of the role in which it plays in the community. The PCB incident is a blight which has tainted us all. Washington College could be a great institution, yet by not ridding it's closet of all skeletons it will potentially endanger itself by reducing community and Alumni support. Place the responsibility of the blame where it rightly falls, and admit to failure. Only then can this institution gain respectability and advance successfully towards the next century.

Carter Boatner is a senior

Peter Hagen that the school should pay idea? rit themselves.

Paul Oher of for the school's errors. I parents know about this levely

Senior ould not have to be penal- That's just typical. Do our Tuition is too high already. The students shouldn't have to pay for Baer's incompetence.

Senior ... it's wrong that the students I don't agree that the students are getting shafted because of the Administration's mistake.

Freshman should pay, especially because the higher costs will make it harder and harder for students to afford this college.

by Thomas Cushing

Use tuition money to concur with safety regulations

Tuition money is a major ert of the money used for the meral maintenance of Washtton College. As a private stitution, tuition money is en more critical than at other hols, and is necessary for general upkeep of the Therefore, tuition hey should be used to concur ith government safety regutions and remove the danger-BPCB transformers However, if this had been the promptly and properly, er a period of time instead of

at once, the students would have had to bear such a theost. A fine of one-hundred diffty thousand dollars was med against this school beuse it chose to ignore the law. is is the part where I believe students begin to feel outKen Winkler

But of course, one may say that this is the only way to raise the money: we need to let in more students and make them pay more. Not only will the College cost more to the student, but as a result of its growing size, the educational experience will worsen in every area from housing to class size to professors' workloads. When your price goes up as your quality goes down, it is not a good way to remain one of the "Best Buys in College Educa-

But hey, where else can we get the money? Raising tuition is the only way, right? Or maybe you can think of another place to get money. What about taking out of the salary of whatever employees of the College ignored the law, endangered lives, and cost us the fine in the first place? Is that too harsh?

Now personally, I have nothing against the administration of this College; there are some fine hardworking members of it, many of whom have repeatedly gone out of their way to help me. I am certainly willing to forgive others for their mistakes, but I am not willing to pay for them

As I understand it, had there been a fire in a building with PCB's in it, a fire fighter would have come in unaware of this fact and been exposed to harmful gases. Perhaps he would have died. In my mind, it is only good fortune that kept this from being the consequence. I have to question

this College, and if indeed they should be in a position of au-

Part two of my problem with this situation, which actually has only a tangential bearing on the question of tuition, is the lack of information which the administration has supplied to us on this subject. We have learned very little about this situation, and I am frightened about how much less we might have learned, had it not been for some hard-hitting report-

As the students pay for, quoting President Douglass Cater's recent letter home, "twothirds of the College's operating costs", we are entitled to know how it is being spent. We should be told many things that whose responsibility it is to see we are not, but restricting that crucial laws are obeyed at myself to the PCB question, we should know things like: 1) what was behind the decision or the lack of decision made, 2) who is responsible, and 3) what is being done other than paying the fine, fixing the transformers, and hoping nothing like that happens again. Basically, some sort of report would be nice. Perhaps I am losing friends in Bunting, but we have the right to know. I've done my share of papers here. Why couldn't Bunting do one? I would think that if they are doing the right things to rectify the situation, they would want to broad cast that fact. If they are not. then I am truly frightened. Ken Winkler is a senior philosophy major. He will continue his studies at Catholic University.

In the World

criminal charges

Exxon will hire 4,000 people to scrub 305 miles of Alaskan shoreline fouled by the oil spill: however, only half the September when winter weather begins.

The House ethics committee voted unanimously to charge

The U.S. pressed its crack- lic hearings, will call witnesses down on the black market in to testify that the Texas Demosteroids for athletes as two crat systematically bent house suppliers of illegal steroid prod- rules to accept improper funds ucts pleaded guilty in Miami to from lobbyists and business-

Bush recently proposed lower tariffs and the rescheduling of the Polish debt in an effort to accelerate economic beaches will be cleaned by changes in Eastern Europe and funnel U.S. investment and international aid into Poland's economy James Wright with 69 viola. Mitchell has asked his staff to of a political and economic ac- withdrawal of troops was not sectarian dividing line.

investigators, at possible pub- House withheld documents months of talks between Contra inquiry

GREAT BRITAIN

Britain is considering a han on standing room only sec- students marched in Beijing of a dissident who visited Pva tions of soccer stadiums as criticism mounted over the police handling of a crowd in Sheffield, England in which 94 fans were killed.

POLAND

legalized the Solidarity labor

from Congress during the Iran- Poland's Communistrulers and union led opposition.

CHINA

and Shanghai to mourn the gyang was part of a plan death of Communist Party chief undermine its efforts for bets Hu Yaobang, and to call for relations democracy and freedom. USSR

Soviet authorities anseven-year ban and formally Tbilisi, capital of the southern republic of Georgia, would be Senate Majority Leader organization. The move is part lifted Tuesday. However, the across the Lebanese capital

NORTH KOREA

North Korea canceled to negotiating sessions with the Seoul government, saying Thousands of Chinese South Korea's arrest last we

ISRAEL/LEBANON Fires in Beirut burned of control as Christian tron A Warsaw court lifted a nounced that the curfew in traded artillery fire with Se ian and Moslem gunners. Tan also battled at close quarte

tions of ethical rules. Special investigate whether the White cord reached April 5 after two considered. compiled by Jacque Collins It's time to retire Oliver North's halo and put those medals behind bars.

If Oliver North had his way he would be seen by Americans as the patriotic hero who was used and abused by his superiors. Two years ago in front of the cameras he perfected his image and somehow

Wendy Kloiber

right as well. This was despite the fact that most surveys showed that the American people did not favor funding to the Contras, least of all by selling arms to that great friend of the U.S., Iran. Maybe the multi- tween the two. tude of metals on North's chest reflected the lights from the television cameras and blinded the American neople temporar-events, which turned a national embarrassment into a martyred hero, the halo around Oliver North's head is slowly losing its glow. His trial and subsequent appearance on the witness convinced many of us that what stand are casting a new picture he did was not only legal, but of the man as an official who knew what he was doing was wrong, but not that it was illegal. His superiors asked him to to what extent his actions were illegal, he did them. It all hinges on the difference between the words "wrong" and "illegal." Apparently North never learned that when it comes to covert government operations there exists a strong bond be-with this new picture North is calmness, confidence and even trying to project. What it comes at times humor. He was the ily. Whatever the explanation down to is that he can be one of master showman, never out of ment official who carried out a complex plan (even more complicated than the invasion of Grenada) knowing all the time that what he was doing was wrong. The fact that he lied to congressional panels and othare about the operation tends to confirm this first persona. On the other hand, he could be the do something, and not knowing ignorant servant who didn't question his superiors when asked to do something he knew was wrong. From his appearance in front of the Iran-Contra panel two years ago it seems like the real Oliver North is behind persona number one. Many of us watched him deftly field, if not always answer, the panels' questions. There is something wrong Always with him was a sense of the intelligent and able govern- in his voice at just the right a joke and more of a nation moment, and always looking embarrassment than Da straight in his questioner's eyes. Robert McFarlane and John Poindexter had none of North's appeal. McFarlane was shaky, apparently nervous and hesitant in answering the panels. Poindexter used his pipe like a drowning man would a preserver. This might be somewhat exaggerated, after all it has been a while, but I think most of us would agree that it is hard to believe a man like Oliver North would be unable to stand up to either McFarlane or Poindexter. I may not like Oliver North, but even I have respect for his self-control. To excuse him simply because he says however for this odd turn of two personae. One, he can be control, letting that little crack "They made me do it," would Quayle.

> So what is now to be do with Colonel Oliver North There can be no doubt that who he did was wrong and illegi He himself no longer denie that, in which case he shoul face the penalty for his action Loyalty and/or stupidity is a excuse for criminal action. To people who really respect 0 iver North for his intelligent if not for his use of it, are the who realize it is time to reti his halo and put those medi behind bars. Wendy Kloiber is preside of the Young Democrats.

continued from page 2

back from students for its own use. The majority of the books will be bought back for used book companies we represent. It is the used book companies who establish the price to be paid and which titles will be bought.

Anumber of factors determine how much these companies will pay for a book. Generally, you will receive about 25% of the original price. If a title has been in publication a long time, you may only receive about 20% of the original price. Similarly, for a title which is in demand you might be paid as much as 30%

Some books will not be bought. If a book has gone into a new edition or a new edition is pending publication or a title has been declared out-of-print by the publisher it will not be bought. Titles from lesserknown publishers infrequently used at colleges and universities around the nation and books published in a foreign language will not be bought. Additionally, books deemed to be in unacceptable condition will not be bought. "Unaccep able condition" means boil with more than five loose missing pages, lab manuals workbooks with more thanfi pages of answers filled-in a any book missing its cover or major portion of the cover.

Every student who has balance due on his or her Boo store account will be requir to apply any money they ceive at buyback to that or standing balance. So if y want to keep the cash you! ceive for selling your book make sure your Bookstore has been paid before final ext week!

At this year's buyback will be trying something ne One of the companies is prepring a quick reference list author of the books used the academic year. It is hoped the will streamline the process for both Bookstore personnel a well as students. Buyback is busy time, a little like "rus but on a smaller scale. P tience and cooperation are sential.

Thank you

The Sly Horse

Gifts Clause Clothing

P.O. Box 237 111 S. Cross Street Maryland 21620 (801) 778-2226

Patricia O. Horsey

Rifts - Fastern Shore and Chestertown Souvenirs Classic Clothing for Women and Men

This coupon worth 20% off all merchandise at The Sly Horse (consignment and sale items excluded) Good Only Friday and Saturday, April 21 and 22, 1989 One Purchase Only Per Customer

> Open 9:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m Visa-MasterCard-American Express-Discover Accepted

Admissions

continued from page one take notice of the Admissions Office's work, "Everyone of the students that we admit become representative of Washington College.

Although student selection is done year round, the process starts in the Spring. The office follows a three step formula. Most high school students get their results back from their PSAT. From an item on the PSAT called the SDQ (Student Descriptive Questionnaire) the College first buys approximately 35-50,000 names from the College Boards. This initial amount is pared down to about 10,000 names which is entered into the College computer system. Over a period of six to eight months, these students are flooded with information from WC. This includes the college guide, catalog and application as well as other pamphlets concerning extracurricular activities at WC. This initial step is where the Admissions Office tries to recruit as Coveney stated this objective as, "Defining the audience and building it.' Next, from this large pool of interested students, about many applicants it can get.

College or Country Club? Washington College swings into Spring while this student takes time out to play.

application. This brings about mission process. the next major step in the selection process: narrowing down the choices. Coveney stated that, "A large part is communi-

This is where the third and final step in selection comes into play: reviewing the applicants. This is a more specific 1,500 will actually fill out an cation" at this part of the ad- stage. Communication between

They'd like to get as many applications as possible because plan to expand recruitment in the more applications received. the more selective the Admission Office can be in admitting the best students. "Eventually, I like to get up to 2000 applica-tions in," said Coveney.

After applications are in, the admissions office decide who to admit. They tend not to necessarily look at the SAT and the GPA first, instead they look at where a student went to high school. Overhalfofall students at WC went to a private school. Coveney stated that what they look for in a high school student, "We tend to look at the state of preparedness that a school offers." If there are other students at WC that have come from the prospective schools, the office checks to see how well this particular high school prepared those students for WC As for public schools, Coveney stated, "students almost always have had to be in the top half of the class, many were in the top quarter." This emphasis on the quality of a high school is different from larger schools where a C is a C. no matter what other circumstances. Other factors play into why a student received grades in high school and the WC Admissions Office can take them into account in its deci-

The Admissions Office other states beyond Maryland, although not to neglect Maryland. Other goals include an effort to increase the quality of student and to increase the numbers of minorities. Also planned is an attempt to get Alumni actively involved in recruitment.

The office would like to recruit more students in other intended majors besides WC's stronger majors such as English, Psychology, Political Science and Business. According to Coveney more science majors are expected since the improvement of the college facilities, most notably the building of the Decker Science

He stated, "A small school is ideal for undergraduate science majors." He stressed that at a larger school it's often hard to get actual hands on experience and classes are often taught by graduate students.

There is also a push to get more art majors at WC. With the construction of a new art center, more majors are anticipated. The toughest major to up enrollment is Foreign Languages. Coveney stated that as a whole it is a weak major, "Less than 1% of high school students say that they want to be a Foreign language major.

Mom's Cookie Tar

Congratulations to Rose Jarboe for winning the five speed bike April 12th during the bike giveaway. The bicycle was donated by Yoplait Yogurt, represented by J/P Brokerage. We also extend our congratulations to the many other participants who won frisbees, hats, cups and tote bags. On April 17th we had two more winners during our Mousse and Sauce night. Congratulations to Karen Reisinger for winning the Kodak camera, and to Maria Banashak for winning the American Tourister tote bag. The camera and tote bag were donated by Le Gout Foods. Thanks a lot to Yoplait Yogurt, J/P Bokerage and Le Gout Foods for making the prize giveaways possible.

REMINDER:

As of April 18, 1989

1) NO STUDENT CHARGES WILL BE AC-CEPTED. YOU MUST PAY WITH CASH ONLY! (THIS INCLUDES ALL YOU STUDENTS ON 10 AND 14 MEAL PLANS. IF YOU GO OVER 10 OR 14 AMOUNTS YOU MUST PAY CASHI,

2) NO STUDENT OR STUDENT ORGANIZATION CAN CHARGE PARTY ORDERS

MEAL HOURS FOR SATURDAY APRIL 22ND BREAKFAST (MAIN DINING ROOM) 9:00-9:30 AM, STUDENTS' LUNCH (MAIN DINING ROOM) 11-30 WY -1:00 PM, STUDEN'S' AND PARENTS' LUNCH

(MDR) 1:00 PM-2:00 PM, BOARD MEMBERS' LUNCH (MTP) 1:00 PM-2:00 PM, LUAU AT WILMER PARK PAVILION 5:00 PM-7:00 PM.

The Dining Service Staff welcomes all parents, friends, relatives, and Board Members Pennsylvania Dutch Dinner will be held in the Main Dining Room Wednesday evening April 26th. Hope you will have a good week.

The WASHINGTON COLLEGE BOOKSTORE will be open from 10:00am until 2:00 pm Saturday, April 22, 1989

FAMILY DAY

Washington College Film Series Presents

Au Revoir

LES ENFANTS (GOODBYE, CHILDREN) A FILM BY LOUIS MALLE

Showing in the Norman James Theatre Friday, April 21* Sunday, April 23 * Monday, April 24

Annapolis internships teach students the nuances of the political machine

by David Snyder

For some Washington College students, just keeping up with the work due for their classes is enough to keep them busy. Studying, reviewing, recopying and rewriting allows little time to do much else

But every year at WC there is a select group of students who not only complete their regular classwork, but take on added work voluntar-

These students are the Washington College interns for the Delegates and Senators in Annapolis, Maryland's capital and seat of government.

At the start of every year from mid-January to April, Maryland's law makers convene in Annapolis to pass bills and propose legislation for the upcoming year, and every year a handful of WC interns go to Annapolis and assist the Delegates and Senators, doing eve rything from clerical work to taking notes to attending hear

Dr. Ed Weissman, the director of the internship program, helps to get each student assigned to a Delegate or Senator, and once that is done, he periodically checks in at Annapolis on the progress of each

He explains, "Each intern is assigned to a Delegate or Senator. Then, they go to Annapolis twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, for the 90 days that the House is in session." The intern, too, gets school credit for the work that he or she does

While many believe that interns are merely "gophers" for their Senator or Delegate. Senior Monte Bourjaily IV, an intern to Delegate Ellen Sauerbrey last year, says, "You're very important as an intern. You're not a clerk, you're a member of the staff, equal to any other an interesting case in point: Studies major. "Once, when one of the Delegates forgot he had a hearing on a bill, he went fishing, and it fell to the intern to pilot the bill

Not everyone is cut out to Senior Cate Lucas explains how she got involved with the internship program in her senior year. "I'd gotten my thesis done early and had a lot of free time and Dr. Weissman

Political Science major, got involved with the internship program in hopes of one day working for the federal government, possibly with the FBI.

Macindoe's Delegate was

Junior Neil Macindoe, a larger scale,

According to Dr. Weissman another honus to the internship program is that "Many of our interns have been offered permanent positions," which is, after all, what college is supposed to prepare you for once you graduate.

Senior Lynn Burris, another Political Science major and an intern last year to Senator Amoss, returned to Annapolis this year as a legislative aid which, unlike the internship, is a paid position.

She says, "He offered me the job at the end of my internship last year," and she gladly accepted.

"This year I got more responsibility. I knew the ropes and so he trusted me a lot more. Burris explains

"I did a lot of researching for his bills, and I wrote a lot of his testimony for him. And sometimes when people called with complaints, I'd follow up on them." She adds jokingly, "And of course menial things like filing and stuff. You can't seem to escape from that!"

Since working as an intern, Burris has had several job interviews, and has found that the internship enhances her resume

"I really want to get a job with the state government, that's my goal," she says,"and I think the internship really helped me understand the relationships between state and local government."

This thought was echoed by the other interns who participated in the program.

"I would really like to do this again if the opportunity presents itself. This is such a great opportunity to go there and really see how it works, see who makes things happen, says Macindoe Monte Bouriaily agrees. "You work hard, but it's a lot of fun. It's such a change of pace being able to apply what you've

These students participated in the Annapolis intern program where they each assisted a designated senator or delegate. The interns assisted in everything from research to clerical work.

be an intern. "One of the re- talked me into it." quirements is to have a 3.0 average, by and large," explains Dr. Weissman

"The ideal person for an intern is a second semester junior. Seniors really don't have the time since they are busy with their thesis. It's a lot of work." When compared to interns from other schools, he says, "Washington College inthe best.

While many of the interns Political Science majors, there are also other majors that can benefit from an internship. Says Dr. Weissman, "The program really works well if it's not just Political Science majors. This year, for example, we have a business major, a his-Dr. Weissman remembers tory major, and an American them to vote on the bills."

Lucas's Delegate too was

Ellen Sauerbrey, and she worked for the Republican Caucus for the Minority Lead-

Though she is a history major, Cate says that the intership program "is beneficial to a wide variety of majors. It lets you look at things from other than a political viewpoint. You ternshave a reputation of being get to see things from a constituent's view, the business aspect of things.

Among other things, says Lucas, "My job as an intern was to go to selected committee hearings that were of interest to the Republican caucus." The notes Lucas took and the work that she organized for the Delegates, she says, "better helped John Ashley of the 36th Legislative District, whose district includes both Kent and Queen Anne's counties. Though he describes this year's General Assembly as "laid back", Macindoe says that gave him an op-"work into it portunity to slowly.

"There's a very strong cleavage between the Eastern Shore and Western Shore delegates I noticed while I was there," he says, "The Eastern Shore delegation was a very tight knit group. Macindoe explains that an added benefit to the job was that John Ashley was good friends with the Speaker of the House, Clayton Mitchell, and they often worked together, allowing him the opportunity to see how things were run on a learned."

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pa

Chestertown, M (301) 778-3160

WC alumnus seeks social justice through work with the Peace Corps

by Amy R. Caddle

John Murphy, a 1988 graduate of Washington College, decided to join the Peace Corps, "because I wanted to serve my country, learn a different language and culture, and have an impact on social justice. "The application process is very competitive," he adds "A series of intensive interviews, recomendations, and security checks are necessary. I was accepted into the program and given an invitation to work in Honduras. After I accepted my invitation, I began an intensive three month training period in South Carolina. I was trained to work with small animals-chickens, pigs, etc., Murphy says.

"After three months in the States I went to Handuras for three more months of training There, I learned how to organ ize and work with animal projects," Murphy adds.

"I was stationed in El Progreso, a small suburbian town in the north of Honduras. I helped set up a chicken proiect and worked with a women's group as well," he explains.

"The Peace Corps has made a definite impact on the person," he says, economic situation in Honduare approximately 375 Peace money to live as the natives of as a volunteer a very rewarding

Corps volunteers in Honduras, the host country do. Rent and one. "I have met some wonder-more than in any other counfood is included in the stipend," ful people. The Peace Corps Murphy continues.

has given me a new perspective

President John F. Kennedy initiated the Peace Corps in 1961 when he sent 500 volunteers to eight developing countries. Above, Kennedy meets with volunteers bound for Ethiopia in 1962.

Murphy didn't find the as difficult as some might expect. "However, anyone con-ras," expresses Murphy. There its volunteers with enough Murphy found his seven months living conditions in Honduras the country, culture, and language of Honduras, he terminated his volunteer position sidering going into the Peace after seven months. "I am not Corps should be an adaptable in agreement with the political situation in Honduras right "The Peace Corps provides now," he explains. However,

Although Murphy liked on life. The opportunities it gives the individual are great." Murphy is now living in Salisbury, and may return to the Peace Corps after a period of time in the United States Murphy is not sure whether he will join again or not. "I'd really like to go back to school,"he

The Peace Corps was the brainchild of President John F. Kennedy, who, in 1961, sent five hundred volunteers to eight developing countries to work in education and agriculture. Today, there are about five thousand volunteers working in over twenty-five third-world nations

Dr. Davy McCall, an Economics Professor at Washington College, was working for the United States Economic Aid Agency when President Kennedy proposed the idea of the Peace Corps. "Everyone felt it was a brilliant idea, and we're very enthusiastic about the program. People were optimistic about the entire concept and what it could accomplish," McCall says.

"Through my work with the United States Government and the World Bank, I was able to see the Peace Corps at work in various countries," he adds. "The conditions some of the volunteers have to live under aren't very pleasant. It is a very challenging and exciting job.

Mc Call saw education and agricultural projects in action while he was in Morocco. "I also had a friend who taught gardening techniques to villagers in Niger. . . If a person is ready for adventure and is an adaptable person, then the Peace Corps is an excellent opportu-nity," he adds.

Cycle Across America Tour '89

of Maryland will sponsor CYCLE ACROSS AMERICA (CAM Tour'89), the state's first non-competitive seven day bicycle tour.

The event will raise money for the American Lung Association of Maryland.

Scheduled for August 12-18, the 360 mile CAM Tour '89 toute begins in Hagerstown, Maryland, and moves through

The First National Bank the northern portion of the state with overnight stops in Westminster and Conowingo.

Cyclists will then travel along Maryland's Eastern Shore stopping in Chesapeake City, Denton, and Salisbury Final destination is Snow Hill. Cam Tour's course is designed for a leisurely 60 mile per day ride to permit sightseeing and side trips for cyclists, families ands friends

Each night the cyclists will camp at a Host Community where local organizations will provide dinner and breakfast at a nominal cost, thus raising money for local charities. In addition, each site will have an EXPO/FESTIVAL area featuring sponsor booths, souvenirs, and crafts by Maryland

For more information, call 1-800-842-BANK

Need help with a resume? Job search? Contact the Career Development Center at ext. 311

Serving Light Fare and Cocktails Mon .- Sat. Open 4 pm

> FRI + SAT Bird Dog & the Roadkings Country Rock

Welcome Parents and Alumni Proper I.D. Required

CROWDING'S STORE 4 mi. N. Chestertown Worton, MD

Etc.

NEW & USED FURNITURE Desks - Chairs - End Tables -Lamps-Beds - Pictures, > 778-0389 Vice & Mastercard

301.778:6770

HIGH STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD 21620

SPORTS

WC tennis, a winning tradition in the making

"We are trying to establish a tennis tradition and I am glad to be a part of it," says Peter Maller, the captain of this year's men's tennis team. This tradition involves another trip to the nationals for the men and for the women - a very serious contention for the MAC championship.

This tradition has gained nationwide respect from the tennis community, but still does not have the fan support that other sports at Washington College have

Fred Wyman and Holly makes them excel as a team Bramble have volunteered their time and "enthusiasm" to establish a strong tennis program at Washington College. They have brought in some of the best tennis players the world has to offer. The team has people from Germany, South Africa, Texas, and Missouri filling their line up. "The camaraderie of this team is great. We all adapt to each other and this adaptation has made us a much better team," says women's captain Meg Wheatley. This "team" philosophy is what

The idea that the team subscribes to is stated by Wheatley, "tennis is a team sport with both team and individual goals."

This team and the players on it are making Washington College a force to be reckoned with on the tennis circuit. Larry Gewer, Scott Read and Peter Maller were All-American last year. Read was also Division III Rookie of the Year while Maller was also an Academic All-American. This according to Maller "is ever more important to me than being only an athletic All-American

The team looks at tennis as an important outlet to the rigors of school life.

"The challenges of tennis and the accomplishments outside of the classroom add to my time here," said Wheatley. The age-old theory that playing a sport helps budget your time is something that is even more important to the tennis team. "With all the matches traveling, and practicing year round makes me realize that whenever I am not playing tennis I should be studying," said Maller. Scott Read praised the coaches of the team for being flexible about their academics "Coach Wyman lets us practice whenever we want so we can get a practice out of the way if we have a paper or test we have to do.

The coaches were praised by the whole team. "Coach Wyman is a great recruiter. He has brought in a great team and some great people," said Read. Tracy Peel, a freshman from Johannesburg, South Africa who will be representing the school in the women's na-

Athletic and academic All-American, Peter Maller, a native of South Africa, returns a volley during a recent practice.

Coaches Wyman and Bramble. team is looking forward to "They make things fun and door courts, windscreens, it exciting. The matches and the traveling make playing tennis very enjoyable." Roman Ianochovsky said that " Coach Wyman has really done a lot for Washington College tennis. He has brought in a group of very talented individuals and turned them into a team." Larry Gewer, the topped ranked player on the team, laid down the law in saying that "if it was not for the tennis and the people on the team I would not stay

There are two common sore spots on the team. The team is very frustrated with the apathy of the fans and the lack of tennis facilities. With the proposed field house, the tionals later this year, praised facilities should improve. The proved fan seating and gettin away form the fire horn. The fan support is quite distress ing. One team member went far as to say that the fan su port was "the worst of any high ranking Division III team.

Wheatley looked for mo "team unity within the school as a possible solution. The test is right in saving that the ranking merits more suppor than they get. So, in the nex few weeks pick a sunny day and go watch some entertaini tennis. When confronted wit the question "Will the team wi the National Championship? Gewer answered emphatica "Yes" so go and about his pr diction all the way to the final in Kalamazoo, Michigan

Native West German Roman Inochovsky, prepares to serve during recent action on the courts.

Tuesday-Saturday

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md. 21620

Janie Thompso 788-0898

Men's lacrosse gains #2 ranking in their division

by Joe Van Name The Washington College Men's Lacrosse team is now the number two team in Division III. Thanks to victories over Hartwick, Roanoke, and Franklin & Marshall, the Sho'men now stand at 8-3 on the season and are looking good for the playoffs in May. On April 8th, W.C. faced Hartwick College in a game played at Villanova University. Unfortunately for Hartwick the trip was not very profitable as W.C. secured a 16-8 victory. In the game Junior Tim Hormes had 6 goals and 3 assists, Freshman Nick Darcangelo 3 goals and 3 assists, and Sophomore Steve Klein 3

Slomkowski came up with 12

weekend the Sho'men traveled to Roanoke to take on the team that knocked trolled the entire game them out of the playoffs last year. This game was sweet revenge for Washington as they took apart the Maroons zone defense and won by the score of 15-6. The big scorers for the day were Bob Martino with 5 oals and 1 assist, and Steve Klein who also contributed 5 goals. In goal Dave Slomkowski had 18 saves in not allowing Roanoke to attempt a comeback.

The last game played by the Sho'men was Wednesday the 19th when they faced Fran- help cheer W.C. on to victor goals. Playing another consistent game in goal Dave klin & Marshall who had vanced to the second round the playoffs last year. This ye the Diplomats did not pro their strength as W.C. of ended with a 17-7 victory. Agi Bob Martino was the leadi scorer with 7 goals on the da Contributing in the scoring were Tim Hormes with 2 g and 4 assists, and Nick D cangelo with 2 goals and 3 sists. 11 save were recorded Slomkowski in goal.

Tomorrow the Sho'm face Washington & Lee in the final home game of the yes Game time is 1:30 and since is parents day bring them by crosse team

Women's lacrosse earns national ranking

year yet for the women's la- achieved a national ranking.

in their pockets, the Sho'women vided them with an easy 15-7

No doubt, this is the best that a women's team has tive turnovers.

history of Washington College controls, one goal, and no nega- served as an inspiration to her on the home field. As the team

Saturday brought on a The team demonstrated new challenge as the its ability at Salisbury State on Sho'women took on Gettysburg team pulled off an 8-6 win. With seven straight wins April 13 as their intensity pro- in a battle that would determine who would remain in the are ranked 11th in the country victory. Showing her domitie for first in the MACs with by the Brine National Coaches nance of the game, Margaret Hopkins and WMD. Amidst provide the team with an 18-4 country they are alacrosseforce teammates, and along with ex- awaits the MAC playoffs and a ceptional defense by Erin possible NCAA tournament bid, O'Neal and Wendy Kerr, the Anders notes that "little Wash-

ders played in her last home any team that confronts us." game on Tuesday and helped The women are proving to the ington College isn't so little Senior goalie Linda An- anymore-we can play against Poll. This is the first time in the Doyle managed to get nine draw the pouring rain, Amy Tiehel win and an undefeated record that should not be taken lightly.

The Caps: Masters of Misfortune

Every year, the script is Haworth, Gaetan Duchesne, coaches in league history. If I regular season, the Caps would the Caps touched turned to gold. The Washington Capitals play great hockey in March, only to fall short in the month of April, and the playoffs. The Capitals have made it. to the playoffs in each of the last seven years, failing to get into the Conference Final every year. Over that span, the Capitals have collected 40 wins in three seasons, with a 50 win season thrown in for good measure. Clearly, they have been one of the most dominating regular season teams in the game. But, as spring rolls around, they are unable to parlay that success into post season glory.

Arian Ravanbaksh

This year, the Capitals fell victims to the Philadelphia Flyers. And, just like every other playoff year, Lady Luck was not smiling on the Caps. True, they were outplayed for the majority of the six game series, but the Caps were also not the recipients of good luck. The old adage is that "luck is the reside of design." If that is the case, the Washington Capitals should go back to the drawing board to design. But wait, having they been doing that for

No other team in the NHL has made as many significant trades over the last seven years. The Washington Capitals traded away many fan favorites such as Ryan Walter, Alan Clint Malarchuck, and the cornerstone of the franchise, Mike Gartner. In exchange, the Caps recieved players that they thought would push them over the top come playoff time. Since the Caps have failed to make it tims of a playoff jinx. Every over the top, one wonders what is it going to take to find the right mix of players to create some luck and the chemistry needed to win in the NHL.

The only constant over the last seven years has been head coach Bryan Murray. With the quick ouster of the team this year, newspapers have been filled with speculation that Mr. Murray has coached his last game behind the Washington bench. Every year, you can reason as to why the Capsfailed. Obviously you can not blame those factors on the coach. The etc ... The list is endless. Capitals have come from perennial doormats to Patrick

Division title during his reign. The record book tells me that Mr. Murray is currently would not fire the coach; that is not the answer to solving the seven year playoff jinx.

There, I've said it, the Washington Capitals are vicyear, no matter how well the team was playing, they fall short in the end. And the team always chooses the most frustrating option to take. One begins to wonder why. The seven year playoff history of the Washington Capitals is filled with frustration: missed penalty shots, blowing series after leading 3 games to 1, blowing two goal leads in games, hitting hundreds of crossbars delphia. and goalposts, losing in overpoint to a circumstance that time, losing in 4 overtimes, was beyond the power of any running into a goaltender who other playoff years. The team Pegasus, mortal to control as the key could ston the world from spin. could stop the world from spinning on its axis, missed penalty calls, bad bounces, key injuries,

Before the playoffs began, I read an insightful column that called the Caps the "masters of misfortune." The writers point was that no matter how well seventhon the list of winningest they had played during the During that span, every thing 1:30pm.

they were even bets to fail in some dramatic, even freaky, kind of way. This year, they failed in a freaky way. You need not look beyond Game 5 against Philadelphia.

entire playoff history of the Washington Capitals. The winning goal was scored when a puck bounced off of Mike Ridley's helmet right to Brian Propp, who blasted the puck into the net. To add insult to injury, Flyer goaltender Ron Hextall flipped a puck 200 feet right into the empty Washington net. Final score 8-5, Phila-no different from any of the did not play as well as it could have. What makes this more frustrating is that the team was actually poised to do something this year. The month of March was a great one for Capital fans, as the team reeled off an eight game winning streak to lock up the Patrick Division Crown.

were Mr. Poile and Mr. Pollin, I fail in the playoffs. And that By April, it had all turned to

I'm sure that General Manager David Poile has done everything he has thought of to solve this jinx. But he has to think harder. About the only That Game epitomized the option left is for the Caps should hire an exorcist to conduct a ceremony at center ice before the first game of the playoffs. Until the jinx is solved, the Capitals will be destined to fall flat in April. All that does is frustrate everybody, from front office people to fans. Oh well, I guess all we can do is to wait 'til next year.

Arian Ravanbaksh is a And this playoff year was senior Political Science major and editor of the

> Be sure to catch this weekend's lacrosse action featuring Washington College facing off against Washington & Lee! Gametime-Saturday

ON THE CHESTER RIVER

FOOT OF CANNON ST. CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

Anyone interested in applying for a position on the Elm staff for the school year 1989-90 may pick up an application located on the door of the Elm office (Reid basement).

The application deadline is Friday, April 28. Positions include news, features, arts, sports and photography editors, managing editors, circulation and advertising.

Austin Carpet Rt .213 North

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

107 N. CROSS STREET

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

Thin Man Deli

Baked Goods * Deli Sandwiches * Assorted Cheeses

> Open 5 Days a Week Monday thru Friday

107 Cross Street

Separate works, personalities united in show

by Stephanie Hess

On Friday, April twentyeighth at five PM, the Senior Art Exhibition will open in Tawes Theater. The three seniors whose work will be highlighted are Michelle Balze, Jeanne Costello, and Chas. Foster. As the only art majors specializing in Studio Art rather than Art History, the exhibition, coupled with one day of comprehensive exams, forms their senior obligation. This exhibition will be different from previous years in that the emphasis will be on senior art majors and will not have much to do with the department as a

Balze says that there are many misconceptions about the different ways." Senior Exhibition. One of the most common misconceptions concerns the amount of work that goes into the show. Balze explains that this is "not just an thesis...not presented as a paper but presented as a show ... a misconception that people hold is that an art show must have a theme. Balze made it clear that while there is no theme, there must be a concept around which the show will revolve. Balze admits that there will be some analogies between her work and the work of Costello and Foster because they have all studied than hers is. here under the same instructors. At the same time, there will also be differences because of their different personalities. More specifically, she said,"all our art deals with icons, but in Balze calls her own work "metaphor for organization as a whole." In a formal sense, she says that her work is mainly "large paintings of vegetables

Art Show, it's our senior and fruits," but the content of her work "is dealing with microcosms and the organization of them. lot more work goes into this Balze notes that some people clas-than people think." Another sify her work as feminist, but she feels this is a limiting classification and that her work deals with metaphors on a more universal sense. Balze's paintings have been compared to those of Georgia O'Keefe and while she accepts this comparison, she also points out that O'Keefe's work is more baroque - - more about movement

Next year, Balze will be attending graduate school at the University of Rochester where she will be working toward a Doctorate in English

Chas Foster will be showing some paintings and eleven drawings that make up a series of what he logically termed the "telephone drawings," because they all feature the word "telephone." Each drawing brings together different images that do not usually go together, but make sense together within the framework of the drawing. Foster first developed the idea with a painting in mind, but once he sketched the blueprint for the painting, he decided that the idea worked better as a drawing. He says that the drawings are about much more than just what is on

When asked to categorize his work, Foster says that although it is not new (he does not believe anything new can be done in the field of art), he does not know what he would call it. This summer he is moving to New York City "to live and work and hang out," and although he would like to pursue art, he is not sure of his plans after the summer.

As an artist, Jeanne Costello considers herself an iconoclast; she would like to unseat icons as methods of representation. An icon is an isolated symbol or a conventional represent to create new kinds of icons by of something. involving the viewer in her art Costello's earlier work deals She considers the new pieces with the tearing down of performance art, because they icons. She has created sevinvolve both the viewer and the viewer's reaction to them. eral pieces, each of an apple -After graduation, Costello an icon that spans many interpretations-- painted on a gold leaf background that would like to work as an intern at an art gallery in New York looks as if it is crumbling. All three of the artists are This represents the decay of icons, and it makes the apple willing to sell the work that something real, not an icon. they are showing in the exhibit, and any interested buyers Costello believes that artwork today lacks integshould speak to the artists indirity and is concerned with vidually. The opening reception for the Senior Art Exhibithe American attitude toward art She feels that untion will take place Friday, April twenty-eighth at five PM in the like the Europeans, Americans do not see art as a part lobby of the Gibson Fine Arts Center. After the twentyof life, but instead see it as eighth, the exhibition will be something which is separate open Monday through Friday and isolated and can only be found in museums. With her from twelve to four until May

Campus Calendar: April 21-27

Weekend-April 21, 23,

The Washington College Film Series presents the film Au Revoir Les Enfants (Goodbye Enfants). The film, directed by Louis Malle, who also directed Pretty Baby, My Dinner with Andre and Atlantic City is based on Malle's own childhood experience. It is a moving film and definitely worth seeing.

Friday-April 21

The Washington College Music Department, in conjuncof the Miller Library. This year, tained at extension 269. the Manhattan Wind Quintet will perform a repertoire of music for a woodwind ensemble from a number of different musical periods. Come out and enjoy both the beautiful spring weather and excellant music at the same time

Also on Friday, and Saturday nights is the Drama Department production, Leocadia, or Time Remembered. Directed by Jason Rubin, the tion with the Aspen Institute, play is one of love and sadness.

presents its annual "Bach's It runs at eight o'clock on both Lunch" on the terrace outside nights. Reservations can be ob-

> Sunday-April 23 The Washington College Jazz Band will perform their Spring Concert today at four PM in Norman James Theatre. All are welcome to attend.

Thursday-April 27

The Caroline Center presents"An Evening with Poet Stuart Brown" at seven PM in Hynson Lounge. A related article by Valerie Walbert appears on page eleven of this issue

ENTERTAINMENT

The other side of the United States military

by Kate Absher

On April tenth, Marta Sandoval, of Honduras, lectured in the Sophie Kerr room about the troubles of her country caused by American intervention. Sponsored by the National Disarmament Program and the American Friends Service Committee, Marta is touring the United States in the hope of bringing awareness to this trag-

Her Spanish cracks like tortilla chips, breaking and toppling over the next syllable. As she becomes more passionate, the crackling and toppling rapidly move into her eyes and States flush her olive cheeks. She

And her hand, refreshed by the U.S. military bases in Marta's oxygen, adamantly gestures to the American military and naval bases which blister her

With this fervor, she speaks of her homeland, which she unashamedly admits is the second poorest country in the western hemisphere. Yet, its poverty has not hidden it from the international eye. Honduras' position in Central America, juxtaposed between the politically boiling countries of El Salvador and Nicaragua, targets it for foreign intervention, especially from the United

The American military breathes deep--her lungs feel- has invaded Honduras; even ing the deepness of her cause. though, officially, there are no country. However, the U.S. has built, improved and added many military facilities, airstrips and bases in Honduras since 1980. Marta states. "My country is not at war, but it feels like it." U.S. troops, Marta maintains, swarm about the countryside Militarization of this magnitude cannot be kept separate from the civilians of Honduras. Firstly, many Honduran peasants were evicted from their land in the south so that military bases could be set up. Furthermore, entire forests were destroyed due to military installations and maneuvers. Along with these social and environmental inflictions, the U.S.

less roads and bridges so American troops will be able to move freely within the fields and jungles of Honduras. Marta death of four hundred leaders imagines that the U.S. purpose in this construction is to not repeat Vietnam's mistake of in their homeland. unfamiliarity of the landscape. She explains that these military efforts have changed Honduras from a peaceful nation to a militarized, turbulent one. She argues, "The poor ople feel this." They feel their local and national governments are being corrupted by the American military. They feel the compulsory draft inflicted upon their sons. They feel the infectious diseases that emanate from the brothels which government is building count- surround American military bases. And they feel the disappearance of one hundred and fifty Honduran citizens and the of opposition who had the bravery to protest the U.S. presence

Marta blames American citizens for all of these sins againsther people because, "We sustain the violence with our taxes." The U.S., she believes, should "redirect its funds from the military to the social needs of the country." Marta quotes her people's saying, "If the Yankees don't leave, they will have to die here." The Honduran people and all of Central America have tolerated U.S. intervention for too long.

A special night of poetry by Stuart Brown presented

On April twenty-seventh in Hynson Lounge, the Caro-

Poet Stuart Brown."

The Caroline Center, located in Ridgely, Maryland, is a line Center will sponsor the facility which provides services presentation, "Special Arts of for developmentally disabled vided with different activities director of the Center which work experiences. provides various work activities and programs for disabled adults. These adults are pro-

The Special Arts of the Midshore is a group composed of representatives from a number of Maryland's counties. The the Midshore: An Evening with adults. Joan Anderson is the in order to engage in different group's goal is to promote the artistic achievements of disunrecognized.

The presentation features the unique, poetic works of Stuart Brown. He is a ninety year old, World War I veteran and is one of the last survivors of the Bloody Battle of Marne that ensued during the War. Brown suffered permanent, debilitating effects from a deadly gas used in the Battle

His success as a poet, however. despite his war injury, serves as a reminder of the remarkable accomplishments of those not as fortunate as others in

His poetry is varied and abled persons that too often go offers a broad spectrum of differing themes ranging from World War I experiences to reflections on life in general. Stuart Brown presents poetry sculptured from his individual and personal lifetime experi-

> The talk, which combines artistic talents with a worthy cause, will be held at seven PM.

On Friday and Saturday nights, the Drama Department presents Jean Anouilh's Leocadia. Here, the cast repares for the play, which looks to be one of the highlights on Saturday, April 22nd's Parent's Day.

SEVEN HILLS FARM

10 minutes from Washington College Coopers Lane - Worton, Md. 778-0201

Instruction in Combined Training Show Jumping . Dressage Beginners thru Advanced

Horses Boarded . Trained . For Sale . Leased . Tack Shop

Special to WC students - $55 for 2 lessons and 3 free rides Savings of $20

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

CHRESTERSOWN NO.

BUFFET EVERY SUMDAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:28-8 AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD

778-1222

Fine Framing · Select Cifts Artists Materials

> ROBOX 402 711 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21620 701-778-5202

The Incorrigibles

KEN JEFF TODD TODD

THIS SATURDAY, APRIL 22 9:30 IN THE C-HOUSE

There's plenty of night left after the LUAU, so come join the fun! ONLY $2.00!

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 25

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, April 28, 1989

President answers concerns at forum meeting

by Sharon Bonner and Tracey Connell

President Cater, Senior Vice President for Management and Finance, Gene A. Hessey, Director of Planning and Special Projects, Clint Baer, and the Student Government Association President, Steve Attias were available to answer student questions about recent controversies last Tuesday night, April 25. Inquiries concentrated around the PCB issue as Cater stressed his "open Goucher University.

Cater began the forum by stating that "the president of a college should be available at all times to answer questions and concerns." He then provided practical information about PCB's. According to Hessey, PCB is a chemical compound which may be found in either electrical transmitters or telephone pole transformers manufactured as early as the late 1950's and as late as the 1970's. Six transformers on campus were found containing fluids that contain PCB. The particular transformers were acquired because at the time PCB's were considered "a real bonus....they have a longer life and it was unnecessary to constantly drain fluids."

Cater confirmed that the compound is a "menace" to the environment. "It seems to be persistent...hard to dispose of (and) impossible to get rid of." He also stated that, when exposed to high flame, it could generate toxic gas. Because of these dangers the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) conducted an inspection of the college in June of 1988. Cater stated that the EPA "discovered six locations (with) transformers containing PCB. We were charged with failing to follow procedures to control potential hazards." Included in the procedures were the notification of the local fire department as to the existence and location of the PCB compound prevented. The college was cited for failure to label transformers containing the hazardous material, failure to produce written reports, failure to comply with regulations and with federal standards. According to Cater inspections were in fact conducted but no written records kept. He added that after a 1988 EPA decision to pursue colleges and hospitals. many were fined, for example

As the floor opened for questions one student in attendance expressed concern for the safety of school electricians. Cater stated that because the transformers conduct high voltage electricity, Washington College electricians avoid those areas. "Only experts deal with them. The nearest electrician is in Cambridge and only comes if there's a problem."

Both Cater and Clint Baer expressed their belief that EPA regulations were intended mostly to "wake people up. This is why they did these unannounced investigations. In February they reassured us we were fully conforming to regulations", said Cater. added, "that they are toxic substances is not a proven fact." Nevertheless the EPA fined the college $150,000 in January.

Baer, in response to one person's question, stated that no one ever came into physical contact with the hazardous substance. According to Baer, the only way one could suffer negative effects from PCB is if it is eaten, though toxic gases in the event of a fire were cited earlier in the evening as dangerous. He reiterated that damage to the food chain is a

Gene Hessey answered one individual who asked if Washington College students are living in a safe environment. "(Students) are not exposed to the kind of severe manufacturing of chemicals as and regular inspections of these in metropolitan areas. Hazards are reduced on the East- viding information in the inern shore because of the clean air. All in all we consider the area in which we live to be least subject to risk than most.'

Students reenacted history at last weekend's luau festivities and annual raft race

A great deal of time was also spent discussing students' "right to know". Cater attrib-uted students' lack of information to "indifference that surrounds us on campus." He then cited his own "open door policy, When one open response." student offered criticism of the way the administration handled the situation in terms of offering information, Cater again cited apathy. In fact only 12 to 15 individuals actually attended the forum. also revised its system of pro- snack bar.

terest accuracy and to avoid conflicting reports. "The next time there is awareness of on issue an executive council will meet, review the facts and immediately put out a release. We've got to get the facts straight." According to the particular facts of a situation a decision will be made as to which vice president will act as "go between". Reporters in the individual who has collected all of the facts In addition the panel addressed concerns over Stenger's oil tanks, PCB related tuition increase and wa-The administration has ter pollution in Miss Dee's

Water shut down at Miss Dee's

by Patricia Karnes

Early last week the water turned off. Ruth Dickerson, manager of the snack bar, turned the water off after discovering that it contained a "soapy substance". Stated Dickerson, "I called Washington College's Maintenance Department and the Health Department because I knew something

An unidentified represenin Miss Dee's snack bar was tative of Maintenance, initially unwilling to comment, stated that "there have been new water lines placed in the basement of Hodson Hall. It is undetermined where it (the soapy substance) came from but the water has been tested." sults are not available at this

East Hall renovations nearly complete

by Ed Schroeder

Renovations of East Hall continue as the Washington College maintenance crews refurbish the building. Since the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity moved out, work has been going on to improve what damage had been sustained through the years.

"There has been a big improvement from what there was," noted the Superintendent of Building and Grounds, Bill Coleman. "Much of the damage and the wear-and-tear that was inflicted upon the building has been remedied. Our only really big concern is furnishing the

The plywood now in the windows will be removed, retiling of floors is complete, walls of rooms and bathroom facilities are cleaned up and the the damaged water systems have been reworked and repaired.

Washington College's reconstruction is moving at an accelerated rate to meet a deadline that is set for Commencement weekend. This way East Hall can be used for parental housing on Alumni weekend.

"The work crews here on campus have been quite impressive," Clint Baer, the Director of Planning and Special Proj-ects, said. "They have managed to keep up a quick and fast track pace so the East Hall project can come to a comple-

Washington College's summer programs which concentrate in various departments of study will also take full advantage of the newly resculpted East Hall. Enrolled persons will have access to these rooms and will also be able to take advantage of all that Washington College has to offer because of the easy access that this building gives to the rest of the campus.

At the present date the building is unsafe to travel through, but it is expected that by early next week the final stages of the building will be

continued on page 8

Student apathy is not an obstacle

On Tuesday, President Cater, flanked by Gene Hessey, Senior Vice President for Finance, and Clint Baer, Director of Planning and Special Projects, presented the students with a great opportunity. They called it "Open Season," intending to open themselves to any questions that students cared to ask.

Despite this openness on the part of the administration of Washington College, attendance was poor. Fortunately the twelve or fifteen students who did attend managed to come up with enough questions to make up for the absence of the rest of the eight-hundred and thirty some students who could not attend.

A topic raised by the students concerned the Administration's lack of communication to the students and the faculty in the beginning of the P.C.B. problem. President Cater pointed out that perhaps student panth is the problem, indicating the poor turnout. Perhaps some students really don't care all that much, and perhaps it is merited.

Students are both the consumer and the product at Washington College. As consumers, the students expect to receive what they paid their tuition to get. Part of the money goes toward room and board, which is supposed to endow students with an environment that requires little worry on the part of the student. Students aren't aparthetic, they just expect to get what they've paid for a room unthreatened by poisonous substances and food. As the product, each student who effectively makes.

As the product, each student wan electively makes it through four years will earn a bachelor's degree. In the meantime, they are busy. If student apathy is such a problem, why are the lacrosses and tennis teams doing so well? Why is the yearbook being distributed? Why did the S.G.A. have the best turnout in years for this year's officer elections? And why are some students excelling academically? It can't be because students don't care.

Obviously students do care about their college, and that's why they're so busy. Almost very student is involved in some activity other than their studies; we are doing what we came to college to do. We must remember that students are very busy being students. Most of us came to college to learn, study and prepare for our futures, and in between doing these there is often little time for other things. One can easily walls through William Smith Hall, or any other building, oblivious to posters that proclaim various events. And it's even easier to place a paper due the next day higher on the list of things to do than the president's forum. None of us came to Washington College to deal with P.C.B or propane tanks or any other problems that arose this year. We came to learn.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                     |
|-------------------------------|---------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harriso |
| News Editor                   | Tracey Connell      |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbaur     |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatne       |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansk  |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnson       |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Kar            |
| Managers                      |                     |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekma         |
| Advertising Manager           | Erin Hodge-William  |
| Circulation Manager           | James Sobeza        |
| Assistant Circulation Manager | Cynthia Gos         |
|                               |                     |

Office Manager

The Washington College Elm is the official student newspaper of Washington age. It is published every Friday during the academic year with the exception of vacations

Editorials are the responsibility of the Editor in chief with the assusance of Elm's Editorial Board, and can be considered the opinion of the staff. Signed columns, comm turies, letters, editorials, and editorial cartoons represent the opinions of their authors and

All indexes to the delivery of the control of the c

The Elm's business and editorial office is located in the basement of Reid Hall, rete the Reid Hall locurage. Business hours are 700 to 900 PM or Tracelays and 700 to 1100 PF of chandrys. The phone number of the office and the residence of the Editor-in-chief in (10 778-1866, extension 121. 8 AH, SPRING! THE SONG OF THE BIRDS WHY SURE! DIDN'S THE WARM FRESH U SEE THOSE AIR THE SWEET WARNINGS PRINTE ON THOSE LITTLE INDOLENT 3x5 CARDS? ODOR OF THOUGHT EVERY-PESTIC IDES ONE SAW THEN PETICIDES? WHENINGS ?

Letters to the Editor

DeProspo's licensed reply

To the Editor

My god, and I thought this trivia had ended when I cleared out my locker.

I didn't say anything critical about "respectfully, John Kelly, Fitness Center Supervisor," nor about Ms. Guinan, who I gather is his immediate boss, nor even about Mr. Miller, who everybody has learned by now is the boss of all bosses, not in the Elm story on what has euphemistically been called the "reduction" of faculty privileges at the gym, not at the earlier meeting at which interested faculty were supposedly consulted about the so-called reduction of faculty privileges, not anywhere. Not yet, anyway. I did criticize one, unnamed, administrator for unfairly-I would say derangedly, hallucinogenically-misrepresenting my behavior at that meet ing. Now, after the unprovoked attack of "respectfully, John sor," I figure, what the hell. I have a license. I'll have some fun.

continued on page 6

Weakness misconstrued

Kelly, Fitness Center Supervi-

To the Editor

In Miss Golden's article of April 21, it is incorrectly reported that I referred to the Foreign Languages as a "weak" major. It is unfortunate that Miss Golden apparently misconstrued that part of our conversation that related to the paucity of prospective foreign language majors throughout the United States and the resulting challenges this creates in student recruitment. Suffice it to say that I continue to have high regard for the Modern Languages program at Washington College and wish only to be able to find more qualified students to enroll in our French, German, and Spanish majors.

Sincerely, Kevin Coveney Vice President Admissions and Enrollment Management

Cater responds

Because of the fears expessed in last week's editorial entitled "Enrollment threatens withits growth," it is important for students to read the policy statement adopted by the Board of Visitors and Governors relating to enrollment, size and faculty-student ratios.

Sincerely,
Douglass Cater
The Board has adopted the following guidelines for the year ahead to set objectives in preparing the 1989-90 budget for consideration by the Board at its February meeting. These are listed below in order of priority.

 To continue progress in meeting salary/benefit levels for both faculty and staff as stipulated in the Board's good faith response to the Faculty Finance Committee's petition last year.

To set a ceiling of 835 full-time paid undergraduate enrollment average during 1989-90.

 To continue the ratio between students and faculty of 12 to 1, while keeping the level of full-time faculty at approximately 90%. In seeking full-time replacements, prior-

continued on page 6

Clarifying the issue

To the Editor: There are two points in the editorial of April 21 that require clarification. First, there are no plains to expand the College's undergraduate student enrollment beyond its present level. We are in a "no-growth" enrollment mode and intend to recruit-only enough freshmen and transfers to replace those students who graduate, choose to study abroad, or withdraw from the College. continued on page 6

Intern Objects

I would like to address last

Friday's (April 21) feature article about the Annapolis Internship.

Rather than label the interns as "these students," it would have been nice to list the names of all the participating students (even the two not pictured) underneath the photo or somewhere in the article.

I also object to interns from last year's session being quoted before this year's interns. While I have no objection to not being interviewed, only two of the ten participating students were.

In addition, following a quote by Lynn Burris regarding the Internship experience in helping her to "understand the relationships between state and local government" was the statement, "this thought was echoed by the other interns... although this may be true, I feel the statement should now have been made without first asking all of the interns who worked at the Maryland General Assembly this past legible.

tive session.

Thank you, Cherie Groomes

ISSUE:

Should the Supreme Court limit or reverse Roe v. Wade in favor of Webster v. Reproductive Services?

Let's hope we hear "Yes you have a choice"

"The Supreme Court will should be forced to have a child fault in the need for an abortion never reverse the abortion decision." "It would be stupid to make abortion illegal." Com-ments such as these have beis almost certain that the quesor not a woman has the right to an abortion, is, in many minds, already an answered question. Yes, a woman is guaranteed by the Constitution the right to have an abortion No woman that she, for whatever reason. in unable to carry and care for.

The operative word here is "woman." It is unconceivable come part of household discus- (no pun intended) to a man the sions as the Court debates the full implications of what hav- Reproductive Services, whose issue of Webster versus Repro- ing a child means and the burductive Services. By this time den which it causes in a this is published, the fate of woman's life. While men may women who are unwillingly sympathize with women, and pregnant will have already been Roe versus Wade was decided decided for them. However, it by an all-male court, I don't think they fully grasped what tions which preceded it will making abortion illegal would mean to women. And yes, it is The question of whether possible to be on birth control and get pregnant. Women are sick to death of hearing the expression, "If you had been on birth control, you should not have to need an abortion." The issue of the woman being at

is (a) not a one-sided deal and (b) not always true

The matter at hand, however, is the reversal of Roe v. Wade in favor of Webster v. alleged goal is to, by overturning Roe versus Wade, return the "abortion alternative" to the individual state legislatures, thereby making abortion illegal in the state of Missouri, where the case originates. While whete are case to speak, so to speak, sounds great, "Sure Roev Wade decision, thousands abortion isn't really illegal in most states," it offers to this country the same struggle Prohibition did- forcing many people, primarily law-abiding citizens, to take illegal actions.

It sends a countless number of women to the back rooms and alleys of states where abortion is illegal, or countless women across state lines in search of an legal place to have the abortion performed. Above all of the legalities is the complication of omen's health because of illepermanently scarred due to "coat hanger" abortions. To know that such instances may return is a frightening notion.

Michele Volansky

Women, like the men who shout about their right to bear the Arts Editor for the Elm.

arms in this time of gun-control, are faced with a very serious problem. Time and time again, women have asked to have a choice regarding their own selves and bodies and once again that choice is threatened. Whatever the outcome of Wednesday's decision, the women have spoken their mind and have demanded the legal choice to have abortions throughout the country, not only in certain states. The issues concerning the decision have been clearly presented and women now can only wait, and hope, for the legal answer, "Yes, you have the choice."

Michele Volansky is a junior majoring in English. She is

Marti Roughen Freshman Pittsburgh, PA

RR Relch Sophomore Annapolis, MD

I think they should limit the The issue involves one's right It's a woman's decision decision because it's the woman to maintain control over her who has to go through it. She own person. As an autonomous should be able to make her own person (which the embryo is not) the individual should not be denied access to a legal, safe abortion

John White Sophomore Olney, MD

Christopher Martin Junior Wilmington, DE What pro-lifers don't seem to I believe that the fetus is them done anyway. Before the Court reverse the decision 70's, a lot of women died be cause of unsafe illegal abortions.

I'd hate to see it reversed

Jim Finlay Freshman Westford, MA consider is that if abortion is human and has a right to life. I made illegal, women will have would like to see the Supreme

by Thomas Cushing

Senior Reading

The culmination of four years of creative writing at Washington College will take place on Saturday April 30 at eight p.m. in Phoebe's

Writers' Union Picnic

Along with the usual May Day festivities, the Writer's Union will hold their annual spring picnic and business meeting.

The journalism awards will be announced at 4:30 PM and the Incorrigibles will entertain.

The picnic begins at four p.m. on May 1

Foreign language assistants learn through teaching others

by Amy R. Caddle

Claire Nollet, a native of Isonne, France, and the French Language Assistant at Washington College, was informed about the opportunity to study in the United States and the position of Language Assistant at Washington College by one of her professors at the University of Paris

"It's not easy for French students to get an assistantship in the United States. You usually have to go to London or another English speaking country first. I was very happy to be able to come to the United States," says Nollet, who has studied English for nine years.

Besides assisting Professors Yon and Dickson, Nollet teaches the Conversational French 392 class every Friday. "I speak French in the class the way I would speak to a native and I don't think this slows down the pace of the students at all," she adds.

Nollet is taking Philosophy of Marxism, Introduction to American Government, and American Intellectual History. Nollet finds the small classes at Washington College an advan-

"It's a good chance for students to work in small units and to have good relationships with their professors. It also encourages students to work Americans don't think of themwith other students. In France, the system is very anonymous," she says. "I also like the idea of the Literary House and all of the interesting people that are invited to give talks," she adds.

However, not everything trips to Annapolis, New York, Nollet has discovered about Baltimore and other towns. She America is positive. "I find that also visited the homes of a few young people in the United of the students. "Going to visit States are completely innocent the students' families gave me born near Frankfurt, Germany and studies at the University of Mainz, discovered Washington College through an exchange program at her school.

to teach," says Nollet.

dent Assistant of the International Floor, says "The language assistants are an integral part of the language program at Washington College because they give the students a chance to practice their language outside of the classroom. The language seems more real to the students because it is being spoken by someone close to their ally live," she says. Nollet plans "Evidently, there was a impression that a lot of young to return to France in late May German girl who had studied here a few years ago and put and continue her studies in journalism. "I'd eventually like the program together," she "I decided to come to Chip Schaller, the Resi-

Washington College because it is close to Washington D.C., and one is likely to find people interested in and related to politics here," she adds.

"I also wanted to study at a small college. Mainz Univerlosophy," she says. sity has about 25,000 students, and the system is very rigid. I appreciate the relationship between the instructors and students here. It is much more ton D. C. or Philadelphia."

Jutta Hammann, who was relaxed and personal here. It's a very liberal atmosphere," she says. Hammann finds a year abroad necessary in order to become completely aware of a > foreign culture and language. "Many of the typical American stereotypes have been shattered, but new ones have appeared," she adds. "Americans in general are excluded from what is really going on. Moneymaking is the most important thing to many Americans. Here, people study to make money, not just to be good at what one does. Hammann also spoke of the United States presence in Europe, "I understand the U.S. presence in Europe, but many don't. There is a lot of anti-Americanism in Germany. Many view the United States forces as protecting us from the Soviet Union. But Germans don't view the Communists as a threat," she says.

"Asthe German Language Assistant, I help the students with their language labs and proofread their papers," she adds. Hammann has classes in Faulkner and Modernism, Philosophy of Marxism, Modern Philosophy, and American Intellectualism. "I am preparing to return to Germany and continue my studies towards a Masters Degree in Journalism and Communications, and a minor in American Studies and Phi-

"I'd like to stay in the United States for a while and do an internship in Washing-by Bill Beekman Read my lips: No more tuition hikes! tuition hikes! I am running for Presi-

No, not student president. I am running for college presi-

And I have a pledge to this make

Read my lips: No more

Nollet made a few side own age.

world around them. I get the people only want to enjoy themselves and have fun all the cans are caught up in the cult of money. Americans in general lack a cultural background," she adds. Nollet also found it interesting to note that "many selves as Americans but identify more with their ethnic derivatives. I think this is good because it doesn't reinforce nationalism," she says.

"I also find that Ameri-time," she says

I guess that my pledge is as irresponsible as President Bush's no new taxes claim. You can't run a college effectively without raising the prices once in a while. But then consider

In President Cater's first year at Washington College, 1982-83, tuition, room, and boardfees totaled $7071. Seven short years later, tuition, room, and board fees total $14,900, an 111% increase One hundred eleven per

Aspiring college president pledges no more nasty tuition hikes and parents receive their an- HA! HA! HA! HA! HA!

nual letter from Doug Cater. "We regret to inform you," the letter invariably goes, "that lar tuition hikes are a perfect because of rising salary and seven-for-seven during the utilities costs, and because of Cater reign. mismanagement that causes cent? How is that possible in PCB leaks, tuition will once that tuition will increase an

The joke is becoming monotonous. One thousand dol-

If I were Pete Rose, I'd bet

again increase more than one other thousand bucks in 1990-Each year, WC students thousand smackers next year. continued on page 8

Tuesday-Saturday

dent

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS FACIALS - PETTICURES

505 Washington A Chestertown, Md. 1620 Janie Thompson 788-0898

On the Bay at Fairlee Creek P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020

OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m. BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites

30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf

> Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

Tennis stays in the swing

by Don Steele The men's tennis team estroyed Widener on Tuesbig winner at #3 singles 6-0, 0. Other winners included whitinsky, Justin Behm and Blanco are now ranked #1 in ning streak. Getm Lim

In doubles the nationally ranked team of Read and ewer was not together but oth still won their respective

Read teamed up with chitiansky and won 8-1 while and Marti Roughen were de- 6-2, 6-2. The lewer and Shaw matched that ore in their match. Lim and

On Monday the women's Wheatley team continued their winning Roughen team y. The team skunked the ways with a 7-2 win over Dick- was triumphant oneers 9-0. In the nine inson College. The team also 6-4, 3-6, 7-6, (7atches the W.C. lost a total of learned that it is ranked eighth 1). by 20 games. Bill Shaw was in the East Coast. Tracy Peel is ranked #3 in singles and is marked the snapheaded to nationals in Califorarry Gewer, Scott Read, Andy nia. While her and Monica Sho'women win-

> In their match against Dickinson Peel won 6-1, 6-0, presstime but the Blanco won 6-2, 6-0, and Miriam Dittmann won 6-4, 6-4. Captain Meg Wheatley also was a victor 6-3, 7-5. Rachael Rice doubles they both are headed to feated in their singles play. In doubles the women ehm also played doubles and netters swept the play. Blanco Mangum and so won 8-1. The win put the and Peel conquered 6-0, 6-2. Meg Wheatley 6-

and

Wednesday ping of the tysburg won 6-3. All the score were not available at winners were Peel in singles 6-0, 6-1. Peel and Blanco in doubles newly formed tandem of Clare #### am at 19-4 for the season and Rice and Dittmann won 7-5, 6-3, 6-3. Women's lacrosse has sights set for MAC's

by Wendy Kerr eight as the women bowed 8to Haverford on Wednesday. son but the excitement isn't inding down. The MAC playby women on April 18, getting that relies "on each player doing ly four goals to WC's 18. her part to add to the overall ving up to her highscoring picture." lle, Sarah Coste netted five goals with Amy Tiehel and after the Bridge The winning streak ended Kristen Hilgartner not far water game, sevbehind with 3 goals each. Br- eral of the playidgewater also failed to chal- ers went to the midfield play that helped in the to teams that will winning 8-1 is loom ahead along with a stresses that the women "are ssible NCAA tournament bid, not really a team of individual ttre Dame bowed down to the standouts," but rather a team

Only an hour and a half was a great accomplishment for face Hopkins on Wednesday. fact, it may just be starting.

be women's lacrosse team lenge WCas A Henneman and MCWLA. Open be women's lacrosse team lenge WCas A Henneman and MCWLA. Open learned up with Andy Bohiliansky against Widener in doubles play, 12-5 victory. Coach Guinan play in the South Tournament. these players" and the team "is Tension builds, for not only will

White, Erin O'Neal, and Doyle will travel to WMD to begin the may also play a large role in made Team II with Coste and playoffs for the MAC West. The determining who will play in Hilgartner chosen as alter- two will fight to remain in first the NCAAs. The season is not nates. Guinan notes that "it at 3:30 and the winner shall over yet for the sho'women, in Competing for four hours very proud of them."

against Division I schools, D.

This Monday the women the championships, but they the playoffs decide who goes to

Margaret and Kevin, the dynamic Doyle duo

by Don Steele

tional rankings. And both ams have a member of the

With the help of this dyallenge for national champi-

Kevin and Margaret Doyle the brother and sister com- are very close. "I am closer to do about my own. I don't think hation that are ey players their respect e teams, win is a sophomo and startcon defense for the Sho'men. aggressive de sive play td his hard hittir have been key to the defer this year. largaret, a fres an is the larting cente on the ho'women squad ertwoway by has been a b plus to the howomen squad is year between this years men's impossible to have a brother or only a year apart and we have women's lacrosse teams. sister in high profile, but not for always been very compatible. I ports us tremendously. My the teams are playing fast these two. They are not rivals am proud of Margaret and her father coached both Kevin and fan pleasing lacrosse. for headlines but instead they accomplishments. Watching I and has always supported us. th teams are soaring in the offer a support group that helps her getting headlines and The support of my family makes within our family and all of our plefamily in the starting line apart, have always been close. American team recently) makes I was worried about them going me strive to be better," said to the same school but because Kevin they enjoy each other they both amic Doyle duo bit h lacrosse have been able to excel. They what Kevin said. "Kevin is supported by supported the support each other," said their always supporting from 1 father, father also to six other fine athletes, Gary Doyle.

each of them excel. "Kevin and awards (Margaret was selected me a better athlete," said Marchildren have excelled as ath-Margaret, being only a year to the 2nd team regional All- garet

Margaret concurred with what Kevin said. "Kevin is respectand seek his advice more than anyone's. I feel as good Kevin and Margaret Doyle about his accomplishments as I

At a small school like W.C. Margaret than any of my other he gets as much recognition as Mr. Doyle standing next to the There are a lot of similariit would seem to be almost brothers and sisters. We are he deserves playing defense."

As any W.C. lacrosse fan would know this parental sup- helping the Washington Colport is very hands on with par- lege lacrosse program, men's ents and family at each home and women's, excel to its best game. Personally, I can recall season in years. Catholic Church steps of the train tracks one day "Our whole family sup- watching the men's and women's game at the same time with equal concentration. "We have promoted athleticism > letism," said Mr. Doyle. It is this attitude that is

Austin Carpet

778-4656 Rt 213 North Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

MASS SCHEDULE ST.JOHN'S

SACRED HEART Daily Mass Rosary Recited Daily 8:15am

ning Mass Sunday Mass 8:30am 9:30 to 10:30am Sunday Mass 10:00am CCD-Sunday 9 to 9:45am Confessions are heard before Sunday Mass

8:30am

REV. THOMAS J. PETERMAN, Pastor Rectory: 508 High St. Office: Kent Street Side Entrance Chestertown, MD. 21620 of Sacred Heart Church
(301) 778-3160 Hours: M-F 9am to 2 pm

Religious Education Coordinator: Sr. Constance Davis, O.S.F.

continued from page 2 What in the world is a "respectfully, John Kelly, Fitness Center Supervisor," and why has it presumed to deliver itself of all of those officious little pronouncements about me in a letter in last week's newspaper? Is it possibly the student who used to bustle into the weightroom every day at 11:30 (truth be told, if it was really you, John, you were occasion-ally a little late), and get right down to the essential task of recounting the discs on the racks to discover whether I or some other unauthorized and irresponsible faculty member had pilfered one to take home as a paperweight? A student to whom I never remember passing a word, other than hello? And was it, unbeknownst to me, all the while seething over my having flouted-by having (gasp!) "accessed" the placeits authority as gatekeeper and policeman of the weightroom, and biting back its urge to correct me in all of my untutored, suicidal ways with weights (which I have somehow managed to survive for, my god, it must be almost thirty years now)? If it's you, John, I'm sorry I ignored you and made and underappreciated. I mean, there you were, trying to save me Born Again, trying to get me GRACE. And there was I, totally absorbed in . . . shame to lifting weights. And in eightroom, no less.

into a spitting contest with a student, not even one whose opinion on the subject I respected. But, then, as another faculty member darkly suggested, maybe John isn't my primary accuser. Maybe there are some other dark personages, maybe even a whole dark consortium, hiding behind "respectfully, John Kelly, Fitness Center Supervisor.

The issue isn't me, at least not any more. After almost fifteen years of regularly taking advantage of a privilege that used freely to be offered to the faculty, I'm history, I'm out of there. I moved to the other side of the tracks, paid my money, signed the release (which, interestingly, commercial gyms are so rash as to consider adeate protection against tort liability), and joined the Kent Fitness Center. For good. I don't go where I'm unwelcome, and I get angry at people who inflate themselves through an unearned, undeserved, bogus professionalism, and so I won't set foot in one of Mr. Miller's facilities, current or proposed, ever again.

ulty-athletic department relations, and, beyond that, facyou feel so small and useless ulty-administration relations. If I'm the only faculty member who resents having "respectme from myself, trying to get fully, John Kelly, Fitness Center Supervisor" or some other of Mr. Miller's henchmen in his the balance of junior faculty and faculty at the "instructor face, or who resents the highhanded and insensitive way that Mr. Miller's new regime Ordinarily I wouldn't get has been imposed on us, then the other hand, there is a significant number of faculty members who also feel resentful over discourteous and uncollegial treatment, then Mr. Miller, and Mr. Miller's subordinates, and Mr. Miller's superiors, and even Mr. Miller's successors may all have a problem. Maybe some day some future athletic director will look back at this episode and regret it as the self-indulgent powerplay of a careerist, empirebuilding predecessor. And maybe some day an even more exalted administrator at the College will look back and regret it as having stupidly and unnecessarily worsened the alienation between an increas ingly beleaguered faculty and

The issue is, rather, fac-

> Sincerely, R.C. De Prospo

P.S. I tried to get a student with a title to front for me and sign this, but I had less luck, and one or two more scruples, than the handlers of "respectfully, John Kelly, Fitness Center Supervisor.

an increasingly isolated, remote, and insular Administra-

continued from page 2 ity should be given to restoring

4. To maintain student financial aid at a level which there's no problem. But if, on reflects increases in tuitionincluding need based and merit grants, loans, and work study.

5. To begin to accumulate "carry-forward" fund that will enable the College to sustain its salary commitments and serve as a hedge against its "uncontrollable" obligations (imposed by federal health and safety requirements, escalating costs of insurance and medical benefits, etc.)

6. To enlarge the contingency fund needed to meet "rainy day" claims on the budget.

Visitors and Governors of Washington College

continued from page 2

Second, Washington College has not guaranteed housing to all of its students for at least the last six years and probably longer. Our ability to house continuing students on campus has always been dependent upon the number upperclass students who che to move out of the resider halls and into the communi In the past, we were able to commodate most if not all st dents who chose to remain campus housing but this pris lege was by no means guara

Please understand that do not wish to diminish the ve real concerns expressed in the editorial of April 21; t College's enrollment growth the past six years has create its share of problems and ch lenges for all of us. However The Board of believe that in seeking to und stand and remedy the College enrollment-related problems is important for all concern to have the benefit of accura information.

> Sincerel Kevin Covene Vice President for Admissions at Enrollment Managemen

Congratulations to Susan DiLeo for being appointed as Elm editor for 1989/90.

NICHOL'S TRACE CARRIAGE RIDES

Saturday, April 29, 1989 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. $5.00 per person Small Town Park Downtown Chestertown Sponsored by the Downtown Chestertown Association

OLDE TOWNE BARBERS

FRENCH BRAIDS * WAXING * PERMS

Facials 8 Waxing Paul Mitchell Products Kenra

Super Fresh Parking Lot

Mon-Sat

778-4771

HOT PIZZA AND

Eating Pizza Hut® Pan Pizza is a delicious occasion. It's crusty, tangy, covered with pure mozzarella cheese and delicious toppings. And it comes with a cozy atmosphere and friendly service. Relax and be seated—till you help yourself to our nonstop salad bar. It's so enjoyable. And so affordable. In fact, we'll pick up part of the tab.

$7 OFF

Kent Plaza Chestertown

Senior reading showcases creative writing talents

by Stephanie Hess

This Sunday, April thirtieth at 8:00 PM, the Senior Reading will take place in Phoebe's, the basement of Tawes Theater. Nine seniors, each vying for the coveted Soto read from their works of reative writing. Though involvement in the reading is based upon voluntary interest. it is possible that one of the away from graduation thirtythousand dollars richer. The seniors scheduled to read are: Michele Balze, Chas. Foster, Melissa Filling, Chris Drechsler, and Gina Braden.

Michele Balze, a double be reading from her poetry. She plans to read a couple of new what she has written during her college career. Her poems explore her feelings about love, writing, art, and communicaa correlation between her writing and her study of art. She likes to have strong visual images, and the study of studio art has affected the way she looks at things. Next year, Michele will be doing graduate work in English at the University of Rochester.

Chas. Foster, who has "absolutely no idea" what he is phie Kerr Prize, are scheduled reading, is double-majoring in Art and Home-Ec. He writes both poetry and prose, and thinks "the reading should be fun." Rumor has it that his latest project is a How-To book on participants will be walking Model Rocketry, but when asked about his work, he simply stated, "I agree with what Michele Balze said."

English major Todd Karr Todd Karr, Neal Boulton, Mona will be reading a long prose Brinkley, Bruce Danner, poem, entitled "Hypocrisy," which had to be cut to fit the time requirements of the reading. While Karr writes in many major in Art and English, will forms and genres, he believes he has done his best writing in the form of short stories. Karr's poems and a cross section of plans for next year include graduate school, though at this point he is not sure where he will be studying. Neal Boulton will be readtion. Balze admits that there is ing four poems that are part of mostly short poems that draw "communicate a feeling." The earliest poems from this series

Various members of the Senior class, pictured above, culminate four years of college creative writing with participation in the Senior Reading, which also serves as a forum for potential Sophie Kerr winners night, drugs and prostitution- "little daily miracles" of life. She second tells the incidents of one what Boulton calls "grit" poems. His newer poems utilize the same style, but have lighter images. Boulton is an International Studies major and would like to work for an advertising agency in the area of Account a work of vignettes intended to on her own experience. When asked to describe her poems, she quotes Virginia Woolfe, and will be reading three of these poems on Sunday evening, An English major, Mona will be ries, a sampling of poetry, and attending Washington University in St. Louis next year in been accepted to Purdue Unipursuit of a Master's degree in versity where he will be a gradu-English Literature.

Management.

Double majoring in Eng-Mona Brinkley writes lish and French, Bruce Danner will be reading two sections from his travel journal of a bike trip in the north of France. The first section relates his precondeal with images of the city, says that they are about the ceptions of the trip, and the day of the trip. Danner's portfolio also includes two short stosome translations. Danner has ate assistant in English

As of printing, the other three seniors; Chris Drechsler, Melissa Filling and Gina Braden, are scheduled to read. but their participation is still unconfirmed. The reading will be held at eight PM.

Film poignantly outlines boy's maturation in WWII

by Valerie Walbert Au Revoir Les Enfants; written, directed and produced by Louis Malle takes place in France during the second World War. As a result of the war, France fumbled through a pretarious period of uncertainty, erves as an effective backdrop or the plot of the film.

ties of life that he had previthing and has led a rather shel-The story depicts the is a new student and an out- and befriends Jean when he

as he realizes the harsh reali- the Holocaust, leads a life of Jewish and hiding in secrecy constant fear and deprivation. ously been sheltered from Juli- Julienne shares a close relaenne is a young boy at a board- tionship with his mother and ing school in France. Coming cannot imagine anything else from a fairly wealthy family, he and therefore is shocked to learn has never had to want for any- that Jean has not communicated with his mother in over fear and instability. This mood tered and spoiled life. The sol- three months and that his faemn character of Jean Bonnet ther is a POW. Julienne graduprovides a sharp contrast. Jean ally overcomes his selfishness aturation of Julienne Queten sider, Jean, being a Jew during secretly learns that Jean is Julienne goes through a transition from intrinsically perceiving himself at the center of the world to realizing and accepting that there are other people with problems in the world Julienne's small problems pale in comparison and he ultimately feels respect for Jean and his tragic life.

Julienne's lesson on life is driven coldly and cruelly home as the Gestapo raids the school and takes, among others, Jean, captive. Julienne's stable world is suddenly shattered and for the first time he fully understands the extreme fragility of

The film starts out slow and gradually builds momentum but it is unquestionably a learning and thought-provoking experience. Au Revoir Les Enfants is an emotional and contemplative film that magnifies the cruelties of life

The C-HOUSE....

Is NOW accepting applications for 89-90 school year.

> Stop by and pick up an application today.

FOOT OF CANNON ST.

CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

301-778-3566

RUG and DRY CLEANERS CORP. 107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

In the World

Speaking in Chicago, President Bush said he has developed constructive ties with the Congress. The comment comes as the Bush Administration nears the 100 day mark, a time of evaluation for any Administration not overturn a federal appellate court ruling permitting the use of the pesticide alar. Alar is used to enhance coloring and ripening in apples and other foods

Soviet Union

Soviet Foreign Minister Shavardnadze told the visiting French Foreign Minister

Off the cuff: tuition

continued from page 4

1992-93 And so on

What can we do?

The answer: Let's revolt!

I have finished my senior tuition hikes thesis. I have recently com-that the results from March's elections, in which more than 30 first secretaries, many Central Committee members, failed to be reelected, were just what had been hoped for. Soviet Leader Gorbachev will meet with the current Central Committee on Wednesday, and the The Supreme Court did recent election is expected to be a central issue

Japan

Prime Minister Takeshita is expected to announce his resignation following a cabinet meeting Tuesday. The Prime Minister has come under fire following further revelations of his ties to the Recruit Co., including the disclosure of

General Assembly. I don't like PCB. I like Cable TV. I work

These are my qualifications to become WC's twenty fourth president. Sound good,

I'm sure that all of you feel 91. And 1991-92. And as I do, that these tuition hikes are becoming tiresome. So vote for me, the college president candidate who pledges no more

I want to keep WC accespleted a stint at the Maryland sible for students whose par- I am about the annual tuition a loan made to Takeshita by the company that Takeshita did not report to the Japanese Parlia-

West Germany

In a meeting in Washington, the Bush Administration was urged by the West German Foreign and Defense Ministers to negotiate with the Soviet Union for reductions in battlefield nuclear weapons. Stressing the need for Nato unity, the Administration called any such negotiations a mistake. Within the alliance, both the British and the United States are opposed to the West German position on short-range nuclear weapons.

ents are not in the top economic echelon. And I want to keep WC affordable for the students who are already here

Despite his intentions, Cater's annual tuition increase is not making Washington College the "Harvard on the Eastern Shore." Instead, WC is threatened to become a day care center for spoiled rich kids.

Well, Doug, enough is enough If you are as frustrated as Jordan

ter and his government resigned in the aftermath of last week's riots. At least nine people died in the riots brought on by government-imposed price in-

Roughly 50,000 students from a dozen schools participated in a boycott of classes in an attempt to bring democratic reforms to China. Although the students, who are attempting to enlist the workers in their cause, have not met with much interference from the Chinese authorities, there hikes, then vote for a change.

My tenure as Washington

College president will most likely be a joke, but it will be a hell of a lot funnier than the annual reminder we receive that tuition has once again climbed more than one thousand dollars.

Congratulations to Susan Di Leo, next year's Elm editor!

are rumors that the military Jordan's Prime Minis- planning a crackdown. Lebanon

More fighting as Mos lem gunners attacked a French tanker delivering fuel to Beiru In Northern Lebanon, the Syri ans are supposedly massin troops to help their Mosle allies who have been battling Christian Army Units.

Afghanistan Afghan Rebels have sustained heavy casualties and are reportedly making litt progress in their seige of th city of Jalalabad, according b diplomatic sources in Kabul.

-compiled by Laura Hopper

Renovations

continued from page 1 complete

"Although it is not com pleted yet," Coleman pointer out,"substantial ground ha been made. That can be con tributed to the hard work an time that the work crews have put in, without which, couldn't of conceivably taken on a project like this.

Mom's Cookie Jar

About this time of year, many students begin to feel the strains of stress. It's been a long Spring semester, there's still a steady flow of work to be done and finals are just around the corner.

The stress response is the body's way of reacting to pressure. Typical stress systems include appetite changes (either loss of appetite or compulsive eating, especially sweets, and altered sleep habits). You may tend to catch a quick snack or you may rely on "comfort" foods usually sweets or chocolates, in lieu of more nutritious foods. Both reactions can lead to a poor supply of the vitamins and minerals the body needs to feel and work its best

Unfortunate consequences of poor nutrition such as low resistance to illness, general malaise, or putting on weight can all add to the original stress, creating a vicious cycle

When you are under pressure, as you are during exams, take care to eat well balanced meals, starting off the day with a good breakfast Consuming a well-balanced diet is crucial to physical and emotional health.

Exercise also has many physical and psychological benefits during stressful times. Exercise can help release tensions and clear your head. So if you are feeling especially tense and unable to concentrate on studies, a good game of racquesball or a relaxing jog might be just what you need to get back into the studying mindset.

Stress can best be handled by a healthy and well nourished body GOOD LUCK WITH YOUR EXAMS! Bull on the QUAD WILL BE MAY 4TH

MEAL HOURS:

May 5th Regular scheduled meals 7th Midnight Breakfast 11-30-12-30 a.m.

8-12th Exam week 7:30-9:30a.m. 1316 Continental breakfast

9:30-10:00 a.m. Breakfast to go Have a good week.

Washington College Film Series Presents....

big

Norman James Theatre 7:30

Friday, April 28 * Sunday, April 30 * Monday, May 1st!

Student, Faculty & Staff $1.00 All Others $2.00

Washington College Elm

Founded 1930

Volume 60, Number 4

Chestertown, Maryland 21620

Friday, May 5, 1989

College's growth poses a question of quality

Various members of the faculty and administration recently addressed issues surrounding growth of the Washington College student body. Concerns ranged from class size to possible housing difficulties.

Dean McIntire, of Student Affairs, was mostly concerned about the "real life impact of growth". She cited that in her experience the two areas of highest student priority are what classes am I going take and what room am I going to live in." According to McIntire these two are currently being threatened. Student Affairs, for example, could not guarantee all students housing because of the high number of incoming

According to McIntire the college's housing philosophy has been consistent. "Seniors are freshmen, then juniors, then supplements." She stated that larger than normal freshman class was admitted. Last month the administration estimated that 270 freshman would need housing. Though estimates have lowered in recent weeks, Student Affairs was forced to place a number of upperclassmen on housing waiting lists. According to McIntire most of those misplaced have found offcampus residences

Class size is another issue. Professor Richard DeProspo stated that the college uses a system of "bait and switch" Washington College is adver tised as a small, liberal arts college which can give its students "a lot of individualized attention." Said DeProspo, "(Now) they won't get as much." He personally will conduct two classes of 50 or more students next semester. DeProspo added housed first, then incoming that incoming freshmen with Advanced Placement credits will be unable to register in any housing has not been a "prob- upper level English courses lematic issue"until two or three aside from Creative Writing.

the first half of the card catalog into computer information has already begun. The information in the card catalog from 1960-1984 has been shipped to a vendor who then does the coding. OCLC, an Ohio company, converts the present card catalog to machine readable tape.

Information from this particular time period needs to be proc essed first because it contains the most recent information and half of the card catalog, the years before 1960, will begin in the summer. Library staff will be busily working to organize

Conversion of the second is most useful to students.

A student bares all for the camera and others as well this May Day at the Lit House.

for one single freshman."

Professor Nancy Tatum, Chairperson for the Department of English, confirmed DeProspo's concerns. "I am most concerned about discussion classes becoming lecture classes. This makes professors uncomfortable about the way students are handling the material. I am also concerned about physical discomfort when rooms are filled to maximum capacity or close to it."

Kevin Coveney, Director of Admissions, argued that no problem exists. "New student enrollment has changed very little over the last three years. Six years ago the institution was actually under-enrolled." Coveney stated that misconceptions about the adverse effect of growth originate mostly from that time period. Only 670 students attended Washington College in 1982, 1983.

Coveney reviewed enrollment statistics that covered 1985 to 1989. In 1985, 234 freshmen enrolled in classes at the college. In 1986 there were 220 freshmen, in 1987 there were 241 and in 1988 there were 249. Coveney approximated that between 250 to 260 freshmen would attend classes in the Fall. He cited the average freshman enrollment to be 235.

"There is not one single seat left "That's a fluctuation of only about 15 students. When you're talking about 800 or 900 students per year, 15 students is not significant."

Though many believe that the college is growing beyond its means to handle students in the classroom and in their accommodations, Coveney stated that current enrollment numbers are necessary. "Financially this institution needs to function at this level. Fewer students would actually be paying more a piece for the privilege of being here."

David Butters, Registrar, also was unable to see any of the rumored difficulties. Butters addressed complaints that class registration was problematic for many upperclassman. The Registrar's Office complies their data based on the actual registration cards. "We listed the courses which were scratched off of the cards and the ones with no signature." From this they estimated that three Seniors did not get into classes that they wanted, but, added Butters, "that doesn't mean that they didn't get the classes they need to graduate." Fourteen Juniors didn't get into distribution type courses. "Sen-

New SGA executives meet

by Julie Schram The executive council of the Student Government Association met for their final time last Tuesday evening in the Sophie Kerr Room. Executive members briefed the Senate on advancements and contacts that had been made in anticipation of the upcoming year.

SGA President, Steve Attias, reported that his meeting with Dave Knowles, Director of Dining Services, went well. Knowles, according to Attias, is willing to work for the expanded meal card usage plan, in which meal cards could also be used at Miss Dee's discussed at length. Atticonceded that "the problem isn arena registration as a whole. but that there are too many students and not enough pro-fessors." Nevertheless Stuart Neiman reported that there will be no tenured positions offered next year, according to Dr. Sherry Magill Vice President of the College. This is not to say lecturers and others may not be hired to relieve the course loads of some professors.

In response to student dissatisfaction with arena registration, questionnaires were collected. Only underclass forms had been reviewed and an overwhelming percentage suggested computerizing registration, according to Neiman.

Neiman also spoke with the Board of Visitors and Governors about the campus alcohol policy. He relayed that they are "not actively and readily planning on making this a dry This is evidently possible if the College's insurance companies feel that the problem is out of hand.

As a result of a push by Health Services, regulations on the number of kegs registered through Student Affairs for campus parties will be more strictly enforced, even to the point of establishing communication between the administra-

Miller Library initiates plans for future automation

by Sharon Bonner

Washington College's Miller Library recently received a grant for $100,000 from the Surdna Foundation. This is a philanthropical institution which supports higher learning. The grant will be used to treate a new automated system in the library. The estimated completion date for the project is 1-2 years in the future, 1990 or 1991

"We've been given the go shead to really get the project going. Something tangible is finally going to come out of the plans for automation," commented Mr. Tubbs, Head Librarian and a coordinator of records and check books before the plans

The process of converting

continued on page 8

iors had no problem getting the continued on page 8

continued on page 8

We should avoid blind trust

At the end of the school year, it is important to look at what has passed in order to gain a glimpse of the future. The school year 1988-1989 has been a busy one for Washington College. Problems have plagued the College, even as it prepared for growth into the 1990's and beyond.

This year there were many issues that faced the student body: P.C.B. posed a threat to our environment, thousands of our S.G.A. dollars were misappropriated, Stenger's propane tanks were too close for comfort, and recreational activities were inhibited by the removal of cable. Naturally the students were dismayed by these gross problems, and some effort went into attempts to relieve them.

It is unquestionable that these startling issues served as an eve opener to the College community. Yet this raises another question: Will the eyes of the students remain opened, or will they blindly trust that nothing will happen?

The Administration had made arrangements to rid Washington College of its P.C.B. transformers, the treasurer of the S.G.A. was arrested, the Stenger gas tank problem is being investigated for possible solutions, and the student body has been promised a return of cable. Certainly it appears as if the College has contained its problems

Students in China have been protesting against the government to gain rights that American students already have. We should take note of their example, and remember it in the future when issues threaten us. Because there will be more problems, and more administrative decisions to disturb us. Eyes will need to be open, in order to watch the administration, to watch the S.G.A., to watch The Elm; not suspiciously, but hopefully.

Students should watch with confidence in the capability of the College to handle anything down the road. With careful observation, perhaps we will be able to avoid misunderstandings and the crumbling of student/student and student/administration relationships into distrust.

Our education will be far more successful if we avoid committing ourselves to blind trust in anything. Although the administration will do what they think is best for the student body and the strength of the College, there are times when what they think is right is not really all right with us. If we are watching, if we're aware of what is happening, we can express our disagreement in the many capacities that are open to students. If we don't watch,we won't be able to partake in the freedom of speech, because we won't have anything to say if we don't know what is going on.

Washington College Elm

| Editors                       |                      |
|-------------------------------|----------------------|
| Editor-in-chief               | Jennifer M. Harris   |
| News Editor                   | Tracey Conne         |
| Features Editor               | Anne Lindenbau       |
| Sports Editor                 | Carter Boatn         |
| Arts and Entertainment Editor | Michele M. Volansi   |
| Photography Editor            | David Johnso         |
| Graphics Designer             | Todd Ka              |
| Managers                      |                      |
| Managing Editor               | Bill Beekm           |
| Advertising Manager           | . Erin Hodge-William |
|                               |                      |

MARY JANE BLEW UP! FOMAL GOMOGY ALLELVIA! RAPTURE! IN A BIZARRE AND TRAGIC EVENT THAT DEFIES NORMAL LAWS OF CARTON CON-VENTIONS, AND BROUGHT ON NO DOURT BY THE AIR OF THIS CAMPUS, THICK WITH CONTROVERSY AND P.C.BS. WAIT WHAT'S YES, IT'S TRULY SAD. IT COULD VE HAPPENING? BEEN ANYTHING: TOXIC WASTE AAIGGHHH ! PROPANE TANKS, BAD FOOD, FINKLS, LACK OF CABLE TV. LITTER BOREON OR EVEN CARTOONIST MIS MANAGE MENT. WHO KNOWS FARE YE WELL! THIS COULD HAPPEN TO TAY ATTENTION

Letters to the Editor

YOU!

DeProspo diffuses his argument

To the Editor: I am writing to express my opinion on a letter in last week's Elm submitted by Dr. DeProspo. Friday a friend asked me if I'd seen this letter. I had not, so she read it to me as I ate lunch. We talked about the letter and the issue surrounding it for a few minutes and then moved on to other topics. But Dr. DeProspo's letter remained on my mind. The more I though about it, the more offended I became.

I do not know John Kelly and can not tell you what he looks like. I took two electives from Dr. DeProspo. I learned a lot in those classes and would have taken others from him had time permitted. I had nothing but respect for him as a teacher.

Initially I could not figure out why the letter bothered me. I sought out the prior issue of the Elm and looked at John Kelly's letter. After rereading it I realized what disturbed me. Dr. DeProspo verbally attacked a student, in a student publication, in order to strike back at the Administration. His method of voicing his anger at the new policies regulating the use of Cain seemed to violate every notion of pedagogical responsibility I have come to expect from the faculty at Washington College.

During my four years at Washington College I have come to respect the faculty who are highly qualified, but underpaid and overworked. I am confident that my academic background will serve me well as I continue my educational endeavors. I willingly listen to faculty opinions on any issue, for many of them have taught me, by example, what I know concerning professional responsibility. Dr. DeProspo's letter seemed to violate the very notion of this responsibility, weakening the credibility of his arguments.

He had every right to express his dislike of the new rules; however, using a student as his vehicle to do so goes beyond simple freedom of expression. I have been taught that the essence of the facultystudent relationship is not simply a business transaction entailing supply and demand. A real education is not the mere acquisition of facts spouted in insolation by a professor, who upon leaving the classroom, becomes simply another individual. Students, while not inferior to their professors, rely on their example. Maybe viewingeducational relationships as interactions involving both trust and responsibility is an 'ivory tower" notion, but I believe this ideal is one of the distinguishing characteristics of Washington College. had a right to expect that his letter would be taken at face value. Work-study students are in a tenuous position when it comes to student-faculty relations and especially when it comes to faculty-administration relations. In the past, I too have been a work-study student. At times, I desired to express my opinion on various campus issues; yet, because of my work-study status or because of other positions I held, I felt I should not respond to the controversy at hand. In retrospect, I often wish I had.

To respond to issues pub licly takes courage. Whether or not one agrees with John Kelly, or even knows enough about the issue to formulate an opinion, he deserves credit for speaking out. In times when "student apathy" is bemoaned left and right, angrily striking out at a student who is actively concerned only undermines efforts to increase student participation If a faculty member dislikes an action by the Administration, he should not use his position as professor as license to attack a student in order to get at another faculty member or at an administrator. In the end, Dr. DeProspo's letter only diffused his argument, alienating those who might otherwise have listened

Sincerely, Rachel A. Smith

P.S. I am the sole author of this letter. Students are capable of formulating and expressing their own opinions.

Disturbed by the mudslinging To the Editor:

Sorry Dr. DeProspo, but the letter lacked a little some thing. It's missing ingredient was professionalism. Just a John Kelly, the student, pinch would have added nicely to your stew

Grown men shouldn't be slinging mud in front of the students whose respect is a necessity. Mr. Miller has done great things for all students, faculty and staff at the College The improvements to the exist ing facilities, and the proposed Athletic Center are long over-

Any accusations or gripes should be dealt with privately, not in a student publication While your letter may have been entertaining to some, I think many people were disappointed with it. Before anymore accusations are thrown around would like to state openly and for the record, that no one put me up to this letter. Mr. Miller did not even know I was writing a response. This letter is from a student disturbed by the mudslinging.

Respectfully Steve Leary

ISSUE:

Should Washington College expand its curriculum to include peace studies courses?

Conditions for a peaceful life are inadequate

I sometimes find it hard to problem is needed. The proimagine that there are people who believe conditions for a peaceful life on this planet are anything other than grossly inadequate. With environmental horrors, racism, sexism and wars waged by self-aggrandizing, imperialist and colonialist governments afflicting the earth, the world plots the trajectory of its destruction.

Maybe it's my spiritualleft politics skewing my vision and obscuring some other transcendent truth, but I find in our community, both national and international, a deep discontent that needs correction. In order to amend such deep-seated discontents, awareness of the posal to introduce Peace Studies as in our schools is a quantum sten in the direction of higher awareness.

Suffice it to say that the current philosophy of peace in this country is an awful misnomer. By peace I mean, as Dr. King said, not merely an absence of tension but the presence of a cooperative, constructive affirmation of all peoples' right to exist. It is another misnomer to actually call the proposal a "Peace Studies" program. Given that our government believes fists, guns and nuclear weapons can bully countries into submission in the name of "Peace," it is somewhat misleading to suggest that I mean the same thing. The Peace Studies I mean is one qualified by non-violence. A.J. Muste put it succinctly when he said, "There is no way to peace, peace is the way."

Since one of the goals of Peace Studies is to politically empower people, it is absolutely necessary that the methods of non-violence by studied. In Gene Sharp's 900 page trilogy The Politics of Non-Violent Action, 198 forms of non-violent action are outlined. The possibilities are nearly endless, ranging from individual to group and national acts, there is a non-violent strategy for every situation. It is, however, the main thrust of Peace Studies not to intimate that after one semester of study one will be able to march into Central America or Israel and resolve all tensions there. As Coleman McCarthy often asks, how does one expect to salvage a burning house when four-fifths of it is already consumed? It is the understanding of many that given the correct understanding of history and possible procedure, future generations will be better equipped to avoid other Vietnams, South Africas man involved with the the atand Northern Irelands.

Joe Hamilton

history taught in primary and secondary schools recounts the military exploits of one nation or another, that one of the prime intentions of Peace Studies to introduce students to the rich history that non-violence has. It is fallacious to assume that only "backward" countries without a military might resort to non-violent resistance. After all, it is a deeply-imbedded part of our heritage as America: the first years of our Revolution were fought using basic nonviolent means of resistance.

continued on page 4 Joe Hamilton is a fresh-

tempt to bring peace studies to It is precisely because the Washington College.

Claire Capuzzi Freshman Severna Park, MD I'm going to see it again and

Neil Macindoe Junior Trappe, MD Adefinite thumbup, I laughed, I believe that a course such as I really don't know. It would be I think it would be a good addi. No. It isn't a big enough issue I cried it became a part of me. this one would be beneficial to beneficial for expanding station to the Political Science Any area this pertains to should the Political Science/International Studies curriculumn

Eric McCormack Freshman Fallston, MD

dent horizons, but we should also consider what this may be taking away from other earlier riculum

Beth Bozic Junior Meadville, PA

Department because perhaps some people would like to know more about how complicated it established sections of the cur- is to achieve and not just a simple problem.

Lisa Peterson Junior Medford, NJ

work it in to their already ex ing curriculum. I don't think that many people would re benefit. Although it might interesting.

by Any L. Under

Peace studies is not a priority at W.C.

Washington College, he tire-

When Coleman McCarthy took the campus by storm sev eral weeks ago, he spread his infectious desire for peace stud-With controversial talks all day, McCarthy hitched up a wagon and paraded around Washington College making a strong pitch about the virtues and essence of non-violent alternatives. McCarthy, an extreme pacifist, preaches an idealistic, almost utopian message of non-violence and love of all mankind. The message is beautiful and full of hope. Mc-Carthy has a dream, to establish Peace Studies programs in every high school in the country. This is a beautiful dream and McCarthy is a rare bird advocating policies which are directly antithetical to the policies carried out all over the

Carter Boatner

McCarthy has admirable ideals, and I believe Peace Studies are legitimate, however disagree with instituting a Peace Studies program at Washington College. Washington College is in the process of rapid development. At this stage every proposed addition to the school should be weighed to determine its absolute necessity, and in my opinion there are other more valuable alternatives which should be considered first for addition to the current curriculum.

lessly praised the commitment the school made towards developing the writing ability of the students. He stated that Washington College has a strong and dedicated writing program. This was the main reason I selected Washington College for undergraduate study, and admittedly the writing program is the school's forte. With all of this emphasis put on writing, I was shocked to learn that there is nothing offered in the way of classic studies. A course in Latin would be of more benefit to the student body than Peace Studies. The English language is largely composed of the ancient Roman language, and with a grasp of Latin one has greater When McCarthy spoke at capabilities in dealing with the ington College is placed geo-

English language. The school already has a writing center staffed with dedicated personnel, why not go the whole ninevards and institute courses which would strengthen writing skills?

Another alternative to Peace Studies would be environmental studies. What is the point of teaching people not to get angry at one another if we neglect to care for our environment? The environment is the number one priority of the young generation. Washington College is located near some of the most fertile estuaries in the World, yet there is only one course offered to students which deal with the natural wonders of the Eastern Shore. Wash-

graphically in an ideal location to become a leader in Chesapeake Bay studies, yet no members of the biology department is an environmentalist. Rather than create a new department for a non-traditional study, why not bring an environmentalist in the school and enhance community relations by offering programs in ecological con-

From what McCarthy said, I infer that the crux of a Peace Studies program deals with the philosophy of advocates of non-violence. If this is so, why not extend the philosocontinued on page 4 servation?

Carter Boatner is a senior majoring in history. He is sports editor for The Elm.

In the World

Exxon presented a revised spill in Alaska. The proposal a Sept. 15 deadline for cleaning largely restayed old views. Prince William Sound and the likelihood that poor

continued from page 3

Peace Studies would ideally be interdisciplinary. Obviously philosophy, history and political science come to mind, but what about the psychology of aggression or the sociology of cultural change? Or what about art and literature? Leo Tolstoy, Aldous Huxley and Albert

Einstein were adamant paci-

Bush urged U.S. allies to plan to clean up its huge oil denounce massive election fraud' in a Panamanian presileaves some of the work up to dential election Sunday that he nature and seeks permission to says is designed to keep strongdispose of clean up materials man Noriega in power. The using methods that bypass state White House billed Bush's first PLO charter outdated after and federal environmental speech as the first friuts of for-

Bush has also approrved beaches, despite reduced esti- selling 1.5 million metric tons mates of the workers needed of subisdized wheat to the Soviet Union. The Agriculture weather will cut the number of Department and farm-state legficts. It stands to reason that a On this academic front, great many areas would be useful in the study of non-vio-

> The final point of peace studies is to ask basic questions. Among these questions is one of values: what values do the institutions of education wish to instill in the students they teach?

Thin Man Deli

Baked Goods * Deli Sandwiches * Assorted Cheeses

> Open 5 Days a Week Monday thru Friday

> > 107 Cross Street

but some top Bush advisers provision void. opposed it, citing U.S. drought conditions that may reduce supplies and arguing against unwarranted help to the Soviet into a Sidon gift shop and shot again. economy

LEBABNON

Paristalks with Mitterand. The a provision that calls for the destruction of Israel during a TV interview on the first day of an official visit to France. He said he favors a Mideast peace based on the existence of Israel and a Shanghai demanding democsenative was crtically wounded him in the head.

WEST GERMANY

Chancellor Bonn softened Yassir Arafat called the his position on NATO negotiat- president the "unacceptable laws Exxon insists it will meet eign policy reviews, but it PLO chairman was asked about chances the Western alliance John Paul arrived in Africa summit in late May. CHINA

Chinese And as it is agreed that as violence is always a failure.

forever lose the chance.

islators had advocated the sale, Palestinian state and called the racy and freedom. Meanwhile, in Beijing, student leaders gave the government 24 hours to Arrafat's personal reprerecognize their student union by a masked gunman who burst before they take to the streets

ROME

The pope told Zambia's ing strategy for the short-range system of apartheid" must be nuclear arms, improving the ended by dialogue not violence: will have a unified stance as its aboard a supersonic Concorde jet as part of four-nation tour Zambia is the headquarters of students the African National Congress, marched through the streets of the main guerilla group opposing apartheid.

continued from page 3 phy department to include studies of the great advocates of non-violence and pacifism. Entire courses could be developed examining great men such as Martin Luther King Jr., or The intention of Peace Studies Mohandas Gandhi. If one went is to ask questions and attempt down a partial list of the leadto answer them. It is worth the ers of pacifism, a substantial effort. If Peace is not studied concentration could be develnow, in all likelihood it will oped dedicated entirely to the study of advocates of nonviolence, and contained within the existing philosophy depart-

What makes Washington College unique is that it is a traditional liberal arts college. By introducing a new major which is so closely related to an existing discipline, the liberal arts aspect of the school will be threatened.

A value-free education is impossible, particularly if by a method of conflict resolution that one means dishing out non-violence is painfully slow, static facts and by-rote themes. in fact, often a failure, it is the premise of Peace Studies that This approach produces nonvalues that lead to moral and social apathy. How can Humanities be taught without instilling a respect for humanity? It is a common respect for humanity that should precipitate values

If you are pregnant please read this:

Loving family hopes to adopt again. We can pay expenses.

> Please call. Sally 301-828-4355

all Star ROUTE 213 NORTH CHESTERTOWN, MARYLAND 21620 TELEPHONE 301-778-4500 1-800-327-2145

Congratulations To The Graduating Seniors of 1989!

We're pleased to announce that General Motors offers a College Graduate Financing Plan.

For further information, please contact the dealership.

Current Rebates of $400 - $1000 Now in Effect

Plus $400 Additional for Grads

May Day sees birth of a new tradition: Let it rain every May 1

Bill Beekman

Well - Mr. Cater, Mr. Baer, and all of you other Buntagon dudes - the mud finally did some good.

Now what should we do strate on the first day of May. with the mulch next May Day? I guess that we started a new tradition last Monday. Traditions usually start with freak accidents like ours No more struttin' in the buff down the fire lane every May 1st. Now we strut in the buff and frolic in the mud.

And whoever said that WC was a conservative school?

I'm amazed at the ingenuity that WC students demon-

Kevin Coveney has been saying for years that each WC class is a little brighter and a little more creative. Now I know what he means

What can we do for an encore? Run in the nude, frolic in the mud, and burn the Buntagon down?(Don't tell anyone I mentioned that.)

I have to admit, I haven't had so much dirty fun in a long on one another. Throw mud!

I doubt that any other this, of course. school in the nation participates in such festivities. They may build shanties and protest Apartheid and rally for abor-in the mud in the nude.

We are one of a kind. Thank the gods for that.

There is a bad side to all of slogan mean the WC administration mud! tuition another thousand bucks Day

tion rights, but they don't play to repair and clean the campus. But there is an answer!

I will continue my campaign to become WC's twenty-Let this be a lesson to all fourth President. And I will future WC students: you can leave the mudintact, so that we have fun without throwing beer can have these mudfests more often. Here's my new campaign

Read my lips: No more The WC fascists - um, I tuition hikes, and lots more

May it rain every May

As a college student, Libby Cater knew she wanted a career in politics. She followed through on that wish by working for the Johnson and Carter administrations, the National Endowment for the Arts, and the American Conservaotry Theatre, among others.

Libby Cater: Not just the president's wife

by Anne Lindenbaum

dent Douglass Cater's wife is a for a congressman. It was there fact we all know. What many that she met her husband, people may not be aware of, Douglass Cater, who was then however, is that Libby Cater has had an extensive political career, beginning with her col- ecutive Assistant to the conlege days. As an Economics major at the University of Alabama, Cater knew she wanted to go into politics. She was elected the first female student body something outside the home as president ever, started a student senate, and established an makes me a little livelier, rather Honor Code as well.

Cater's first job after college was doing public relations for a large corporation, but her political career began in earnest when she went to Wash-That Libby Cater is Presi- ington D.C. to do clerical work a reporter. By the time they married, she had become Exgressman.

Cater continued her career interests while at the same time raising a family.

"It's interesting to do well as inside the home. It than getting stale," she ex-

"The arts and the environment are both subjects that continued on page 8

RIVER INN ROLPH'S WHARF

Victorian Bed

king & twin beds. Fresh baked goods. Open all year. 778-1988 Year round water front dining. Lunch and dinner. Patio Bar Lounge. Entertainment. Catering and private parties available. 778-3227 and Breakfast. Private baths.

ROLPH'S

Private Beach & Pool. Concrete Boat Ramp. Transients welcome. Winter storage.

ROLPH'S WHARK On The Chester River Rt. 1, Box 646, Rolph's Who Ald Chestertown, MD 21620

off R+ 213, 4 miles south of the beedge Chestertauri Bridge

Bramble's Traditional Clothing

Staff and Students: Thanks for your Patronage!

Congratulations to the Graduating Class of '89!

Stop by and See us before you leave! Have A Great Summer!

335 High Street

778-6090

Seniors share parting memories

by Don Steele

Each year Washington College graduates several ath-All-Americans, All-M.A.C., and other award winners leave after completing their athletic and academic requirements. These are the people who may not win the awards but whose basic "love" for the sport they play makes them work hard. These people are what makes Washington College athletics so special. Athletes Linda Anders, John Bodnar, Sandie Coulter, Liz Rexon, George Small, Pat Youngs and others are the people who make athletics ere tick. They have worked hard, loved their sport and have cherished the chance to play collegiate athletics.

Linda Anders. "I have learned how to play three sports here, (softball, field hockey, and lacrosse). Through these sports I have and met a lot of friends. The friends and the teammates have made my time here so lacrosse victory over Western Maryland and the field hockey ropes course. Anders also commented on "how Washington College is great for team work. It is a group effort." Anders has been a force behind the success of this year's women's lacrosse team and predicted "an upswing in athletics in the next few years. All sports are improving and in the next few years women's sports will be unstoppable." John Bodnar-"Athletics has made my college days ten times more exciting. I love soccer and I viewed my college playing days as my professional years. I'e worked hard and tried my best. I'm honored to be part of the team. I'll always remember this year's 3-2, win over Haverford and the 8-6 win in a shoot out over Salisbury. Athletics have taught me to work hard and to be competitive. I think the athletics here are excellent for its size. gained confidence in myself Idon'tthink there is great school spirit here but Mr. Miller is improving that."

Sandie Coulter. "I played When asked her field hockey because I love the favorite athletic memories sport. I enjoy the outlet that

Anders mentioned this year's field hockey gave me from my rest of my life. Athletics has work. Athletics has been a big part of my college stay. I have made a lot of good friends and had a lot of fun. I'll remember the win over Georgetown in overtime during my sophomore year for a long time. Athletics here are growing and getting more and more support. I am glad to see more athletics for women

Elizabeth Rexon-"I think collegiate athletics has been a very positive part of college. I think I'll remember my four years of swimming as much as anything. Going to Florida this year, the MAC championships and the team companionship are things I'll never forget. Swimming has taught me the importance of physical fitness. It is something I'll do for the

"The team has finally pulled together this past weekend has showed it. They are pulling stronger and longer then the start of the season, and I think the will continue to do well," said women's varsity coach, John Wagner.

The men's novice eight closed there season at the Villanova University Regatta with a record of 2-11. The team defeated boats from William & Mary and St. John's

The men's novice eight broke down in to a four midseason and presently have a record of 4-9

FOOT OF CANNON ST

CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

"Things just have not been going well for us. I think that over time the team will pull for the coaching I've had. Washington College athletics are run very well. More people are participating and using the facilities. I have had a great time with athletics at Wash-George Small-"Athletics have helped me acclimate helped me learn about people. I know how to get along with people's moods. I am thankful myself to college. Being part of a team and being a Theta are my favorite college memories, with the 2 OT wins over Salisbury and this year's NCAA game against Grove City as my favorite athletic memories. I am glad to have been a contributor to a winning team. Dealing with teammates has helped me learn not to be selftogether, but who knows. Crew is not an easy sport," stated men's novice coach, Don Chatil-

The women's novice program had the best season in the history of the program. The women's novice eight is presently 14-7

The women's novice four team has a record of 4-8.

"My girls have improved greatly from the fall. I think a lot of that was from the their training trip to Florida. The trip really pulled them together," commented women's novice coach. Mickey Dulin, "I have a good team and a strong team. They are doing well and feel they will continue to do well.Lacrosse

ish. I've also learned to work with other people. Athletics at Washington are growing. The teams still need more support, The fans cheering makes you play harder and really means something. Pat Youngs-"I think there is a growing pride in the athletic program. I am glad to be a part of it. Athletics here are an attribute to the culture. They have also been a big attribute to me. The team concept and the competition is great. I have always enjoyed playing here. The 13-10 loss to Johns Hopkins in my freshman year is my favorite athletic memory. Playing against the #1 team in the country and against some of my friends was great. I think the mixture of athletics and academics here is good. Washington College breaks the stereotype of jocks. I will look back and be glad to be identified with the team and I'll have no re-

Lacrosse wrapup by Joe Van Name

The Men's lacrosse record now stands at 10-3 with only West Chester remaining before the first round of the NCAA's on May 10th. In the past two weeks W.C. has recorded wins against two of their perennial rivals; Washington & Lee and Salisbury State Against Washington & Lee the Sho'men played a very strong game against a W&L team that just could not keep pace. The final score of 19-5 was emblematic of the contest in which 12 different W.C. players had goals.

Salisbury State has a very good team and has constantly been ranked in the top ten it Division III. This game proved to be a lot closer than W&L with the final being 13-8. The Sho'men were down at one poin 7-8 but rallied behind Bob Martino's five goals and one 301-778-3566 assist to pull out the victory

The leading scorers so far this year are: Junior Attack man Tim Hormes 52 goals and 20 assists, Junior Midfielder Bob Martino 38 goals and assists, Freshman Attackman Nick Darcangelo 23 goals and assists, Sophomore Midfielder Steve Klein 19 goals and 8 assists, and Sophomore Attackman Ben Lamanna 11 goals and 16 assists. In goal Sophomore Dave Slomkowski has 150 saves while allowing only 98 goals for a save percent age of .605

The last regular season game is Saturday May 6th at West Chester, with a 2 pm start The #2 Sho'men should host at least one of the playoff games which start on the 10th. The second round games are on the 14th, with the finals the 20th

Crew shorts

by Troy Peterbrink

The Washington College Crew Team brings it season to a close on a positive note The men's varsity eight is 4-15 (three of the races consisted of a Jay Vee eight) winning against boats from Johns Hopkins, George Washington and Hobart

RESTAURANT

The men's varsity four is-5-Tina Smith, men's varsity coach stated, "I feel the team worked very hard this season, and I have hope for them."

Six to nine is presently the women's varsity eight's record. The women had a slow start for the season, but place second at the Bucknell Regatta held Sat-

STEAKS . SEAFOOD . COCKTAILS

BUFFET EVERY SUNDAY 12-6 HAPPY HOUR - DAILY 4:38-6

> AIR TAXI SERVICE AVAILABLE SCHEELER FIELD 778-1222

CHESTERTOWN, MD Str. 213 A 201

Fine Framing · Select Gifts Artists Materials

> POBOX 402, 711 High Street Chestertown, Maryland 21/20 101-778-5202

Austin Carpet 778-4656 Rt .213 North

OLD WHARF INN

ON THE CHESTER RIVER

Chestertown, MD 21620 Across from Airport 1 Mile North of Chestertown

CARPET REMNANTS ALL SIZES

107 N. CROSS STREET CHESTERTOWN, MD. 21620

One Day Service Available Located Downtown next to the Court House

A freshman's view of May Day...

by Stephanie Hess

I wanna go once more to the firelane/ and see people dancing in the nude again / I wanna feel what spring is all about / I wanna go where I can let it all hang out. These lyrics. from the Incorrigibles' song May Day capture the spirit of the Washington College springtime tradition that is familiar to every student here. Anyone who has been on campus on May first has an interesting story to tell about his or her experiences on May Day. Before last week, whenever I asked an upperclassman to explain May Day to me, his or her most vivid memories were of freshman year. I would guess that this is because of the expectations and preconceptions that build in the minds of freshmen from the first time they hear about the Day May tradition("Naked! Everybody?") until they actually experience it themselves

I first heard about May Day during freshman orientation. I was already extremely nervous about college, and hearing about "everyone" running around in the firelane, drinking and dancing in the nude, was almost enough to make me pack my milk crates and head home. But after I adjusted to college life, I started to adjust to the idea of May Day, and I even forgot about it, until sometime around April twentieth, when May first was looming closer. I started asking my upperclassmen friends to tell me more about the tradition. The advice I got most often was, "Don't worry, once you have enough to drink, you will think it is great. When I was a freshman, I didn't think I would take my clothes off either, but you really get caught up in the moment." These were not comforting words. I considered hiding in my room, but I detided that was immature. Instead, Sunday night I laid in my bed, hoping for rain When I woke up Monday morning and saw the clouds, I thought I was in luck. It seemed much too cold to run naked. I for two or three more hours, The Lambdapledges ran naked including me, had a great time, went to my classes as usual and I did not feel uncomfort through the hallways, and I The way I see it, even if they fully clothed. At about fourthirty in the afternoon, a friend and I went over to the Lit House to check out the Writers' Union Picnic and to find out when the Incorrigibles were going to play. When we got there, people were milling around, still clothed; so far so good. When we went back an hour later, people had already started to undress. I stayed at the party and danced point the naked people were in the minority. I left shortly after the band stopped playing, and as I was leaving I realized that I had had a wonderful time. Maybe May Day was not so horrible after all. I was suddenly disappointed that the weather was bad; I wanted to dance in the firelane.

May Day festivities continued. not. It seemed as if everyone, heard rumors that Theta didn'thavefun, they have some pledges were running around campus in nothing but jock straps. Also, since it was too rainy to drink in the firelane, the ever resourceful May Day participants moved the party to the quad in front of Kent House. Estimations have it that there were three hundred students sliding in the mud out-Despite the cold weather, side Kent, some dressed, some good stories to tell

Looking back, I am sorry that I wished for rain. May Day this year certainly was fun, but I think it would have been even better if the weather had been warm. I know that next year, come mid-April, I too will be hoping for a nice day, and looking forward to naked softball games, and a party in the fire-

Chestertown site of census kick-off and parade

been noted for its beautiful surroundings, its quaint, picturesque homes, its waterfront scenery and for the small, liberal arts college which rests in the center of town. However, not many people are aware of the fact that Chestertown, in 1790, was the center of population for the United States. This fact, along with the two-hundredth anniversary of the census, will be highlighted and celebrated on Monday, May eighth at eleven in the morning, as Governor William Donald Schaefer serves as leader of a parade which will conclude at Wilmer Park

Other notable figures that will be present for the parade include Colonel Loren J. Shriver and Secretary of Commerce Robert Mosbacher. day's activities is the Census Clock, which will be on display at the picnic following the pa-

Shriver, who will serve as Grand Marshall for the parade, which is made up of six marching bands, floats and historical characters, is a colonel in the United States Air Force and a NASA astronaut. He is noted for flying in thirty different types of single and multi-engine civilian and military fixed wing and helicopter aircraft and logging over five thousand hours in jet aircraft time. However, he is perhaps best noted for serving as pilot on NASA's STS 51-C, which was launched from the Kennedy Space Center in January of 1985 and deployed a modified Inertial Upper Stage vehicle from

Tuesday-Saturday

A Shear Design

COMPLETE HAIR CARE - MANICURE - NAIL TIPS

FACIALS - PETTICURES

mander position of STS-31, which is set for launch in December of this year.

The Census Clock will also be part of the day's activities. This clock, which permanently resides in the lobby of the Philadelphia Regional Office of the Census Bureau, marks digitally America's population. As of States population, since the first April first, the clock read 247, census in 1790, has leaped from 619, 883 as the population of 3, 929, 214 to 226, 545, 805 in the United States. It is ex- 1980. pected to reach two-hundred and fifty million by the summer town picnic will be held at noon of 1990, the next census. The in Wilmer Park. The public is clock is illustrated by four faces, encouraged to attend

Chestertown has long among others. Also part of the the Space Shuttle Discovery. which cite birth rates, (one every Currently, Shriver is in train- nine seconds) death rates (one ing for the spacecraft com- every sixteen seconds) immigration (an arrival every sixty seconds) and emigration (one every fifteen minutes or ninehundred seconds). The total population figure, which runs across the top of the display, currently increases every fifteen seconds. An interesting fact to note is that the United

Following the parade, a

Finn Fur Feather Inn

Overlooking Rock Hall Harbor

*Outside Deck for Dining Specializing in..... Steamed Crabs Live Steamed Lobster Clambakes Entreés from the Land

Open 7 days * Breakfast * Lunch * Dinner

Mickey Dulin and Piano Fri + Sat Nites

639-7454 On the Bay at Fairlee Creek

Sacred Heart ~ St.John's

SACRED HEART

ST.JOHN'S

505 Washington Ave. Chestertown, Md. 21620

11130 9:30 to 10:30 are heard 6;15' Seturday Evening

Office: Kert Street Side En (1975)

Gallow Sert Str

Janie Thompson

P.O. Box 527 Chestertown, MD 21020 OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK at 7:30a.m.

BREAKFAST * LUNCH * DINNER

*Dave Brand Entertains Saturday Nites 30 Motel Rooms * Restraurant & Lounge * Banquet & Meeting

Rooms * Golf Course * Full Sevice Marina * Miniture Golf Home of LaVida Yachts Restaurant / Motel 778-2100 Marina 778-5007

Libby

Cater continued from page 5

are of great interest to me," says Cater. Not only was she Special Assistant to Russell Train, the president of the Conservation Foundation, Cater also served as Special Assistant to Roger Stevens, Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, while Douglass Cater was Special Assistant to President Lyndon

"It was a fascinating time. The Johnsons were unique, particularly after the Kennedy administration when the Kennedys were very private people, and their closest staff members never went into their private quarters. The Johnsons were completely different, and we were invited over all the time," says Cater. "They made mem-bers of their staff feel like family, and we all worked together."

"At one point, I stopped my job with Roger Stevens, because I was asked to head up a big drive in Washington for the arts. It was bringing all the art groups, the opera, the ballet, the drama groups, together in Washington and trying to get public support for them all. We organized a group called the United Performing Arts of Washington, and I was General Chairman," she explains.

When the Johnson administration ended, the Caters moved to California, where Cater was asked to be on the board of the American Conservatory Theatre. "When we moved to London for two years, I acted as their (the ACT's) representative in London to try to spot new plays and new playwrights.

I think the thing that I've learned is that there is not cutand-dried category of This is my job, and this is what I do at home, and this is my volunteer work.' All your interests can support each other," says Ca-

One of Cater's most interesting jobs came during the Carter administration, after Carter fired Bella Abzuk, Head of the President's Advisory Committee for Women. When Carter hired Linda Johnson Rob as the new Head of the Committee for Women, Rob asked Cater to be her Special Assis-

"While we were in California, I became very active in the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies, where Douglass was a 'Fellow' and on the Board. I pointed out to the president of the institute that they were paying no attention to women For the institute I organized a seminar on "The Changing Roles of Women and Men," says

It was through this work that Cater became informed and involved with womens' issues, making her position with Rob a natural transition. This was the last job Cater held before coming to Washington

College with her husband. Cater had hoped to be more involved with the students and the campus, but found that the outreach for financial support eventually took over. "Life is never dull. It's always interesting," she says. "I'm really looking forward to next year where I hope to spend nore time attending seminars and lectures, and be involved with student groups. I'm very excited about the new student government. We've met with them, and I think it's a dynamitegroup. I think they'regoing to do some exciting things and I'd like to be involved with some of their projects."

As far as the future goes, "I'll never grow up. I still feel like the same kid that went shakily into the high school class, much less the college class. Everything is still new and exciting, and a challenge," she explains

"One has to be very adjustable in order to survive, because you never know what the next change is going to be. Life is a continual challenge and I can't get enough of it."

growth

continued from page 1 classes they needed. Juniors had very little trouble. Sophomores and freshmen had a little more. But all of our students get the courses they need during their for years here."

Butters also reviewed proposed class sizes for next vear. Fifteen classes are currently projected at having 30 or more students in them. Coveney reiterated this by saying that "60% of our classes have 20 or fewer students." According to Coveney, that is better than "most" private college's can of

Library

continued from page 1

sending the information to OCLC. A position for a temporary cataloger will be advertised for the summer. Much additional help will be needed to prepare for the plans of auto-

The new automation system will improve the circulation system in the library, making the process of checking out books easier. One will be able to discover through the use of the computer which books next year's Elm Staff!!

have been received, for example, in addition to other informa-

This project will be a beginning towards keeping Washington College's Miller Library on par with other college libraries. The goal of the automation system is also to improve what help the library can give to faculty and students.

Congratulations to

SGA meeting

continued from page 1 tion and the Chestertown lignor stores Attias closed the meeting

wishing the student body a good summer on behalf of the SGA. Elections for dorm senators will be held during the first two weeks of school, and all students interested are encouraged to run.

Mom's Cookie Jar

CONGRATULATIONS GRADUATES!

As this will be the last article for the 1988-1989 academic year, the staff of WC Dining Services extends its best wishes to the class of '89

We hope that your future holds much success and happiness. It has been our privilege to serve you during the past four years. We would be pleased if you would visit us in the coming years. You will always

We would also like to congratulate the underclassmen on completing another year of study towards their degrees.

We hope that you have a fun filled and safe summer and we look forward to your return next fall.

WANTED

Dining Service's silverware, saucers, plates, glasses and other equipment borrowed throughout the school year. There will be no questions asked when these items are returned. Just remember, if the items are not returned it will cost thousands of dollars to replace.

BEST WISHES TO ALL MOM

The Elm Staff, 1989-1990

Susan Di Leo Tracey Connell Laura Hopper Kate Absher Brett Lankford Stephanie Hess Amy L. Undercoffler Tom Logan Mike Cannon Iim Sobczak

Editor-in-chief News Editor Perspectives Features Editor Sports Editor Arts Editor Photography Managing Editor Advertising Circulation

Congratulations and good luck

